

TO THE

Right Honorable and his fingular good Lord, Sir William Cecill, Baron of Burghleygh, Knight of the most noble order of the Garter, Lord high Treasurer of England, Maister of the Courts of Wards and Liueries, and one of the Queenes Maiesties privite Councell.

> Onfidering with my selfe, right Honorable and my singular good Lord, how redie (no doubt) manie will be to accuse me of vaine presumption, for enterprising to deale in this so weightie a worke, and so far aboue my reach to accomplish: I have thought good to advertise your Honour, by what occasion I was sirst induced to undertake the same, although the cause that moved me thereto hath (in part) yer this beene signified unto your good Lord/hip.

Whereas therefore, that worthie Citlzen Reginald Wolfe late Printer to the Queenes Maiestie, a man well knowne and beholden to your Honour, meant in his life time to publish an vniuersall Cosmographie of the whole world, and therwith also certaine particular histories of every knowne nation, among st other whom he purposed to wse for performance of his intent in that behalfe, he procured me to take in hand the collection of those histories, and having proceeded so far in the same, as little wanted to the accomplishment of that long promised worke, it pleased God to call him to his mercie, after siue and twentie yeares trauell spent therein; so that by his untimelie deceasse, no hope remained to see that performed, which we had so long trauelled about. Neuerthelesse, those whom he put in trust to dispose his things after his departure hence, wishing to the benefit of others, that some fruit might follow of that whereabout he had imployed so long time, willed me to continue mine endeuour for their furtherance in the same. Which although I was redie to doo, so far as mine abilitie would reach, and the rather to answere that trust which the deceassed reposed in me, to see it brought to some perfection: yet when the volume grew so great, as they that were to defraie the charges for the impression, were not willing to go A.11. through through with the whole, they resolved first to publish the histories of England, Scotland, and Ireland, with their descriptions; which descriptions, bicause they were not in such readinesse, as those of forren countries, they were inforced to.

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

veethe helpe of other better able to doo it than my selfe.

Moreouer, the Charts, wherein Maister VV olse spent a great part of his time, were not found so complet as we wished: and againe, understanding of the great charges and notable enterprise of that worthie Gentleman maister Thomas Sackford, in procuring the Charts of the Jeuerall provinces of this realme to be set foorth, we are in hope that in time he will delineate this whole land so perfectlie, as shall be comparable or beyond anie delineation heretofore made of anie other region; and therefore leave that to his well deserved praise. If any well willer will imitate him in so praiseworthie a worke for the two other regions, we will be glad to further his endeuour with all the helpes we may.

The histories I have gathered according to my skill, and conferred the greatest part with Maister VV olse in his life time, to his liking, who procured me so manie helpes to the furtherance thereof, that I was loth to omit anie thing that might increase the readers knowledge, which causeth the booke to grow so great. But receiving them by parts, and at severall times (as I might get them) it may be, that having had more regard to the matter than the apt penning, I have not so orderlie disposed them, as otherwise I ought; choosing rather to want order, than to defraud the reader of that which for his surther understanding might seeme to satisfie his expectation.

Itherefore most humblie beseech your Honour to accept these Chronicles of England under your protestion, and according to your wisedome and accustomed benignitie to beare with my faults; the rather, bicause you were ever so effeciall good Lord to Maister Wolfe, to whom I was singularlie beholden; and in whose name I humblie present this rude worke vnto you; be seeching God, that as he hath made you an instrument to aduance his truth, so it may please him to increase his good gifts in you, to his glorie, the furtherance of the Queenes Maiesties seruice, and the comfort of all hir faithfull and louing subjects.

Your Honours most humble to be commanded,

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED.

THEPREFACE

to the reader.

T is dangerous (gentle reader) to range in solarge a field as I have here vndertaken, while so manic sundrie men in divers things may be able to controll me, and manie excellent with of our countrie (as well or better occupied I hope)are able herein to surpasse me, but feeing the best able doo seeme to neglect it, let me (though least able) craue pardonto put them in mind not to forget their natiue countries praise (which is their dutie) the incouragement of their woorthie countriemen, by elders aduancements; and the daunting of the vicious, by foure penall examples, to which end (as I take it) chronicles and histories ought cheefelie to be written. My labour may shew mine vttermost good will, of the more learned I require their further enlargement, and of fault-finders dispensation till they be more fullie informed. It is too common that the least able are readiest to find fault in matters of least weight, and therefore I esteeme the lesse of their carping, but humblie beseech the skilfull to supplie my want, and to have care of their dutie; and either to amend that wherein I have failed, or be content with this mine endeyour. For it may please them to consider, that no one can be eie-witnesse to all that is written within our time; much lesse to those things which happened in former times, and therefore must be content with reports of others. Therein I have beene so carefull, that I have spared no paines or helpe of freends to search out either written or printed ancient authors, or to inquire of moderne eie-witnesses for the true setting downe of that which I have here delivered: but I find such want in writers for the necessarie knowledge of things doone in times past, and lacke of meanes to obteine sufficient instructions by reporters of the time present; and herewith the worthic exploits of our countriemen so manie, that it greeueth me I could not leave the same to posteritie (as I wished) to their well deserved praise. But I have here imparted what I could learne, and crave that it may be taken in good part. My speech is plaine, without any rhetoricall shew of eloquence, having rather a regard to simple truth, than to decking words. I wish I had beene furnifhed with so perfect instructions, and so many good gifts, that I might have pleased all kinds of men, but that same being so rare a thing in any one of the best, I beseech thee (gentle reader)not to looke for it in me the meanest.

But now for thy further instruction, to vnderstand the course of these my labours. First concerning the historie of England, as I have collected the same out of manie and sundrie authors, in whome what contrarietie, negligence, and rashnesse sometime is found in their reports; I leaue to the discretion of those that have perused their works: for my part, I have in things doubtfull rather chosen to shew the diversitie of their writings, than by ouer-ruling them, and vling a peremptorie censure, to frame them to agree to my liking: leauing it neuerthelesse to each mans iudgement, to controll them as he feeth cause. If some-where I shewmy fansie what I thinke, and that the same dislike them; I craue pardon, speciallie if by probable reasons or plainer matter to be produced, they can shew mine errour; vpon knowledge whereof I shall be readie to reforme it accordinglie. Where I do begin the historic from the first inhabitation of this Ile, I looke not to content ech mans opinion concerning the original of them that first peopled it, and no maruell: for in matters so vncerteine, if I cannot sufficientlie content my Telfc(as in deed I cannot) I knownothow I should satisfie others. That which seemeth to me most likelie, I have noted, beseeching the learned (as I trust they will) in such points of doubtfull antiquities to beare with my skill: fith for ought I know, the matter is not yet decided among the learned, but still they are in controversie about it, and as yet Sub indice lisest. Well, how soeuer it came first to be inhabited, likelie it is, that at the first the whole He was under one prince and gouernour, though afterwards (and long peraduenture before the Romans fet any foot within it) the monarchie thereof was broken, euen when the multitude of the inhabitants grew to be great, and ambition entred amongst them: which hath brought so manie good policies and states to ruine and decaie.

A.iij.

found

The Preface to the Reader.

The Romans having once got possession of the continent that faceth this Ile, could notrest (as it appeareth) till they had brought the same also under their subjection; and the somer doubtlesse, by reason of the factions amongst the princes of the land, which the Romans (through their accustomed skill) could turne verie well to their most aduantage. They possessed it almost fine hundreth yeares, and longer might have doone. if either their insufferable tyrannie had not taken awaie from them the love of the people, as well here as else-where; either that their civill discord about the chopping and changing of their emperours had not so weakened the forces of their empire, that they were not able to defend the same against the irruption of barbarous nations. But as we may coniecture by that which is found in histories, about that time, in which the Romane empire began to decline, this land stood in verie weake state: being spoiled of the most part of all hir able men, which were led awaie into forren regions, to supplie the Romane armies; and likewise (perhaps) of all necessarie armour, weapon, and treasure: which being perceiued of the Saxons, after they were received into the Ile, to aid the Britons against the Scots and Picts then inuading the same, ministred to them occasion to attempt the second conquest, which at length they brought to passe, to the ouerthrownotonelie of the British dominion, but also to the subuersion of the Christian religion here in this land: which chanced (as appeareth by Gildas) for the wicked fins and vnthankefulnesse of the inhabitants towards God, the cheese occasions and causes of the transmutations of kingdoms, Nam propter peccata, regna transmutantur à gente in gentem.

The Saxons obteining possession of the land, gouerned the same, being divided into sundrie kingdoms, and having once subdued the Britons, or at the least-wise removed them out of the most part of the Ile into od corners and mountaines, fell at division among themselves, and oftentimes with warre pursued ech other, so as no perfect order of gouernement could be framed, nor the kings grow to any great puissance, either to move warres abroad, or sufficientlie to defend themselves against forren forces at home: as manifestlie was perceived, when the Danes and other the Northeasterne people, being then of great puissance by sea, began miserablie to afflict this land: at the first invading as it were but onelie the coasts and countries lieng neere to the sea, but afterwards with maine armies they entred into the midle parts of the land. And although the English people at length came vnder one king, and by that meanes were the better able to resist the enimies; yet at length those Danes subdued the whole, and had possession thereof for a time, although not long, but that the crowne returned againe to those of the Saxon line: till thortlie after, by the insolent dealings of the gouernours, a diussion was made betwixt the king and his people, through instruminhment decreed by the prouidence of the Almightie, determining for their sinnes and contempt of his lawes, to deliuer them into the hands of a stranger; and therevon when spite and enuie had brought the title in doubt, to whom the right in succession apperteined, the Conquerour entred, and they remained a prey to him and his: who plucked all the heads and cheese in authoritie so cleerelie vp by the roots, as sew or none of them in the end was left to stand vp against him. And herewith altering the whole state, he planted such lawes and ordinances as stood most for his auaile and securitie, which being after qualified with more milde and gentle lawes, tooke such effect, that the state hath euer sithens continued whole and vnbroken by wise and politike gouernement, although disquieted sometime by ciuill dissention, to the ruine commonlie of the first mouers, as by the sequele of the historie you may see.

For the historie of Scotland, I haue for the more part followed Hector Boece, Iohannes Maior, and Iouan Ferreri Piemontese, so far as they haue continued it, interlaced somtimes with other authours, as Houeden, Fourdon, and such like; although not often, bicause I meant rather to deliuer what I found in their owne histories extant, than to correct them by others, leauing that enterprise to their owne countrimen: so that what so euer ye read in the same, consider that a Scotishman writ it, and an Englishman hath but onelie translated it into our language, referring the reader to the English historie, in all matters betwixt vs and them, to be confronted therewith as he seeth cause. For the continuation thereof I vsed the like order, in such copies and notes as Maister Wolfe in his life time procured me; sauing that in these last yeares I haue inserted some such notes as concerned matters of warre betwixt vs and the Scots, bicause I got them not till that part of the English historie was past the presse.

For Ireland, I haue shewed in mine epistle dedicatorie in what fort, and by what helps I haue proceeded therein; one lie this I forgot to signific, that I had not Giraldus Cambrensis, and Flatsburie, vntill that part of the booke was vnder the presse, and so being constreined to make post hast, I could not exemplifie what I would out of them all, neither yet dispose it so orderlie as had been conuenient, nor pen it with so apt words as might satisfie either my selfe, or those to whose view it is now like to come. And by reason of the like haste made in the impression, where I was determined to haue transposed the most part of that which in the English historie I had noted, concerning the conquest of Ireland by Hen. the second, out of Houeden & others, I had not time thereto; and so haue less it there remaining where I first noted it, before I determined to make any particular collection of the Irish histories, bicause the same commeth there well inough in place, as to those that shall youchsafe to turne the booke it may appeare.

For the computation of the yeares of the world, I had by Maister Wolfes adulie followed Functius; but after his decease, M. W. H. made me partaker of a Chronologie, which he had gathered and compiled with most exquisit diligence, following Gerardus Mercator, and other late Chronologers, and his owne observations, according to the which I have reformed the same. As for the yeares of our Lord, and the kings, I have set them downe according to such authors as seeme to be of best credit in that behalfe, as I doubt not but to the learned and skilfull in histories it shall appeare. Moreover, this the reader hath to consider, that I do begin the yeare at the nativitie of our Lord, which is the furest order (in my fansie) that can be followed.

For the names of persons, townes, and places, as I have beene diligent to reforme the errours of other (which are to be ascribed more to the unperfect copies than to the authors) so may it be that I have some-where committed the like saults, either by negligence or want of skill to restore them to their sull integritie as I wished. But what I have personned, as well in that behalfe as others, the skilfull reader shall easily perceive,

The Preface to the Reader.

and withall confider (I trust) what trauell I have bestowed to his behoofe in this huge volume; crauing onelie, that in recompense thereof he will judge the best, and to make a freendlic construction of my meaning, where ought may seeme to haue escaped my pen or the printers presse, otherwise than we could haue wished for his better satissaction. Manie things being taken out as they lie in authors, may be thought to give offense in time present, which referred to the time past when the author writ, are not onelie tollerable, but also allowable. Therefore (good reader) I beseech thee to weigh the causes and circumstances of such faults and imperfections, and consider that the like may creepe into a far lesse volume than this, and shew me so much fauour as hath beene shewed to others in like causes. And sithens I have done my good will, accept the same, as I with a free and thankefull mind do offer it thee; so shall I thinke my labour well bestowed. For the other histories, which are alreadie collected, if it please God to give abilitie, shall in time come to light, with some such breefe descriptions of the forren regions whereof they treat, as may the better suffice to the readers contentation, and understanding of the matters conteined in the fame histories, reduced into abridgements out of their great volumes. And thus I ceasse further to trouble thy patience, wishing to thee (gentle reader) so much profit, as by reading may be had, and as great comfort as Gods holie spirit may endue

FINIS.

thee with.

The politike Conquest of William the first.

Anno. 1.

Dis William Duke of Pozmandie, base son of Robert the firt Duke of Poz mandie, and nes them buto Co ward King of England, furna med the Confess to for having vanquithed the Eng. lish power, and llaine Harolo in the field (as you may read at large towards the end of the historie of England) began his reigne over England the rb. date of Daober being sundate, in the yeare after the creation of the world 5033. (as W. Harison gathereth) and after the birth of our Sautour 1066, which was in the tenth years of the emper 20 rour Henrie the fourth, in the firt of pope Alexander the fecond, in the firt of Philip king of France, and a bout the tenth of Malcolme the third, surnamed Ca moir,king or Scotland.

5im. Dun.

Edwin and Marchar.

githa fent to Chefter.

Wil. Mal. Simon Dun.

Wil. Malm. The billiops

The archbis

Immediatlie after he had thus got the victorie in a pight field (as before ye have heard) he first returned to Haltings, and after let forward towards London, wasted the countries of Suster, Bent, Hamthire, Southeric, Middlefer, and Herefordthire, burning the townes, and fleaing the people, till he came 30 to Beogham. In the meane time, immediatlie after the discomfiture in Sulfer, the two earles of Posthumberland and Dercia, Cowin and Darchar, who had withdrawne themselves from the battell togs ther with their people, came to London, and with all During Alds speed sent their lister quiene Alogitha buto the citie of Chelter, and herewith lought to persuade the Londoners to advance one of them to the kingbome: as Wil.Mal. writeth. But Simon of Durham faith, that Alored archieffiop of Porks, and the faid earles with 40 others would have made Edgar Etheling king. Holubeit, whilest manie of the Pobilitie and others prepared to make themselves redie to give a new battell to the Pomans (how or what socner was the cause) the said earles drew homewards with their powers, to the great discomfort of their freends. Wil. Malm. fæmeth to put blame in the bishops, for that the losos went not forward with their purpose in adnancing Edgar Etheling to the crowne. Ho; the bis thops (faith he) refused to ioine with the loads in that 50 behalfe, and fotheough envie and spite which one part bare to another, when they could not agree upon an Englishman, they received a stranger, insomuch that byon king William his comming buto Beozcham, Aldred archbishop of Porke, Wolstane bishop of themselves to . Morceffer, and Malter bishop of Hereford, Cogar king william. Otheling, and the foresaid earles Cowin and Par char came and submitted themselnes but o him, whom he gentlie received, and incontinentlie made an as greenent with them, taking their oth and hollages (as some write) and pet neverthelesse he permitted his people to spoile and burne the countrie.

But now, when the featt of Apills nativitie (commonlie called Christmas) was at hand, he approched to the citie of London, and comming thisher, caused his vauntgard first to enter into the Greets, where sin ding some resistance, he easilis subdued the citizens that thus toke boon them to withstand him, though not without some bloudthed (as Gemeticen, ingiteth) Gemeticensis but as by others it Gould appere, he was received in to the citie without anie relitance at all; and so bes ing in possession thereof, he spake manie strendic words to the citizens, and promiled that he would ble them in most liberall & courteous maner. Pot long affer, when things were brought in order (as was william Conthought requilite) he was crowned king boon Chille querour crows mas date following, by Alozed archbithop of Pozke, ned 1067. ac-For he would not receive the crowne at the hands of cording to Stigand archbishop of Canturburie, bicause he was their account haten and surfreymore subgerto he a president and Subject begun hated, and further moze sudged to be a perie lews per- the years on fon and a naughtie liver.

At his coronation he caused the bishops and bas Christ his rons of the realme to take their oth, that they thould be his true and locall subjects (according to the maner in that case accustomed.) And being required thereto. by the archbilhop of Poske, he take his personall oth before the altar of S. Peter at Wellmiller, to befond the holie durch, and rulers of the fame, to governe the people in lustice as became a king to do, to ordeine righteous lawes & keepe the fame, so that all maner of bribing, rapine, and wrongfull judgements thould for cuer after be abolifhed. After this, he take order how to keepe the realine in god and quiet government, fortifieng the necessar rie places, and furnishing them with garifons. He also appointed officers and councellers, such as he thought to be wife and discreet men, and appointed Thips to be in the hauens by the coast for the defense of the land, as he thought most expedient. After his coronation, or rather before (as by some authours it should John Stow. fænic) even presentlie vpon obteining of the citie of London, he take his journey towards the castell of Douer, to lubdue that and the rest of Bent also: which when the archbishop Stigand and Egelsin the abbat of S. Augustines (being as it were the chiefest loods and governours of all Bent) did perceive, and confis dered that the whole realme was in an cuill frate; F that thereas in this realine of England, before the comming in of the forfaid duke William, there were no bondmen: now all, as well the Pobilitie as the Hernitudes Commonaltie were without respect made subject to bondage of the the intollerable bondage of the Hormans, faking Mobilitie and an occasion in the perill and danger that their paich. Commonable an occasion by the perill and danger that their neigh to the Hopbours were in, to prouide for the fafegard of them mans, the date of

Polydor.

1067

felues and their countrie. They caused all the people of the countie of Bent to allemble at Canturburte, and declared to them the perils and dangers imminent, the miferic that their neighbours were come in to, the prive and infolencie of the Pormans, and the haronesse and greefe of bondage and fernile estate. Whereupon all the people rather choling to end their bufortunate life, than to fubmit themfelues to an but accustomed yoke of servitude and bondage, with a common confent determined to met duke William, 10 and to fight with him for the lawes of their countrie. Allo, the foresaid Stigand the archbithop, and the abbat Egellin, choling rather to die in battell, than to lee their nation in so euill an estate, being encouraged by the cramples of the holie Pachabies, became capteins of the armie. And at a daie appointed, all the people met at Swanckombe, and being hidden in the wood, late prinitie in wait for the comming of the forelaid duke William.

Pow, bicause it cannot hurt to take great heed, 20 and to be verie warie in luch cales, they agreed before hand, that when the duke was come, and the pallages on everte fide fromed, to the end he thould no waie be able to escape, everie one of them, as well horsemen as formen thould beare boughes in their hands. The nert date after, when the duke was come into the fields and territogies neere unto Swanelcombe, and faw all the countrie fet and placed about him, as it had bene a ffirring and mouning wood, and that with a meane pace they approched and drew neare but 30 him, with great discomfort of mind he wondered at that light. And allone as the capicins of the Bentilly men faive that duke William was inclosed in the middelt of their armie, they caused their trumpets to be founded, their banners to be displaced, and threw downe their boughes, a with their bowes bent, their Swoods drawne, and their speares and other kind of incapons Arctched faith, they thewed themselves reas die to fight. Duke William and they that were with him food (as no maruell it was) fore affonied, and as 40 mazed: so that he which thought he had alreadie all England fatt in his fift, did now despaire of his owne life. Therefore on the behalfe of the Kentilymen, were fent buto duke William the archbilhop Stigand, and Egelfin abbat of S. Augustines, who told him their mellage in this fort.

Dy lozd duke, behold the people of Bent come forth, to met you, and to receive you as their liege lood, requiring at your hands the things which perfeine to >> peace, and that onder this condition; that all the peo, ,, ple of Bent enloy for ever their ancient liberties, and may for evermore ble the latves and cultomes of the countries other wife they are readic prefentite to bid >> battell to you and them that be with you and are min ,, bed rather to die here altogither, than to bepart from the law is and cultomes of their countrie, and to lub. "> interhemistres to bandage, whereof as yet they nee >> ner had er periodee.

The duke leting himfelfe to be drinen to fuch an erigent a narrow pinch, consulted a wille with them that came with him, prudentlie confidering, that if he should take anie repulse or displeasure at the hands of this people which the the heep of England, all that he had done before them be disambled and made of none effect, and all his pope and fafetic thould fland in danger and teopardie : not fo willinglie as wisclie he granted the people of Bent their request. Pow when the covenant was established, and pleages given on both fides: the kentishmen being topfull, conducted the Pozmans (who also were glad) unto Rochester, and peloed up to the duke the earledome of Ment, and the noble cassell of Douer. Alusthe ancient liberties The ancient of England, and the lawes and cultomes of the count lawes of Ene trie, which before the comming of duke William out gland remains of Pozmandie, were equalite kept throughout all in kent onle. England, do (through this industrie and earnest trauell of the archbishop Stigand and Egelsin abbat of S. Augustines) remaine inviolablie observed untill this date within that countie of Bent. ¶ Thus far Thomas Spot, and after him William Thome witteth Wil. Thomas the same. Of the which the former (that is Spot) lived in the dates of king Coward the first, and William

Thorne in the dates of king Richard the fecond. But now, before we proceed anie further in recitall of the Conquerours dwings, we have here in a table noted all the noble capteins and gentlemen of name, afwell Pozmans as other frangers, thich af fifted buke William in the conquest of this land: and first, as we find them written in the chronicles of Pomanoie by one William Tailleur.

The Catalog of such Noblemen, Lords, and Gentlemen of name, as came into this land with William the Conquerour.

Eustace de Hambleude. Le leig de S.Sain. The erle of Aniou. Geoffray Bournom. The erle of Neuers. Anguerand erle of Her-Le seig.de Breansou. Le feig.de Blainuile. Le feig.de Saffy. Le seig.de Rounile. court. Le seig.de Mauneuile. Roger Marmion. Le seig.de Nassy. Le prince de Ale-Geoffrey de Moienne. Raoul de Gaiel. maigne. Le vidam de Chartres. Le seig.de Pauilly. Le seig.de Ieanuile. Auffray and Mauger de Auenel de Viers. Panuel du Montier Hu-Le vidam du Passais. Le seig.de S.Cler. Carteny. Le feig.de Freanuile. Pierre du Bailleul seig. Le seig. d'Espinay. bert. Robert Bertraule Tort. Le seig.de Bremetot. Lefeig de Moubray. de Fescampe. Alain Fergant erle of Leseig. de Iasitay. Le seig.de Seulle. Le seneschal de Tor-Guillaume Patais feig. Le seig. Doriual. de la Lande. Le seig. de la Hay. Britaigne. chy. Le seig de Grissey. Le seig de Bassey. Le seig.de la Ferte. Robert fils Heruays duc Eulde de Mortimer. Le seig.de S. Iohn. Hue erle of Gournay. Le feig de Sauffy. Le seig.de Tourneur. de Orleans. Egremont de Laigle. Le seig.de Brye. Le seig de la Lande. Guillaume de Colom-Le seig. de Mortimer. Richard d'Aurinchin. Richard Dollebec. bieres. Le seig de Clare. Le seig.de Bearts. Le seig.du Monfiquet. Le seig.de Bonnebault. Le scig.de Soulligny. Le seig.de Magny. Le seig.de Bresey. Le feig.de Ennebault. Bouteclier d'Aubigny. Le seig. de Semilly. Le seig. de Fontnay. Le seig.de Danuillers. Leseig.de Marcey. Roger de Montgomery Le seig.de Tilly. Le feig.de Beruile. Le seig.de Lachy. Amaury de Touars. Le seig.de Preaux. Le seig.de Creueceur. Le seig.de Valdere. Le seig.de S.Denis. Le seig.de Meuley. Leseig.de Hacqueuile. Le seig. de Breate. Eulde de Montfort. Le seig.de Neanshou. Le seig.de Coutray. Henoyn de Cahieu. Le seig.de Perou. Le seig.de ivionceaux. The erle of Eureux. Robert de Beaufou. Le seig.de Vimers. The archers of Bretuile. Le seig. de seint Valery. Guillaume de Mouion. The archers of Vaudre-Thomas erle d'Aumale. Le feig. Meauuon. Le seig. de Soteuile. Raoul Tesson de Tig- uile. The erle de Hiesmes. With other lords and men of account in great numbers, whose names the author of the chronicles of Normandie could not come by (as he himselfe confesseth.) In consideration whereof, and bicause divers of these are set foorth onlie by their titles of estate, and not by their surnames; we have thought it convenient to make you partakers of the roll which sometime belonged to Battell abbeie, conteining also (as the title thereof importeth) the names of such Nobles and Gentlemen of Marque, as came at this time with the Conqueror, whereof diuerse maie be the same persons which in the catalog aboue written are conteined, bearing the names of the places whereof they were possessing fours and owners, as by the same catalog maie appeare.

The roll of Battell abbeie.

		,
A	Brebus and Byfeg	Beauchampe	l Beteruile	1 Bernon
∧ Vmade	Bardolfe	Bray and Bandy	Bertin	Boels
Aincourt	Baffet and Bigot	Bracy	Bereneuile	Belefroun
Audeley	Bohun	Boundes	Bellewe	Brutz
Adgillam	Bailif	Bafcoun	Benery	Barchampe
Argentoune	Bondeuile	Broilem	Busshell	C
Arundell	Brabafon	Broleuy	Boranuile	Amois
Auenant	Baskeruil e	Burnell	Browe	CAmois Camuile
Abell	Bures	Bellet	Beleuers	Chawent
Annerne	Bounilaine	Baudewin	Buffard	Chauncy
Aunwers	Bois	Beaumon t	Botelere	Conderay
Angers	Botelere	Burdon	Bonueier	Coluile
Angenoun	Bourcher	Berteuilay	Boteuile	Chamberlaine
Archere	Brabaion	Barre	Bellire	Chamburnoun
Anuay	Berners	Buffeuile	Baftard	Comin
Asperuile	Braibuf	Blunt	Bainard	Columber
Albeuile	Brande & Bronce	Beauper e	Brasard	Cribett
Andenile	Burgh	Beuill	Beelhelme	Creuquere
Amouerduile	Bushy	Barduedor	Brain e	Corbine
Arcy and Akeny	Banet	Brette	Brent	Corbett
Albeny	Blondell	Barrett	Braunch	Chaundos
Aybeuare	Breton	Bonret	Belefuz	Chaworth
Amay	Bluat and Baious	Bainard	Blundell	Cleremaus
Aspermound	Browne	Barniuale	Burdet	Clerell
Amerenges	Beke	Bonett	Bagot	Chopis
B	Bickard	Barry	Beauuise	Chaunduit
RErtram	Banastre	Bryan	Belemis	Chantelow
DButtecourt	Baloun	Bodin	Beilin	Chamberay
				Creffy

	Willian
Creffy	Durant
Curténay	Drury
Curtenay Conestable Cholmeley	Dabitot
Cholmeley	Dunsteruile
Champney Chawnos Comiuile Champaine Careuile	Dunchampe
Chawnos	Dambelton
Comittile	E Serange
Jiampaine	E Strange Effuteuile
Car e uile Carbonelle	Engaine
Charles	Estriels
Charles Chereberg e	Efturney
Chawnes	F
Chereborge Chawnes Chaumont Caperoun Cheine Curfon	FErrerers. Foluille
Caperoun
Cheine	Fitz Water
	Fitz Marmaduk
Couille	Fleuez
Chaiters	Filberd FitzRoger
Cheines Cateray	Fauecourt
Cherecour t	Ferrers
Cammile	Fitz Philip
Clerena v	Filiot
Cammile Clerena y Curly	Furniucus
Cuily	Furniuaus
Cuilý Clinels	Fitz Otes
Chaundos	Fitz William
Courteney	FitzRoand
Clifford_	Fitz Pain
D To F wille	Fitz Auger
DEnauille Dercy	Fitz Aleyn Fitz Rauff
Dine Deley	Fitz Browne
Dispencere	Fouke
Daubeny	Freuil
Daniell	Front de Boef
Denife and Druell	Facunberge
Denans	Fort
Dauers	Frisell
Dodingfels	Fitz Simon
Darell D. U.	Fitz Fouk
Delaber Delabel	Filioll Fitz Thomas
Delapol e Delalind e	Fitz Morice
Delahill	Fitz Hugh
Delawar e	Fitz Henrie
Delauache	Fitz Waren
Dakeny	Fitz Rainold
Danntre	Flamuile
Defny	Formay
Dabernoun e	Fitz Eustach
Damry	Fitz Laurence
Daueros Dauonge	Formibaud Frifound
Duilby	Finere and Fitz
Delauere	Robert
Delahoid	Furniuale
Durange	Fitz Geffrey
Delee	Firz Herbert
Delaund	Fitz Peres
Delaward	Fichet
Delaplanch Dampot	Fitz Rewes Fitz Fitz
Dannot Danway	Fitz Iohn
Dehenfe	Fleichampe
Deuile	G.
Difard	Vrnau
Doiuille	Greffy
Į.	1

Gracy Leuetot Georges Lucy Gower Luny Gaugy Logeuile Goband Longespes Gray Gaunson Louerace Golofre Lascales Gobion Lacy Grenfy Louan Graunt Leded Greile Lufe Greuet Loterell Gurry Loruge Gurley Longeuale Grammori Loy Gernoun Grendon Loions Gurdon Limers Gines Longepay Griuil Greneuile Laumale Lane Glateuile Louetot Gurney Giffard Gouerges Gamages HAunteney Haunfard Moribray Moruile Hastings Miriell Hanlay Manlay Haurell Husec Hercy Herioun Herne Muſe Harecourt Marteine Henoure Houell Hamelin Maleuile Harewell Malet ' Hardell Haket Hamound Harcord I, Mare [Arden Musard Moine Ieniels Ierconuise Merke Ianuile Murres Iasperuile KAunt Karre Mallory Marny Karrowe Koine Kimaronne Maule Kiriell Kancey Musett Kenelre. Lacy Oueny Linneby Latomer Maine Loucday

Lemare Longechampe Lorancourt $M_{ m Mowne}^{
m Ohant}$ Maundeuilc Marmilon Malebraunch Malemaine Mortimere Mortimaine Mountbother Mountfoler Mounteney Monfichet Maleherbe Mulegros Montrauers Mortiuale Monchenely Mountagu Mountford Monhermon Meneuile Manteuenant and Manfe Menpincoy Mainard

iv. orell Mainell Maleluse Memorous Morreis Morleian Maine Maleuere Mandut Mountmarten Mantelet Miners Mauclerke Maunchenell / Monet Meintenore. Meletak Manuile Mangisere. Maumasin Mountlouel Mawreward Monhaut Meller Mountgomerie Manlay Maulard Mainard Menere Martinast Mare Mainwaring Matelay Malemis Maleheire Moren Melun Marceans Maiell Morton Noers Neuile Newmarch Norbet

> Newborough Neiremet Neile Normauile Neofmarch Nermitz Nembrutz О Onliber Teuell Olifant Ofenel Oifell Olifard Orinall Orioll P Igot Pery Perepount

Pershale

Power

Painell

Perche and Paucy

Peurell

Norice

2.1.	, ,
Peurell	Riuers	Sorell	Tollemach	Venoure
Perot	Riuell	Somerey	Tolous	Vilan
Picard	Rous	Sent Iohn	Tanny	Verland
Pinkenie	Rushell	Sent George	Touké	Valers
Pomeray	Raband	Sent Les	Tibtote	Veirny
Pounce	Ronde	Sesse	Turbeuilc	Vauuruile
Pauely	Rie	Saluin	Turuile	Veniels
Paifrere	Rokell	Say	Tomy and Tauer-	Verrere
Plukenet	Rifers	Solers	ner	Vichere
Phuars	Randuil e	Saulay	Trencheuile	Veffay
Punchardoun	Rofelin	Sent Álbin	Trenchelion	Vanay
Pinchard	Raftoke	Sent Martin	Tankeruile	Vian [*]
Placy	Rinuill	Sourdemale	Tirell	Vernoys
Pugoy	Rouger e	Seguin	Triuet	Vrnall
Patefinc	Rait	Sent Barbe	Tolet	Vnket
Place	Riper e	Sent Vile	Trauers	Vrnafull
Pampilioun	Rigny	Souremount	Tardeuile	Vafderoll
Percelay	Richemound	Soreglise	Turburuile	Vaberon
Perere & Pekeny	Rochford	Sanduil e	Tineuile	Valingford
Poterell	Raimond	Sauncey	Torell	Venicorde
Peukeny	S	Sirewast	Tortechappell	Valiue
Peccell	COuch	Sent Cheueroll	Trusbote	Viuille
Pinell	Sheuile		Treuerell	Vancorde and Va-
Putrill	Seucheus	Sent Scudemore	Tenwis	lenges
Petiuoll	Senclere	T	Totelles	W W
Preaus	Sent Quintin	Oget	V	TT / Ardebois
Pantolf	Sent Omere	▲ Tercy	T 7 Ere	VV Ward
Peito	Sent Amond	Tuchet	V Vernoun	Wafre
Penecord	Sent Legere	Tracy	Vefcy	Wake
Preudirlegast	Someruile	Trousbut	Verdoune	Warein e
Percinale	Siward	Trainell	Valence	Wate
0	Saunfouere	Taket	Verdeire	Watelin
OVinci	Sanford	Truffel and Tri-	Vauafour	Wateuil
Quintiny	Sanctes	fon	Vendore	Wely
R	Sauay	Talbot	Verlay	Werdonell
D Os	Saulay	Touny	Valenger	Wespaile
Ridell	Sules	Traies	Venables	Winell.
'

Sim.Duncl.

geeth over ingomandy Hen Hunt. Polychron. Sim.Dun.

Chicke Syl naticus.

Michard Fits Derape.

The riner of wye.

England.

When king William had let all things in order through the most part of the realme, he delivered the guiving thereof buto his brother Doo, the bishop of Bayen, and his coline William Fits Dibone, Aing william Juhom he had made erle of Hereford. In Lent follo, ming he failed into Posmandie, leading with him the pleages, and other of the cheefelf loads of the Englith nation : among whom, the two earles Cowine and Warchar, Stigand the archbishop, Edgar Ether ling, Walteof sonne to Silvard sometime duke of 10 Porthumberland, and Agelnothus the abbat of Olastenburie were the most famous. Some after his departing, Conchesurnamed Sylvaticus, sonne to Alfricke that was brother to Coricke de Streona, refusing to submit himselfe buto the king, rebelled and role against such as he had lest in his absence to governe the land. Wherevoon those that laie in the castell of Hereford, as Richard Fitz Scrope and o thers, dio offentimes invade his lands, and walked ten as they attempted to inuade him, they lost manie of their olune fouldiers and men of war. Dozeo: ner, the fair Conche calling to his aid the kings of the Wielthmen, Bleothgent and Kithwall, about the feast of the assumption of our Ladie, wasted the countrie of Hereford, even to the bridge of the river of Wilye, and obteined out of thole quarters a matinclious great spoile. In the winter also following, Fring william and after king William had disposed his busines in returneth into Posmandie, he returned into England, and euen then began to hundle the Englishmen somewhat tharpelie, sumofing thereby to kiepe them the mote easilie under his obedience. He also take awaic from diverse of the Pobilitie, and others of the bet ter fort, all their livings, and gave the same to his Pormans. Porconer, he railed great fares and lub. H. Hunt. fivies through the realme: nor anything regarded th'English Pobilitie, so that they tho before thought themsclues to be made for ever by bringing a firanger into the realine, do now feethemfelues traden binder fot, to be despised, and to be mocked on all fiocs, infomuch that many of them were confreis Matth. Paris. ned (as it were for a further testimonie of servitude and bondage) to thane their beards, to round their heare, and to frame themselves as well in apparell as in service and diet at their tables after the Pozmanmanner, berie frange and farre differing from the ancient cultomes and old blages of their countrie. Others otterlie refusing to susteine such an intollerable poke of thallowne as was dailie laid bpon them by the Pormans, those rather to leave all both goes and lands, a after the maner of outlaives. the good of his farmous and tenants: but yet to of 20 got them to the wood, with their wives, children, and fernants, meaning from thenceforth wholie to live byon the spoile of the countries adjoining, and them to the to take what some rert to hand. Where work wods as outit came topalle within a while, that no man might lawes. travell in fafetic from his owne house or towne to his nert neighbors, and every quiet and honest mans house became as it were an hold or fortresse furnis theo for defense with bowes and arrowes, bils, poly ares, fweeds, clubs and fraces, and other weapons; 30 the dozes kept locked and fronglie boulted in the night featon, for feare to be furprifed as it had beine in time of open warre, and amongst publike enti-mies. Praires were fate also by the mailter of the house, as though they had beene in the middelf of the feas in some fromic tempell, and when the winvolues or dozes thould be thut in and closed, they w fed to faie Renedicite, and others to answer, Dominus, milibe fort as the press and his penitent were wont to do at confession in the church.

Englifhmen Soundsaw

Potwithstanding all this, B. William fought to tame & vanguish those of the English Pobilitie, who mould not be at his becke. They againe on the other fide made themselves frong, the better to relift him, 10 chosing for their chiefe capteines and leaders the carles Cowine & Edgar Ctheling, who valiantlie relisted the Romans, and flue many of them with great rage and crucitie. And as they thus proceeded in their matters, king William being a politike prince, forward and painefull in his bulinelle, fuffer red them not altogither to escape cliere awaie, but did fore annoy and put them off to remediles loffes, though he abode in the meane time many laborious tournies, flaughters of his people, and damages of 20 his person. Herebpon the English Pobilitie ener after, yea in time of peace, were hated of the king and his parmans, and at length were kept fo thoat, that being moned partlic with distaine, and partlie with dread, they got them out of the realme, some into Scotland, some into Denmarke, others into Pogway; and among thefe, the two earles Cowine and Parchar, with certeine bilhops & others of the cleargie, belides manie also of the tempozaltie, es caped into Scotland. Parleswine & Gospatricke, 30 with a great number of other the Pobles of Pozthumberland, Edgar Eihling with his mother A gatha, and his lifters Chaiffine and Pargaret, chanced also to be driven into Scotland by tempest, as they failed towards the coals of Germanie, purpofing to have returned into Dungarie, where the faid Edgar was borne : howbeit being arrived in Scotland, he found so friendlie entertainment there, that finallic Palcolme the third then king of that realine, twice his lister Pargaret to wife, and Christine bes 40 came a nunne, as in the Scotish chronicles more plainelie doth appere. Ling William hereby perceiving daily how bulvilling the Englishmen were to be under his obelfance, was in feare of rebellions commotions; and therfore to fuboue them the better, he builded foure callels, one at Potingham, another at Lincolne, the third at Porke, and the fourth neere buto Hallings, where he landed at his first comming into England.

The Conques buto obedience and awe, he toke from them all their roz taketherő armour and weapons. He ordeined also that the maiffer of eneric houthold about eight of the clocke in the enening, should cause his fire to be raked by in athes, his lights to be put out, and then go to bed. Belides this, to the end that everie man might have knowledge of the houre to go to rest, he gave order, that in all cities, townes, and billages, where anie thurch was, there should a bell be rong at the said houre, which custome is will bled even buto this daie, 60 Cover few arft and commonlie called by the French wood , Cover few, that is, Rake vp the fier.

This yeare on Chitlunday, Paud the wife of king William was crowned Duene by Aclosed archbilhop of Porke. The fame yeare also was Henrie his some borne here in England : for his other two somes Robert and William were borne in Popmandic, before he had conquered this land. About the fame time also , Godwine and Comund furnamed the great, the formes of B. Harolo, came from Arcland, and landing in Somerfetthire, fought with Adnothus that had beine maister of their fathers horses, thom they flue, with a great number of o thers; and so having gotten this victorie, returned

into Ireland, from whence they came with a great botte which they toke in their returns out of Comes wall, Deuonihire, and other places thereabouts. In like maner, Excesser bio as then rebell, and like, wife the countrie of Posthumberland, whereboon Wil. Malon. the king appointed one of his capteines named Simon Dun. Robert Cumin, a right noble personage (but moze valiant than circumfped) to go against the northerne people with a part of his armie, whilest he himselfe and the other part went to subdue them of Excesser: where, at his comming before the citie, the citizens prepared themselues to defend their gates and wals: but after he began to make his approch to affaile them, part of the citizens repenting their folith ats tempts, opened the gates, and luffered him to enter. Thus having subdued them of Ercester, he grænous lie punished the chefe offendors. But the counteste Tita, the litter of Sweine 18. of Denmarke, and formetime wife to earle Godwine, and mother to the last K. Harold, with divers other that were got into that citie, found meanes to flie, and fo escaped oner into Flanders . King William hauing palled his bulinelle in luch wife in Deuonthire, halted backe towards Poske, being advertised in the waie, that the Porthumbers having knowledge by their spials, that Robert generall of the Posmans being come to Durham, did not so diligentlie cause watch and ward to be kept about the towne in the night scason as was requilite, did let boon him about midnight, This chauns & flue the fame Robert with all his companie, so that ced the 28. of of seauen hundred which he brought with him, there Innuarie on a mag hut one that escaped to him tidings to the wednesday. was but one that escaped to bring tidings to the Polydor. king their souereigne.

De heard allo how Edgar Etheling at the fame time, being in the countrie, riving abroad with a trope of hoslemen, and hearing of the discomfiture of those Pormans, pursued them egerlie, and sue great numbers of them, as they were about to fauc themselves by flight, with which newes being in no fmall furie, be made fpeed forward, and comming at the last into Posthumberland, he easilie vanquished the forelaid rebels, and putting the cheefe authors of this mutinie to death, he referued some of the rest as captines, and of other some he caused the hands to be chopped off in token of their inconstancie and rebells ous dealing. After this, he came to Poste, and there in like fort punished those that had afted Co.

gar, which done, he returned to London.

In the meane time, those Englishmen that were Pozeouer, to reduce the English people the somer 50 fled (as you have heard) into Denmarke, by continue all lute made to Sueine then king of that realine, Sweine and to procure him to make a journie into England for Diborne bath to procure him to make a fournie into England for Matth. Paris. reconcrie of the right descended to him from his ancestors, at length obtained their purpose, in so much that king Sucine lent his fonnes Harold and Car nutus toward England, who with a nanic of two Chichunhundred faile, in the companie of Diborne their on bich failes cle, arrived in the mouth of Humber betweene the faith M.W. tivo later ladie daies, and there landing their people but Sim. Dun with the English outlawes, whom they had brought hath 240, with them, they firaightwates marched towards Porke, walting and spoiling the countrie with great crueltie as they palled. Some after also came Cogar, and luch other English eriles as had before fled into Scotland, and wined their forces with them. When the newes of these things were brought to Dooke, the people there were friken with a maruch lous feare, infomuch that Aelozed the archiffiop (through verie greefe and anguith of mind) departed this life. The Pormans also which late there in garrison, after they understood by their spies that the ense mies were come within two dates fournie of them. began not a little to millrust the faith of the citie zens, and bicause the suburbes thouso not be any aid Polydor. Anno Reg.2. Matth.Paris. Marth.West. Ditters of the English Mo= bilitie forfalte their natine countrie.

Polydor.

Two at yout, Soherein he left fine hun= Dzed men in garrifon. Simon Dun.

the English: menticicar=

inftituted.

1068 Matth. Weit.

@Dinund the great.

vorke barnt.

Mormans

Simon Dun.

became so big, and mounted such a height, that it caught the citie also, and consumed a great part ther; of to alhes, togither with the minster of S. Peter, and a famous librarie belonging to the fame. Here bpon the Normans and citizens in like maner were constrained to issue forth at the same time, and being bpon the entinies before they had any knowledge of their approch, were forced to trie the matter by 10 disordered battell: whose number though it was far inferiour buto theirs, yet they valiantlie defended themselves for a time, till being oppessed with multitudes, they were overcome and flaine, so that there perithed in this conflict, to the number of thee thous land of them. Panie of the Englishmen also that came with them to the field, were faued by the ente mies, to the end they might gaine somewhat by their ransomes, as William Pallet thirife of the thire, with his wife, and two of their children, Bilbert de 20 Baunt, and divers other. This flaughter chanced on a faturdaic, being the nineteenth day of Septems to warlike en= terpules. The Danes

Swhere they wintered. Hen. Hunt. Polydor.

March.Paris.

Hen. Hunt.

Wil. Malm.

Sim. Dunel.

Carle Cow nesiands giuen bnto Z= lancearle of Witteine.

vinto them, they let fire on the lame, which by the hugeneile of the wind that suddenlie arose, the slame ber; a dismall date to the Pormans. The two brethren having thus obtained this victo-ric, went on further into the countrie of Porthums berland, and brought the same wholie to their subjects on, infomuch that all the north parts were at their comandement. Upon this they meant to have gone towards London with the like attempt in the fouth A tharpe wine parts, if the extreame and hard winter which chanced 30 ter, an entimie that yeare, had not stated their enterpaise, as it oid king William from affailing them; who hearing of all their doings in the north countrie, would else full gladie have let boon them. In the meane time, the Dancs wintered in Porkelhire, betwirt the two riv uers Duse and Arent; but so some as the snow be= gan to melt, and the yee to thaw and waste away, king Milliam sped him with great hast toward his enimies into Porkelhire, and comming to the river of Trent, where it falleth into Humber, he pitched 40 his tents there to refresh his people, for his enimies were at hand. The date following he brought his are mic into the field to fight with the Danish princes, tho likewise in battell araie met them. Then began a right fore and terrible battell, continuing a long space in equalibalance, till at length in one of the Danish wings the Pozman horsemen had put their enimies to flight. Which when the relioue of the Danes perceived, and therewith put in a sudden feare, they like wife fled. Harold and Canutus with 50 a band of hardie fouldiers that tarried about them, retired backe (though with much a do and great dan= ger) unto their thips. Edgar also, by helpe of god bosles, eleaped into Scotland with a few in his companic. Carle Walteof, who had fought most manful lie in that battell, flaine manie Pormans with his owne hands, was reconciled into the kings fauour: but the relidue were for the most part taken prison ners, and killed. William of Malmesburie wateth, that king William comming at that time into the 60 north parts, belieged the citic of Porke, and putting to flight a great armie of his enimies that came to the fuccour of them within, not without great lotte of his owne fouldiers, at length the citie was deline red into his hands; the citizens and other that kept it, as Scots, Dancs, and Englithmen , being conftreined thereto through lacke of vittels. Other write, how the Danes, being loven with riches and spoiles gotten in the countrie, departed to their thips before the comming of king William. Here is not to be forgotten, that (as John Leland hath noted) while ! the Conquerour held liege before Porke, at the ears nest request of his wife Ducene Paud, he advanced his neper Alane earle of Britaine, with the gift of all those lands that sometime belonged buto earle Edwine, the tenoz of which giff insueth:

Ego Gulihelmus cognomine Bastardus , do 🖝 concedo tibi nepoti meo Alano Britannia comiti, O haredilus tuis in perpetuum, omnes illas villas & terras, qua nuper fuerunt comitis Eadwini in Eborashira, cum feodis militum & alys libertatibus & consuetudinibus, ita libere & honorifice sicut idem Eadwinus ea tenuit. Dat. in obsidione coram civitate Eloraci: that is, I William furnamed Bastard, doo give and grant to thee my nephue Alane earle of Britaine, and to thine heires for euer, all those townes & lands that latelie were earle Eadwines in Yorkeshire, with the knights fees and other liberties and customes, so freelie and honourablie as the faid Eadwine held the same. Giuen in our seege before the citie of Yorke. The earle of Britaine, being a man of a fout fomach, and meaning to defend that which was thus gis nen to him, built a frong castell niere to his mano? Castell of of Billingham, and named it Richmont. The first Richmont. originall line of the earles of Richmont (that bare their title of honor of this castell and towne of Rich mont (as Leland hath set downe the same) is this: Eudo earle of Britaine, the fonne of Geffrey, begat the sonnes, Alane le Rous, otherwise Fregaunte, Alane the blacke, and Stephan . These thee beetheen after their fathers decease, succeeded one another in the earledome of Britaine; the two elder, A. Earle of Brt lane the red and Alane the blacke died without issue. Stephan begat a sonne named Alane, who lest a fonne, which was his heire named Conan, which Co. nan married Pargaret the daughter of William king of Scotland, who bare him a daughter named Conffantia, which Conffantia was coupled in mars riage with Beffrey sonne to king Henrie the second, tho had by hir Arthur, thom his bucle king John, for feare to be deprined by him of the crowne, caused to be made awaie; as some have witten. But now to returne where we left touching the Danes. Simon Simon Dun. Dunel. affirmeth,that Parolo and Canute og Cnute the somes of Sweine king of Denmarke , with Marth Paris their bucle earle Diborne, and one Christianus abis maketh mens thop of the Danes, and earle Turketillus were guistion but of ders of this Danith armie, & that afterwards, when Diborne king William came into Posthumberland, he fent whom he calbuto earle Dibone, promiting him that he would leth brethren. permit him to take up bittels for his armie about the fea coaffes; and further, to glue him a postion of mos nie, so that heshould depart and returne home as some as the winter was passed. But howsoever the matter went with the Danes, certeine it is by the whole consent of writers, that king William has uing thus suboued his ensures in the north, he toke fo great displeasure with the inhabitants of the couns trie of Pockethire and Pochumberland, that he wasted all the land betwirt Poske and Durham, so that for the space of thewleave miles, there was left in maner no habitation for the people, by reason wheres of it late walk and defert for the space of nine or ten yeares. The goodie cities with their towers and fexples fet byon a ffatelie height, and reaching as it were into the aire : the beautifull fields and pas fures, watered with the course of sweet and pleasant rivers, if a stranger should then have beheld, and also knowne before they were thus defaced, he would furclie have lamented: og if any old inhabitant had bene long absent, a newly returned thither, had sene this pitiful face of the countrie, he would not have knowne it, such destruction was made throughout all those quarters, whereof Poske it selfe felt not the fmallest pozition . The bishop of Durham Egelwie nus with his cleargie fled into holie Iland with S.

Durham, where they tarried the moneths and od Simon Dur daies, before they returned to Durham againe. The 13.ti.

Cutberts bodie, and other iswels of the church of kings armie comming into the countrie that lieth between the rivers Theile and Line, found nothing but boid feeles and bare walles; the people with their gods and cattell being fled and withdrawne into the wood and mountaines, if any thing were for getten behind, these new gells were diligent inough to find it out.

Anno Reg 4. 1070.

Dimileges

renoked.

and freedoms

Matth. Paris

In the beginning of the spring, king William refurned to London, and now after all thefe troubles, began to conceine greater hatred against the En. 10 glithmen than euer before; to as doubting that hee should never by gentlenesse win their god willes, he now determined by a harder measure to mæte with them; infomuch that he banifhed a great num ber, other some also (not a few) he spoiled of their gods, those especiallie of whom he was in hope to gaine any great postion of lubitance.

Thus were the Englishmen generallie in danger to lofe life, lands and gods, without knowledge, 02 operlie proceeding in judgement, so that no greater 20 miserie in the earth could be imagined, than that thereinto our nation was now fallen. He toke from the tolones and cities from the bishops læs and abbeies all their ancient privileges and frædoms, to the end they should not onelie be cut short and made weaker, but also that they (for the obteinment of their quietnesse) might redæme the same of him for such summes of monie as pleased him to eract. Among other things, he ordeined that in time of warre they should aide him with armoz, horse and 30 monie, according to that order which he thould then prescribe: all which he caused to be registred, inrole led, and laid by in his treasurie. But diverse of the spirituall persons would not obey this ordinance, whom he banished without remorte.

About this time the archbithop Stigand, and A.

lerander bishop of Lincolne fled to Scotland, there they kept themselves close for a season. But the king fill continued in his hard proceeding against the came to the gonernance of the realme only by plaine conquest, he seized into his hands most part of euce rie mans possessions, causing them to redeme the fame at his hands againe, and pet reteined a proper-tie in the most part of them; so that those that thould afterwards enion them, thould acknowledge them.

felues to hold them of him, in yelding a yerlie rent. to him and his successors for ever, with certaine o ther providions, thereby in cales of forfeiture the colloss againe. The like order he appointed to be be fed by other possessors of lands, in letting them forth to their tenants. He ordeined also, that the Termes and matters in controucrife betwirt partie and par-tie, in manner as is vied buto this day. He decreed mozeover, that there hould be thiriffes in everie in quiet, and to fee offendors punished . Furthers more, he instituted the court of the Ercheker, and the officers belonging to the same, as the barons, the clearks, and such other, and also the high court of Stigand. Alexander. bilhop of Lin=

Polydor. The hard de= ling of K.williana against the English= micn.

The institutis should be kept foure times in the piere, in such plas on of the foure ces as he thould nominate, and that the judges thuld lit in their feverall places to judge and decide causes

The Erche= The Chan=

> After he had in this fort ordeined his magistrates and ministers of the lawes, he last lie toke order what ordinances he would have observed: where open as brogating in maner all the ancient lawes pled in times paid, and instituted by the former kings for the god order and quietnes of the people, he made new. nothing to equall or eatie to be kept; which neverther leffe those that came after (not without their great harme) were confireined to observe ; as though it had biene an high offense against & D D to abolish those enill lawes, which king William (a prince no thing friendlie to the English nation) had first order ned, and to bring in other more easie and tollerable. There by the wate I give you to note a great ablur ditie; namelie, that those lawes which touched all, and ought to be knowne of all, were notwithfranding written in the Porman twng, which the En The lawes glifhmen bnoerstood not; so that even at the begin: were witten ning you thould have great numbers, partice by the in the floginiquitie of the lawes, and partlie by ignozance in misconstraing the same, to be wrongfullie condems ned: some to beath, and some in the forfeitures of their gods; others were so intangled in sutes and causes, that by no means they knew how to get out, but continuallie were tolled from post to piller; in such wise that in their minds they cursed the time that ever these breauall lawes were made.

The maner for the triall of causes in controner Matters to fie, was deutled in such fort as is pet bled. Twelve be tried by a ancient men (but most commonlie onlearned in the inrie of 12. lawes) being of the same countic where the sute laie, men. were appointed by the sudges to go togisher into forme close chamber, where they should be thut ov. till bpon diligent examination of the matter they thould agree boon the condemnation of acquiting of the pailoner, if it were in criminall causes; or opon des ciding in whom the right remained, if it were boom triall of things in controversie. Pow when they were all agreed, they came in before the judges, declaring to what agreement they were growne: which done, the judges opened it to the offendors or lutors, and withall gave fentence as the qualitie of the cafe did inforce and require. There may hamilie be (as Polydor Virgil faith) that will mainteine this maner of proceeding in the administration of instice by the voices of a turie, to have beene in vie before the conqueroes dates, but they are not able to proue it by any ancient records of writers, as he thinketh : al-Englishmen, insomuch that now protesting how he 40 bett by some of our histories they should seeme to be first orderned by Ethelred or Egelred. Polybeit this is most true, that the Porman kings themselves would confesse, that the lawes benised and made by the Conqueroz were not berie equall; infomuch that William Kufus and Penrie the sonnes of the Conqueroz would at all times, when they fought to pur chale the peoples fauoz, promile to abolith the lawes ordelned by their father, establish other more equall, and reffore those which were view in S. Cowards same lands thould returne to him, and his said suc 50 daies. The like kind of purchaling fauor was bled by king Steephen, and other kings that followed him. But now to the matter, king William having made thefe ordinances to keepe the people in order, fet his mind to invich his cofers, and ther opon caus fed first a tribute to be levied of the commons, then the abbeies to be learthed, and all such monie as any Matth. Paris. Matth. West. of the Englishmen had late op in the same, to be Wil. Mal. kept. Belides all this, he leised into his hands their Wil. Thorne. charters of privileges made to them by the Saron Abbris leads kings of the land, and hared not fo much as the tew Polydor thire, and inffices of the peace to keepe the countries 60 els and plate dedicated to facred vies. All this div Simon Dun. he (as some write) by the counsell of the earle of Wertford.

> Shortlie after betwirt Gaffer and Whitfuntios, Wil. Thorns. a great lyndo was holden at Winchester by the bilhops and cleargie, where Ermenfred the bilhop of Sion of Sitten, with two cardinals John and Polydor. Peter fent thither from pope Alexander the fecond, did fit as thefe commissioners. In this synod was stigand arch Stigand the archbilliop of Canturburie deprined billiop of Cane of his bishoppike, for three special causes.

First, for that he had wrongfullie holden that prined, bishopzike, whilest the archbishop Robert was lie uing.

turburie De

Mtwlawes.

Spai

Sim

eur hath

Ra!.

but '

and æai.

terub

Wil.M

2 Secondic, for that he kept the for of Winches fer in his hands, after his investiture onto Canturburie, which he ought not to have done.

3 Thirdlie, for that he had received the pall at the hands of pope Benedict the tenth, whom the cardi nals, as one not lawfullie cleded, had deposed.

Dowbeit, manie witers burthen king William (who was prefent at this fynod) for the procuring of Digand his deprivation, to the end he might place a firanger in his come. For as he had roted out the 10 English Pobilitie, and given awaie their lands offuings to his Pormans; so meant he to turne out the English cleargie from bearing any office of honoz within the realme, which meaning of his did well av peare at his councell, wherin divers bilbops, abbats. and priors were deposed, and Pormans preferred to their places. Stigand after his deprivation was kept in perpetuall prison at Winchester, till he died, and yet (as some write) the same Stigand was an helper buder hand for king William to atteme the 20

Chomas a cur made archbill)op of yorke. Lanfranke confecrated archbilhop of Canturburie. and Eadmerus the fourth Ral. of Sep= tember.

1071 Anno Reg. 5. Wil. Mal. Eadmerus,

Enelmarus

bilhop of Thetford

was one that was depoled.

Simon Dun.

Matt. Paris.

In the feat of Pentecold next inluing, the king being at Mindloz, gave the archbishopzike of Poske canon of Bay= buto one Thomas, a canon of Bayeur, and to Walkelme one of his chaplins he gave the bishoppike of Minchester. After this, calling one Lanfranke an Italian from Caen where he was abbat, he made him archbishop of Canturburie, who was comfecrated there in the featr of S. John Baptist, in the peare following, which was after the birth of our Sa 30 bath the eight vious 1071. The foresaid Thomas was the five and Rai. of Daic, twentiff billyop that had governed in that fee of but Wil. Mal. Poske, & Landranke the three & thirtith in the fee of Canturburie. But yer long, betwirt these two arch billyops there role great contention for the primatie of their churches, in so much that the archbishop of Poske apealed to Rome, there they both appeared personallie before pope Alexander, in whose presence Lanfranks cause was so much favoured, that not bithop of Dozchester were for reasonable causes deprived of their crossers and rings : and Lansranke at their humble request was a meane to the vove for them in the end, that they might be refrozed to their states, which was accordinglie obteined. For when the pope heard Lanfranke declare in their fauour, how necessarie their service might be to the king, in the establishment of his new gotten kingdome, he ce fait to Lanfranke; Well, loke you then to the mate ter, you are the father of that countrie, and therefore so consider that is expedient to be done therein: their s staves which they have surrendered, there they be, ce take them, and dispose them as you shall thinke most cc profitable for the advancement of the christian religion in that countrie. Therebpon, Lanfranke toke the fraues, and delivered them to the former poster fours, and so were they in the popes presence restored to their former dignities. One cause thy Who mas was deprived (as some writers saie) was, for that he had holpen duke TAilliam toward histour 60 nie into England when he came to conquer it, for the which pleasure to him then thewed, the duke proimsed him a bishopzike, if ener he obteined vidozie o ver the English: an other cause, fol that he was a pricks sonne. Pow, when the pope bnoerstwo the full ground of their contention to be for the primatie of the two fees, Canturburie and Porke, and had heard what could be alledged on both fides, he remitted the determination thereof to the king and bilhops of England, that by the histories and records of the land, the matter might be tried, sudged and ordered.

Therefore at their comming home, and after long debating and discussing of the cause (as in William Marleburgh it appeareth moze at large) at a synod holden at Mindloz, in the veste 1072, sentence was Anno Reg. 6. given on Lanfranks floe, so that in all things concerning religion and the faith of holie thurth, the Matth. Weit. archbishop of Pocke should be ever subject to the on of the arche archbishop of Canturburie, and come with all the bis bishoppike of thops of his province to what place foeuer the archy yorke, to the bishop of Canturburie should summon any councell archbishops within the realme of England. Poscouer, then anie the of Cantucket historic, elected bishop of Canturburie was to be consecrated, the archbishop of Poike (for the time being) Could come to Canturburie, and confecrate him there. And if the archbishop of Poske was to be in-Stalled and confecrated, then should be come to Canturburie, or to what place it should please the archbi-Mop of Canturburie to alligne, and there to be confirmed of him, taking an oth with profession of due obedience unto the higher fee. Pow, as the faid Tho- Polydor. mas of Porke did peeld obedience to Lanfranke of The archite Canturburie, so likewise me eiea vingop or Wiais acknowleged cow in Scotlano named Pichaell, was some after primate of all Canturburie, so likewise the elect bishop of Blas shop of yorke, confecrated of the forelaid Thomas arthbilhop of Scotland. Porke, and made an off obedience but othe faid archbishop, as to the primate of all Scotland : and after him Tothade the bishop of S. Andrewes did the like, by commandement of Palcolme the third of that name king of Scotland, and Pargaret his wife, who thought good by this recognisance of obedience and dutie, so to proute against further incomuenience to come, that hereafter, one of the bishops of their realme flould not take upon them to confe crate an other: 02 do any thing contrarie to the ans cient decrees of the old fathers, that might be pacindiciall to the authoritie of the archbishop of Porke, at whose appointment those and the like things were accustomed to be done. In this controversie (or the Ranulph. Celike) it is left written, that in a court held at Rome Aren.lib.x.cap. (the time is not mentioned) the pope perceluing the 57. & lib. 7. Arife betweene thefe two prelats to be but for the his cap.2. ghest place or primate in the church; he folemnelie onclie the forefaid Thomas, but also Remigius the 40 gaue fentence by decree, that the fee of Porke thould haue in title Primas Anglia, & Canturburie Primas totius Anglia, thich titles do pet remain to them both.

But to leave this, and to speake of other things which chanced in the meane time that this control uerlie depended betwirt the two archbishops, I find that Edwin and Parchar earles of Pertia and Pozthumberland, having of late obteined pardon for their former misoemeanor, a reconciled to the bing, began now so much to millike the state of the world againe, as ever they did before. For perceiving how the Englishmen were will oppessed with thealdome a miserie on ech hand, they conspired, a began a new rebellion, but with verieill successe, as shall herafter appeare. The king understanding of their dealings, Matt. Parisi and being not onelie armed throughlie with temporall force, but also endued with the spirituall power of his archbilhop Lanfranke (who aloed him in all that he might, for the supressing of those revels) was fed the countries ercedinglie, where he buderstood that they had gotten anie relecte, minding ofterlie to vanquish them with swood, fire, and hunger, or by ere freame penurie to bring them buder. They on the o ther part make as fout relitance; and perceiving that it food them boon, either to banquish or to fall into ofter ruine, they raile a mightie frong hoff, and make Edgar Cheling their capteine, a comclie gentleman and a valiant, in whome also the whole hope of the English nation was reposed, as appear reth by this his accustomed by-inord, Edgar Etheling Englands dearling. Amongst other noble menthat were thiefe dwers in the affembling of this armie, Frederike abbat of S. Albons, a pielate of great wealth and no lette puttance, was a principall. The king perceiving his estate to be now in tro W.iy. Imall 1072 fmall danger, is in a great perpleritie what to do.in the end, he counfelleth with the faid Lanfranke arch bishop of Canturburie, how he might remedie the matter; who told him that in such a desperate case, the best wate for him should be to sæke by faire 10010s and friendly offers to pacific the English Por bilitie, which by all meanes politible would never ceasie to molest him in the recoverie of their libers tics. Therebyon he made meanes to come to some agreement with them, and so well the matter proces ded on his fide, that the Englishmen being deceived through his faire promifes, were contented to common of peace, for which purpole they came allo but der the conduct of the abbat Frederike buto Werkamiled, idjere (after much reasoning and debating of the matter for the conclusion of amitie betwirt them)king William in the presence of the archbishop Lanfranke and other of his loads, twke a personall oth upon all the relikes of the church of S. Albons, Fring the same onto him)that he would from thence forth observe and keepe the god and ancient approv neo lawes of the realine, which the noble kings of England his predecessors had made and ordeined heretofore; but namelie thole of S. Coward, with were suppled to be most equall and indifferent.

Wil.Malm.

The peace being thus concluded, and the English. men growne thereby to some hope of further quiet nesse, they began to for sake their alies, and returned attendance byon the king. But he warilie cloking his inward purpole, not with Manding the unitie late lie made, determineth particularlie to affaile his ent mies (whose power without doubt so long as it was bnited, could not possiblie be overcome, as he thought) and being now by reason of this peace differ nered and dispersed, he thought it high time to put his secret purposes in execution: wherevoon taking them at bnwares and thinking of nothing leffe than killeth divers, and pursueth the relique with fire and fword, taking awaie their gods, polletions, lands, and inheritances, and banishing them out of the realme. In the meane time, those of the English Pobilitie, which could escape this his outragious tyzan. nie, got awaie, and amongst other, Edgar Etheling fled againe into Scotland: but Cowin was flaine of his owne fouldiers, as he rode toward Scotland. carle Parchar, and one Pereward, with the bifhop of Durham named Egelwinus, got into the 3le of 50 Clie, in purpose there to defend themselves from the inturie of the Posmans, for they take the place (by reason of the situation) to be of no small strength. Howbeit king William endenouring to cutthem thost, railed a power, and stopped all the passages on the east side, and on the west part he made a causie through the fennes, of two miles in length, whereby he got unto them, and constrained them to yell. But Darchar, oz (as others haue) Dereward, fozeleing the imminent vanger likelie to take effect, made 60 thist toget out of the Ile by bote, and so by speedie flight escaped into Scotland. The bishop of Dur ham being taken, was fent to the abber of Abings don, to be kept as prisoner, where he was so sparing lie fed, that within a thort space he vied for hunger.

In this meane time, and whilest king William was thus occupied in roting out the English, Walcoline king of Scotland had walted the countries of Theisedale, Cleveland, and the lands of S. Cutbert petuallyzison, with sundzie other places in the north parts. There he refused his opon Gospatrike being latelie reconciled to the king uned him felfe & made earle of Porthumberland, was fent againft him, tho facked and deffroied that part of Cumbers Land which the faid Palcolme by violence had brought bnoer his subiection . At the same time Walcolme was at Meremouth, beholding the fire which his people had kindled in the church of Saint Peter to burne op the fame, and there hearing what Golpatrike had done, he toke such displeasure thereat, that he commanded his men they thould leave none of the English nation alive, but put them all to the A bloudie coa swood without pitie or compassion, so off as they mandement came to hand. The bloudie flaughter which was made executed by on came to hand. The blouble tranggreet thirty was made the English o at this time by the Scots, through that cruell comby the Scots, mandement of Malcolme, was pitifull to confider, for women, dilozen, olo and yong, went all one way: howbrit, manie of those that were frong and able to ferue for daudges and flaues, were referued, and carried into Scotland as priloners, where they remained manie yeares after; in so much that there were few houses in that realme, but had one or mo English flaves and captines, whom they gat at this buhappie voiage. Pilerable was the state of the and the holic evangelists (the abbat Arcderike mini 20 English at that time, one being consumed of ano ther so binnaturallie, manie of them destroied by the Scots foccuellic, and the relique kept buder by the king to tyzannicallie.

But to returne to the purpose in hand, king William hearing of all thefe things, was not a lit. tle moued at the same, but thefelie with Malcohne king of Scots, for that his countrie was the onelie place wherein all the mal-contents of his realme had their refuge. Wherfore, thinking to revenge the losse each one, either to his owne pollections, or to give 30 of his lublects, and to bring that realme also but o his subjection, he went thither with an huge armie, as bout the middle of August, where he first innaded the bounds of Walloway, bicause he heard how the En glift were latelie fled thither. But after he had weas Polydor. ried his fouldiers in vaine pursuit of them (who kept themsclues in the mountaines and marres grounds) he gave over the enterprise, and drew towards Lothiam, there king Palcolme late with all his power, fundzie English fugitives, with whome warres and ludden innation, he impationeth manie, 40 he determined by battell either to end his trouble,02 else to lose his life. Dow as both the kings with their armies were readie to encounter, Malcolme began to doubt somethat of the fierlenesse of the battell, bi. Matth. Paris. cause he saw the great pullance and readie willes of the English and Pormans to fight, whereboon he fent an harrolo to king William to treat of peace, there with he was content at the last (though with H. Hunt much ado) and to a bnitie infued betwirt them, upon these conditions; namelie, that king Palcolme thould do homage to king William for the realme of Scotland, and therebpon deliver sufficient hosta. The king of ges : and that on the other five, king William thould mage to king vardon all the Englith outlawes in Scotland with william tox then rebelled against him. The place there this peace Scotland. was concluded, was called Abirnetht. After this, king William returned into England, where he per long toke the earledome of Porthumberland from Bolpatrike, and gaue it to Waltheof the sonne of Simon Dun. Siward; bicause of right it seemed to descend unto him from his father, but cheefelie from his mother tuftice. Alfreda, tho was the daughter of Alozed sometime earle of that countrie.

At the same time also the king caused a castell to be built at Durham, and returned to London, where he received advertisement that his subjects in Por mandie toward the parties of Angiew had begun a rebellion against him. Herebpon with all speed he leuied an armie, whereof the most part consisted of English (whose service he liked rather in a foren countrie than in their owne) and failed over into Pormandie, where he easilie suboued his enimics by the valiancie of the English, whom from thence forth he began somewhat to favour and better thinke of than before. Poing Edgar allo grew in verie god

The kings

Ban. Higa. H. Hunt. Matth.Paris.

Polydor. Hen Hunt. Matth. Paris.

Simon Dun.

Some wite that he was fostabbozneharted, that after be knew he should re= maine in per= to death.

creat with him, for though he had twile broken his oth of allegiance, and run to the Scots as a rebell. pet now of his owne motion, returning to the king and craving pardon, he was not onelie received, but also highlie honoured and preferred in his court.

The yeare 1074. the monks of the province of Dercia, purpoling to reffore religion after their maner within the province of Porthumberland, came into Docke, and required of Hugh fitz Baldzicke (then thirife of the thire) to have fafe conduct buto Monkaster, which afterwards hight Pewcastell, and lois called to this day. These monks, whose names were Aldwin, Alfwin, and Kemfred, comming buto the forefaid place, found no token or remanent of any religious persons, which sometime had habitatis on there (for all was defaced and gone:) therebpon, after they had remained there a while, they remoued to Jarrowe, where finding the ruines of old decaied buildings and churches, perteining in times past to tance at the hands of Walkher bilhop of Durham. that at length, by the diligent travell and fute of thefe monks, the monasteries were newlie founded and erected in the north parts, one at Durham, an other at Poske, and the third at Whithy . For you must consider, that by the inuation of the Danes, the churches and monasteries throughout Porthumbers land were so wasted and ruinated, that a man could fearfelie find a church Canding in all that countrie, as for those that remained, they were covered with beame or that d: but as for any abbey or monastes 30 rie, not one was left in all the countrie, neither did any man (for the space of two hundred yeares) take care for the repairing or building up of any thing in decaie, so that the people of that countrie will not that a monke ment, and if they faw any, they won dered at the Arangenelle of the light.

Whilest the king remained thus in Posmandie,

Roger earle of Hereford (contrarie to the kings mind and pleasure) married his lister onto Kafe and withall began a new conspiracie against him.

Amongst other also of the associats, earle Walteof

the some of earle Silvard was one, who afterward mistrusting the successe of this device, first bitered it to archbishop Lansranke, and by his adulce sailed over into Pozmandie, and there disclosed the whole matter to king William: but in the meane time, the other two carles; namelie, Hereford and Cambridge had so farre proceeded in the matter, that they were bp in armour. Howbeit, Wolffan bishop of Wlozceller, and Caelwine abbat of Eucham, with the thirife of Morceller & Malter Lacie, so relisted the earle of Hereford, that he could not passe the Se uerne to ioine with the earle of Cambridge. On the other lide, Doo the bithop of Bayeur, and Beffrey

the bishop of Constances pursued the earle of Canv bridge so narrowlie with another armie, which they had gathered of the English and Pozmans, that they constreined him to fle into Britaine, whereby the re-

Anno Reg.9. 1077

Mount ca-

ffer non Memcaltell.

Rafe Carle of carle of Cambridge ,02(as other haue) Porthfolke, Cambuoge. Matth. West. Matth. Paris. Hen. Hunt. Simon Dun. A rebellion railed against K.william.

John Pike.

Anno Reg. 10. 1076

H. Hunt. Carle walte: of belieaded.

bellion was verie much appealed. In the meane time, the king bnderstanding by earle Walteof how the matter went in England, came over with all speed out of Pormandie, within a short space brought the residue of the conspirators into such a feare, that they were scattered and put to flight, without attempting anie further exploit or conspiracie against him. Manie of them also were appehended and put to death, among abom Roger and Walteof were most famous. And though Walteof (as yæhaue heard before) disclosed the treason. pet to the end he thould offend no more hereafter. he was beheaded at Minchester by the kings commandement, and his bodie having beine first buried in the fame place where he luffered, was after conucied buto Crowland, and there more honorablie interred.

This earle Walteof or Walbeur was forme (as pe have heard) to Siward the noble earle of Pozthumberland, of whole valure in the time of B. Co ward the confessor pe have heard. His son the fore faid Walteof in Arength of bodie and hardinelle did not degenerate from his father, for he was tall of personage, in fine ws and mulculs berie frong and mightp. In the flaughter of the Pozmans at Docke, he thewed profe of his prowelle, in Arthing off the heads of manie of them with his owne hancs, as they came fouth of the gates linglie one by one: yet afterwards, when the king had pardoned him of all former offenles, and received him into favour, hee gave to him in mariage his nece Judith the daugh ter of Lambert earle of Lens, lifter to Stephenerle of Albermare, and with hir he had of the kings gift, the manks that there inhabited, they had luch all $_{20}$ all the lands and liberties belonging to the honor of Huntington: in confideration whereof, he affigned Garledomeof to hir in name of hir dower, all the lands that he held from Trent fouthward. Shee bare by him two daughters, Paud and Alice. THe find, that he was not onlie earle of Porthumberland, but also of Por thampton and Duntington.

The counteste of Cambaioge or Porthfolke (as Matth. Paris. other have) wife of earle Kafe, being fled into the citie of Porwich, was belieged in the same by the kings power, which pressed the citie so sore, as it was forced for verie famine to pelo; but yet by compolition; namelie, that such as were besieged within, Mould depart the realme, as persons abtured and bas niched the land for ener. This was the end of the foresato conspiracie. At this verie time the Danes Hen, Hunt. being confederate with these rebels, and by them for Simon Duni licited, let forth towards England under the leading March. Paris. of Cnuto, sonne to Sueno, and earle Haco, and (bn= loked for) arrive here in England with two hundred failes. But hearing that the civill tumult was end ded, and feeing no man readie either to countenance or encourage them in their enterprise, they failed first into Flanders, which they spoiled, and after into their owne countrie, with little defire or will to come againe into England, Ling William also bro derstanding that they were thus departed, passed o uer into Britaine, and there belieged the castell of Doll that belonged to Kafe earle of Cambridge oz Posthfolke: but by the comming of Philip the 50 Frenchking, king Milliam being unprouided of fufficient vittels for his armie, was constreined to Du the 27. daie of Parch was a generall earthquake in England, and in the winter following a frost that continued from the first of Pouember on till the middle of Appill. A blafing farre appered on In carthpalme fundate, being the firteenth date of Aprill, as quake, a long bout fir of the clocke, when the aire was faire and

raile his liege, although with great lotte both of men

About the fame fealon, pope Gregorie percetting that married priests did chose rather to run into the danger of his curile, than to forfake their toines, meaning to briole them by an other prouiso, game commandment by his bull published abroad, that none Hould heare the maffe of annarried purellund

King William after his comming from the fiege of Doll, remained a certeine time m quiet, buring Polydor. which feation, Lanfranke the archbithop called a fy- A fynodholnod or councell of the cleargie at Loudon, Sherein den at Lonamongst other things it was ordeined, that certeine 25thous feet bilhops les thout be rennmeet from finall cownes remoused. to cities of moze fame, whereby it came to passe that Chicheffer, Greeter, Bath, Saltonrie, Lincolnea

Huntingdon,

Anno Reg. 11. I 0.7.7 troft, a comet.

Married piells.

Anno Reg. 12, 1078 30.96.396.49

Cheffer were honozed with new fees and palaces of bithops, thereas before they kept their residence at Bellewey, Birton, Taciles, Shirebonne, Dorcheffer and Lichfield.

Wcolftan.

At this fynod also Molstan bishop of Worcester was prefent, whom Lanfranke would have deposed for his insufficiencie of learning; as he colourablic pretended, but indeed to pleasure the king, who faine would have placed a Porman in his rome : but (as in cauting his croffer staffe to sticke fast in the tome of faint Coward (to whom he protested and faid he would religne it, for that he obteined the same by his gift) he did put the king and the archbifhop into fuch feare, that they suffered him Will to entoy his bishop prike without any further veration. These things with other (touching a reformation in the church and cleargie being handled in this councell, it was some tie armie into Wales, and subdued it; receiving of the rulers and princes there their homages and ho-

In the yeare following, king William led a migh 20

Anno Reg.13. 1079 Matth Paris. Matth.Weft.

The French king fetteth the fonne a= gainst the fa= ther.

Simon Dun. Matth.Paris.

The fonne o= uerthzoweth the father.

Simon Dun.

Matth.Paris.

The father and the fonne made friends.

ther pardoned his forme all his former offences, and therebpon found him cuer after more tranable and obedient than before.

After this battell, king William being thus ac Anno Reg. 14. coided with his sonne, returned with him into England, and immediatlie fent him against Balcoline king of Scotland, who having broken the Simon Dunel, truce in time of the trouble betwirt king William and his some, had done much hurt by forraics by they fair) by a miracle which he presentlie wrought, 10 on the English borders, wasting all Porthumbers land even to the river of Tine. Howbeit, when he heard that Robert approched with his armie towards him, he retired into Scotland. Robert Curthuze then lodged with his armie upon the banks of the river of Tine, where he began the foundation of a Thefoundacastell, thereof the towns of pewcastell did after tion of New take both beginning and name, for before this leason castell opon it was called Moncaffer.

About the same time. Doo the bishop of Bayeur scalon was was fent to Posthumberland, to revenge the beath called Ayonof Walkher bishop of Durham, whom not long be, catter. forethe people of Porthumberland had flaine in a tumult. The occation of his death grewby the death of one Liulfus, a noble man of those quarters, and dérelie beloued of the people, bicause he was descended of honozable parentage, and had married the ladie Algitha daughter unto earle Alerco, and liffer to Aldeda the mother of earle Walteof.

stages. About the same time, Robert the kings el delt fonne, a right worthie perfonage, but pet as one of nature somewhat bustable, entred into Pozman die as a rebell to his father, and by force toke divers places into his hands. Which he did by the practife of Philip the French king, who now began to boubt This Liulius, a man of great policilous through of the great putitance of king William, as forcies ing how much it might preciocice him, and the whole 30 England, now that the Pormans ruled in all places, quietlie withozew himselfe onto Durham, and realme of France in time to come. Wherefore to stop the course of his prosperous successe, he deutsed a meane to fet the sonne against the father. True it is that king William had promifed long afore to refigne the government of Pozmandie buto the faid Robert his sonne. Where upon the young man, being of an ambitious nature, and now pricked for ward by the finister counsell of his adherents, sæketh to obteine that by violence, which he thought would be verie long per he should atteine by curteste. King 40 William hereof advertised, was not a little moved against his disobedient sonne, and cursed both him and the time that ever he begat him. Finallie, rais fing an armie, he marched towards him, to that they met in the field. Assone as the one came in fight of the other, they encountred at a place called Archens braie, and whilest the battell was at the hottest, and the fortmen most busied in fight, Robert appointed a power of harsseinen to breake in byon the rerewith all his might, chanced among other to have a conflict with his owne father, so that thrusting him through the arme with his lance, he bare him belive his hoofe, and overtheew him to the ground. The king being falne, called to his men to remount him. Robert perceiving by his voice that it was his father, thom he had unhorated, speedilie alighted, and toke him by, alking him forgivenelle for that fact, and letting him by on his owne horffe, brought him tie. King William being thus escaped out of that present danger, and fæing himselfe not able to relift the pullfance of his entimies, left the field to his fon, having lost many of his men with were slaine in battell and chace, besides a great number that were burt and wounded, among thom his fecond fonne William furnamed Kufus oz Red, was one; and therefore (as some write) he bitterlie cursed his son Robert, by whom he had full cined fuch infurie, loffe, and diffiones. Dowbeit, other write, that for the courtelie which his some thewed, in relating and helping him out of danger, when he was call off his horite, he was moved with luch a fatherlie affection, that presentlie after they were made friends, the fa-

1080

Tine. Which before that

Simon Dun.

grewinto such familiaritie and credit with the bis Thop, that touching the order of temporall matters, he would do nothing without his aduice. Whereat Leofwin the bishops chapline conceived such envie (for that he was not to often called to counfell as be= fore) that in the end he procured by his malicious meanes one Bilbert (to whom the bishop had come mitted the rule of the earledome) to murther the faid Liulfus by night in his mano; place not farre from Durham. Thereof the bilhop having bnderstanbing, and knowing that the matter would be greenoullie taken of the people, sent out letters and med fengers into the countrie, offcring to purge hine felfe of the flaughter of this man, according to the order of the canon laives: howbeit he did nothing leffe. Among other things concerning his purgation, he faid that he had banished Gilbert and others, (who had committed the murther) out of Aosthumward of his enunies; the himselfe following after 50 berland. Perboon the malice of the people was kind led against him. For when it was knowne that he had received the murtherers into his house, and far uoured them as before, they stomached the matter highlie: infomuch that when by the trauell of those that went to and fro betwirt the bishop and the kind folks of Liulfus, a daie was appointed, on the which the bishop should come to farther communication with them at Gateshead, he repaired thither accord ding to his promise, but refusing to talke with them out of the prease, and suffered him to depart in sale 60 abroad, he kept himselfe fill within the thurth, and fent footh such of his counsell as should commune with them. But when the people that were there gas thered in great numbers, had signified in plaine words that he should either come forth and shew him: felfe among it them, or elfe that they should fire the place where he fat : he caused Bilbert to go forth unto them first, whom they flue, and his partakers also that issued out of the church with him for his des fense. But when the peoples surie was not so quenched, the bithop himselfe catting the skirts of his gowne over his face, came likewife forth, and was immediatlie Claine of the people. After this, they let the church on fire, bicaule Leofwine the bishops chapline and others were pet within, and refused to come forth: howbeit in the end, being compelled by the rage of the fire to come out, the fato Leofwine mas also flaine and backt in pieces (as he had well veferued) being the ringleader of all the mischiefe.

Note the fee quele of the nealest of me Lice in the hamer frome.

Ihus maie we lee what followed of the neglecting of instice in the bishop: for if he had either banished Cilbert and other his complices (accordinglie as he pretended to do) or otherwise had seene due punish ment executed against them, the peoples rage had neuer proceeded to far as it did: for they could not 1 permade themselves, but that the bishop was guiltie and prinic to Liulfus death, lith he had received the murtherers into his house, the verie same night in which the fact was done, and kept them Mill about him, which his bearing with them coff him his owne life. But now to the historie.

Then bilhop Doo was come into those parties to revenge the bishops death with an armie (as we have faid) he fore afflicted the countrie, by spoiling it on eueric five with great crueltie. Here king Will 20 liam placed and displaced diverse rulers over the Porthumbers: for first he appointed one Copsi to have the rule of that countrie, in place of Marchar tho before had held the fame. This Copfi expelled Dfulfe the some of earle Coulfe brother to earle Alvied, which Ofulfe was substitute voto the earles Cowine and Parchar, who although he was driven out of his governement by Copli, yet recovering his forces againe, he due the fame Copfi as he end monethsafter, the same Doulfe (as he ran with his bostic against a theefe) was thrust through the bodie with a speare, which the these held in his hand, and so bied. Then Gospatrike was assigned by king William to have the government there: whose mother Alogitha was daughter to Uthzed sometime earle of Porthumberland begotten byon Elfgina the daugh ter of king Egelred.

Cofpairite.

Sim.Dunel.

Copli

Some write, that Golpatrike purchased the earles dome of king William, and so held it, till the king 40 toke it from him againe, and then game it buto earle Walteof or Waldene. Pertafter him Walkher the forelaid bishop of Durham had the whole admir niuration comitted to him, but (after he was flaine as pie have heard) one Alberike ruled that countrie, Robert Min and lassie, Kobert Bulbany a right noble perso. bear carte of nage (for his wisedome and valiancie highlie res identhumbers nowined with all men) was created earle of Pos thumberland, and governed the people of those parties in such politike and wife order, that during his 50 time, it is hard to faire, whether his quietnesse or the Obsolence of the people was greater.

In like manner, after the forefaid Walkher; one

William was created billion of Durham, who was the oxiginall founder of univertitie colledge in Dr ford, and by whose assistance, the monkes gaping

both for riches, eale, and polletions, found the incans to displace the secular priests of the colledge of Dur tage. But to returne agains to the course of the his

The founda= tion of bnis uerlitte col= ledge in Dr= fora. Anno Reg.15. 1081

Anno Reg. 6. ham, that they might get into their romes, as they 1082

Ddo lulpe= ared and bas miffed.

Anno Reg. 17. 1082

Notic. Shortlie after the revenge of the death of Walkher bushop of Durham, the fornamed bushop Doo the kings brother was suspected of some bri truth and finister dealing, wher byon he was sent as a banished man into Poemandic, or rather (as other write) committed to pillon, where he remained, not as a clerke, but as a varon of the realine; for he was both bishop and earle of Bent. The king having at length obtained some rest from wars, practifed by lundric meanes to invict his cofees, and therefore railed a tribute through out the whole kingdome; for the better leuteng whereof, he appointed all the subjects of his realine to be num-

beed, all the cities, folunes, villages, and hamlets to be registred, all the abbies, monasteries and priories to be recorded. Dorcover, he caused a certificat to be taken of everie mans substance, and what he might dispend by the years; he also caused their names to be written which held knights fees, were bound therby to ferue him in the wars. Likewise he toke a note of enerie poke of oven, & what number Plow land. of vlow lands and how manie bondmen were with in the realme. This certificat being made & brought buto him, gave him full buder francing what wealth remained among the English people. Herebpon he raised his tribute, taking fix thillings for cuerie hive of land through out this realme, which amounted to a areat malle of monie when it was all brought togither into his Ercheker. ¶ Here note by the wate, Geruafius that an hide of land conteineth an hundred acres, Tilberiensis. and an acre conteineth fortie perches in length, and finition of a foure in breath, the length of a perch is firtane for hide of land. and an halfe: so that the common acre should make 240.perches; & eight hides or 800. acres is a knights fæ, after the bell approved writers and plaine demon-Aration. Those therefore are deceived, that take an hide of land to conteine twentie acres (as William Lambert hath well noted in his De priseis Anglorum legibus) there he expoundeth the meaning of the old Saron termes perteining to the lawes.

But to proceed a come, a little after the temporals dealing, to some of the spiritual affaires. It hapned tred into the church of pelwburne. But within a few 30 about the same time, that when king William had finished the rating of his subjects, that there rose a Arife betwirt Thursfane abbat of Glassenburic a Anno Reg. 18. Porman, and the monkes of that house. One cause thereof was, so, that the abbat would have compel, wil. Malm. Simon Dun. feruice which pope Gregorie had fet forth, and to bat of Giahave bled an other kind of tune deniled by one Wil- Aenburic. liam of Felcampe: befide this, the faid abbat spent william of and wasted the good that belonged to the house, in Fescampe. riot, leacheric, and by such other insolent meanes (withdrawing also from the monkes their old accu-Comed allowance of diet) for the which they first fell at altercation in words, and afterwards to fighting. The abbat got armed men about him, and falling Hen. Hunc. boon the monkes, sue there of them at the high have two altar, and wounded rviii. Howbeit the monkes for flaines riif. their parts plaied the pretie men with formes and hurt. candelificks, defending themselves as well as they might, so that they hurt divers of the abbats adhe, Matt. Westm. rents, and drove them out of the quier.

In the end, complaint hereof was brought to the king, by whose indgement the matter was so order red, that Thurstane lost his come, and returned buto Caen in Pomandie from thence he came, and the mankes were freed abroad into ditterfe hour fes of religion through the realine, Blaffenburie being replenished with moze quiet persons, and such as were supposed readier to praie than to quarell, as the other did: yet is it said, that in the time of TCIII did indeed some after, to their great gaine and aduans 60 liam Kufus this Thurstane obtained the rule of that abbeie againe for five hundred pounds.

There be which write, that the numbring of men Sim. Duncl. and of places, the valuation of gods and substance, Hen. Marie. as well in cattell as readie monic, was not taken Matth. Paris, till about the rix. yeere of this kings reigne (although the sublidie afore mentioned was gathered about tivo yeares before of everie hive of land as ye have heard) and that the certificat hereof being inrolled, Hen. Marle. was put into the kings treasurie at Winchester, in Anno Reg. 19. the rir. yeare of his reigne, and not in the rbi. But Simon Dun. in what yeare focuer it was and howfocuer the finifers agrico: disagree herein; certaine it is, that the same was eraced, to the great grees and impones rithment of the people, who fore lamented the mile

1084

Polydor. Matth. Paris.

The Conque rour faketh to

Polydor.

The forrelts Matth Paris.

Dem forrelt.

Matth. Paris. An earth quake.

Polydor.

Simon Dun. 1085

Anno 20

1086 Matth. West. το87 Anoth taken tobe true to the king.

Great lickes nes reigning. Marcen of Match.West.

rable estate whereinto they were brought, and hated the Posmans in their harts to the verie death. How: beit, the more they gruoged at fuch tolles, tallages, customes, and other impositions wherewith they were pressed; the more they were charged and ouers pressed. The Pormans on the other side with their king perceiving the hatred which the English bare them, were lose offended, and therefore lought by all bape the En meanes to keepe them under. Such as were called guidimentow, to be infrices, were entinies to all infrice; wherepon greater burdens were laid byon the English, info: much that after they had beine robbed and spoiled of their goos, they were also debarred of their accustomed games and passimes. For there naturallie (as they do buto this daic) they take great pleasure in hunting of dere, both red and fallow, in the woods icized into the and forrests about without restraint, king William hings hands, feiging the most part of the same forrests into his owne hands, appointed a punishment to be crecuted opon all such offendoes; namelie, to have their eies 20 put out. And to bring the greater number of men in danger of those his penall lawes (a pestilent policie of a spitefull mind, and sauding altogither of his French flauerie) he denifed meanes how to bixed, nourish, and increase the multitude of diere, and alto to make rome for them in that part of the realme which lieth betwirt Salisburie and the sea south ward: he pulled downe townes, villages, thurthes, fother buildings for the space of 30 miles, to make thereof a forrest, which at this daic is called Pelufor rest. The people as then fore bewailed their distres, & greatlic lamented that they must thus leave house $ home to the vie of lauage beatts. Which crueltie, not onelic mostall men living here on earth, but also the earth it selfe might seeme to detest, as by a wonder, full lignification it liemed to declare, by the shaking and roaving of the same, which chanced about the 14. yeare of his reigne (as writers have recorded.) There be that suppose how the king made that part of the realme walke and barren upon a policie, to the in 40 tent that if his chance were to be expelled by civill wars, the compelled to leave the land, there thould be no inhabitants in that part of the 3le to relift his arrivall upon his new returne.

But to go forth with our purpose. About the same time, a rumoz was speed in England that Sueine A rumo, fpred king of Denmarke meant to inuade England with of the coming a pullant armie, having the allifance of the earle of the Panes. of Flanders, whose daughter he had maried. Where byon king William being then in Pozmandie, res 50 teined a great power of French sonloiers, both arthers and formen, which togither with his Pozmans he brought ouer into England in harnest season, s meaning to disburthen himselfe of the charge of their keeping, becaused their finding and wages to be borne by the lords and pæres of the realme, by the Chirifs of Chires, and other officers. Powbeit, when he unvertiwd that the Danes changed their purpose, and would not hold on their journeie, he dismitted part of his power, and fent them home againe, kee 60 ping the relidue all the winter with him in Eng land, readie for his defense, if anie rebellion or other neceditie thould befall.

> The fame yeare, he kept his Christmasse at Glocester, and made his some Henrie knight at Westminfter in Whitlunweke inlung. Sportlie after, calling togither aswell loods spirituall as temporall. he caused them all to sweare fealtie to him and his heires after him in the possession of this kingdome.

About this featon, the people in all places were pitifullic plaged with burning feuers, which brought manie to their end: a murren also came to their cattell, thereof a townderfull number died. At the fame time (which is more maruellous) taine foules, as hens, geele, speacocks, forlaking their owners houses, fled to the woods and became wild. Great hurt was done in manie places of the realine by fire, and speciallie in London, where boon the 7. daic and speciallie in London, where boon the 7. daic and special in London flame began, which burnt Paules church burn thurth, and a great part of the citic downe to the ver ned.

ric ground. Pow when 18. William had taken the oth of feat tie and localtie of all his loods, Edgar Etheling, Ran. Higd. tho was reconciled but his favour (as you have Simon Dun. heard obtaining licence of him to depart the realme for a featon, failed into Pinglia with two hundred fouldiers : of whose acts there and returne into Ence land I spare to speake, bicause I find litle or nothing of moment recorded. And now king William, who Anno Reg. 21. having brought the Englishmen so lowe and bare, that little moze was to be got out of their hands, went once againe over into Pozmandie with an huge matte of mony, where some after he fell licke, so that he was constrained to keepe his bed longer than he had been accustomed to do, whereat Philip the French king in icsting maner said, that king William his confine late now in childhed (alluding belike to his big bellie, for he was verie corpulent) Wil. Malm. and withall added; Dh what a number of candels Matth. Paris. must I provide to offer by at his going to durch! >> certeinelie I thinke that 100000. Will not suffice. 4c. >> This frumping speech so moned the king, that he >> made this answere: Well, I trust when I shall be 39 thurched, that our confine shall be at no such cost, but Ran. Higd. I will helpe to find him a thousand candels my felfe, and light them to, to some of their paines, if " God grant me life. Which promise he bound with an " oth, and in deed performed. For in Julie next infuing, when their come, fruit, and grapes were most florithing, and readie for the lickle, he entred France De imudelly with a great armie, fet fire on manie of their cities France. and folunes in the westside of that countries came Gemeticensis at last to the citie of Paunt, which he burnt with the The citie of thurch of our ladie, and an ankresse inclosed in the Mauntburnt wall thereof as an holie closet, for the force of the fire by k. william, was such as all went to weecke. In this heat king Matth. West. William toke such a sicknesse (which was likewise Mauch, Paris, aggravated by the fall of an horse as he rode to and fro, bicause he was not able to travell on fot about his palace by reason of his disease) that cost him his life; so that when he had ordeined his last will, and King william taken order for the ffaie of things affer his occease, beparted this he departed this life on the 9. day of September, in life. the yeare after the birth of our Saulour 1087, and Matth. West, 74. (as Polydor saith) of his age, having governed Matth. West, Downwhis shout at more and referred over the Posmandie about 51. yeres, and reigned over Eng. his age hath land 20. yeares, ten moneths, and 28. dates (as all Wil. Malm. writers ow report.)

Pot long before his beath, he released his brother the feton pri-Doo bithop of Bayeur out of pulon, Parchar earle foners at itof Posthumberland, and Wilnotus the sonne of bertiefaith king Parolo,03(as some say)his brother. Pozeouer Wil. Malm. he repented him (as some say) when he lay on his Polydor. deathbed of his cruell dealing with the English, confidering that by them he had atteined to fuch honour and dignitie, as to we are the crowne and scepter of a kingdome: but whether he did so or not, or that some monke devised the excuse in favour of the prince: furelie he was a puillant prince, and though his time was troublesome, yet be was right fortunate in all his attempts. Againe, if a man thall confider that in a strange realme be could make such a conquest, and fo eractic and readilic affure the fame to his heires, with new lawer, orders, and constitutions (which are like for ever to endure) he would thinke it a thing ab togither boid of credit. Det lo it was, to honourable were his doings in the light of the world, that those kings, which fucceeded lithens his death, begin their account

Simon Dun,

for bare but two hous of rather ico thinke.

Colydor.

account at him, as from one that had by his prudence renewed the state of the realme, and instituted an other forms of regiment, in atchiuing whereof he off not so much pretend a rightfull challenge by the grant of his coline king Coward the Confestoz, as by the law of armes and plaine conquest, than the which (as he supposed) there could be no better title.

Herebyon also those that have lithens succeeded him, ble the same armes as peculiar to the ecotone of England, which he vied in his time; namelie, there 10 li .ns passant gold in a field gewels (as Polydor wif teth)the three floure delices were fince that time annered thereto by Coward the third, by reason of his pards as fonte claime to the crowne of France, whereof hereafter pe Hall heare. Among other greenances which the English susteined by the hard deling of the Conque rour, this is to be remembed, that he brought Jewes into this land from Rouen, and appointed them a place to inhabit and occupie.

There be that write, how the inconstancie of the 20 English people by their off rebellions occasioned the king to be forough and rigozous against them; where as (of his naturall disposition and proper inclination on) he was rather gentle and courteous than tharve and crueil. But lith he continued his crtremitie even to his last daies, we may rather believe, that als though from his childhood he thewed forms tokens of clemencie, bountie, and liberalitie; yet by following the wars, and practifing to reigne with Aernenesse, he wilhelmun rex salutat Wilhelmun Episcopum, & Goffribecaune so inured there with, that those peaceable vers 30 dum Portegressum, & omnem Burghware infra London tues were quite altered in him, and in maner cleare, lie quenched. He was indued with a certaine foutnelle of courage and skill in feats of warre, which god hap ener followed: he was free from lecherous lufts, without suspicion of booilie vices, quicke of wit, defirous of honoz, painefull, watchfull, and able to tolerate heat and colo, though he were tall of fa-ture, and beriegroffe of bodie. Toward the end of his daies he wared verie denout, and became desirous to advance the state of the 40 church, infomuch that he builded their abbeies in them fenerall places, endowing them with faire lands and large possessions, one at the place where he vans quithed king Harold, fine miles from Haffings, which he named Battell, of the field there fought: the other at Celby in Pockethire : and the third in Pozmandie at Caen, where his wife Queene Paud had builded a nunnerie, which Paud died in the peere 1084. before the deceale of the king hir hulband.

After his death, his bodie was buried in Caen, 50 in S. Stephans church ; but before it could be committed to the ground, the executors were confireined to agree with the loss of the foile where the church Awd, which (as he faid) the king in his life time had inturioullie taken from him, and gave him a great fumme of monie to release his title.

T By this we may consider the great miserie of mansestate, in that so mightie a prince could not hanc so much ground after his death as to cover his dead carps, without doing inturic to another. This 60 also may be a special lesson for all men, and namelie for princes, noblemen, and gentlemen, tho offens times to enlarge their owne commodities, do not regard what wrong they offer to the infertigit fort.

The faid king Milliam had by Paud his wife the daughter of Baldwine earle of Flanders, foure founcs, Robert furnamed Curthole (buto Angune he bequeathed the duchie of Postmandie) Kichard who died in his youth, William formanced Adfus, to thom he gave by festament the realme of England, and Henrie furnamed Beauclerke for his cunning, knowledge and learning, but o thom he bequethed all his treasure and moneable gods, with the postes sions that belonged to his mother. Westoes these foure fonnes, he had also by his faid wife fine daughters, Cecilie, who became a nume; Constance, who was married to Alane duke of Britaine : Avela, tho was given in mariage to Stephan earle of Blois (of whom that Stephan was borne which reige ned after Henrie the first Adelija, who was promised in mariage to Parold king of England (as before you have heard) but the died per the was marico either to him, or to any other, and so like wife did the fift, wolc name I cannot reherle.

But to conclude, though king William held the John Roug English so binder for, that in his daies almost no Englishman bare any office of honor or rule in his time, pet he somewhat favoured the citie of London, and at the earnest sute of William a Pozman then bishop of that see, he granted but othe citizens the first charter, which is written in the Saron twng, scaled with græne war, and expected in bit. 02 ir. lines at the most, cremplified according to the copic, and so printed, as followeth.

Williem king grets William Biscop & Godfred Porterefan, & ealle ya Burghwarn binnen London Frencisce, & Englise frendlice, & Ickiden coy, yeet ic wille yeet git ben ealra weeralagayweord, yeget weeran on Eadwerds daege kings. And ic will yeet aele child by his fader yrfnume, aefter his faders daege. And ic nelle ge wolian, yeet acnig man eoy aenis wrang beode. God coy heald.

Frans. & Angl. amicabiliter. Et volus notum facio, quod ezo velo quod vossitis omni lege illa digni qua fuistis Edwar-di diebus regis. Et volo quòd omnu puer sit patris sui heres post diempatrissim. Et ego nolo pati quòd aliquis homo ali-quam iniuriam vobis inferat. Dems vossaluet.

But howfoener he vied the rest of the English, this Manh Parisi is recorded of some writers, that by his rigorous Hen. Hunt. proceedings against them, he brought to passe that the countrie was for id of themes and robbers, as that at length a maid might have passed through the land with a bag full of gold, and not have met with any mildwer to have bereft hir of the fame : a thing right Arange to confider, lith in the beginning of his reigne there were such routs of outlawes and rob bers, that the peaceabler people could not be safelie pollelled of their owne houles, were the same never to well fortified and defended.

Among manie lawes made by the faid William, John Rous. this one is to be remembred, that fuch as forced any Hen. Marle.

woman, should lose their genitals.

In this kings daies also lived Osmond the fee cond bishop of Salisburie, who compiled the church Balifburie. feruice, which in times past they commonlie called after Salisburie vse.

The vie of the long bowe (as John Rous teffificth) Shoting. came first into England with this king Milliant the Conquerour: for the English (before that time) bled to fight with ares and fuch hand weapons: and therefore in the oration made by the Conquerour bes fore he gaue battell to king Parolo, the better to encourage his men, he told them they fould encounter with enimies that wanted thot.

In the yeare of our Lord i 542. Pontieur de Ca freshishop of Baicult and abbat of Saint Estiens ne in Caen, caused the sepulchize of this William to be opened, wherein his bodie was found whole, faire and perfect of lims, large and big of fature and perfonage, longer than the ordinarie fort of men: with a copper plate fairlie gilt, and this epitagh therebpon ingrauen:

Quirexit rigidos Normannos, atque Britannos Audacter vicit, fortiter obtinuit, Et Canomenses virtute contudit enses, Imperij suilegibus applicuit,

They gatte him on hun: bred pound. faith Hen. Marle.

Hon Marle

Rex magnus parua iacet bac Guilhelmus in orna: sufficie & magno parua domus domino, Ter septem gradibus se voluerat at q duobus virginis in gremio Phabus, or his oly: that is; Who ouer Normans rough did rule, and ouer Britons bold Did conquest stoutlie win, and conquest wone did stronglie hold: Who by his valure great the fatall vprores calmd in maine,

And to obeie his powers and lawes, the Manceaux did constraine: This mightie king within this little vault intomed lies, So great a lord fometime, fo small a roome dooth now suffice. When three times feuen and two by just degrees the funne had tooke His wonted course in Virgos lap, then he the world for looke.

W. Patten colleacth this to be the 23. after the fun magin Virgo Sobich is the 6.of Depteber

Thus far William Conquerour.

illiam Rufus or VVilliam the Red.

1087 Anno Reg.I.

Polydor. Sim.Duncl.

Marth Paris.

Miam, firmamed Rufus or William the Red, fecond fonne to William Conques roz, began his reigne ouer England the ninth of Dep tember, in the yeare 1 087. about the 31. yeare of the emi perour Penrie the fourth, and the 37. of Philip the first, king of France, Tirbane the second then governing the lie of Kome, and Halcoline Cammoir reigning in Scotland. Immediatile after his fas there decease, and before the solemnitie of the funci rals incre executed, he came ouer into England with no lette speed than was possible, and following the counsell of Lanfranke archbishop of Canturbus ric (in whome he reposed all his trust) he sought to win the favour of the Piers and Pobilitie of the realme by great and liberall giffs . For although there were but few of the homebome States that 20 bare rule in the land at this featon; yet those that remained, and whome his father in extreme fort had wronged, he verie gentlie enterteined, pronnting them not onlie to continue their god losd and four reigne, but also to make more fauourable ordinances than his father had left behind him; and further, more to reflore the former lawes and liberties of the realme, which his faid father had abolithed. Thus by faire words and policie he obtained his purpole.

tie by his father. The Pobles at the first withed rather to have had the elder brother duke Robert to have governed them: howbeit by the aide onelie of the faid Lanfranks, whose authoritic was of no small force a monast all the loops of the land, this William (ac cording to his fathers affignation) was proclaimed and crowned at Wieliminster on the 26. of September (being fundaie, the 6. halends of October) 40 and the 11. inciaion, as the bell luxiters do report. After his coronation, to gratifie the people, he went to Windelfer, where he formogreat treasure which his father had late by there for his owne ble; this he tradic front in large giffs, and all kind of princelic

Polybeit some after he forgat himselfe, and impulse 30

ned Warchar and Wilnot, whom he had brought of tier will him from Mormandie, being fet at liber, largeste. Pe set verie manie pusoners at libertie, Told many other things to benefit the people, where in the viligence and good advice of Lanfranke did not a little prenaile. For he perceived that there was in the king a variable mind, an unstable nature, and a disposition to lightnesse and follie. Wherefore hee take oftentimes the more paines in perluading him not onelie to liberalitie (which is none of the least vertues in a prince) but also to vie a discreet and orderlie behausour in all his doings. Hozeouer, he Miched not to put him in feare of an euill end, and troublesome regiment likelie to infue, if he ofo gius himselfe to vice and wilfulnesse, a neglect the charge thus by the providence of DD committed to his hands. After this maner old the faid prelat tranell with the king, whom we will leave at this time as it were hearkening to his admonitions, and fet footh by the waie what his brother Robert old, whilest William Rufus his brother was occupied in fut wife as you have heard.

It happened that this Robert loas abroad in Ger manie, then king William his father bied (whither he went to vaile a power, to the intent he might there by obteine the possession of Pormanore, with he trufted to enjoy in his fathers life time) there hear ring newes of his death, he halled Ataight water in to posmandie, and there being topfulle recettied, was peaceablic proclaimed duke of that countrie, with great gladuelle and thouting of the people.

After this, confidening with himselfe how onhonozable a thing it was far him, that his puliger brother thouse possesse the crowne of England, which of right (as he faid) belonged buto him, by reason of his age; he betermined with all expedition to passe the leasthith an armie, and terbuer that into his banos, which his father have fixen from him, parflic (as it is thought) for his williances and probablishing towards him, and partly allo bicause he doubted that if he Mould leave it but blim, he would through his to much gentlenelle and facilitie, give occation to the English to refume areigh, and therby to renolt. Therefore he inoged his panger brother the faired William (a man of a rougher nature) the mater of the twaine for the government.

As puke Robert was thus moved by his owne defire to berene his brother of the dominton of Engรางสารา สารา สาราสารา हेम्स्के प्रजन्मक, स्थलके (स्थान

1088

10.76

Sim.Duncl. Marcharand wilnet.

Lanfranke had fanoured him cuch of a thilb. Matth.Paris. william ហ៊ែច fasts crow ned the 26, of Corptember. Polydor. Dis beanti $\mathbf{f}(\mathbf{n})\mathbf{i}(\mathbf{n})\mathbf{m}(\mathbf{n})$ conce.

land. to he was not a little incented therento by fuch? of the English Pobilitie and Pormans, as came: vailie ouer buto him out of the realme, complaining of the present state of the world, as those that milliked of the whole maner of regiment bled in the beginning of the reigne of his brother William. His: uncle Doo also (then bishop of Baseur) furthered the matter all that he might. This Doo was at first in great estimation with his brother the Conqueror, vie that the archbishop Lansranke was preferred before him, he conspired against him, who underfrancing thereof, committed him foothwith to prifon, where he remained, till the faid prince then lieng on his death-bed, released and restored him to his for merlibertie. Then the king was dead, William Rufus toke him backe into England, Suppoling no lessebut to have had a speciall frænd and a trustie counceller of him in all his affaires. But per long after his comming thither, he fell againe into the 20 fame offense of ingratitude, wherof he became culpable in the Conquerous dates: for perceiving that Lanfranke was so highlie esteemed with the king, that he could beare no rule, and partlie suspecting that Landranke had beine chefe cauler ofhis former timpulonment, be conspired with the rest against his nephic, and therebpon wrote fundrie letters over buto buke Robert, counselling him to come ouer with an armie in all half, to take the rule bpon him. which by his practice should easilie be compassed.

Duke Robert being thus animated on all fices. and yet wanting sufficient monie to the furniture of this fournie, engaged a postion of his duchie of Pos mandie, as the countie of Constantine to his pongelf brother Penvie, for a great fum of gold, and ther= with returned answer to the foresaid bishop, that he should provide and lake for him byon the fouth coast of England, at a certeine time appointed. Hereby-The castell of on Doo soutified the castell of Kochetter, & began to he procured others of the complices also to do the like in other parts of the realme; and first on the west part of England, where Geffrey bishop of Constans with his nethue Robert de Dowbray earle of Pop thumberland fetting forth from Briffow, came to ward Bath, which towns they take and facked, and keth the town like wife Berkley, with a great part of Wiltshire, and brought the spotle and boties backe to Bristow, where they had a castell stronglie fortisted for their moze safetie. In like maner Roger de Byged, de: 50 parting from Porwich, with areat forraies overfough Grands rode and robbed all the countries about, and conveis ed such riches as he had gotten into the said citie. In like fort did Hugh de Grandmesmill at Leiceister, spoiling and wasting all the countries about him.

> The earle of Shewfourie called Roger de Mount gomerie, with a power of Welthmen let fouth from Shewfurie, and with him were William bishop of Durham the kings houthold chapline, Barnard of Pelomerth, Roger Lacie, and Rafe Dortimer, 60 hearing of the lotte of his men, came after himselfe, (all Posmans or Frenchmen) tho toyning their pos wers togither, inuaded the countrie, and with fire and fword did much hurt where they came, killing and taking a great number of people. Afterwards comming to Morceffer, they affaulted the citie, ouerran the fuburbs, & fet the fame on fire. Wat the cttizens thutting fact the gates of their citie (though with the ludden comming of the enimics they inere fourcily at afraid) made valiant reliffance: and conucieng their gods, their wives, and their children into the castell, got them to the walles and places of defense, to repell a beat backe the enimies. Among them in the towne was bishop Wolstan, whom the citizens would have compelled to go into the castell for his furer falegard, but he refuled it.

At length it chanced that the enimies continuing the faid frege began to war negligent, and ranged abroad in the countrie, little regarding watch mo ward about their campe, whereupon the English within the citie take this oportunitie, being moned thereto with the comfortable exhaitation of bishop Wolffan, and failing forth of the towned by fet on their enimies with great ficromes, whome they got and bare great rule biocrhim, till at length for en 10 at luch advantage, that they five and twice that baie about fine D. men (as Henric of Huntingdon recordeth.) For the English bearing a continuall mas lice in their hearts against the French and Now mans, did now their best to be fullic revenged of fiducas faith them, upon foconvenient an occasion offered. Those Simon Dunel. that escaped by flight, his themselves in the next townes, making such thifts for their lines as the prefent necessitie could minister.

They flue fine hundzed, and chased the re-

Whilest the realine was thus troubled on ech lide, The diligence archbishop Lansranke senocth, writeth, and admonis they Lantheth all the kings freends to make themselves reas france. die to defend their prince. And after he buderstoo that they were affembled togither for that purpofe, he counselleth the king to march into the field with them spedilie, to represse his enimies. The king following his counsell, first appointed his nauie to Cowse and kape the leas, and to with And (if it were the great politible) the arrivall of his brother by faire words. Als curtefic thews so he reconcileth Roger de Dountgomerie earle of et to the Engs Sheelvoburie buto him, and therewith maketh large wil. Rufus. promifes to the English, that he would out of hand Simon Dun. give and restore buto them such favourable lames as they would with or delire. Boseover he commanded all butust imposts, tolles and tallages to be laid downe, and granted free hunting in the wood, diafes and forcests. All which grants and promises he kept not long, though for the time he greatlie contented the people with fuch a thew of good meaning to Wil. Malm. wards them . This done, he goeth with a mightie ar make fore wars against the kings friends in Bent: 40 mie into Bent, where the fedition began, and first comming to the castell of Tunbidge, he compelled capteine Gilbert to pæld by the fortresse into his h mos. Then went he to Horne castell, where he heard faie Doo was (but the report was untrue, for he had betaken himselfe to the castell of Pemsey) which when he had overthowne, he halted forth buto Wemley, and belieged the cattell there a long featon, which the bishop had Aronglie fortified.

During this time, and about the fiftieth date effer the beginning of the siege, word was brought to the king, that his brother duke Robert was landed at Southampton, and minded with all volfible freed to come to the fuccour of the bishop, and of other his frænds, whom he and his power had not a little af

all, but fent a part of his armie, with a certeine numi ber of thips, which encountring with the kings fleet, were discomfited. Others write that duke Robert and landed with a mightic armie as before, third is most likelie. And certeinlie (as Gemeticen, affir confidering that Qufface earle of Wollongue, Doo bilhop of Baicur, and the earle of Mortaigne, with other losos of Posmanoie that were patted to Eng.

land, had alreadie taken Rocheffer, and divers other cattels in the province of Canturburie, keeping the same a certeine time, fill loking that he Chould have come over to their aid, which he deferred to do, till they were constrained by siege and lacke of necessarie luccos to returne into Posmandie, leauling thole duke Robert came not oner himselse at the first at Simon Dura flicted . There authors barie : for some report that H. Hunc.

meth)he might eaulie as then haue recoucred Eng. Gemeticensis. Bufface carte land from his brother, if he had not lingred the time, of Bullongne, kaschefter.

Simon Dun.

Wil. Malm.

The billion of Confrance ta

of Warh.

Cothe bi= cir confpireth egainit his etice paneca

ham Butas.

Hen.Hunr. Wil. Mal. The earle of Binzewlburie worcester affalted.

Biliop wal: ftan.

places which they had wen but o the king, and that to their

Simon Dun.

Merkefter be-

Geged by the

Anno Reg.2.

Polydor.

hing.

their great dishonor. But how seener it was, the king Will continued the fiege before Pemfey castell, till Doo(through want of victuals) was glad to submit himselfe, and promised to cause the castell of Roches Ner to be delinered: but at his comming thither, they within the citie suffered him to enter, and streight waies lawhim fast in pulon. Some juoge that it was done buder a colour by his owne consent.

There were in Rocheffer a fort of valiant gentles men (the flatuer in maner of all Poymanote) with 10 their cathedrall churches, and to have brought cas Cufface early of Bolonane, and maniegentlement. of Flanders, which were in mind to defend the place; against the king: who bearing what was done, came with his armic and belieged the citie of Romeller on ech live so marpelie, that they within were glad to deliner it up into his hands. Thus lost bishop Ddo all his linings and eignities in England, and fore turned into pomandio, where buder duke Robert he had the chiefe government of the countrie committed unto din.

After this he overcame divers of his enimics forme by faire and forme by fowle meanes. Potwith thanding this, there pet remained the bilhop of Dur ham, one of the chiefe conspirators, who withdrew himselse into the citie of Durham, there to lie in fafetie, till he faw how the world would go: but bea ing therein belieged by the king, tho came thither perfonallie, he was at length forced to furrender the The billion of citie, and yield himfelfe: therebyon also he was criv bushamspiled. led the Land, with diverte of his complices. But with 30 in two yeares after, he was called home againe, and reflored to his church, wherein he lived not long, but died for forrow, bicause he could not clere himselfe of offense in the said rebellion, albeit that he laboured most earnessite so to do, that he might thereby have

Lanfranke erchbithop of Canturburie departerly this

Matth.Westm. Daule abbat

Eadmerus.

atteined to the kings fauo; againe. Tehilest these things were thus in hand, the archi bishop Lansranke fallethücke and dieth, in the 19. yeare after his first entring into the government of the sea of Canturburie. This Lantranke (as thould 40 feeme) was a wife, politike, and learned prelate, who whilest he lined, mollissed the furious and cruell nature of king William Kufus, infruding him to forbeare such wild and outragious behaviours as his youthfulneile was inclined buto: and mozeover perfusded the English to obey the same king as their locall prince, thereby they thould occasion him to be their god losd and king, not bling them rigosoullie as his father had dwn. So that Lanfranke could not well have bene spared in the time of the rebellion, 50 without great danger of suburrting the Crate of the commonwealth. He builded two hospitals without the citie of Canturburie, for the relæfe of pore peo, pleand Arangers, the one of S. John, the other at Harbaldowne. De advanced the church of Kochester from foure fecular clerkes, to the number of fiftie monkes : he repaired Christes durch in Canturburie, and the abbit of S. Albons, whereof he made one of S. Ilbons. Paule that was his nephue abbat, wich Paule go uerned that house by his vncles allistance greatlie 60 to the advancement thereof, as well in temporall as spirituall preserments, as it was then sudged. Like wife the faid Lanfranke was verie fortunate in the government of his church and fix of Carturburic, recovering fundate postions of lands and rents alleg nated from the fame before his daics, informed that hereflozed to that lie 25. manois. For among for ther, inhereas Das the Bilhop of Baieur, who also was Carle of Bent, bearing great rule in England binder his nephus king William the Conquerour, had blurped diverse possessions which belonged to the fix of Canturburie, and had frised the franchifes apperteining to the fame Landranke, into his owne hands, by fute and earnest traueil he recovered the fame, and being impleaded about that matter by the faid Doo, he to defended his cause, that in the end (though with much wo) he had his will, and to remained in quiet policifion of his right after that lo long as he lived, without any trouble or veration concerning the faid policitions and liberties.

Whereas also not onelie Walkhem the kishop of Minchester, but dinerle other bishops in Eng. land were in mind to have displaced monks out of nons into their comes, Lanfranke withfind them, praised for and would tollerate no such dislocation: an act at that holding with time so well liked, that he was highlie commended the monks. for the same. After Lanfrankes death, the king began greatlie to forget himfelfe in all his dealings, infomuch that he kept many concubines, and wared berie cruell and inconstant in all his doings, so that The king gla he became an heavie burthen unto his people. For uento lenfual he was fo much addicted to gather gods, that he constult and cous 20 fidered not what perfeined to the maiestie of a king, tousnesse, infomuch that nothing tending to his gaine, and the latissieng of his appetite, was estemed of him bu lawfull. fith he measured all things by the oncontrol. led rule of his rotaltie, and confidered nothing what so high an office required. He kept the lee of Canturburie soure yeares in his hands, to see who would give most for it, in the meane time taking the profits thereof, and making the bittermost of the faine that by any meanes could be devised.

The like he vied when other benefices and abbeies were vacant, and furthermore that little which the Matth. Paris, prince spared his officers and farmers, no leffe coues tous than he, converted to their advantage: fo that what by the king, and what by his procurators, the thurth of England was now lose tharged and fleced of hir wealth. Diverse of hir prelates in like maner were not a little offended to le their mother lo foois led of hir treasure and livelihod, infomuch that they practiled a reducife: and to begin withall, complain ned of the king to pepe Urban: but he was so bus fied with other troubles of his owne nærer home. that he could have no time to seeke meanes how to reducte enormities a far off, whereby the lands and Wil. Malm. gods belonging to the church here in England were Matt. Paris. fill wallfulite spent and consumed by the king and others, to whome he gave or let them forth to farme at his owne pleature, and to his most commoditie. But albeit the prince was of such a disposition by nature, yet there is one thing written of him which ought not to be forgotten, to admonth be that there is no man of foeuill an affection, but that fometime he dealeth opzightlie though it be by hap or other extraoedinarie motion. It chanced that an abbeic was bold of an abbat, wherein were two monkes veric conetous persons above the rest, and such as by scraping and gathering tegither, were become verie rich, for such (saith Polydor) in those daies mounted to preferment. These two appointed to go togither to the court, ech hoping at their comming thither to find fome meanes that he might be made abbat of that house. Being thus agreed, to the court they come, and there offer berte largelie to the king to ob teine their lute: who perceiving their greedie delires, and calling his cies about the chamber, espied by chance an other monke (that came to beare them companie, being a moze fober man, and fimple after his outward appearance) whom he called but o him. and asked what he would give him to be made abbat of the forclaid abboie. The monke after a little paule, made answere, that he would give nothing at all for anie luch purpole, fince he entred into that profession of mere zeale to despise riches & all toorlolie pompe, to the end he might the more quietlie ferue God in helinelle spuritie of conversation. Saiest thouso, queth

An. Reg. 3, 4,5. VV IIII thie to governe this house: and Areightwaie he befromes the honse open him, justlie refusing the other two to their open infamile and reproch.

Matt. Paris. Anno Reg. 3. 1090

Simon Dun. marres be twin the king and his beer ther Mobert.

Anno Reg. 4. 7 0 0 1 Vagmencentis P peace comdi tem Simon Dua. Metch Woft. plan, Palis, Gemeticenfis.

Sim.Duncl.

But to returne to our historic. After the expulse on of the billiop of Durham, and other of his adher rents, the king palled over into Posmandie, purpofing to deprine his brother of that dukedome, and being arrived there, he belieged and toke S. Halerie, Albemaric, and diverse other townes and castels, 10 miscrain he placed a number of his best fouldiers, the better to mainteine warre against his foresaid bros ther. Herebyon also the said Robert sent buto the French king for aid, who came downe at his requell with a noble armic, and belieged one of those castels which king William had latelie wone; howbeit by fuch meanes as king William made, in fending to the French king an buge fumme of monie, he railed his flege heetlie & returned home againe. At length a peace was concluded betwirt king William and 20 the duke his brother, but yet verie diffionorable to the faid Robert: for it was accorded, that king Will liam hould reteine a fail intop the countie of Ewe, with Fescampe, the abbasic of mount S. Wichell, Gereburg, and all those other places which he had towns a gotten out of his hands in this his late bob ace. Da the other fide it was agreed, that king Wil liam hould aid the duke to recover all other places beyond the leas, which belonged to their father. Alfo, & livings in England, for taking part with the duke in the late rebellion, thould be reflozed to the fame. And furthermore, that thether foeuer of both thould die first, the furniture thould be his heire, and succeed in his comintons.

This peace was concluded at Caen, and that by procurement of the French king, at what time king William was verie Arong in the field neare buto Swe. After which conclusion, they buited their in the cattell of mount S. Hichell, which (being lituat in the confines of Pormandie and Britaine) he had fironglis fortified not long before for feare of after claps. Mut when they had lien about it by the space of all the Lent fealon, and had made manie bickerings with his men, more to their loffe than lucre, they rais fed their flege, and voluntarilie departed. Pot long affer this, king William deprived Edgar Etheling of his horse, which duke Robert had affigued buto him, banishing him out of Posmandie for ever.

Shortlie after also the assessio Henrie wan a firing towns called Damfront, and furnishing it at all points he kept the fame in his possession as long as he lined, manger both his brethren. Thus the war wared hat betweene those three howbett suddenlie (F wot not boon what occasion) this Henrie was reconciled with king William and his brother Robert, fo that all debates being quieted on enerie fide, they were made friends and wellwillers. Thing Taliliam also returned into England, having his brother 180 60 bert in his companie, all men reiniting at their pacification and amitie, which happened in the yeare 1091. and fourth of the reigns of the king.

Toward the end thereof, and byon the fift date of Daober, a maruellous fore tempest fell in fundrie parts of England, but especiallie in the towne of Windscombe, where (by force of thunder and light ning)a part of the fleeple of the church was throwne downe, and the crucific with the image of Parie franding buder the rwo-loft, was likewise overthrowne, broken, and thattered in pieces; then for lowed a foule, a notiome, and a most horrible ffinke in the church. On the 17, date of the same moneth much harme was done in London with an outragi-

ous wind, the violence whereof onerfurned and rent A mightie in pieces aboue fine hundred houses, at which time and tempest the rose of S. Paris bowe church in theape was also overtheowne, where with two nien were flaine. Pozeouer, at Halisburie much hurt was done with the like wind and thunder, for the top of the Chéple and manie buildings besides were sore haken and cast downe. But now we will speake somewhat of the doings of Scotland, as occasion moneth. Thileif(as ye have heard) variance depended betweene king William and his brother duke Robert, the Scottin king Balcoline made fore wars The Scots upon the inhabitants of Porthumberland, carrieng inuade Enggreat bottes and proces out of that countrie, which land. he inuaded even to Thefter in the fræt. Therefore king William, some after his returne, gathered his power togither, and sped him northwards. Wut king Palcolme hearing of his pullance a great frength fent to him for peace, which was granted in the end.

Some witters affirme, that king William prepas red a great armie both by fea and land against spale Wil. Malm. colone; and that his naute being abroad on the feas, Sim. Dun, was lost by tempest, and the most part of his ships drowned; that the armie by land entring into Scots land, fuffered manie damages through want of vite tels, and fo recoiled: finallie, that duke Robert lieng on the bodoers with an armie in his brothers name (whereby it thould appeare that the king himfelfe was not there) by the helpe and furtherance of Cogar Co that fuch Populans as had lost ante of their lands 30 theling, who then served H. Palcolme in his wars, concluded a peace betwirt his brother and the faid Malcolme, opon certeine articles, by vertue wherof certeine places in Posthumberland were restored buto Palcolme, which he had held in William Conquerours dates. Some other write in like maner. that king Palcolme dishomage to king William and duke Robert that brought the faid Cogar Cthe ling into the fauour of the king.

Holosoever the truth of the storie doth frand in powers, and belieged their youngest brother Henrie 40 this behalfe, certeine it is, that the king returned out of Posthumberland into the west parts of the realme, reteining ffill with him duke Kobert, two loked dailie when he should performe such coues nants as were concluded byon betwirt them in their late reconciliation. But when he faw that the king meant nothing leffethan to frand to those artis cles, and how he did onlie protract and delate the time for some other secret purpose, he returned into Asy mandie in great displeasure, and take with him the 50 faid Edgar Etheling, of thom he alwaies made be rie great account. Some after king William returned into the north parts, and (as it dianced) he flated a few dates about Carletl, there being delts ted with the lituation of the towne (which had beene destroted by the Danes two hundred yeares before) he fet workemen to repaire the same (meaning to The repair ble it in fred of a bulworke against the Scots on ring and new those west borders) which when he had fensed with peopling of ivalles, and builded a castell in the most convenient Carteil, place thereof, he caused thurthes and houses to be erected for the benefit of such people as he had before mined to bring buto the same. This being done, he placed a colonic of fouthern men there with their wices and children, and gave large privileges buto the towne, which they intop at this date.

There have I thought good to advertise you of an Match. Well, erroz in Matth. Welt. cropt in either through milipla: cing the matter by means of some exemplifier, either else by the authors missaking his account of yeares, as 1072.for 1092. referring the repairing of Carles il buto Milliam Conquerour, at what time he made a fournie against the Scots in the said yeare 1072. And yet not thus contented; to bewraie the error more manifestlie, he affirmeth, that the king erchan-ged the earledome of Chester with Kafe or Kanulfe de Micenis, alids Welchines, for the earledome of Carleil, which the said Weschines held before, and had begunne there to build and fortifie that tolune: whereas it is certeine that Kanulfe de Welchines came to enjoy the earledome of Theffer by way of inheritance, as after thall appeare. For better profe whereof pe hall binderstand that we find by ancient records, how one Hugh Lou or Lupus enfoiced the earledome of Cheffer all the daies of the Conqueroz, and long after, which Hugh was some to Kichard carle of Auranges and the countelle Emma daugh ter of a noble man in Posmandle named Herlow in, tho maried Arlet the daughter of a burgelle in Falois, and mother to William Conquerour . So that the fair Hugh, being lifters sonne to the Conqueroz, received by gift at his hands the earldome of Cheffer, to hold of him as frælie by right of the fword, as he held the realme of England in title of his crowne. For these be the words: Tenendum sibi 20 haredibus ita liberè ad gladium sicut ipse (Rex) totam tenebat Angliam ad coronam.

Anno Reg.5.

Carle Bugh then established in possession of this earledome, with most large privileges and freedoms, for the better governement thereof, ordeined but der him foure barons; namelie, his couline Pigell oz Peal baron of Halton, fir Piers Palbanke baron of Pauntwich, fir Culface *, * baron of Nawpalle, and fir Warren Hernon baron of Shipbzoke. Pi gell held his baronie of Halton by feruice, to lead the Tlauntgard of the earles armie when he Chould make any tournte into Wales; so as he should be the foremost in marching into the enimies countrie, and the last in comming backe: he was also conestable and marshall of Chester . From this Pigell 02 The Lacies. Peal, the Lacies that were earles of Lincolne had their oxiginall. When earle Hugh had governed the carledome of Cheffer the terme of 40. yeares, he departed this life, in the years 1107. He had iffue by his wife Armetrida, Richard the second earle of Cheffer affer the conquest: Robert, abbat of Saint Comundiburie: and Dinell, tutoz to the childzen of king Henrie the first. Dozeover, the faid earle Hugh had a lifter named Dargaret, that was maried to John Bohun, who had iffue by hir, Kanulfe Bohun, otherwise called Weschines, which Kanulse by that meanes came to enjoy the earledome of Cheffer in right of his mother (after that earle Kichard was drowned in the sea) and not by exchange for the earles dome of Carleil, as by this which we have alreadic recited may lufficientlie be proued.

John Bohun.

Foureba:

or Weat. Diers Mal

bank:.

"Gustace

Sohole fur= name we find warren Aler=

rong,Digell

Anno Reg.6.

1093 Simon Dun. Hen, Hunt. Matth Paris. Whe king being licke pro= ment of life. Polydor. Eadmerus.

Antelme elec= red archbishop of Cantura burie.

Pow to returne where we left. After that king William Rufus had given order for the building, fortificing, and peopling of Carleil, he returned fouth wards, and came to Gloceffer, there he fell into a grauous and dangerous ficknesse; so that he was in ocipaire and doubt of his life: wherefore he repented him of his former mildeds, and promiled (if he eleas ved that dangerous ficknesse) to amend and become a new man. But when he had his health, that p201 milethamende mile was quickelie broken, for his dwings which 60 were so bad and wicked before his sicknesse, being compared with those which followed after his recoucrie, might have beine reputed god and sufferable.

Moreover, whereas he reteined and kept in his hands the bishoppike of Canturburie the space of foure yeares, he now bellowed it opon Anselme, who was before abbat of Bechellouin in Pormandie; and for certaine abbeis which he had held long time in his pollection, he ordeined abbats: by meane there of all men(but especiallic the spiritualtie) began to conceive a verie god opinion of him. The yere there: in Anselme was thus elected, was from the birth of our Saulour 1093, on the firt of Harch, being the firt sundaie in Lent (as Eadmerus recordeth.) Fur: Eadmerus. thermore he gave the fee of Lincolne (being boid by the death of bilhop Kemigius) to his councellour Kobert Bluet; but afterward repenting himselfe of Matth Paris. fuchliberalitie, in that he had not kept it longer in Robert Blahis hands towards the inriching of his coffers, he deset L. Channised a thift how to wipe the bilhops note of some of celor elected his gold, which he performed after this maner. He coine, caused the bishop to be sued, quarelinglie tharging him that he had wrongfullie vlurped certeine pollelfions, togither with the citie of Lincolne, which appers teined to the lie of Docke. Which although it was but a forged cavillation, and a chamefull butruth; Hen. Hunc. pet could not the bishop be delivered out of that trou ble, till he had paid to the king fine thouland pounds. And as he dealt with the spiritualtie, so he caused dinerse of the Pobilitie to be put to greenous fines, for transgreding of his lawes, though the fault were never so little. He also caused the archbishop Anselme to paie him a great fumme of monie, bnoer colour of a contribution which was due in Lanfrankes daies, though it was certeinlie knowne that Lanfranke had paied it. Thus grew king William from time to time more tharpe and rigorous to his subjects, so that wholoever came within the danger of the laws. was fure to be condemned; and fuch as would place the promoters and give informations against any man for transgresting the lawes, were highlie re-

In this lift yeare there chanced such an excelline raine, and such high flouds, the rivers overflowing the low grounds that lay neere but o them, as the like had not bene fæne of many yeares before; and afterwards insued a sudden frost, whereby the great Arcames were congeled in such fort, that at their dif foluing or thaining, manie bridges both of wood and Stone were borne downe, and diverse water-milles rent by and caried awaie.

Furthermore, king William perceiving that by Polydor. his cruell and conetons government, fundate of his subjects did dailie steale out of the realine, to live in forceine countries, he published a proclamation, charging that no man thould depart the realme Appoclamatic without his licence and fafe-conduct. Percof it is onthat none thought, that the cultome role of forbidding pallage hould depart out of the realme, which oftentimes is vied as a law. the realme. imen occasion ferueth. Some after, he went against the Welthmen, whom he vanquished in battell nere to Becknocke, and flue Res their king, tho had done much hurt within the English borders, then Ran. Higd. he was their incamped. This Kile or Reswas the Resking of last king that reigned over the Welshmen, as au thois affirme: for afterwards, though they oftens times rebelled, vet the kings of England were revuted and taken as supreme governors of that part of the Jland. Pozeouer, to have the countrie the better in quiet, he did cut downe their wods, and builded manie castels and piles in places convenient, by meanes whereof they were somewhat tamed, and trained in due time to obedience, though not at the first, noz in the daies of sundzie of his successors.

Hauing thus finished his isurnic into Wales, Apacoline Halcolme king of Scotland came bnto Gloceffer king of Scots to le the king, and to common with him of fundate commeth to matters touching the peace betwirt both the realms, Glocelter. as he returned homewards: but bicause king Wil. Malm. liamdistained to enterteine him in such pompous Polydor, maner as he expected and made account of; and forfomuch as he did not at the verie first admit him to his presence, the said Walcolme returned into Scotland in great displeasure, and immediatlie raising a power-entred into England, destroteng the country B. Malcolme buto Alnewike castell, where he was so environed innabeth suffing an ambushment last by Robert carle of Oas. with an ambuchment laid by Robert earle of Pozwales flaine.

Wil.Thorne.

Simon Dun,

Ran.Higd.

Ran, Higd. Wil.Malm.

Simon Dun.

ren of cattell.

Strange

wonderg. Matth. Paris.

Simon Dun.

Polydor.

Anno Reg. 7.

1094

thamberland, that he and his clock sonne Edward were flaine. At which milhap his whole host being otterlie discomfited, fled out of the field, with the losse of manic, whereof some were slaine, and some taken by purfute. Thus came king Palcoline to his end (by the fust providence of God) in that province which he had wafted and spoiled at five scuerall times, as first in the dates of king Coward, when earle Tollie was gone to Rome; the fecond time, in the dates of Will liant Conquerour, when he spoiled Cleveland; third, 10 lie, in the same Conquerours daies, whilest bishop Maither possessed the se of Durham, at what time all the countrie was spoiled and forraced, even to the river of Tine; fourthlie, about the fourth or fift peare of the reigns of this Milliam Kufus, at which time he entered the land as farre as Cheffer in the freet, whilest king William was in Pormandie; the fift time was now, when he lost his life on faint Brices day, by the hands of a verie valiant knight named Mockell. Bing Walcolme being thus surprised by 20 orath, his booic was buried at Timmouth (as in the Scotily histories more plainclie appeareth) where also pe may find, how the sonnes of king Palcolme were aided by king William Rufus to obteine the crowne of Scotland, whereonto they were interesfed; inhereas otherwise by the force and pradife of their uncle Donald they had beine kept from the scepter and crowne of the kingdome.

This yeare England and Posmandic were fore vered with mortalitie both of men and beafts, info 30 much that tillage of the ground was laid alide in manie places, by reason wherof there followed great dearth & famine. Manie grizelie and hideous lights were some also in England, as hosts of men figh-Weath & mur= ting in the aire, flathes of fier, Cars falling from heauen, and such like strange wonders. About this time new occasions of becach of amitie grew betwirt the king and his brother Robert, tho accused him of perfurie, for not observing the articles of the last peace concluded betwirt them : Wherefore he purpo: 40 sed to saile over into Pozmandie, and so came buto Hallings, about the first of Februarie, where he so tourned for a time, and caused the church of Wattell abbeie to be dedicated in the honour of S. Martin. He deprined Herbert bilhop of Thetford of his bis thops staffe, bicause he meant to have stolne awaie fecretlie to Kome, and there to have purchased absolution of pope Urban for his bishoppike, which he had bought of the king for himselfe; and likewise for the abbasic of Winchester, which he had purchased for 50

Bing william vaffeth oner mto M02: mandic,

the hing and his brother.

his father, paleng for them both a thouland pounds. After this, about midlent he passed over into Per mandie with an armie, purpoling to trie the matter with his brother in plaine battell, that thereby he might rather grow to some certaine point of losse oz lucce, than to stand ever byon bucerteinties, whether to have peace or war, that he must be constrained to be at all times in a readineffe to defend himselfe. was betwire But after he was come into Pozmandie, t had for rated part of the countrie once or twice, he fell to a 60 parle with his brother duke Robert, in the end condescended to putthe matter in compromise to the arbitrement of certeine grave persons, whose indges ment the king rejeated, bicaute they gave not fentence on his live. Hereupon both parts prepared for war afresh, infomuch that the king percefuing how his brother was afted by the French king, and that his power was to weake to withstand them both, he lent his committion into England for the leuteng of 20. Houland men, commanding that they thould be fent over buto him into Posmandie by a daie, which lvas diligentlie performed. But as they were come togither about Hallings, readie to enfer a thipboid, immediatlic commeth the bings lientenant with a countermand, and fignifieth to them, that the king minding to favour and spare them for that fournic, would that everie of them should give him 10. shills lings (as Matt. Paris bath, or 20. thillings as others haue) towards the charges of the war, and therebyon depart home with a sufficient safeconduct; which the most part were better content to do, than to commit themselves to the fortune of the sea, and bloudie succelle of the wars in Pozmandic. In deed king Will Polydor. liam changing his mind, was now determined to end the matter with monie, and not with the fword, as it afterward appeared: for by bribing of king Ahf lip, in whome duke Robert had reposed his whole A peace contruff, he concluded peace byon fuch articles and con- cluded betweet the king and ditions as he himselfe required.

Having dispatched his businesse in Pozmandie, Robert. he returned into England, where he happened to met with new and more dangerous wars: for the Welshmen hearing of the variance between the bree Hen. Hunt. thren, affer their accustomed maner begin to inuade Simon Dun. The welfhthe English marthes, taking boties of cattell, des meninuade Aroieng the countries, killing and spoiling many of England. the kings subjects, both English and Pomnans. Af ter this (waring proud of their god fuccesse) they belieged the castell of Pountgomerie, where though The castell of the garifon made flout relitance for a time, yet in Bountgomethe end the enimie finding thiff to overtheow the weithmen, walles, entred perforce, and flue all that they found within. Therewith though king William was offended when he heard of it, yet could be not remedie the matter as then, being troubled with a conspiracie Anno Reg. 8. netvlie kindled against him by Robert earle of Poz thumberland, tho bpon displeasure conceined a Robert carle gainst him (bicause he was not rewarded northan of Morthams hed at his hands for his good feruice thewed in the feth to come to killing of Palcolme king of Scotland) refused to the king. come but him being fent for by letters, and herewith began to practile with certeine other poble men of that countrie, how to depose king William. But per he could bring anie peece of his purpose to patte, the king bauing advertisement of his at Matth. Paris tempts, first appointed his brother the lord Henrie to go thither with an armie, and forthwith followeth himselfe; and comming to pewcastell, where the most part of his complices were assembled, he furprifed them per they could have time to proute for their fafctie. That done, he went to Tinmouth, and in the castell take the earles brother there, and af ter came to Banbourgh castell, which the fair earle with his wife and children did hold for their better lafegard and defense. Some authors write, that when the king percel Hen. Hurr. ned it would be hard for him to win Banbourgh car stell (by reason of the great strength thereof) without famine, he builded up an other castell or bastily on fall by it, calling the same Paluoisin, increin he Maluoisin a placed a great power of men, by those meanes at fortresse built length the earle was to narrowlie driven, that then bourgh. he fought to have escaped by night, he was espied, and therewith purfued to closelie by the kings wul diers, that he was forced to take fanduarie within Polydor. the durch of S. Diwins at Tinmouth, from whence he was quicklie taken, and brought as prisoner to the kings presence. Potwithstanding, those that remained within the cattell, byon truft of the frength of that place, would not yield by anic meanes; but And still to their tackling: wher boon the king caused the earle their maister to be brought footh before the gates, and threatned that he thould have his eies put out, if they within did not Arcightwaies give by the hold into his hands. Herebyon it came to passe, that Banbourgh the castell was yielded, and those that kept it were prized to the divertie punithed, some by banifhment, some by low king, fing their cares, a dinerie by the lotte of their hands.

his hanther

C.itf.

imon Duni he earte of C 400.

Clatth Paris.

taing william

muabeth

wairs.

in example to others. The earle himselfe was connet. ed to Windles castell, and there committed to prilon.

Some write that the meaning of the earle and his complices (amongst thom was William earle of Che, the renouncing his allegiance to Robert buke of Pormandie, was become the kings man) was to have displaced the king from his rotall throng, and to have let by his sonne William de Albemarle, whome he had begotten of his concubine. What shat some their purpose was, after that the 10 ed to the church of Canturburie (the greater part of hing had quicted his countrie in the north parts, he bent all his force against the Welshmen, who the yeare before had defiroicd and overthrowne the cafield of Doungomerie, and flaine the Pomans that laic there in garifon to defend it, whereat he was berie much offended, therefore entering into Wales, he began to spoile and wall the countrie. For he saw that the Wellymen would not joine in battell with him in the plaine field, but kept themselves still a lose within the woods and marithes, and aloft byon 20 mountaines: albeit offentimes when they faw aduantage, they would come forth, and taking the Englishmen and Pounans at bnawares, kill manie, and wound no finall numbers, he ftill purfued them by hils and dales, though more to the lotte of his owne people than the hurt of the Welthmen, who casilic eldjewed the danger of battell, and still at the Araites and combersome passages distressed manie of their enimies: whereby the king at length percei-The king re- further to follow on with his purpoled voiage, and runoth out of therewith returned home, not without some note of diffonoz.

water with nithonous.

About the fame time Murcherdach king of Fres Sourchroach land, with the clergie and people of the citie of Duting of 3.70- blin, eleacd one Samuella monke of S. Albong, an Triff man borne, to the government of the durch and bishops sie of Dublin, and (according to the air cient cultome) presented him by sufficient letters of testimonie onto Anselme archbishop of Cantur- 40 burie, to be confecrated of him, tho (according to their request) did so, and received from him a promise of his canonicall lubication, after the old bluall mar ner having foure bilhops (luffragans to the fee of Canturburie) ministring to him at that consecra-

The councell

The inarnie ento the holic land. Wonfray be 25ultion.

Anno Reg. 9. 1006. Hen. Hunt. Wil. Thorne. Simon Dun. 3 fublibie.

In like maner, pope Arban calling a councell at of Termount. Clermount in Aunergue, exhorted the christian princes to carnefilic to make a tournete into the holieland, for the recoverie thereof out of the Saraceus 50 hands, that the faid great and generall fournic was concluded byon to be taken in hand; wherein manie Poble men of duffendome went under the leading of Godfav of Bullion, and others, as in the dyonk cles of France, of Germanic, and of the holie land destinance plaintic appeare. There went also among other divers Poblemen forth of this reline of Englond, speciallie that worthilic bare the surname of Beaudyampe. Robert duke of Pozmandie minding also to go the same cournie, and wanting monie to 60 furnish and let footh himselfe, morgaged his duchie of Pomandie to his brother king William, for the fumme of ten thousand pounds. About this time and other occasion was offered buto king William, to taic a new paiment opon his subjects, so greenous and intollerable, as well to the spiritualtie as the temporaltie, that diverse bilhops and abbats, who had alreadic made away some of their chalices and thurth fewels to pair the king, made now plaine anfiver that they were notable to helpe him with any more. Unto whom on the other fide (as the report , went)the king faid againe ; Daus you not (I belich , pon) comins of gold and filmer full of dead mens " bones : Peaning the thines wherein the relikes of faints were inclosed. Which (as his woods femed to import) he would have had them convert into monie, there with to helpe him in that need, judging it no facrilege, though manie did otherwise esseme it.confidering(as he pretended)that it was gathered for fo godlie an ble, as to mainteine warres against Infidels and enimies of Chaiff.

The archbilhop Anselme twice the worth of two Eadmorus. hundred markes of filuer of the fewels that belong the couent of monks winking thereat) towards the making bp of such paiment as he was constrained to make onto the king towards his aid at that time. But bicause he would not leave this for an example to be followed of his fuccessours, he granted to the thurth of Canturburie the profits and revenues of his manour of Petteham, onto the vie of the fame thurth for the terme of feauen yeares, which amount ted to the fumme of thirtie pounds pearelie in those

Thus king William læking rather to spoile the Polydos. realme of England, than to preferue the rotall Cate thereof, after he had gotten togither a great maste of monie, sailed over into Pozmandie, and there delivering onto the duke the tenthouland pounds as forefaid, was put in pollellion of the duchie, to eniog the same, and the profits rising thereof, till the said morgaged to ten thouland pounds were paid him againe : 02 (as king william. fome write) it was covenanted that in recompense ning that he could not prevaile against them, ceased 30 thereof, the king should entry the profits for terme Eadmerus. onclie of thee yeares, and then to restore it with out any further interest or commoditie. This done, Polydor, he returned againe into England.

> Pow duke Robert letteth forward on his fornie, in companie of other Poble men, towards the holic land. In which votage his valorous hart at all affaies (when any fernice thould be thewed) was most manifestile perceived, to his high fame and renowme a mong the princes and nobilitic there and then als sembled.

About the same time. the citizens of Waterford in Ireland, perceining that by reason of the great multitude of people in that citie, it was necessarie Endmerus. for them to have a bishop, obteined licence of their waterford in king and rulers to erect in their citie a bishops lee, Ireland made and belought them that it might please them to write a bishoprike. onto Anselme the archbishop of Canturburie their primate, to have his consent therein, so as it might The archbifand with his pleasure to institute and ordeine such a flop of Canone bishop, to have governement of their church, turburie pais as they should name, knowing him to be a man of mate of Ire fuch learning, knowledge, discretion, and worthines, as were fit for the rome. Herebpon were letters fent by mellengers from Durcherdach king of K.of Freiand. Ireland buto Ansolme, informing him of the whole matter: werein one Palchus was commended and presented buto him to be admitted and consecras ted, if he thought god. These letters were subscribed with the hands, not onelie of king Wurcherdach, but also of his brother duke Dermeth, bithop Dufnalo, Joiman bishop of Wethe, Samuell bishop of Dublin, Ferdomnachus bilhop of Laginia og Letnister, and many others both of the spiritualtie and tempozaltic.

Anselme considering their request to be sust and necellarie, granted to fulfill their delires, and so byon eramination had of the man, and taking of him his oth of obedience, according to the maner, he confer crated the same Balchus, and Coodeined him to rule Balchus the church of Materford as bilhop. This was done confecrered at Canturburie the 28 han of Oddbor 1806 bilhop of was at Canturburie the 28. day of Daober, Rafe bilhop terford, of Chichester, and Sundulse bishop of Rochester helping Anselme in the consecration as ministers onto him in that behalfe. The faid Walchus was a monke,

The nuchie of Dozmandic.

Anno Reg. 10. 1097

Marcherdach

Lones muawelflanen. Polydor.

The welfh-men with

Snivos. 11. Hung

noth the

and sometime under Walkhelme bilhop of Win-

But to the purpole, king William after his returne into England, remembring what damage he had susteined two yeares before at the hands of the Welfinnen, determined efficies to inuade their countrie, and therefore doubling his power, com-Who king oft meth into the marthes, pitcheth his field, and confulteth with his capteines what order he were best to ble in that his enterpile, for the taming of his enis 10 mics. The Welthmen hearing of the kings approch, and that his armie was farre greater than the laft which he brought into their countrie, fell to their monted policie, and got them into the woods, there to lie in wait, trusting moze to the advantage of beam into the farting holes, than to their owne force a pullance.

Withen the king understood their practile, he let ar med men in divers places, and builded towers and fortifications to octend him and his, bicause he durst not affaie to enter into wild and walk grounds where 20 he had beene hindred and damnified before that time, hoping by this meanes in Noping by the wates and passages of the countrie, to bring the rebels to more fubication. But when this policie was found by profe to wearie the kings fouldiors rather than to burt the enimies, which straieng by and downe in the woos intrapped offentimes the Pozmans and English, in taking them at advantage, the king without beinging his purpose to any god effect, departed home with an armie into Scotland, that he might place his cofine Edgar the sonne of king Palcolme in the government of that kingdome, and expell his bucle

Duffinald, who had vourped the same.

Anno Reg.11.

Simon Dun. R.Houed,

Gyral, Cam.

Bush carle of

Fab. ex Guido. ie Columna.

King Milliam, being fill inflamed with ire, for that be could not have his will, determined with continuall warres to wearie the rebellious fromachs of the Welthmen: and therefore was fired first to fet byon them of Anglesey, which being an Ile enuithey were charpelie pursued. This enterprise was checkie committed buto Hugh earle of Shrewlbu ric and Arundell, and to Bugh earle of Cheffer, tho at their first comming wan the Ile, and tempered the victorie with great crucitie and bloudified, putting out the cies of some, cutting off the noses, the armes, or hands of others, and some also they geloed. Moreover (as authors write) the fair earle of Shrewesburie made a kenell of the church of Saint Fris dancus, lateng his hounds within it for the night 50 time, but in the morning he found them all raging wood. You true so ever this report is I wote not, but thoutlie after they had ercented in maner as before is faid) fuch firange kinds of crueltie in that Ale. it chanced that a native of rovers came thither from the Ales of Dikney, whose cheefe admirall was na-Sharwfourie med Hagnus, who incountring with the faid earle of Showelburie, that him into the eic with an arrow. which part of his body remained bare and unarmed, To that by the fell downe dead out of his thip into 60 the fea. When Pagnus beheld this, he faid scorneful lie in the Danith tong, Leit loupe, that is; Let him leape now: the English neverthelesse had the victor rie at that time (as some write) and overcame their entmics with great flaughter and bloudshed. Hot long after, the earle of Cheffer going over to Wales, with long and continuall warres tired and tamed the wild Welfhmen, tho for a good while after durft not their their faces.

The king being thus at quiet and without warre Anno Reg.12, in all places, began now to fet his mind on build bing, and first caused new walles to be made about the fower of London, and also laid the foundation of Westminster hall, which though it be a verie large and comthie place, yet after it was finished at his returne out of Pozmandie, he came to view it, and Fabian. beld his court therein with great pompe and honoz. Ran. Higd. Mauch. Paris. De repented that he had made it no larger, faieng: it was to little by the halfe, and therefore determined to have made a new, and that this other thould have ferued but for a dining chamber. A diligent fearther (faith Matthew Paris) might pet find cut the foundation of the hall, which he had purposed to build, ffretching from the Thames fide buto the common Aræt. But though those his buildings were great omaments to the realme, yet bicause he toke by monie by extoction of his subjects towards the tharges of the same, he was evill spoken of; the repost being spred, that he should take them in hand Polydor, but onelie under a colour to spoile his subteas, in gathering a far greater lumme than the expenses of them did amount onto. About the same time that The king gohing Milliam beganne these buildings, he went formandie. ouer into Pozmandie, to buderstand in what state that countrie and.

About the same time also, or rather two yere before; to lutt 1097, nére to Abinaton, at a tolune called Finchamiked in Barkihire, a well or fountaine flowed with bloud, in maner as before it view finchamilied to flow with water, and this continued for the space Hen. Hine. of three dates, og (as William Malm. faith) fifteene Mauh. West.

daies togither.

After the king had dispatched his belinesse in for into England. After this, he fent Edgar Etheling 30 mandie, & was returned into England (as he was making provision to ride forth on hunting) a med fenger came suddenlie buto him, bringing wood, Hen. Hone. that the citie of Pans was belieged, and like to be Matth. Paris, surppiled. The king was then at dinner, meaning first to make an enothereof, and after to take abvice in that matter: but being reproved by the mrsfenger, for that to the great danger of his lubicas which were belieged he palled not to make delaies. rather than to go and fuccour them with all speed, he remed with the lea, was ever a refuge for them when 40 taketh the mans blunt speech in so good part, that he called Araightwaie for masons to breake downe the wall, to the end he might palle through the next way, and not be driven to ffep to farre out of his path, as to go forth by the dozes: and fo without any long adusement taken in the cause, he rode straight waie to the sea, sending his loods a commandement to follow; who when they came in his presence, counselled him to state till his people were assembled. How beit he would not give care to their advice in that point, but faid; Such as lone me, I know well will follow me, and so went a shipbood, setting apart all doubts of perils; and pet was the weather verie darke, rough and cloudie, infomuch that the maiffer of the thip was afraid, and willed him to tarrie till the wind did settle in some quiet quarter: but hee commanded to holle by failes, and to make all freed that could be for life, incouraging the Chipmaister The fatenais with these words, that he never heard as yet of anie king william king that was drowned.

Thus palling the leas, he landed in Poirrandie. there he gathered his power, and made towards Pans. When those which held the stege before the citie, heard of his appool, they brake by their campe Mans vehice= and departed thence : howbett, the capteine named red from an Helias, that pretended by title and right to be earle allage. of Mans, was taken by a traine, and brought before the king, who telled at him, as though he had beene helias. but a fole and a coward. Thereopon, the said Helias kindled in weath, boldlie faid unto him; Whereas ,, thou half taken me prisoner, it was by mere chance, ,, and not by thy manhod: but if I were at libertie at ,, gaine, I would to vie the matter with the, that thou, Chouldest not thinke I were a man so lightlie to be ,, laughed at. Do thould (laith the king?) Well then 3 ,,

Wil.Malm.

Wil, Malm.

Rafus.

giuc

" give the the libertic, and go the loaies, do even the " woolf that lieth in thy power against me, for I care " not a button for the. Pelias being thus fet at liber; tie, did nothing after (to make anie account of) as gainst the king, but rather kept himselfe quiet. How: beit some write, that he was not taken at all, but el caped by flight. To proceed, king William being refurned into England, and puffed by with price of his vidories, and now fæing himselse fullie deliuc red from all troubles of warre, began after his old 1 manner to spoile and wast the countrie by bureaso nable eractions, tributes and paiments.

Clariance beand the arch bushop Inichnic.

Hen Hunt,

Polydor.

Herebpon fell a great controuerfie betwene Anewitt the king felme and the king, who pretended a reproch of cruell furtharging of his commons with subsidies, lones, and bureasonable fines: but the cheefe cause was, for that he might not call his synods, nor correct the bishops, but all to be done as the king would. The king also chalenged the investiture of prelates, and indeed fore taxed both the spiritualtie and temporal 20 tic, spending the monie byon the reparations and buildings of the Tower, & Westminster hall, as is before remembred. Belides this, his feruants spot led the English of their gods by indired meanes: but especiallic one Kafe sometime chaplaine buto William the Conquerour, at this time the kings prodor and collector of his talkes and sublidies was fo malicious & couctous, that in fied of two talkes, he would lenic their, pilling the rich, and powling the pose, so that manie through his cruell dealing were 30 oftentimes made to forfeit their lands for finall of fenies: and by his meanes also diverse bishoppikes were bought and fold as other kinds of merchandi zes, whereby he was in lingular favour with the king. The clergic also were vsed verie Areightlie, The clergie and (as I suppose) not without god cause; for suerlie out of oyber. in those daies it was far out of order, not onelie in conctons practices, but in all kinds of worldie pompe and vanitie: for they had by bushed and brain ded perukes, long side garments verie gozgeous, 40 ailt airoels, ailt sours, with manie other bulemelie disorders in attire. To be short, the contention grew to hot betwirt the king and Anselme, who would also have corrected such vices in the clergie (as some Matth.Paris. write) that in the end the archbilhop was quite call out of favour. There are which alledge the verie first and oxiginall occasion of their falling out to be, fox that the archbilhop denied to paie a thouland marks A thousand of filuer at his request: in consideration of the markes de= kings great beneuolence shewed in preferring him 50 manded of to his lie, whereas the archbishop imaged the offense

Jufelme. of fimonie, to rest as well in giving after his promotion received, as if he had bribed him aforehand, and therefore refused to make anie such paiment: but Eadmerus. yet (as Eadmerus writeth) he offered him fiue hum

dred pounds of filter, which would not be received. for the king was informed by some of his councell, that the archiffop (in confideration of his bountious liberalitie extended towards him) ought rather to give him two thousand pounds, than five hundred, 60 adding, that if he would but change his counter nance, and give him no frændlie lokes for a tibile, be thould perceive that Anteline would ad to the first offer, other five hundred pounds. But Anselme was so far from being brought to the kings lure with fuch fetches, that ovenlie to the kings face he told him, that better it Gould be for his maiestie to rereine of him a fmall fumme granted of him with a free and franke hart, so as he might helpe him eff: fones with more, than to take from him a great deale at once, without his good will, in such fort as if he were his bonoman. For your grace (faith he) map have me, and all that is mine to ferue your turne with freendlie beneuolence; but in the waie of feruitude and bondage you thall neither have me no: mine. With thich words the king was in maruel lous choler, and there with faid in anger: Well then, ,, get the home, take that which is thine to thy felfe, ,, that which I have of mine owne I trust will suffice ,, me. The archbiftop being on his knees, role here: ,, with and departed, reiviling in his mind that the king had refused his offer, thereby he was delivered out of suspicion to have bubed the king, and given him that monte in wate of reward for his preferment to the miter, as of malicious men would happilie haue beine conffrued. Therebpon being affer laboured to double the fumme, he offerlie refused, and determining rather to forfake the realme than to commit luch an offense, made fuit to the king for Marth, Paris. licence to go to Rome to fetch his pall of the pope.

The king hearing the pope named, wared maruel: The king lous angrie: for they of Rome began alreadie to de bibe to heare mand donations and contributions, more impus thepope nadentlie than they were hitherto accustomed. And as med. it chanced, there was a schisme at that time in the church, by reason the emperour Penrie had placed a pope of his owne advancing (namely Wibteth archbishop of Kauenna) against pope Arban: for the env perour mainteined that it belonged to his office on-lie to elect and affigue what pope it pleased him.

Bing William therefore conceived displeasure against Urban, tho withstoo the emperours pretense, and alledged by the like, that no archbishop or bishop within his realme thould have respect to the church of Kome, noz to anie pope, with whome they had nothing to do, either by waie of subjection, 02 otherwise; sith the popes wandered out of the Heus which Peter trode, likking after bubes, lucre, and worldie honor. He said also that they could not res teine the power to lose and bind, which they sometime had, fince they shewed themselves nothing at all to follow his most vertuous life and holie conversation. He added furthermoze, that for himselfe, lithens the conversion of the realme to the christian faith, he had as great authoritie, franchifes and liberties within the same, as the emperour had in his empire. And what hath the pope then to dw (quoth he) in the empire, or in my kingdome touching temporall libertics, whose dutie it is to be carefull for the soule of man, and to be that herefies spring not by, which if the prelates of the province be notable to reforme, then might the pope owit, either by himselfe or his legats. Againe, by reason of the schline, a for the dis pleasure that he bare pope Arban, he asked Anselme Eadmerus. of which pope he would require his pall fith he was fo The kings haftic to go to Kome for it. Wherto Anselme answe Demand to Anselme. red, that he would require it of pope Arban. Which words when the king had heard, he faid, I have not as yet admitted him pope: adding further that it was against the custome vsed either in his or his fathers time, that anie man within the realme of England thould name or obeie anie man for pope, with out the kings licence and confent, faieng mozeover, that if the faid Anselme would seke to take that prerogative and dignitic from him, it Could be all one, as if he Hould go about to take awaie from him his crowne, and all other rotall dignitie. Wherebuto Anselme answered, that at Rochester (before he was confecrated bishop) he had declared his mind therein, and that being abbat of Bechellouin in Pozmandie, he had received Arban for pope; fo that what soeuer chanced, he might revolt from his obedience and Subtection. The king being the more kindled herewith, proteffed in plaine woods, that Anfelme could not bepe his faith and allegiance towards him, and his obedie ence also to the see of Rome, against his will and pleasure. But (to conclude) this matter went to far ın Rutland=

" Afthey be

Dodg people.

Chekingres

nounceth the

in controversie betwirt the king and the bishop, that A councellat a councell was called at Rockingham in Rutland thire, and there in the church within the castell, the matter was earnefflie decided, and much adw on es uerie lide, to have constreined Anselme to renounce his opinion, but he would not. Wherfore it was then benifed, that if he would not agree to the kings pleas fure, they would by and by fee if they might by any meanes deprine him: but Anselme Will held hard, and could not be feared by all thefe threats; and in like maner to judge of an archbishops cause, the o ther bishops concluded that they had no authoritie.

Moreover, while the matter was in consultation among the bilhops, another of the kings councell that was a knight, came before Anselme in place where he fat almost alone, to loke for an answer by them from the king, which knight knæling downe before the archbilhop, spake these words buto him: Keuerend father, your humble childzen belech pour Grace not to have your heart troubled with these 20 "things which you heare; but call to remembrance ce that bleffed man Job, vanquishing the divell on the dunghill, and revenging Adam thome he had o nercome in paraoile. Which words the archbilhop confidering with a freendlie countenance, perceived that the minds of the people remained on his fide, whereof both he and such as were about him, were right foifull and greatlie comforted, having hope (according to the scripture) that the * boice of the people was the voice of God. Then the king bnder: 2 frod all thefe things, he was marueloullie disquieted in mind, and therefore perceiving that the bilhops and other of his councell had promifed more than they could performe, he blamed them for it: buto whom the billiop of Durham that was the cheefe dow er in this matter, framed this answer: He spake so faintlie (quoth he) and so cololie at the first, that he les comed not to have any froze of wit or wisdome. Finallie, the matter was deferred butill the next ging that they could not well ourcome him by arguments, so long as he grounded his opinion in such fort boon the scripture, and the authoritie of Saint Deter; The best way therefore (said he) shall be, to compellhim by force, either to agree to the kings mind, or elfe to deprice him of his ring and fraffe, and ex after banish him the realme. But the loops of the councell allowed not the bishops words herein . Mell (faith the king) and what other way will you ce line, I will not surelie suffer any to be my piere within my realme: and if you knew his cause to be to god, thy did you lufter me to commente this action against him: go your waies therefore, and take ec aduice togither, for by Gods face (for that was his oth)if you condemne him not at my will, I will reducing my felfe byon you. Peuerthelesse, when he was informed, that bicause he was an archbishop, they had no power to judge or condemne him, though perceive so to be; he told them yet they might at the leastwife renounce their obedience to him, and for falsehis companie, which they faid they might do. ce Then do it (faith the king) with sped, that he may (when he shall see himselse abandoned, and despised of all men)repent that he hath followed Arban, and co neglected me his sourceigne lood and maister. And ce that ye may do it the more fafelie, first of all I des prive him of the fuertie and allegiance which he may pretend to have of me within all my dominions, and from henceforth I will have no affiance in him, noz archbishop for take him for an archbiffion. hia lapica. The bishops would faine have persuaded An-selme to have shewed himselfe conformable to the kings pleasure, and therefore toke paines with him earnefilie in that behalfe, but all would not feruc. We answered indeed veric curteouslie, but his bones fice he would not renounce, as touching the name and office, though in exterior things he were never fo much disquieted . The king percetuing him to trand ,, fiffe in his opinion, said but o his loods; His woods are ever contrarie to my mind, and I will not take ? him for my freend, wholoever douth favour him . I, Hall therefore require you that be pieces of my realme, to renounce all the faith and frænothip which ? you beare him, that he may fee what he hath gained >> by that allegiance, which (to the offending of my perfon) he observeth to the apostolike lee. Where to the loads answered; As for vs, we were never his men. >> and therefore we cannot abiure any fealtie which we neuer acknowledged. He is our archbilhop, and hath rule in matters perteining to chistian religion within this land, for which cause we that are chistis? ans may not refuse his authoritie whilest we reserve maine here on earth, bicaule he is attainted with no blemith of any beinous crime, which may confireine vs otherwise to do. The king refrained and dissem, bled his weath, least he should proude them to further displeasure by speaking against their reason.

The bishops were soze abothed hereat, and ditten The bishops to a threwo pinch. Pow when, not long after, the bing required to know of enerie of them apart, where they better they be to they from the first produced all maner of subjection that an analysis of the first produced all maners of subjection that they be to the first produced all maners of subjection they are an analysis of the first produced all maners of subjection they are an analysis of the first produced all maners of subjection to the subject to the first produced all maners of subject to the fi ther they otterlie renounced all maner of subjection fiver, and obedience buto Anselme without any condition intermitted, or else that onelie which he did pretend by authoritie of the pope : the bithops making ans fwer diversite herebuto, the king appointed those to fit downe by him as faithfull fubients, who acknows ledged that their renuntiation was absolutelie made, without intermitting of any condition: as for the other, who protested that they renounced their subjection and obevience buto him onelie in that which he prefumed byon in the behalfe of the pope, he morning, and then the faid bithop of Durham, alled- 40 commanded them to go affee, and to remaine in a corner of the house to heare the sentence of their condemnation pronounced.

Wherefore being put in a maruellous feare, they withdrew themselves alide, but yet straightwaies they denifed a thiff inherewith they had beene well acquainted before, as followeth. They prefented to the king a great masse of monie to appeale his weath, and so thereby were restored to his fauour. The stiffeness Anselme notwithstanding was obstinate in his opis of Anselme in "thinke good, if this like you not : fo long as I may 50 nion, so that in the end, the sentence touching this the kings contronersie betwirt him and the king, was respited pleasure. till the octaves of Pentecost next insuing. All this was notified well inough to the pope, tho vied the matter with such moderation, that by fecret aduer Manh. Paris, tisements given, he toke awaie from his brethren all rigozous waies of procedings, fairing;

Dum furor in cursu est, currenti cede furori But pet the kings enmitic towards Anselme was openlie declared, and that chefelie for the deniall of his cause proved never so evill, which they could not 60 the monie which he demanded; but at length he got it, though not with any fre hart or gwowill of the archbishop: insomuch that the king reputed him giltie of treason. Within a few daies after, Walfer bishop of Alba, bringing to him his pall, verte wiselie reconciled the pope and the king . Pots with tranding all this, Anselme could not purchase the kings godwill to his contentment, though he wisclie diffembled for the time: so that when the bishop of Alba should returne to Rome, he made lute for licence to go with him . Peuerthelelle, the hing offered him, that if he would defict from his purpole, and sweare boon the enangelists neither to go to Rome, noz to appeale in any cause to the popes

The meane to pacific & king.

the kings

court, he might and should live in quietnesse free

Inducturi.

Tablan

Matth Paris.

complaineth

of the king.

Manulfe bi:

thop of Ctyte chefter.

4Fines of viales that

Polydor.

had wines as

by fome wii=

" from all danger but if he would not be fo contented, 's homight and thould depart at his perill, without hope to returne hither againe. For furelic (faith he) if he go, I will leise the archbithopsike into mine owne hands, and receive him no more for archbishop.

Anfolme here with departing from the court, came to Canturburie, occlaring openlie what had bin faid unto him, and immediatlic fought to flee out of the realists in the night, prouiding for himselfe a thip at Doner. But his purpose being reucaled to the king, 10 one William Warlewall the kings feruant was -- lent after him, and finding him readie to depart, twice from him all that he had, grave him a free palpost out of the land . Anselme repairing to Rome, made buto pope Tirban a grænous information as Infolme come gainst the king, occlaring into what milerable state ning to Rome he had brought the Realine, and that for want of alfistance in his suffragans it late not in him to reforme the matter.

with Anselme in the controversie betwirt him and the king, Kanulyh bishop of Thichever excepted, who both blamed the king, and rebuked all such bishops as had refused to stand with Anselme, and favoured the king in cases concerning the foresaid variance. Doceoner, the fame bishop of Chichester withstoo the king and his officers in taking fines of prefts for the crinic of fornication; by reason of which presumpti on, the king became fore offended with him, & found meanes to suspend many churches of his diocesse. 30 Howbeit in the end, the bishop demeaned himselfe in such wise, that he had his owne will, and his church twies were opened againe, which had beine flopped up before with thornes. Belides this, the king was contented that the faid bilhop should have the fines of picks in crimes of fornication within his dio celle, and enjoy many other primleges in right of his tersii fained. church. But how beneficiall so ever he was unto the fwof Chichester, true it is (as Polydor writeth) that chester and Salisburie, with the archbishoppike of Canturburie buto certains persons that farmed the fame at his hands for great fummes of monie, in fo much that (belide the faid less of Canturburie, Winchester, and Salisourie, which at the time of his death he kept in his hands) he also received the profits of cleuen abbeies which he had let out, or other wife ture

Robert Lo. faunge. Ran, Higd. Wil. Malm. ned to his most advantage. Mobirt Losamge, of some called Perbert, that form time had bin abbat of Ramley, and then billyop 50 of Electord by gift of a thouland pounds to the king (as before ve have heard) repented him, for that he was inucited by the king, tho after he had be wailed his offense, went to Kome, and did penance for the fame in all points as the pope enjoined him. Which being done, he returned into England, remouing per long his fix from Thetford to Porwich, there he founded a faire monafferie of his owne charges, and not of the churches gods (as some say) wherein is a

Stephan Dar

Ran. Higd. Licobus Phi-Ippus Berigonias,

About this time, by the meanes of Stephan Har ing a manke ding a Ponke of Shireboine, an Englithman, the order of Cilleaur or write monkes had his beginning within the countrie of Burgongne, as witnes noth Ranulph the monke of Chefter: but other wife ters (as Iacob. Philippus) fap that this Stephan was the fecond abbat of that place, and that it was four ded by one Robert abbat of Polinense, in the years of Grace 1098. This order was after brought into Chaland by one called Walter Cipeke, the founded the first abbeie of that religion within this reline Anno Regas. at Minall, about the yeare of Grace 1131.

1100

But to returne agains to the king, who ffill continued in his wilfull conetoninelle, pulling from the rich and welthie, to waste and spend it out in all cre cesse, baine riot, and gists bestowed on such as had least deserved the same. And yet he was warned by The hings manie frange wonders (as the common people did laush process descant) to refraine from these entil dwings: for the galttic. Thames did rife with fuch high fpzings and tides, that Etrange manie townes were drowned, and much hurt done wonders. in places about London, and elsewhere . Diverse Wil Mas rare things have neo also at the same time, which I passe over. But the king hearing hereof, oid nothing regard those which were so bold as to tell him that they were evident fignifications of some bengeance to follow thereforon. The king also himselfe on a 3 decame. night as he flept & dreamed, thought that the beines Match. Will of his armes were broken, and that the bloud iffued out in great abundance. Likewife, he was told by Robert fitt Dammon, that a monke thould occame in his fleepe, how he faw the king gnaw the image of Indeed we find not that any of the bishops held 20 Chaiff crucificd with his teeth, and that as he was as bout to bite awaie the legs of the same image, This with his feet thould spurne him downe to the ground, infortuch that as he lay on the earth, there came out of his mouth a flame of fire, and fuch abundance of smoke, that the aire was darkened therewith . But the king made a tell of these and the like tales; De is a right monke (faith he) and to have a piece of monie, ?? he dreameth such things, give him therefore an hun > , ded thillings, and bid him deame of better fortune to our person. Deverthelesse, the king was some what moved herewith in the end, and doubted when ther he thould go into the New forrest to hunt on Lammas day(as he had purpoled)oz no, bicaule his frænds councelled him not to trie the truth of dreames to his owne lose and hinderance. Thereopon he forbare to go forth before cinner, but when he had dired and made himselfe merrie with receiuing moze dzinke than commonlie he bled to do, as broad he got him into the forrest with a small traine: he let out divers abbeics, and the bilhoppike of Wim 40 amongst wom was one fir Walter Tirella French gir walter knight, whom he had reteined in service with a large Ewell.

Wil. Malm,

This fir Walter chanced to remaine with the king, when all the rest of the companie was disperfed here and there, as the maner in hunting is. Pow as the sunne began to draw lowe, the king perceiuing an hart to come alongst by him, shot at the fame, and with his arrow froke him; but not greate lie hurting him, the beaff ran awaie. The king, to marke which way the hart toke, and the maner of his hurt, held by his hand betweene the sunne and his eies; who flanding in that fort out came another hart, at whom as fir Walter Tirell let drive an arrow, the same by glanking Aroke the king into the beeff, so that he never spake woed, but breaking off so much of the arrow as appeared out of his bodie, he The king fell downs, and giving onelie one grone, immediate flains. lie died, without more noise or mouing. Sir Walter running to him, and perceiving no speech noz sense doubt, conflocring he was first an abbat, and after 60 to remaine in him, straitivaies got to his booste, and riding awaie, escaped and saued himselfe: for few there were that pursued him, everie man being as mazed at the chance, some departing one waie, and some another, everie one so, his owne advantage and commoditie, as the time then served. The dead bodie of the king was fraight conncied to Wincheffer, and there buried the morrow after, which was the fecond day of August, the pere of our Lord 1 100. To this end came king William , after he had reig Wil. Malm ned almost 13. years, and lived 43. and somethat more.

Aipend.

This prince, although entil reported of by writers for the covetous talking of his lubieds, and retelning of ecclefiafficall livings in his hands; pet was Theliberall.

hart of king

william.

Temes.

he endued with manie noble and princelie qualities. He had god knowledge in feats of warre, and could well awaie with bodilie labour. In all his affaires he was circumfpecteof his promile, truffier of his twoed, feedfalt; and in his wars no leffe diligent than fortunate. De gaue to the monkes called Monachi de charitate in Southwarke, the great new church of S. Santour of Bermondlap, and also Bermonds ricit felfe. De founded a goodie holpitall in the citie and finding of the poze as well brethren as fillers. Towards fouldiers and men of warre he was verie liberall, and to envich them, he passed not for taking from farmers and hulbandmen what soever could be gotten. He was indeed of a prodigall nature, and therefore when in the begining of his reigne, doubting some troubles, he had assembled manie men of warre for his defense, there was nothing that thep could aske which he would denie them, in somuch reason thereof he was put to his shifts to provide more. For though substance wanted to thew his liberalitie, vet there failed not in him a mind fill to be bountifull, fith continuall vic of giving rewards, lvas in manner turned in him to a nature, fo that to furnify himselfe with monie and necessaries, he was put to extremities bubeforming a king; and to be Row his benearlence boon some, he spared not to inv powersh others. For in such fort he was liberall, that therewith he was prodigall; and in such wife 30 front of courage, as proud withall; and in such maner severe, as he seemed cruell and increadic. But what meanes he vied to make his best of benefices and fpirituall linings, partlie appereth before.

Anded such was his condition, that two soener would give, might have, that offentimes without respect, whether their success reasonable and allow able or not, in formuch that it is faid of him, that being in Koan on a time, there came to him dinerfe Zewes who inhabited that citie, complaining to 40 him, that diverse of their nation had renounced their Jewith religion, and were become chaiffians: therefore they belought him, that for a certeine fumme of monie which they offered to give, it might please him to constraine them to abiure chillianitie, and furne to the Jewith law againe. He was contented to fatilite their delives, and to receiving the monie, called them before him, & what with threats, and putting them otherwise in searc, he compelled old erroes.

There was about the same time a yong man a Icw, tho by a visson appearing unto him (as is said) was converted to the chaiffian faith, and being baptis fed, was named Stephan, bicaufe S. Stephan was the man that had appeared to him in the vision, as by the same he was informed. The father of the young man being fore troubled, for that his sonne was become a chiffian, and hearing what the king had done in such like matters, presented to him 60. 60 marks of filuer, conditionally that he foould inforce his some to returne to his Jewith religion. Hereupon was the poing man brought before the king, vinte thom he faid; Sirva, thy father here complain coned that without his licence thou art become a chair ce flian: if this betrue, I command the foreturne a gaine to the religion of thy nation, without anie more adm. Co wom the yougman answered, Pour grace(as Fgelle) doub but test. Therwith the king I test with the e Get the honce quicklie, and fulfill my commandement, or by S. Lukes face I Hall co cause thine eies to be plucked out of thine head. The cc yougman nothing abathed hereat, with a confiant voice answered, Trulie I will not do it, but know In answer of for certains, that if you were a good christian, you agood Jew. would never have offered anie such words, for it is >> the part of a christian to reduce them agains to Triff which be departed from him; a not to separate them from him, which are to ined to him by faith. The king >> her with confounded .commanded the Ich to anant ,, eget him out of his light. But his father perceiving that the king could not persuade his sonne to forfalic of Porks, called S. Leonards, for the luftentation 10 the christian faith, required to have his monic as >> gaine. To whom the king faid, he had done fo much , as he promifed to do, that was, to perfuade him fo far as he might. At length, when he would have had " the king to have dealt further in the matter, the king >> (to frop his mouth) tendered backe to him the one halfe of his monie, a reteined the other to himselfe.

Pozeover, to increase the suspicion which men had of his infidelitie, it is written, that he caused a disput King william tation to be kept betwirt the Jewes & the childrens, suspected of that his fathers treatures were fone confumed, by 20 promiting that if the Jewes overcame the chaillians inflocune. in argument, he would be a Jew: but the Jewes being ourcome, and receiving the foile, would not confesse their errors, but alleaged, that by factions (and not by reason)they were put to the worse. How beit, what opinion socuer he had of the Jewes faith, it appeareth by writers that he doubted in manie Kadmenus. points of the religion then in credit. For he Aiched not to protest openlie, that he believed no faint could profit anie man in the Lords fight, and therefore neither would be not anie other that was wife (as he affirmed) make intercession, either to Peter, or faing to to anie other for helpe.

He was of flature not lotall as the common lost Dis Cature. of men, red of haire, whereof he toke his furname whereof he Kufus, sombhat big of bellie, and not readie of tong, toke his turspeciallie in his anger, for then his otterance was fo hindered, that he could fearfelie thew the conceits of his mind: he died without issue, and bled concubines all the daies of his life. I find that in apparell he loued to be gaie and gorgeous, a could not abive tohane anie thing (for his wearing) ckémico at a small valure. Wherevoon it came to passe on a morning, when he should pull on a new paire of hose, wil. Malm. he asked the grome of his chamber that brought them to him what they coff. Their shillings faith be; They thou hope for (faid the king) doth a paire of hole 32 of the Chillings price become a king to weare. Go thy waies, and fetch me a paire that thall cost a ? marke of filter. The grome went, and brought him diverse of them to forfale Chiff, and returne to their 50 another paire, for the which he paid fearfelie so much , as for the first. But then the king asked what they food him in, he told him they coff a marke : and then 🤒 was he well fatilitied, and faid; Pea marie, thefe are more fit for a king to weare, and to brew them boon his legs.

In this kings dates John bishop of Welles tob ned the monasterie of Bath buto his fee, and re- Couentrie pairing the fame monasterie, began to inhabit there church winco in the piece 1094. The church of Couentric was in to the fee of like fort someo unto the see of Chester by Robert by Chester, thop of that dioceste. Wolfran bishop of Worcester died about the same time, and Anselme haning purchases bulles of pope Patchall, wherein was contesned an admonition buto hing William to delice from his greenous oppetting of the church, and to as mend his former doings, was now on his returne folvards England, and by the wate heard of the kings death. Dugh earle of Chester in this kings dates builded the abbete of Chester, and precured Anfeline (afterwards archbishop of Canturburie) to come over from Normandie, that he might direct the fame abbeie, and place futh religious persons as were necessarie and convenient for lo good a founda-

3 pactie beuis

cc bring mourd faid, What thou dunghill knaue, thald

Long it was per Anselme would come over, bis cause he doubted to be had in suspicion of an anu bitious desire in sæking to be made archbishop of Canturburie. Forit was talked that if he went o ner into England, he Mould furelie be elected before he returned into Pomandie. But at length so it chanced, that the foresaid Hugh earle of Chester fell ficke, and despairing of life, sent with all speed to Arv felme, requiring him most instantlie to come over to him lieng in extremitie of fickenesse; adding, that if he halfed not the loner, it would be to late, whereof he would after repent him. Then Anleime, for that he might not faile his frænd in luch necellitie, came over, and gave order to the abbeie, according as it famed best to him for the establishment of religion there.

Thus farre William Rufus."

Henrie the first, yoongest sonne to VVilliam the Conquerour.

Anno Reg. 1. 1 100.

Enrie the your gest sonne to Willi am the first, brother to Rufus latelie des parted, the first of that name that ru led hære in England, for hisknowledge in god lites rature furnamed 10 Beauclerke, was admitted king by the whole affent of the loads and commons, and began his reigne over England the first of August, in the yeare after the creatson of the world 1067, after the birth of our Sautour 1100. and 44. of the emperour Henrie the fourth, Palchall the second then governing the see of Kome, which was about the 51. years of Philip the first of that name king of France, and in the beginning of the reigne of Edgar king of Scotland. This king was 20 Gerualius Do- consecrated and crowned at Wellminster, the fift daie of August, by Thomas archbishop of Porke, and Daurice bishop of London, bicause at that time Anfelme archbishop of Canturburic was exiled. This prince had aforehand trained the people to his humor and beine, in bringing them to thinke well of him, and to conceive a marvellous evill opinion of his brother duke Robert, persuading them mozeover, that the faid duke was likelie to proue a Charpe and rigorous governour, if he once obteined the crowne 30 and dominion of the land. Moreover, becaused to be reported for a certeine truth, that the same Robert was alreadic created king of Jerusalem. And there fore confidering that the kingdome of Paleffine (as the rumogran) was of greater revenues than that of England, there was no cause thy they shuld state for him, who would not willinglie leave the greater for the letter. 15y which meanes the Pobilitie and Commons were the somer persuaded to becline from the election of the said Robert, and to receive 40 his brother Henrie for their lawfull king tho on the other five ceased not to promise mountaines, till his enterpile toke effect; and then at leifure paied some of them with molhils: as by the fequele of the fo rie thall more at large awere.

This Henrie therefore comming thus to the

crowne, confidered furthermoze with himfelfe, that hereafter, when his eldest brother Liobert Mould returne, and understand how the matter was brought about, he would thinke himfelfe to have had much wrong, and beine verie euilidealt withall, fith that as well by birthright, as also by agræment made with his brother William Rufus, he ought of right to be preferred, and therebyon would not faile but make earnest claime against him. Wherefore per he The king id thould come home out of the holie land (where he then beth to win remained) the king fludied by all possible meanes favour. how to gratifie all the fates of his realme, to plant in their harts some good opinion of him. And first of all he reformed such things as his brother had left verie petudiciall to the estate of the church, letting the same fre thich before was fore oppelled. And furthermoze, somithat to relicue the comon-wealth, Simon Dun. he promifed to restore the laives of god king Ed Hen. Hunt. ward, and to abolith or amend those which by his far Mauch. Paris. ther and brother were alreadic ordeined to the hurt a prejudice of the old ancient liberties of the realme of England. He renoked Antelme the archbilhop of Antelme cal-Canturburie out of exile, who fled (as per have led home. heard) to anoto the weath of king William. Poze Wil. Malmoner, he placed in the fee of Witnesser, one William Gifam Gifford, a graue and discreet person, and also or ford bishop of beined monkes of honest reputation to be abbats in winchester. certeine abbeis which had beene long void and in the Hen. Hunt. hands of William his brother: in like maner he remitted certeine paiments which his brother and predecessour had caused to be raised by wate of tares and customes. Besides this, on the 8, date of September, he committed Kafe bishop of Durham to Bafe bishop of the Tower of London, by whose lews counsell his mitted to the faid brother being feduced, had in his life time done Cower. manie oppetitions to his people. He ordeined also Simon Dun. that one length of measuring thould be bled through The first or this realine, which was a pard, appointing it to be cut pard measure. after the length of his owne arme . Panie other Wil, Malm. things he redietted, to the contentation and commoditie of his subjects, tho gave God thanks that he had in such wife delivered them out of the hands of cruell extactioners.

After he had thus brought the common-wealth in Wil Malo. to god estate, he consulted with his Pobilitie, where Polydor. he might bell get him a wife, and thereby leave bre

Chot

Du

Matth.Paris.

Wil.Thorne.

robernensis.

lawfull companie keeping with concubines: which demand was not militico at all. Herebpon they confidered that Cogar king of Scotland had a lifter named spand, a beautifull ladie, and of vertuous conditions, the was a professed nunne in a religioushouse, to the end the might avoid the frames of the world, and lead hir life in more fecuritie after hir fathers occeasie. This gentlewoman, notwithstane ding hir bow, was thought to be a meet bedfellow for the king: wherefore he fent ambassadors to hir brother Cogar, requesting that he might have hir in mariage. But the refuting superfittiouslie at the first to breake his professed bow, would not heare of the offer: wherewithall king Henrie being the mos; inflamed, fent new ambassadors to moue the case in more earnest fort than before, in so much that Edgar, upon the declaration of their ambalfage, for the abbette of the house (where then the a bode) in hand to perfuade hir, who to effectuallie and dinceffic telling hir how necessarie, profitable, tho morable the fame thould be both to hir countrie and kinred did so premaile at the last, that the young ladie granted willinglic to the mariage. Herebpon the was transported into England, and wedded to the fundate, being the eleventh of Povember. 4 It thould frome by Eadmerus, that the was never nume, but onelie beiled by hir mother, and placed amongs numes against hir will (as she protested to 30 the whole world) at such time as archbishop Anselme refused to solumnise the mariage betwirt them, till that doubt were cleared, and the occasion remoued, therebpon cuili disposed men would have surmised ilfanozeolie, and reported the worth. Howbeit whe ther the were professed, or veiled onelie, loth the was to consent at the first (as partlie ye have heard) but after that the was coupled with the king in mariage, hing, the caused the archbilhop Anselme to crowne hir quæne on S. Wartins daie, which fell byon a the promed a right obedient wife.

About this lealon the archbilhop of Alenna came 40 ouer into England with the popes authoritie (as he pretended) to be legat over all Briteine, which was Acange newes buto England, and greatlie wonder red at (as Eadmerus faith) of all men. Foz ithad not beene heard of in England before that time, that any person thous supplie the popes rome, except the arche bilhop of Canturburie. And so he departed as he came, for no man received him as legat, neither did he exercise anic legantine authoritie. Pot long after, the king sent ambassadours to Rome, about a suit which he had against the archbishop Anselme for that he denied not onelie to do him homage, but also would not confecrate fuch bishops and ecclesiasticall gouernours as he bidertoke to inneff. Touching which matter no small trouble arose, as hereafter

In the meane time, Robert the kings elder bios ther, returning out of the holie land, came into Hormandie: for affer he had advertisement of the death of his brother Rufus, and that his punger bros 60 ther was crowned king of England, he was great: lie displeased in his mind, and meant with all speed to all aic if he might recover it out of his hands.

Talle read, that when duilifian princes had wone Duke Kobert Hierusalem, they met togither in the temple to chuse chosen king of a king for the government of that citie and count frie in which connent duke Robert was chosen beforcall the relique to be king there, by reason of a miracle (as some have lest recorded) torought by quent thing of a taper, and the sudden kindling thereof a gaine, as he held the fame in his hand, flanding in the church before the altar amongst other on Caster even: to as thereby it Mould be thought he was appointed among all the residue to be king, and so was nominated. But he having his mind more inclined Polydor. to England, refused to take the charge byon him: therebpon after that date he never greatlie prospered in anie bulinelle which he toke in hand; as fome dw gather. Other authors of god credit, which have written that voiage into the holie land, make no mention of anie fuch matter, but declare, that God frate of Bolongne was by the generall consent of all the princes and capiteins there cleace king, as in the description of that botage more plainelie appereth. But now to returne from whence I have digreffed.

When the fame was blowne into England, that Anno Reg.2. duke Robert was returned into Pomandie, and that the people had received him for their duke with great triumph and top: there were diverse which des firing innovations, deliting in alterations, and bee. ing wearie of the quiet government of king Hene rie. wzote letters into England to the duke, figmis Duke Robert eng to him, that if he would make half, and come to is folicited to recover the realine out of his brothers hands (the vertical foliam) to claim surped it by an uniust title) they would be readie to the crewne. ato him with all their power. Peretvithall the duke being readie of his owne accord to this enterprife, was not a little inflamed, and grew more earnest to make half about this bulinelle: in formuch as, where he would not forme at the first to esterme greatlie of the offer made to him by the Englishmen, who had thus written over buto him (blaming generallie all the English Pobilitie, for that while he was abroad in the service of the chistian common-wealth as gainst the infidels, they would suffer him to be in such wife destrauded of his fathers inheritance, by his brother, through their butruth and negligence) yet although he meant to delaie the matter, and thought it rather better to diffemble with them for a Wil. Malm. time, than to commit the fuccesse of his affaires and Simon Dun. person to their inconstancie; thoutlie after being fet on fire, and fill incouraged by the perfuation of Rafe bishop of Durham (who by a wonderfull wille shift, about the first of Achquarie had broken out of prie In the Kallot fon) with all speed possible he gathered an armie, pur R. Houe. poling out of hand to palle ouer with the same into Hen. Hune. England, and to hazard his right by dent of fwood, Polydor, which was thus by plaine inturie most wickedie deteined from him.

Bing Penrie in the meane time bnderstanding his meaning, affembled like wife his power, and rige ged fwith a great number of thips, appointing them to lie in a readincise to stop his brothers comming to land if it might be. We himselfe also lodged with his maine armie nære the towne of Hallings, to give him battell if he landed thereabouts.

Duke Robert also meaning to let foreward, fent certeine of his thips before, to chose some connents ent place where he might land with his armie: with thips by chancefell into the danger of the kings nanie, but yet absteining from battell, they recovered the wind, and returned backe to the duke, fignifieng from point to point how they had sped in this votage. The duke as he was of a bold courage, and of so gentle a nature that he believed he thould win their god wils, with thom he foould have any thing to do, passed forward, and approching to the kings nauie, bled such mild persuations, that a great part of the fouldiours which were about in the kings Duke Robert hips, submitted themselnes but ohim, by whose consporting arriage at Hoselmouth. duct he arrived in Postsmouth haven, and there lan Simon Don, ded with his holf, about the begining of August. Pow Wil. Malm. then he had refled a few daies a refreshed his men, Hen.Hunt, he toke the way towards Winchester, a great number of people flocking unto him by the way.

The king having knowledge as well of the arrinall of his entinies, as also of the revolting of his D.j.

(The archbi=

Mop of Ulien=

na the popes

De is not receinediogle=

legat.

Rin.Higd.

the

Wil.Malm. Simon Dun. Hen. Hunt.

Hen. Hunr. Wil Thorne. Matth. West. Geruafius Dorober.

7 I O 2

Simon Dun. Robert de 23 clefine carle of Shecws: barie.

Diaffo; d malted.

Arundell ca: Mell belieged.

152togenouth belieged.

Anno Reg.3.

The earle of banufhed the reaime.

I fonod of billiops. Eadmerus. fubieds, raffed his campe, and came to lodge nære unto his enimies, the better to perceive what he ats tempted and purposed to do. They were also in maner readic to have foined battell, when divers poble men that owight god will to both the brethren, and abborred in their minds to bunnaturall discord, began to entreat for peace, which in the end they concluded bpon, conditionallie that Penrie (who was borne after his father had conquered the realme of England) thould now entop the fame, pælding and pais 10 eng yærelie buto duke Robert the summe of itj. P. marks. Provided that whole hap of the two it Chuld be to furnine or outline, he should be the other right and lawfull heire, by mutuall agrament. Conditis onallie also, that those English or Pormans, with had taken part either with the king or the duke, Mould be pardoned of all offentes that could be laid but o them for the same by either of the princes. There were twelve Poble men on either part that receiment, which being concluded byon in this fort, duke Robert, tho in his affaires thefved himselfe moze credulous than inspicious, remained with his brother here in England till the feast of S. Wichaell, and then thewing himselfe well contented with the composition on, returned into Posmandie. In the second yeare of this kings reigne, the Dukne was delinered of hir daughter Mand og Pathilo, fo called after hir owne name, tho afterward was emprelle, of thom pwthall heare by Gods grace anon in this historie. 30 Mic king being now rid of forcen trouble. was shortlie after disquieted with the seditious attempts of Robert de Belefine earle of Shielosburie, sonne to Hugh before named, who fortified the callell of Bridgenorth, and an other castell in Wales at a place called Caircone, and furnished the towne of Sheewlburie, with the callels of Arundell Tickes hill (which belonged to him) in most substantiall maner. Pozeouer he lought to win the fauour of the Wielihmen, by whole aid he purpoled to defend him 40 profession againe. felse against the king in such volawfull enterprises as he ment to take in hand. But the king having an inheling thereabout he went, Araitwaies proclai med him a traitor, imerespon he got fuch Welfmen and Posmans together as he could convenientlie come by, with inhom and his brother Arnold, he entred into Staffordhire, which they forraied and was Ned excéedinglie, bringing from thence a great botte of beatts and cattell, with some prisoners, whom they led forthwith into Wales, where they kept them, 50 felues as in a place of greatest safetie.

The king in the meane time with all convenient spied railed a power, first besieging the castell of A= rundell, and then planting diverse bastillions before it, he departed from thence, and fending the biffey of Lincolne with part of his armie to beliege Ticker hill, he himselfe went to Bridgenorth, which he enuis roned about with a mightie armie made out of all parts of his realme: fo that what with gifts, large promifes, and fearefull threatnings, at the last heal: 60 lured to his five the fickle Welthman, and in such wife wan them, that they abandoned the earle, and toke part against him. Therewpon the king within 30. daies subdued all the folunes and castels (which he held out of his hands, and banished him the relme, Shrewfburie and thoutlie after confined his brother Arnold for his traitozous demeanour bled against him, whereby their attempts were brought unto an end.

> After this, at the feath of faint Pichaell, Anselme archbishop of Canturburie held a councell at West. minster, whereat were present the archbishop of Porke, the bishops of London, Winchester, Line colne, Wocceffer, Cheffer, Bath, Porwich, Roches fer, and two other bilhops lattic elected by the hing, namelie, Salisburie and Hereford: the bithop of Ex. Abbatos pais ceffer was ablent by reason of sicknesse.

At this councellog fornod, divers abbats and pri ors, both French and English, were deprined of their promotions and benefices by Antelme, bicaufe they had come but o them other wife than he pretended to stand with the decrees of the church; as the abbats of Perfoz, Romfey, Taucstocke, Peterbozow, Hodole: Matth. Park ton, Burie, and Stoke, the prior of Clie, and others. The cheefest cause of their deposing, was, for that they The cause had received their investitures at the kings hands.

Divers constitutions were made by authoritie of Hen. Hunt. this councell, but namelie this one.

1 That press should no more be suffered to have Eadmerus, wives, which vector (as faith Henrie of Huntingdon) Mariage of fremed to some verie pure, but to some againe verie prefix forbide dangerous, least whilest diners of those that courted ben. to professe such cleannesse and puritie of life as palfed their powers to observe, might havilie fall into ued corporatiothes for performance of this agree 20 most horrible uncleannesse, to the high visionour of chaillianitie, and offense of the Almightie.

2 That no spirituall person thould have the admit Decres infis nistration of any tempozall office of function, not sit tuted in this in judgement of life and death.

3 That prests should not haunt alchouses, and Against further, that they fould weare awarell of one may prefix that ner of colour, and those affer a comelie fathion: for hunters. a little before that time, preces vico to go verie vic samelie.

That no archdeaconries thould be let to farme. Archdeacon-That everie archdeacon thould at the least re- rus. ceive the orders of a deacon.

6 That none hould be admitted to the orders of Subdeacons. a subdeacon, without profession of chastitic.

7 That no prests sonnes should succeed their fas Prests sons. thers in their benefices.

8 That monks and pickles which had forfaken their orders (for the love of their wives) thould be ercommunicated, if they would not returne to their

9 That prefis thould we are broad crownes. o That precis chould weare broad crownes. Practs to 10 That no titles should be given but to the wear crowns.

II That no benefices thoulo be bought or folo. 12 That no new chamels should be builded with, 13cm chapets out consent of the bishop.

13 That no church thould be confecrated ercept provision were first had to the maintenance of it and of churches. the minister.

14 That abbats should not be made knights Abbats. or men of war, but thould flepe & eat within the precinct of their owne houses, except some necessitie moved them to the contrarie.

15 That no monks thould insopne penance to Donks. any man without licence of their abbat, and that abbats might not grant licence, but for those of whose foules they had cure.

16 That no monks thould be godfathers, noz nuns godmothers to any mans chile.

17 That monks thould not hold and occupie any Farmes. farmes in their hands.

18 That no monks thould receive any parlona, Parlonages. ges, but at the bishops hands, no; should spoile those which they did receive in fuch wife of the profits and revenues, that curats which Mould serve the cures might thereby want necessarie provision for themfelues and the fame thurthes.

19 That contrads made betwere man and wo Contrads. man without witnesses concerning martage thould be boid, if either of them denied it.

20 That luch as did weare their heare long hould wearing of be neverthelesse so rounded, that part of their eares haire.

21 That kinsfolke might not contract matrimos ozs tepzined.

why they wer deprined. Sim.Dun.

Wither. Wenefices.

Confecration

Buriall.

nic within the leventh degree of confanguinitie.

22 That the bodies of the dead thould not be bus ried but within their parifhes, leaft the preef might lose his dutie.

Fond wor shipping of men.

23 That no man thould boon some new rath denotion give reucrence or honour to any dead bodies, fountaines of water, oz other things, without the bis Mors authoritic, which hath beine well knowne to have chanced heretofore.

24 Chat there should be no more buting and fel 10 ling of men vied in England, which was hitherto accustomed, as if they had beene kine or oren.

 $_{25}$ That all such as committed the filthie sinne of Sodomitrie Chould be accurated by the decree of this councell, till by penance & confession they should ob. teine absolution. Provided that if he were a prest or any religious person, he thould lose his benefice, and be made uncapeable of any other ecclefiafficall pres ferment if: he were a late man, he should lose the prerogative of his estate. Provided also that no religio 20 ous man might be absolued of this crime, but at the bishops hands.

The curffe to beread euerie fundate.

26 That enerie fundaie this curste should be read in eucrie durch.

The king also caused some necessarie opdinances to be deutled at this councell, to move men to the leading of a god and byzight life.

S.Bartholo= mewes by Smithfield. founded. Smithfield 1ometimes a common laic= of execution.

Anno Reg.3:

Polydor.

Roweth bis

Matth. Paris.

thoppiks.

About the third years of B. Henries reigns, the foundation of faint Bartholometus by Smithfield was begun by Kaier one of the kings mulicians (as some write) who also became the first prior thereof. In those daies Smithfield was a place where they late all the exoure and filth of the citie. It was also the appointed place of erecution, where felons and o ther malefactors of the lawes did lufter for their mil

In this third yeare of king Henries reigne the quene was belivered of a sonne called William.

Then the earle of Shrewelburie was banished (as pe have heard) the state of the realme seemed to be 40 reduced into verie god order and quietnelle: fo that king Henrie being advanced with god successe in his affaires, was now in no feare of danger any maner of waie. Holobeit herein he somewhat oilpleased the cleargie: for leaning but o his princelie authoritie, he toke boon him both to nominate bis thops, and to inuest them into the possession of their les : amongs whom was one Kemelio, bishop of Hereford by the kings ordinance. This Remelid or Remeline did afferwards religne that bilhopake to 50 the king, bicanse he was persuaded he had greatlie offended in receiving the same at a tempozall mans hands.

Trulie not onelie king Penrie here in England, but also other princes and high potentates of the temporaltie about the same season, challenged this right of inuciting bishops and other cleargie men, as a thing one buto them and their predecellors, with out all prescription of time, as they alledged, which caused no small debate betwirt them and the spiritu- 60 altie, as in that which is written thereof at large by others may more easilie awere.

Anfelme refu= feth to confe= crate the hi=

Holobeit Anselme the archbishop of Canturburie more earnest in this case than any other, would shops inuefted not admit not consecrate such bishops as were nominated and invested by the king, making no account of their innestiture: and further he toke bpon him to admonish the la, not to biolate the facred laives. rites and ceremonies of chaiftian religion to latelie decred concerning those matters. But so far was the king from giving any eare to his admonitions, that he flood the more Aiffelie in his chalenge. And where Thomas the archbishop of Porke was not long before departed out of this transitorie life, he gave that benefice then boid to one Gerard, a man of Gerard innegreat wit, but (as some waiters report) more best feb arthbirous of honor than was requifite for his calling, and those of yeake. willed him in despite of Anselme to consecrate those bilhops whom he had of late innested. This Berard therfore obcieng his commandement, did confecrate w. S. fford bis them all, William Diffoed bilhop of Winchester fhop of winercepted; who refused to be consecrated at his hands, chester, therebpon he was deprined and banished the reline. Matth. Paris. The archbishop Anselme also was quite out of far Polydor. uour, for that he ceased not to speake against the E. in reproving him in this behalfe, till time that the king was contented to referre the matter to pope Walchall, and to fand to his decree and determination Polydor. on:alfo, that fuch as he had placed in any billyoppike, Chould have licence to go to Kome to plead their caules, whither he promised shortlie to send his ambassa: bours, and so he did: appointing for the purpose, Hers bert bilhop of Poswich, and Robert bilhop of Lich field, being both of his printe councell, and William Anno Reg.4. Marlewaff, of whom mention is made before, who fent to Rome. went on their waie and came to Rome, according to their commission.

After them also folowed Anselme archbishop of Anselme go-Canturburie, Gerard archbilhop of Porke, & Will cth also to liam the elect of Wlinchester, whom the pope receis Rome. ued with a courteous kind of intertemement. But Anselme was highlie honozed above all the residue, whose diligence and seale in defense of the ordinans ces of the lie of Rome, he well inough understwo. The amballadours in like maner declaring the effect of their mellage, opened but othe pope the ground of the controversie begun betweene the king and Am felme, & with good arguments went about to proue the kings cause to be lawfull. Thon the otherside, Anselme and his partakers with contrarie reasons fought to confute the fame. Wher byon the pope de= clared, that fith by the lawes of the church it was decreed, that the polletion of any spiritual benefice, obteined otherwise than by meanes of a spirituall person, could not be good or allowable; from thences forth, neither the king nor any other for him, should challenge any futh right to amerteine onto them.

The kings amballadours hearing this, were fom, that troubled in their minds : therebpon William Eadmerus. Marlewalt burft out and faid with great behemen. The faieng of cie euen to the popes face: Whatfoeuer is or may be wil. warle spoken in this maner to or fro, I would all that be wast to the present should well binderskand, that the king my pope. mailler will not lose the investitures of churches for " the loffe of his whole realme. Unto which words Pal The poped thall himselfe replieng, said buto him againe : If (as answer to him thou faiect) the kingthy matter will not forgo the ,, inucliture of churches for the lotte of his realine, " know thou for certeine, and marke my words well, ,, A speake it before God, that for the ransome of his ,, head, pope Paschall will not at any time permit that he thall enioie them in quiet. At length by the adulle of his councell, the pope granted the king certeine privileges and cultomes, which his predecellours had bled and enioted: but as for the investitures of bis thops, he would not have him in any wife to meddle withall: pet did he confirme those bishops whom the king had alreadie created least the refusal should be occation to lowe any further discord.

This butinette being in this maner of dered, the ambassadours were licenced to depart, who reces uing at the popes hands great rewards, and Gerard the archbishop of Dozke his pall, they shortlie after returned into England, declaring buto the king the popes decrée and fentence. The king being fill other, wife perfuaded, and loking for other newes, was nothing pleased with this matter. Long it was yer he would give over his claime, or pield to the popes judgement, till that in processe of time, ouercome with the earnest fute of Anselme, he granted to obcie the popes order herein, though (as it thould appeare) right fore against his will.

D.tf.

In this meane time, the king had leized into his

Wil.Malm.

The pope

king,

Engiterh cour=

teonflig to the hands the polletions of the archbilhop of Canturbus rie and banished Anselme, so that he stated at Lions in France for the space of one yeare and foure moneths, during which time there palled manie letters Denvie in verie courtoous maner, exhorting him to call Anselme home againe and to release his claime to the investitures of bishops, wherebuto he could have no right, lith it apperteined not to the office of any temporall magistrate: adding furthermore, if the king wonlogive over that ungodie and viurped custome, that he would thew such freendlie favour in all things, as by the lufterance of God in any wife he might be able to performe, and further would receine not onelie him, but also his rong sonne Wil- 20 liam (whom latelie it had pleased God to send him by his vertuous wife quæne Wand) into his pro-

In one of the letters which the faid pope wrote bnto Anselme (after that the king was contented to renounce the inuestitures aforesaid) he willed Anfelme, according to the promife which he had made to affoile as well from finne as from penance due for the fame, both the king and his wife quæne Paud, 30 with all fuch persons of honour as in this behalfe had travelled with the king to induce him to be agreed tection so that who so ever ow hurt either of them, thould be thought to hurt the holie church of Kome.

able to his purpose.

1104 The carle of Mellent.

Anno Reg. 4.

The R.per= fuaded to re= Utiture of pic= latg. Eadmerus.

Duke Robert England to bilit his bzo= ther.

Wil.Malm. -Factious per= fons practile to fet the two bzethzen at bariance.

The earle of Moztaigne.

Pozeouer, the earle of Wellent, and Richard de Rivers (who had counselled the king to frand foutlie in the matter, and not to give over his title of fuch inuestitures, fish his ancestoes had vsed them so long a time before his daies, by reason whereof, in renoun. cing his right to the fame, he thould do a thing greatflic) were now earnest labourers to agree the king and the pope, in so much that in the end the king was nounce his ti- persuaded by Anselme and them to let go his holo. tleto the mues religning the investitures with state and ring; notwithstanding that, he reserved the right of elections. and fuch other rotalties as otherwise apperteined to to his maicitie, to that fuch bilhops as had done homage to the king, were not disabled thereby, but qui etlie permitted to receive their jurisdictions.

About this time Robert duke of Pozmandie came 50 commeth into into England to le his brother: who through the lugred words and sweet enterteinment of the king, rekaled the pærclie tribute of 3000. markes, which he Chould have had out of the realine opon agreement (as before ye have heard) but thæfelie inded at the request of the queene, being instructed by hir husband how the thould deale with him that was knowne to be fre and liberall, without any great confideration what he presentlie granted.

ced himselse with his brother and sister, he returned into Pozmandie, where Mortlie after he began to repent him of his follie, in being fo liberall as to release the foresaid tribute: where opon he menaced the king, and openlie in his reproch faid that he was craffilie circumuented by him, and flatlie comened. Diverse in Posmandie desired nothing more than to fet the two brethren at fquare, and namelie Robert de Beleime earle of Shelufburie, with William earle of Dortaigne: these two were banished the realine of England. The earle of Shiewesburie for his revellious attempts (as before you have heard) and the earle of Mortaigne less the land of his owne willfull and flubboane mind, criling himselfe onelie byon hatred which he bare to the King. For being not contented with the carledome of Doztaigne in flox mandie, and the carledome of Cornewall in England, he made fute also for the earledome of Bent, which his bucle Doo sometime held. Now bicause he was not onelie denied of that fute, but also by order of lawe had certeine parcels of land taken from him, which he wrongfullie deteined, he got him into Pozmandie, and there made war both against those plaand incliages to and fro. The pope also wrote to king 10 ces which the king held, and also against other that belonged to Richard carle of Cheffer, who was then Richard earle buder the kings tuition and government by reason of Thefter. of his minozitie.

The threatning words of duke Robert comming at the last to king Henries eares, caused him forthwith to conceive berie fore displeasure against the duke, in so much that he sent over a power into Po? A power of mandie, ubich finding no great reliffance, did much mententinto hurt in the countrie, by fetching and carteing spoiles Animandie. and preces. Againe, the Pormans rather favoured than fought to hinder the enterpile of king Denric, bicause they saw how duke Robert with his folich prodigalitie and budiscrét liberalitie had made a wate all that belonged to his estate; so that of the whole duchie of Posmandie, he had not any citie oz towne of name left in his owne possession, Koan onelie ercepted, which he also would have alienated, if the citizens would have confented to his fond mo: Gemeticentis, Pow king Henrie hearing of the good successe of his men, palled ouer himselfe some after with a migh The k. palleth tie armie, and with little adm twhe Eureur of (as o- over to 1920)= thershaue) Baieur and Caen, which cities when he Anno Reg. 6. had furnithed with fufficient garifons of men, he ree Simon Dun, passed the sea into England, bicause the winter ap Gemeticensis, prothed, and the wether wared troublesome for such Polydor. as late in the field. Herebpon duke Kobert confides ring how bnable he was (by reason that his people failed him at need) to relift king Henrie, lith the Beis lie prefudiciall to his rotall estate and princelie maies 40 tans also, and they of Aniou, toke part with the faid king, he thought good to late armour alide, and to passe over into England, to entreat with him by way of brotherlie amitic, in full hope by that meanes to avoid this present danger. But at his arrivall here, he learned how the king his brother as then Anno Reg.7. was at Posthampton: wherefore he hacked thither, and comming to him, made earnest sute for peace, beseiching the king in respect of brotherlie love to grant the same; or if it were that he regarded not the goodwill of his naturall brother, to consider at least wife what apperteined to his accustomed gentlenesse and to thinke with himselfe that warre betwirt beetheen could not be mainteined without reproch, northat bictorie be honorable which was obteined against his ofone flesh. Wherefore he required him not to refuse peace, frænothip, and voluntarie beneuolence, fith he was now readie to render all that ever be had into his hands.

The king nothing moved herewith, but as one Pow having bone here a certeine time, and folas 60 that diffained to make a direct answer, murmured certeine things with himselfe, and turned away from the duke, as one that either by experience knew his brothers light and buffable mind, or as one that oc termined to be revenged of him even to the bitters most. Duke Robert also, abhorring and offerlie des The brethan testing this his brothers prive, streightsvaies reture depart in diff ned home, purpoling with himselfe to trie the hazard pleasure. of warre, fith he sawe no hope to be had in brotherlie love and amitie. Where open he provided for wars with all his power, læking ato from all places where he might get any, though the king his brother gaue k. Henric pal-thing more than to get him within his danger.

him small leisure thereto, who followed him inconsis sethinto Acc nentlie with a new suplie of souldiours, desiring no fue big byo-battell.

Some

Some affer, both the brethren approching niere togither, ed of them pitched their campe within the fight of other, preparing themselves to give battell They toine in with princelle from acha. The king furmounting the duke his brother in number, first bringeth forth his men in exder of battell, and Areightwaies the duke likewife, both being readie to trie the matter by dint of fword. Then the one pronoking the other, and the trumpets founding aloft, the conflict began. The kings fouldiers truffing to much in their owne 10 force, by reason of their great multitude, brake their arraic, and affailed their enimies on ech five berie disorderlie: but the Normans being wiselie ordes red and infirmace by their ouke, kept themselves close togither: so that the kings battell, which had without order fleet footh to affaile them, finding thurdie relitance, began now to refult or give backe: for not onelie duke Robert but also William earle of Mortaigne prealed forelward among their men, and fought valiantlie with their owne hands. Ther: 20 bpon the king, when he perceived how his men began to Chainke, cried byon them to Claie, and withall commanded his harliemen to breake byon the flanks of his enimies battell: which they did, with fuch violence that they disparkled the same, and caw fed the enimies to featter. Herewith also the hings formen, togither with the hossemen inuaded the Dormans afresh, tho neverthelesse resisted a tibile. till bring compassed about in maner on cuerie side, they began to five: as oftentimes it chanceth, when a 30 few driven in funder by a multitude, are affailed on all floes. The king then barring vanouished his aduerlaries, followeth the chale, and maketh great flanghter of them, though not without some loffe of his owner for the Pormans delpairing of fafetie, turned offentimes againe upon their purfuers.

The carle of Duke Robert and the earle of Mostaigne fighting Mograigne. most manfullie in the verie prease of their enimies. were taken, or (as other faic) betraied, and delivered Eadmerus. w.Criipine. liam Crispine, William Ferreis, Robert Cfout w.Aerins.

uille the cloer, with foure hundrethmen of armes. Robert De @= and to the number of 10.thousand formen were taken. As for the number that were flaine in this battell, there is none that declareth the certeintie: but yet it is reported by divers writers, that no one bats tell in those dates was forer fought, nor with greater blombigedeither in Posmandie, ozelsehhere.

Comericentis.

floutuille.

The number

The Mot-

gmlissi,

Gemeticensis theweth bræflie, that king Penrie was offended with his brother duke Robert, for all 50 enating the auchie of Popmandie his invertance, p for wasting his renounces with such riotous demeas nour as havied, so that he lest himselfe nothing but the citie of Roan, which he had not passed to have giv ura awaic also, if the citizens would thereto have granted their consent. The king (I saie) taking dif pleasure herewith, went over into Posmandie, and allaming a mightie power, first belieged Baieur, & then halfe deteroiong it, he toke it by force. After this he toke Caenallo, anothen belieged a caffelicalled 60 Teneraldy perfeining to the earle of Portaigne, during which fiege his brother Robert, and the faid earle of Postaigne came with a great multitude of people in hope to be renenged of the hing, and to thase himout of the countrie. But the punishment of God fell so byon them, that they were both taken, and manie of their frænds with them, as Robert de Effontuille, William de Crispine, and others, tho were brought before king Penrie as puloners. Thus divalmightic God grant buto the hing a notable victoric without bloodied, for he lost not a man: as for his adversaries, there died in the field not past ther feere persons.

This fainth also to agrae with that which Wil.

Malmesburie writeth: for he faith, that king Penrie with small adm brought into his hands duke Robert, who with a great trope of men came against him then longing nere the faid castell of Teneralbay. The earle of Postaigne was also taken, but the crie Robert de of Shelusburie escaped by flight, notivithit anding he Weichne. was apprhended, as he went about to practife some privie conspiracie against the king. This battell was fought (as the same Wil. Malme. assumeth) Che 27. of bpon a faturdaie, being the daie of S. Hichaell In September gloria, and (as may be thought) by the provident suoge chroice sport ment of God, to the end that Posmandie Hould be subdued buto England on that date, in the which 40. yeares passed, king William the Conquerour first fet fot on land at Hallings, when he came out of Posmandie to subdue England. Petther doth Sil Simon Dun, mon Dunelmensis varie in any thing from Gemeticenfis touching the conclution of this bulinelle, and the taking of duke Robert.

These wars being thus finished, and the countrie fet in quiet, which through the meere folie of buke 350 bert was wonderfullie impoverished, the bing received the keies of all the townes and castels that belonged either to the duke or the earle of Mor taigne, and furnished the fame with garifons to be kept for his behofe. Having thus pacified the court March. West. tric of Marmandie, he came to Becor Bechellowin, 1107 there are this hop Anselme then remained, who we the this reinediation of freends he received to favour agains, turneily home. and fending him over into England, immediatlie after followed himfelfe.

Duke Robert being also spoiled of his dominio Dako Bobert ons, lands and libertics, was sportlie committed to wishners the prion within the eastell of Cardiff in Calales, there eastell of Carabe remained about the surces of a course and their diff. he remained about the space of 26. yeares, and then died. He governed the duchie of Pormandie 19. Gemeticonsis, yeares, he was a perfect and expert warrioz, a com= parable with the best capiteines that then lived, had he beine somwhat more warie and circumspect in his Polydor. into their entinies hands; befide thich twaine, Will 40 affaires, and therewithall constant in his opinion. His worthic acts valiantlie and fortunatlic at the ued against the infidels, are notified to the world by manie and fundzie writers, to his high commendation and long lasting peacle. It is faid also, that he was after his taking once fet at libertie by king Henrie, and bound to fortweare the realme of Ongo land and Posmandie, being appointed to anoth with in the space of 40. daies, and twelve houses. But his cause he was perceived to practise somewhat against the king, he was efflones taken againe, and having his cies put out, committed to pulon, where finalities wome through age and griefe of mind, he ended his milerable life. The forme of banishing men out of the realme, was ordeined by Goward the Confes for, and remained as a law in vie till these our dates, for the beneat of them which fled to any church or of ther priviledged place, thereby to escape the punishment of death due for their offences. By a latter cur frome it was also devised, that they should beare a crosse in their hand, as a signe that they were pardoned of life, for the holie place lake where they fought for fuccour.

> But duke Robert (as it should appeare by that which others write) found no such fauour, saue onlie Maul. West, libertie to walke abroad in the kings forreds, parks, and chases neere the place where he was appointed to remaine; so that boon a date, as he was walking a broad, he got a bootle, and with all post hast rede his waic, in hope to have escaped: how beit his kéepers being adulfed thereof, followed him with hue and crie, and at length onertwise him in a unroow, where he had laid his horse up to the bellie in a quauemire. Then being brought backe, his kiepers kept him in close pillon, advertising the king of his demeanour:

Will, Malm.

D.III.

Micres

John Pike.

of Gite.

1107 therebyon he commanded that the light of his cies thould be put out, but fo, as the balles of them thould remaine bubloken, for the audiding of a notiome deformitie that other wife would enfue, if the glasse tunicles mould take burt.

In his returne out of the holie Land, he maried one Sibell, the earle of Connersans litter in Puglia, hir father hight Roger or Beffrey (as some bokes haue) and was nethue to Robert Supfhard duke of Pu afterward earle of Flanders, whereof (God willing) more shall be said hereafter.

Here must I leave onke Robert, and speake some what of Anselme the archbishop, who shoullie after his returne into England, received letters from pope Paschall, wherein Anselme was authorised to dispose and order things as should seeme to him most erpedient. Pow hipereas the greater and better part of the English clergie consisted of priests sonnes, he committed to his discretion the order to dispense 20 with them; namelie, that such as were of commendable life and fufficient learning, might be admitted to the ministerie, as the necessitie of time and state of the church Gould require. The pope also by the Richard prior same letters gane Anselme authoritie to absolve Ris chard the prioz of Olie, byon his fatisfaction prefers mitted, and to reflore him to the government of the priorie of Clie, if the king thought it convenient.

> About the calends of August, in this years 1107. the king held a councell of bifhops, abbats, and o 30 ther loods of his realme in his pallace at London, where in the absence of Anselme, the matter tow thing the investitures of thurthes, was argued byon for the space of three dates togither, and in the end bicause the pope had granted the homages of bishops and other prelats to the king, which his predecessor Urban had forbidden, togither with the investitu res; the king was contented to confent to the popes will in forbearing the same. So that when Anfelme was come, the king in preferee of him and a 40 great multitude of his people, granted and oedefned, that from thenceforth no bilhop nor abbat thould be inuested within the realme of England, by the hand either of the king or any late man: on the other five it was granted againe by Anselme, that no person eleacd into the melacie, should be deprived of his confectation for doing his homage to the king.

Thefe things thus ordeed, the churches which through England had bin long vacant, were provided of goof traffe or ring. About this time, Antelme confeces ted five bilhops at Canturburie in one day, archbi they William to the fee of Windesfer, Roger that was the kings chancellor to Salisburie. William Warlewast to Excesser, Remaline the quenes chancellos to Dereford, and one Urban to Glamor gan in Wales.

About this leason a great part of Flanders being decimed by an erundation of breaking in of the fea, a great number of Flemings came into Eng. 60 land, befreching the king to have some boid place as Alemings co: ligned them, wherein they might inhabit. At the first ring our in- they were appointed to the countrie lieng on the east part of the riner of Tweed: but within foure peres after, they were remoned into a comer by the fea tive in Walcs, called Penbrokeshire, to the end they might be a defense there to the English against the buquiet Wellhmen.

¶It Mould aweare by fome writers, that this multitude of filemings confished not of such onelie as came over about that time by reason their countrie was overflowne with the fea (as ye have heard) but of other also that arrived here long before, even in the daies of Milliam the Conquerour, through the frændship of the quæne their countriewoman, to thens which time their number to increased, that the realme of England was fore perfered with them: therebyonking Penrie denifed to place them in Denbrokeshire, as well to avoid them out of the o. ther parts of England, as also by their helpe to tame the bold and prefumptuous fiercenelle of the Wielth men. Which thing in those parties they brought berie well to passe: for after they were setled there, they glia, and by hir had iffue one some named William 10 valiantlie relifted their enimies, and made veric tharpe warres byon them, fometimes with gaine, and fometimes with loffe.

In the years 1108. Antelme held an other fynod or councell, whereat in presence of the king, and by A councell, the allent of the earles and barons of the realme it Sim.Dunel. was ordeined.

1 That pietes, deacons, and subdeacons should line chafflie, and keepe no women in their houses, era cept luch as were neere of kin to them.

2 That luch partis, deacons, and lubdeacons, as partis are contrarie to the inhibition of the councell holden at fequetred tro London, had either kept meir wines, or married of their wims. ther (of whom as Eadmerus faith, there was no small number) they should put them quite away, if they would continue ffill in their preffbod.

3 That neither the fame wines thould come to their houses, not they to the houses where their wines dwelled: but if they had any thing to fay to them, they thould take two or thee witnettes, and talke with them abroad in the first.

4 That if any of them chanced to be accused of breaking this ordinance, he fhould be driven to purge himselfe with six sufficient witnesses of his owne 624 der, if he were a piest : if a deacon, with foure : and if a subdeacon, with two.

5 That such prests as would forgo serving at the altar, and holie order (to remaine with their wines) thould be deprined of their benefices, and not luffered to come within the quire.

6 That such as contemptuouslie kept Will their wives, and prefumed to fay malie, if being called to fatilfaction, they thould neglect it, they thould then be ercommunicated . Within compalle of which fen and canons. tence all archdeacons and prebendarie canons were comprised, both touching the forgoing of their wo men, and avoiding of their companie, and also the punishment by the consures of the church, if they transgressed the ordinance.

7 That everic archdeacon Mould be Avorne, not ucrnoss, which were placed without any investiture 50 to take any monie for favouring any person transgredding these statutes: and that they should not sub Archdeacons fer any prefis, whome they knew to have wines, et to be fworne. ther to fay malle, 02 to have any vicars. The like oth thould a deane receive. Provided that fuch archoeas consordeanes as refused this oth, thould be deprived of their romes.

> 8 That prefix, who leaving their wives, would be content to ferue God & the altar, thould be suspended from that office, by the space of fortie bases, and be allowed to have vicars in the meane time to serve for them: and after, byon performance of their intoined penance by the bilhop, they might returne to penance.

In this meane time king Henrie being aduertis Polydor. fed of the death of Philip king of France, and not Philip king knowing what his some Lewes, surnamed Crassus of Fran. dead. might hapilie attempt in his new preferment to the crowne, failed ouer into Pomandie, to fee the coun. Lewis le gros trie in god order, and the tolunes, caffels, and fortrel fes furnished accordinglie as the doubtfull time required. Pow after he bad finished his businesse on that side, he returned into England, where he met with amballadours fent to him from the emperour Henric. The effect of whole mellage was, to require

1108 Anno Reg. 9, A fr

p

Ф ħ.

tc

bi

PĘ

E CO SIS

lcı

ín

Æ

31:

tet

Æ

ani

孔的

pag firQ

of 1 ben

mas

Archdeacons

Bi,of france.

Ran. Higd.

Polydor.

to England. haur places appointed them to in: habit.

Wil. Malm.

his

from the carperour.

Mand the kings daughter fianced bute the cutperour.

Eadmerus. The death of Gerard arch= buin, of yorke. Thomas the hings chap: leine fuccebed in that lee.

Anfelme.

teth to the 13ope.

The popeg answer to Jufelme.

The archbi= thop of yorke refuseth to come buta Canturbu: rie to be con: fecrated.

of Cantur= burie.

1019

Ambaffadors his daughter Paud in mariage bnto the faid em perour, wherebuto (though the was not then past five peares of age) he willinglie consented, and shewing to the amballadours great fignes of love, he caused the espoulate by waie of procuration to be folemni-3ed with great feats and triumphs. This being ended, he infered the amballadors honored with great giffs and princelie rewards to depart.

About this time Gerard archbishop of Pooke died, thom one Thomas the kings chapleine succeeded, ting for lacke of monie to furnish his tournie, and for other causes (as in his letters of ercuse, which he want to Anselme it doth appere) could not come to Canturburie for to be consecrated of him in so thort a time as was convenient. But Anseline at length admonished him by letters, that suithout delate he should dispatch and come to be consecrated. And The doubt of theras Anselme buderstwo that the same Thomas was purposed to send buto Rome for his pall, he doubted, least if the pope thould confirme him in his 20 feeby fending to him his pall, he would hapilie res fuse to make unto him profession of his one obedi-Incline wife ence. Therefore to prevent that matter, Anselme wrote to pope Palchall, requiring him in no wife to fend buto the nominated archbilhop of Porke his pall, till he had (according to the ancient cultomes) made profession to him of subjection, least some troublesome contentions might thereof arise, to the no fmall disquieting of the English church. He also adnertifed pope Pakhall, that bicause he permitted the emperour to innest bishops, and did not therefore ex communicate him, king Penrie threatened, that without doubt he would refume the investitures in to his hands, thinking to hold them in quiet as well as he; and therefore belought him to confider what his wifedome had to do therein with specteast that building which he had well created, should offerlie decaie, fall againe into irrecoverable ruine. For it. Henrie maketh diligentlie inquirie (faith he) what order you take with the emperour.

The pope receiving and peruling these letters. wrote againe unto Anselme a verie frænolie ans fwer concerning the archbilhop of Poske. And as for suffering of the emperour to have the inuciti tures, he fignified to him that he neither did noz would luffer him to have them: but that having borne with him for a time, he now ment verte Morte lie to cause him to seele the weight of the spirituall swood of S.Peter, which alreadie he had dealven out of the scaberd, therewith to strike if he did not the swner forfake his horrible errour a naughtic opinion.

There was another cause also that moucd Anfelme to doubt of the archbishop of Posks his measure ning, as after it appered. For being summoned to come and receive his confecration at Canturburie (as alreadic yee have heard) through counfell of the canons of Poske he refused so to do: bicause they informed him that if he fo did, it should be greatlie prejudiciall to the liberties of that lie, whose archbithop was of like authoritie in all things buto the archbishop of Canturburie, so that he was bound 60 onelie to fetch his confecration and benediction at Canturburie, but in no wife to acknowledge anie Lokeinthes, subiection buto that lie. & Forge must buberstand, page, and the that there was great stomaching betwirt the clergie first columne, of the two provinces, Canturburic and Porhe, about between The metropolitane prerogative; and ever as occasion mas of yorks ferued, and as then thought the ferned, and as they thought the fauor of the prince, or oportunitie of time might advance their quarels, they of Poske Nicked not to otter their græfes, in that (as they twice it) some insurine was offered them

> The archbishop of Posks being thus in Aruced by the canons of his church, lignified to archbiffop An-felmethe cause why he came not at his summons. The copie of a parcell whereof is here cremplified. Causam, qua differtur sacratio mea, quam nemo studiosius qu'am ego vellet accellerare, qui protulerunt, non desistunt corroborare. Quamobrem, quam periculosum & quam turpe sit, contra consensum ecclesia, cui prasici debeo, regimen ipsius inuadere, vestra discretio nouerit. Sed & quam sormidabile O quam sit euitandum, sub specie benedictionis maledictionem induere, oc: that is;

The cause thy my consecration is deferred which >> no man living would with to be done with more speed than I my selfe: those that have prolonged it, cease not to confirme. Therefore how dangerous '? and how dishonest it should be for me to inuade the government of that thurth, which I ought to rule, without colent of the same, your discretion right well binderstandeth. Pea and how dreadfull a thing it is, " and how much to be avoided to receive a curife, but 32 der colour of a bleffing, tc.

Anselme having alreadic written twice buto the faid Thomas archbithop of Poske about this matter, and now receiving this answer, could not be quiet in mind, and there byon taking adulce with certains bishops whom he called but o him, octermined to send two bishops but othe said Thomas of Pocke: and so the bishop of London (as deane to the archbishop of Canturburie) the bilhop of Rochester (as his house: to the archbihold chapleine) were sent to commune with him, shop of Canwho met them at his manour of Southwell, where turburie. they beclared to him the effect of their mellage : but Rochefter him he deferred his answer, till a messenger which he had chapleine. fent to the king (as then being in Pozmandie) was returned, and to without any full answer the bishops came backe againe.

Howbeit Chortlie after, there came to Canfurburie a mellenger on the behalfe of the archbis thop of Pocks, with letters inclosed buder the kings feale, by the tenour thereof the king commanded Anseline, that the consecration of the archbishop of Porke might flaie till the feast of Caster; and if he might returne into England by that daie, he promis fed (by the advice had therein of the bishops and barons of his realme) that he would let a direction betwirt them in all matters, thereof anie controvers fie had been moved herctofore: or if he could not returne so some, he would yet take such order, that brow therlie louc & concord might remaine betwirt them. When he that brought these letters required an ans fiver, Anteline antwered, that he would fignifie his Attout prefat, 50 mind to the king, and not to his maifter. Immediate lie therefore was the deane of Chichester sent over from Anselme, with a monte of Bechellouin to the king to informe him of all the matter, and to beforth his materie, by his authoritie to proutee, that no dif cord should rife to the dividing of the prefent state of the church of England. Authormose, whereas he had commanded him to grant buto Thomas the archbishop of Poste, a time of respit; he should take for certaine answer, that he would rather suffer himfelfe to be cut in paces, than to grant fo much as one Infelme fens hours space on the said Thomas of Porke, whome beth to the he knew alreadie to have fet himselfe vniustlie as king. gainst the ancient constitutions of holie fathers, and against the Lood himselse. The mestengers declared these things to the king, and brought wood backe as gaine at their returne, that the king had heard their medage with favourable mind, and promised by the power of God, to declare to the world that he coues

All this while Anseline was deterned with long Anseline field and greenous licknelle, and yet not forgetfull of the obstinate dealing of Thomas of Poeks, he weste letters but ohim, by vertue whereof he suspended him ted bnitic, and not any division in the church of Eng-

The billion of London beans The billiop of from exerciting all ratiozall function, till he had reformed his errour, lubinitted himfelfe to receive his bleffing, and acknowledged his subjection to the durch of Canturburie, as his predecessours Tho mas and Gerard had done, and before them other ancients, as cultome had preferibed. Thus he char ged him, byon paine of curling, except he would res nounce his archbiffops dignitie: for in so dwing he bid grant him licence to ble the office and ministerie of a priest (which before time he had taken byon him) 10 or else not.

In the fame letters he prohibited all the bishops within the precinct of the Ale of Britaine, that in no wife they should consecrate him, upon paine of curs fing: and if he Hould chance to be consecrated by any franger, that in no wife they thould (vnder the like paine)receive him for archbilhop, or communis cate with him in any condition. Guerie bishop also within the whole Ale of Britainehad a copie of these leters directed to him from Anfelme buder his feale, 20 commanding them to behave themselves therein ac coeding to the contents, and as they were bound by the subjection which they owght to the church of Tanturburie. The letters were dated alike in Warch.

Potwithstanding all this, byon the 21. of Aprill infuing . Anselme ended his life in the firteenth pere after his first preferment to that lie, being thriescore and lirtene peres of age. He was an Italian, borne in Piemont, nære to the Alpes, in a citie called Ao Ka,he was brought by by Lanfranke, and before he 30 was made arthbilhop, was abbat of the monasterie of Bechelleuin in Poznandie.

Matth. West. monorthe bythoppike of Clic. Eadmerus, of Wite.

Letters from

Anno Reg. 10.

Augusta Prætoriana,

Infelme.

About the same time was the bishops se of Clie The litteres ereced by the king, tho appointed one Parule to be the first bishop there, this before had beine bishop of Bango:. Cambiogethire was annexed to that fee, which bicaule it had of former time belonged to the læ of Lincolne, the king gave buto the bishop of Lincolne (as it were in recompense) the towne of Spalding which was his owne. The pitez of Clie, 40 Richard prioz named Aichard, defirous to honour himselfe and his house with the title of a bishops dignitie, procured the erection of that bithopake, first moving the king therein, and after perfuading with the billiop of Lincolne to grant his god will: but yet yer the matter was brought to perfection, this prior died, and so the faid Haruie enioted the rome: wherein the prover be twke place, that Dne soweth, but an other reapeth (as Polydor alledgeth it.) But to proced.

Polydor. Eadmerus. A legate from Kome,

Shortlie after the deceaste of Anselme, a Legat 50 that is; came from Kome, bringing with him the pall for the archbishop of Poske. Howbeit now that Anselme was dead, the faid Legat wift not what to do in the matter, bicause he was appointed to deliver the pall first and immediatlie buto Anselme, and further therein to deale (concerning the bestowing thereof) as figuld fáme god bnto him.

In the feath of Pentecost next insuing, the king returned from Posmandie, and held his court at London, where after the folemnitie of that feast, he 60 called an affemblie of the bishops, to understand what was to be done in the matter, for the confecration of the arthbishop of Posks. Here were the letters thewed which the archbithop Anselme had (a little beforchis death) directed but o enerie of the bilhops as before we have heard. Which when the earle of Hel lent had read, and binder flood the effect, he after what he was that durif receive any such letters without the kings affent and commandemente At length the bishops adming themselves what they had to do, required Samfon bishop of Worcester to veclare his opinion, two boldlie leake these woods; Although this coman, who is elected archbilhop, is my forme, whome es in times past I begot of my wife, and therfore ought to fæke his advancement as nature and worldlie respects might move me : yet am I more bound unto the church of Canturburie, my mother, which hath >> preferred me to this honor that Jow beare, and by the ministerie of a bishoplike office hath made me partaker of that grace, which it hath deserved to en- " ioy of the Lozd. Wherefore I would it Mould be no- >> tiffed buto you all, that I meane to obeie in cuerie, condition the commandement conteined in the lete ters of our father Anselme concerning the matter " thich you have now in hand . For I will never give ,, mine affent, that Thomas nominated archbifhop of Porke thall be confecrated, till he have professed his due and canonicall obedience touching his lubicate onto the church of Cantirburie. For I mp felse was mooth 50. present when my brother Thomas archbishop of imms, where Porke confireined both by ancient cuffomes and in you shall be uincible reasons, did professe the like subjection buto this matter archbishop Lansranke, and all his successours the determined.

archbishops of Canturburie.

These words thus ottered by the bilhop of TA32 The protesta cester, all the bishops returned togither, and come tion of the bis ming before the kings presence, boldlie confessed that shops to the they had received Anselmes letters, and would not king. do any thing contrarie to the tenour of the same. Whereat the earle of Pellent thoke the head, as though he ment to accuse them of contempt towards the king. But the king himselfe ottered his mind, and faid, that what soeuer other men thought of the matter, he suerlie was of the like mind with the bithops, would be loth to run in danger of Anselms curse. Therefore it was determined, that the elect of Porke should either acknowledge his subjection to the church of Canturburie, or else forgo his digniz tie of archbishop: where upon in the end he came to London, and there boon the 28. date of Wate was confecrated by Richard bishop of London, as beane to the le of Canturburie. Then having the profestion 02 protestation of his subjection to the lee of Canturburic delinered him binder feale, he brake on the fame, and read the writing in maner and forme fol-

Ego Thomas Eboracensis ecclesia consecrandus metropolita- The tenone of nus, profiteor subjectionem & canonicam obedientiam sancta the profession Dorobernensieccleste, en einstem eccleste primati canonice en architthop of lecto & confecrato, & successoribus sun canonice inthroni a- youke made tissalua fidelitate domini mei Henriciregis Anglorum, & buto the arch-salua obedientia ex parte mea tenenda, quam Thomas ante-bilhop of Cau-cessor mussancha Romana ecclesia ex parte sua professius est:

I Thomas to be confecrated metropolitane arch bishop of Pocke, professe my subjection and canonic call obedience unto the holie church of Canturburie, and to the primate of the same church canonicallic elected and confecrated, and to his fuccessours cano nicallie inthronized, faving the faith which I owe buto my souercigne lood Penrie king of the Englift, and faving the obedience to be holden of mp part, which Thomas my prodecessour professed on his behalfe buto the holie church of Rome.

When this writing was read, the bilhop of London toke it, and delinered it buto the prior of Care turburie, appointing him to keepe the same as a ter Aimoniall for the time to come. Thus was Thomas the archbishop of Poske consecrated, being the 27. in number that had governed that lie, who when he was consecrated, the popes Legate went buto Poske, and there delivered to the same archbishop the pall, where with when he was invested, he departed and returned to Rome, as he was appointed.

At the feath of Christmatte next inluing, the king held his court at London with great folemnitie. The archbishop of Poske psepared to have set the crowne on the kings head, and to have long malle afore him,

The earle of Mellent.

mamfon bis Thru of avox

FFROT

Ą

Ch Cin b

bicause the archbishops see at Canturburie was void. But the bishop of London would not suffer it, claiming as high deane to the le of Canturburie to crecute that office, and so did, leading the king to the twist buhops. church after the maner. Howbeit when they fould come to fit downe at dinner, there kindled a frife betwirt the fair two bishops about their places, bien cause the bishop of London, for that he had beene ozbeined long before the archbilhop, and therefore not reason of prioritie, pretended to have the oper seat. But the king perceiving their maner, would not heare them, but commanded them out of his house, and get them to dinner at their innes.

Anno Reg. 11. ricor heepe women,

The riner of Erent Dzied

Monfterg.

3 comet.

Wil. Thorne.

Matth West.

John Stow.

Robert the Bings bale

fon created tefter.

Fabian.

tanen.

mandic.

earle of Gio-

TITT

The citie of Contances

The king pai

About the same time the cause of the mariage of Piels pio- piels and their keping of women came againe in hibited to mas to question, so that by the kings commandement, they were more Areightlie forbioden the companie of women than before in Anfelmestime. For affer themselves a new libertie to do that which in his life time they were confireined fore against their willes to forbeare) deceived themselves by their hastie dealing. For the king being informed thereof, by the force of the ecclesiasticall lawes compelled them to stand to and obeie the decree of the councell hold den at London by Anselme (as before ye have heard) at least wife in the fight of men. But if so it be (faieth Eadmerus) that the preests attempt to do worlde, as it were to the condemnation and reprofe 30 gats as he did fend, nor come to the connocations of Antelmes doings, let the charge light on their heads, lith euerie man thall beare his owne burthen: for I know (faith he) that if fornicatours and adulterers God will indge, the abulers of their one confins (I will not fay their owne fifters and daughters) thall not fuerlie escape his judgement.

About the same time manie wonders were seene and heard of . The river of Trent neere to Potings ham, for the space of a mile ceased to run the wonpain, to, the space of a finite ceauco to tuning wons por configurating the time of fource twentie houres,

Docke died : after thom fucceeded Lhurstane, a man archbishop uer to and fro drie Mod.

Allo a fow brought forth a pig with a face like a man, a chicken was hatched with foure feet. Pozes ouer a comet or blasing that appeared in a frrange fort: for riling in the east, when it once came aloft in the firmament, it kept not the course forward, but seemed to go backeward, as if it had bin retrograde.

About this feason the king maried Robert his bale some to the lavie Paud, daughter and heire to 50 Robert Fitzham, and withall made his fato sonne earle of Glocester, tho afterwards builded the cas fels of Briffow and Carofff, with the priorie of S. James in Briffow, where his bodie was buried.

In the yeare following, Foulke earle of Antou, Anno Reg. 12. enuicing the prosperous estate of king Henrie, and lamenting the case of duke Robert, wan the citie of Constances, by corrupting certeine of the kings subjects the inhabitants of the same. Thereof king Benrie being aduertifed,paffed ouer into Pogman 60 die,recovered the laid citie, punished the offendozs, feth into Moz= reuenged himfelfe of the earle, and returned into England.

Powas also before, the king continued his inor dinate defire of inriching himfelfe, for the fulfilling of which hungric ametite (called sacra of the poets Per antiphrasim) he punched mante so soze, that they cease fed not to speake vericill of his dwings. De did also incurre the milliking of verie manie people, bicaufe he kept ftill the fie of Canturburie in his hands, and would not be frow it, for that he found sweetnesse in receiving all the profits and revenues belonging therebuto, during the time that it remained vacant, which was the space of sourc yeares, or thereabouts.

In like mance, when he was admonsshed to place some meet man in the rome, he would saie, that he Anno Reg. 13. was willing to bestow it, but he take the longer time, for that he meant to find such a one to pace fer therto as should not be to far behind Lanfranke and Anfelme in doctrine, vertue and wifedome. And fith there was none luch yet to be found, he luffered that lie to be voto till luch could be prouded. This cre The kings cuse he pretended, as though he were more carefull excuse. onclie as deane to the fe of Canturburie, but also by 10 for the placing of a worthie man, than of the gaine that followed during the time of the vacation. Howbeit not long after, he translated one Richard bishop of London to that archbishoppike, who enforcing it Anno Reg. 14. but a while, he gave the fame to one Rafe then biffiop of Rochester, and made him archbishop of Cantur Eadmerus. burie, being the 35. in order that ruled that fee. He was elected at Mindles the 26. of Aprill, and on the 16. daie of Baie installed at Canturburie, great preparation being made for the feast which was hold his decease, dinerse of them (as it were promising to 20 den at the same. Some after like wife he sent for his pall to Rome, which was brought from Paschall by one Anselme nemue onto the late archisthop Ans felme. About this time also the pope found himselfe The popes grœued, for that his authoritie was but little effice authoritie not med in England, for that no persons were permit regarded in ted to appeale to Rome in cases of controverse, and England. for that (without feeking to obteine his licence and confent) they did keepe their fynods a councels about ecclesiasticall affaires, neither would obeie such Les which they held. In to much that one Cono the popes > prefis of Pormandie, bicause they would not come to a lynod which they had fummoned. Therebyon the king being somewhat troubled, by advice of his councell, sent the bishop of Excesser to Rome, Thebishop of schouch he were then blind) to talke with the name Excesser tent (though he were then blind) to talke with the pope Exceuer to Rome. concerning that matter.

Legat in France had ercommunicated all the

of a loffie fromach, but pet of notable learning, tho of yoste. even at the verie first began to contend with Kafe the archbishop of Canturburie about the title and right of the primatie. And though the king adulled him to fand to the order which the late archbifhops of Poske had observed, yet he would not frace the matter, fith he falv that archbithop Kafe being ficke and difeated, could not attend to prevent his doings. Thurstane therfore consecrated certeine bishops of Scotland, and first of all Biles Albane the elect bis Giles Idane thop of S. Pinian, tho promifed and twice his oth (as bithop of S. the manner is) to obete him in all things as his Minian. primate.

The citie of Wascester about this featon was by Floriacensis a caluall are almost wholie burnt by and consumed. Wigorniensis. Which mithap, bicause that citie someth neere unto worderer Wlales, was thought to be a signification of trous polydor. bles to folow by the infurrection of the Melflymen: The wellhing who conceining hope of god speed by their god suc innace the ens celle in the wars head with William Kufus, began glith mailes, now to invade a wate the Buchith wartes 2000 to the description now to inuade & walle the English marthes. There trethinto bpon king Henric desirous to tame their hautie for water with machs (bicaule it was a greefe to him fill to be per, an armic. ed with such tumults and byulings as they dailie procured) affenibled a mightie armie, and went into Wales. Pow bicause he knew the Welthinen tru fed more to the woods and mountains, than to their owne frength, he befet all the places of their refuge with armed men, and sent into the wods certeins bands to late them walte, 4 to hunt the Wielth out of their holes. The foldiours (for their parts) neded no erhostation: for remembring the losses suscined as fore time at the Wielthmens hands, they thewed well by their fresh pursute, how much they desired to

1114

1112

The archbi= shops see of Canturburie in the kings hand foure grarca.

38

be revenged, so that the TCTelsh were staine on each hand, and that in great numbers, till the king percet, ned the huge flaughter, & saw that having throwne away their armour and weapons, they fought to faue themselucs by flight, he commanded the souldis ours to cease from killing, and to take the residue that were left pulsoners, if they would yield them felues: which they did, and belought the king of his

Garifons pla= ced in walcs bot. Bentie. Floriacenfis Wigorniensis.

to bestowe foith his vaughter. Hen. Hunt. Polydor.

The king go eth ouer into Mormandie.

1114 The fea de= creafeth. wanders. Wil.Thorne.

Simon Dun. Ran. Higd. Matth, Westm.

1115 Anno Reg. 16.

1116 Anno. Reg. 17.

Griffin ap Rice buth much hurt on the marthes. Polyder.

mercie and grace to pardon and forgive them. the Welfhmen, placed gartlons in fundaie townes & cattels, where he thought most necessarie, and then returned to London with great triumph. Thither Mostlie after came amballadours from the emper rour, requiring the kings daughter affianced (as bes fore you have heard) buto him, and (being now biris potent or mariable defired that the might be deline, A sublidie rai = red buto them. King Henrie having heard their sufe fed by the king and willing with speed to performe the same, raised a great tax among his lubieats, rated after enerie hide 20 of land which they held, taking of ech one that this lings towards the paiment of the monie which was concuanted to be given with hir at the time of the contract. Thich ithen the king had levied, with much more, towards the charges to be emploied in lending hir forth, he appointed certeine of his greatest peres to fafe conduct hir but o hir husband, who with all cons uenient speed conucied hir into Germanie, and in veriehonozable maner there delinered hir buto the forefaid emperour. After this, the king went into Pormandie, and there created his sonne William duke of that countrie, causing the people to sweare fealtie and obedience to him, whereof rose a custome, that the kings of England from thenceforth (fo long as Comandie remained in their hands) made ever their clock sonnes dukes of that countrie. When he bad done this with other his bulinelle in Normans die he returned into England.

In this yeare about the fifteenth daie of Daober, the sea so decreased and syanke from the old accusto- 40 maister an example and president. med water-markes and coalls of the land here in this realme, that a man might have passed on fot of ner the lands and walkes, for the space of a whole daie togither, so that it was taken for a great work der. It was also noted, that the maine rivers (which by the tides of the fea vied to ebbe and flow twice in 24. houres) became so shallow, that in many places men might go over them without danger, and namlie the river of Thames was to lowe for the space of a day and a night, that horfes, men, and children pale 50 fedouer it betwirt London bridge and the tower, and also binder the bridge, the water not reaching as boue their knees . Pozeover, in the moneth of De cember, the aire appeared red, as though it had bur, ned. In like maner, the Winter was verie extreame cold with frosts, by reason whereof at the thawing and breaking of the yee, the most part of all the brid. ges in England were broken and borne downe.

Pot long after this, Griffin ap Kæs toke a great king within the limits of Wales, and burned the kings castels, bicause he would not restore such lands and postessions but ohim as apperteined to his father Res of Rice. Powbeit, the king (not with francing this bulincite) being not other wife troubled with any other warres or weightie affaires, deferred his bois age into those quarters, and first called a councell of his loods both spirituall and tempozall at Salisburie on the ninteenth daie of Parch, therein manie things were ordeined for the wealth and quiet Cate of the land. And first he sware the Pobilitie of the realme, that they should be true to him and his sonne Milliam affer his deceaffe. Secondlie, he appealed fundzie matters then in controversie betwirt the Pobles and great Piers, causing the same to be brought to an end, and the parties made freends: the division betwirt the archbishops of Porke and Canturburie (which had long depended in triall, and could not as pet have end)ercepted. For ambitious Thurstane would not stand to any decree of order therin. except he might have had his whole will, so that the king taking displeasure with him for his obstinate demeanor, commanded him either to be conforma-The king thus having banquilhed and overcome 10 ble to the decree made in Lanfranks time, or elfe to Churchane renounce his miter, which to do (rather than to ac refuseth to a knowledge any lubication to the archbifhop of Cans hey the kings turburie) he seemed to be berie willing at the first, Eadmerus but afterwards repented him of his speech passed in that behalfe. Powithen the councell was ended, and the king went over into Pozmandie, he followed. trusting by some meanes to persuade the king, that he might have his furtherance to be consecrated, without recognizing any obedience to the lee of Canturburie: but the king would not heare him, whereby the matter refted long in lute, as hereafter thall appeare.

Thereby it is plaine (as Polydor saith) how the bishops in those daies were blinded with couctoulnelle and ambition, not confidering that it was their duties to despile such worldlie pompe, as the people regard, and that their calling required a flu dious endenour for the health of fuch foules as fell to their charge. Peither pet remembred they the fimplicitie of Chilf, and his contempt of worldlie dignitie, when he refused to satisfie the humoz of the peop ple, tho verie destroustie would have made him a king, but withozew himselfe, and departed to a mountaine himfelfe alone. They were rather infec ted with the ambition of the apostles, contending one with another for the primatie, forgetting the vocation whereto Chilt has leparated them, not to rule as kings over the gentiles; but to submit their necks to the yokes of obedience, as they had Chaiff their

There is to be noted, that before this The first ble time, the kings of England bled but fels of parlements dome to call togither the states of the in England. realme after any certeine maner or genes rall kind of processe, to have their consents in matters to be decreed. But as the loads of the privie councell in our time dw lit on= lie when necessitie requireth, so did they when some it pleased the king to have any conference with them. So that from this Henrie it may be thought the first ble of the parlement to have proceeded, which lith that time bath remained in force, and is continued buto our times, infomuch that what so ever is to be decreed touching the state of the commonwealth and conseruation thereof, is now referred to that precieand bottle out of the countries sublea to the 60 councell. And surthermore, if any thing be to appointed by the king of any other person to be bled for the wealth of the realme, it chall not yet be received as law, till by authozitie of this astemblie it be established.

Now bicause the house thould not be troubled with multitude of bulearned co: moners, whose propertie is to buderstand little reason, and pet to concesue well of their owne dwings: there was a certeine order taken, what maner of ecclefiasticall persons, and what number and sort of tempotall men thould be called but the fame, and how they should be chosen by boices of

E h

the

fræ holders, that being as atturnies for their countries, that which they confessed or denied, thould bind the relidue of the realme to receive it as a law. This counfell is called a parlement, by the French word, for so the Frenchmen call their publike affemblies.

Chemaner of in England.

The maner of their confulting here in the parlement England in their said assemblies of parle= ment is on this wife. Whereas they have to intreat of matters touching the commoditie both of the prince and of the people, that everie man may have free libertie to otter what he thinketh, they are appointed to lit in severall chambers, the king, the bilhops, and loads of the realine fit in one chamber to conferre togither by themselues; and the commoners called knights for the thires, citizens of cities, 20 and burgesses of and townes in another. These chose some wise, eloquent, and lear= ned man to be their prolocutor or speaker (as they terme him) who propoundeth those things but o them that are to be talked of, and asketh everie many opinion concerning the conclusion thereof. In like fort, when any thing is agreed byon, and call the lower house in respect of their e= state) he declareth it agains to the loads that lit in the other chamber called the higher house, demanding likewise their sudgements touching the same. For no= thing is ratified there, except it be agreed byon by the consent of the moze part of both those houses. Row when they have faid their minds, and yælded their confirreferred to the prince; so that if he thinke good that it thall passe for a law, he confir= methallo by the mouth of the lozd Than= reloz of the realme, who is prolocutor to the loads alwaies by the custome of that

The same order is bled also by the bi-Mors and spiritualtie in their comocatis on houses. For the bishops sit in one place 50 by themselues as in the higher house, and the deanes, archdeacons, and other procurators of the spiritualtie in an other, as in the lower house, whose prolocutor declareth to the bishops what is agreed byon by them. Then the archbillion (by consent of the moze part of them that are assembled in both those convocation houses) ratifieth and pronounceth their decres for 60 lawes, remitting (not with standing) the finall ratification of them to the tempozall houses.

This is the order of the lawgining of England; and in such decrees (established by authoritie of the prince, the lords spiris tuall and temporall, and the commons of this realme thus assembled in parlement) consistes the whole force of our English lawes. In hich decrees are called flatutes, meaning by that name, that the same thould frand firme and stable, and not be repealed without the consent of an other parlement, and that boon god and great confideration.

About this feafon, one Divin (thome fome name prince of Wales) was flaine, as Simon Dunelmen. Simon Dun. writeth, but by thom, or in that fort, he the weth not. In this eight with years of king Henrics reigns, on All hallowes vaic, o: first of Ponember, great lightning, thunder, and such a storme of haile teil, that the people were maruelloullie amazed ther with. Also on the thirteenth of December, there happened a great earthquake, and the mone was turned into a bloode colour: which firange accidents fell about the middelt of the night . At the same time, quene Haud, wife to king Henrie departed this life . But now to returne to other dwings.

It chanced byon a small occasion, that berie soze and dangerous warres followed out of hand, between king Henrie and Lewes furnamed the groffe king of France: the beginning thereof greto herebpon. Theobald earle of Champaigne, descended of the Cheobald earles of Blois, was linked in amitie with king erleof Cham-Henrie , by reason of affinitie that was betwirt paigne. them (for Stephan the earle of Blois married ladie Polydor. Adilathe filter of king Henrie.) Pow it happened, that the forefaid Theobald had by chance offended the faid Leives, who in revenge made tharpe warres by on him. But earle Theobald hoping for aid to be fent from his frænds in the meane time valiantlie relife decreed by them in this place (which they 30 ted him, and at length (by reason of a power of men Hen. Hunc. which came to him from king Henrie) in such fort bered and annoised the French king, that he confulted with Baldwine earle of Flanders, and Foulke earle of Aniou, by what means he might best deprine foulke earle king Benrie of his purhies of Downston and the of I mou. king Henrie of his duchie of Pozmandie, and reffoze the same buto William the some of duke Robert, buto whom of right he laid it did belong.

Pow king Henric having intelligence of his whole purpole, endeuoured on the otherstoe to resist mation therebuto, the finall ratification is 40 his affempts, and affer he had lenied a face tribute of his lubicits, palled ouer into Pormandic with a Ling Henris great power, and no linall malle of monie, where pallethouer toining with earle Theobald, they began to prepare into Norman= for warre, purpoling to follow the fame even to the victo allift the bttermoft. B. Lewes in the meane time, supposing cricof Chama that all hope of victoric rested in specie dispatch of present affaires, betermined likewise to have inusded Posmandie byon the ludden. But after he perceived that his enimics were all in a redinesse, and verte well provided to relift him: he ffaced and dreft backe a little thile. Penerthelesse in the end he became to defirous to be doing with king Penrie, that approching neere buto the confines of Pormandie, Etimasech he made manie fkirmishes with the English, yet no Mozmandic. notable exploit passed between them in that yeare.

There will I leave the kings of England and France fairmilying and encountring one another, and thew fornething more of the contention that was betweene the archbishops of Canturburic and Pople, to the end that their ambitious defire of worldie honor may in some respect appere.

About this verie time, Anselme the neglue to arch, bithop Anfelme came againe from Rome, with free Anno. Reg. 13. authoritie to execute the office of the popes legat in Ancime the England: which seemed a thing right strange to the popes Legat.

Chyclish clergie. Therefore the bishop of Canturbus Canturbus Canturbus rie, to preuent other inconveniences likelie to infine, Cointo Roine, twhe bpon him to go buto Kome, to buderstand the popes pleasure concerning the truth and certeintie of this matter, and to require him in no wife to diminish the authoritie or to extenuat the prerogatime of his lie of Canturburie, which hitherto vied to determine all causes rising in his province.

This faid archbilhop came to Kome, but finding

The french

øf

no fuccaded

Anno Reg. 19.

fecond of that name pope, not the pope there, he fent mellengers with letters buto him then lieng ficke at Beneuento, and obtetned a favourable answer, where with returning to wards England, he came to the king at Koan (where he had lest him at his fetting fouth forward) certifi eng him bow he had fped in this votage. The forfaid Anselme was also fraice by the king at Moan, and could not be suffered to passe over into England all that time, till it might be understood by the returne of the archbilhop, what the popes pleasure should be 10 Pope Gelalis further in that matter. Shortlie after whose repaire pope Balchatt to the king, word was brought that pope Palchall was departed this life, and that Gelalius the fecond was elected in his place. This Gelalius (to avoid five dangers that might infue to him by reason of the Schissine and controversie betwirt the feof Kome, and the emperour Henrie the fift) came into France, where he lived not long, but died in the abbein of Clu Carlietus the guie, after whose occase Calietus the second was called to the papalle.

Thus by the chance and change of popes, the legat thip of Ancelone could take no place, although his bulles permitted him without limitation of time, not onelie to call and celebrate synods for reformation of disorders in the church, but also for the receiving of Deter pence to be levied in England (in the which point pope Patchall in his life time thought them in England verie flacke) as by the fame bulles more largelie doth apere. The archbishop of Canturbus ris had alreadic fraied foure of fine yeares in the par 30 ties beyond the lies, about the matter in controuers tie betwirt him and Thurstane archbishop of Pocke, tho was likewife gone over to folicit his caufe. But there as at the first he could not find the king in a nie wise agreable to his mind, yet when the councell Chould be holden at Phemes by pope Talirt, he fued at the least wife for licence to go thither: but he could neither have any grant to to do, till he had promited (byon his allegiance which he ought to the king) not to attempt aniething there that might be prefudici- 40 all to the durch of Canturburie in anie maner of wife. Penerthelesse, at his comming thither, he so incought with bribes and large gifts, that the popes court (a thingeasslie done in Kome) fauoured his cause; rea, such was his successe, that the pope conse crated him with his owne hands, although king Henrie had given notice to him of the controversie depending betwirt Thurstane and Kafe the archbi Copof Canturburie, requiring him in no wife et ther to confecrate Thurstane himselfe, or grant lis 50 cence to anie other person to consecrate him: for if he did, furelie (for his part) he would banish him quite out of his dominion, which should not be long but done. But now to the purpole.

In this meane time, the warres were buillie pur fued betwirt the two kings of England & France, Anno Reg. 20, and a battell was fought betweene them, with great flaughter on both fides for the space of nine kings of Eng houres. The forewards on both parties were beaten land * France downe and overtheolone; and king Henrie received 60 fundate stripes on his head at the hands of one Tails liam Crispine countie de Eurene, so as (though his helmet were verie frong and fure) the bloud burft out of his mouth: wherewith he was nothing afraid. but like a fierce lion lato more lutilie about him, and firoke downe diverse of his enimics, namelie the faid Crispine, who was there taken prisoner at the Eureaxtaken kings feet. Pow were the kings people incouraged at the valiancie and protecte of their king and chief taine, so that at length they opened and onercame the maine battell, and fetting byon the reretvard, ouer the wole armie of France, which never recoiled, but fought it out even to the other most. There died and were taken pulsuers in this conflict manie thousands of men. The French king leaving the field, got him buto a place called Andelie: and the Andelei, hing of England, recovering a towne by the waie called Picalium, which the French king had latelie Picalium, wone, returned buto Rouen, where he was with great triumph received, and highlie commended for his noble victoric thus atchived.

The earle of Flanders (as some write) was so wounded in this battell, that he died thereof. But of Matth. Paris, thers affirme, that coming into Popmandie in the Ia. Mair. peare last past, to make warre against king Henric in favour of king Lewes, he wan the towne of Ans delie, and an other which they name Aqua Nicaly. But as he was come before the towne of Augen in the moneth of September, and affailed the fame, he received his deaths wound in the head, therebyon Flanders returning home in the ninth moneth after, when he wounded, could not becured of his hurt, he departed this life the departed at Rollare the 17. daic of June.

Shortlie after Foulke earle of Aniou (who before of Aniou behad after the French king against king Henrie) be came the king came now kings Penrics frænd by aliance, maris of Englands eng his daughter to William king Henries clock man, fonne. But the French king (as their hillogies make mention) minding still to be renenged of the earle Theobald invaded his countrie agains with a puilfant armie, and had destroied the citie of Chartres, which belonged but othe same earle, had not the citizens humbled themselves to his mercie: and so like wife did the earle, as may be thought. For in the warres which immediatlie followed betwirt Lewes and the emperour Penrie, the erle aided the French king against the same emperour to the ottermost of his power. Some after this, the king came to an enterniew with pope Calirtus at Gilozs, where may The king and nie matters were falked of betwirt them; and a= the pope come mongst other, the king required of the pope a grant new at Giloss of all such liberties as his father entoted within the limits of England and Pormandie, and chéfclie, that no legat should have any thing to do within England, except he required to have one fent him for some braent cause.

All which matters being determined (as the Cate The popels of the time present required) the pope belought the a furth for king to be good buto archbishop Thurstane, and to Churkane. restore him to his se: but the king protested that he had bowed never so to do whilest he lived. Therebu to the pope answered, that he was pope, and by his ato the pope answered, that he was pope, and by he of that The pope of possolike power he would discharge him of that tereth to dis bow, if he would fatisfie his request. The king to charge the to this the matter off, promised the pope that he would of his bow. take advice of his councell, and give him further knowledge, as the cause required, wherebyon depart ting from thense, he did afterwards (upon farther de: Eadmerus. liberation) send him this medage, in effect as fol. The kings

Whereas he faith he is pope, and will (as he faid) affoile me of the vow which I have made, if contras rie thereto I will restoze Thurstane to the sée of Booke: I thinke it not to fand with the honor of a ,, king, to consent in any wife unto such an absolution. For who thall believe an others promise hereafter, if by mine example he lie the fame to calilie by an ablo lution to be made boid? But lith he hath so great a delire to have Thurstane restored, I shall be contented at his request, to receive him to his le, with this Simon Du. condition, that he chall acknowledge his church to be Eadmerus, subject buto the see of Canturburie, as his predeces >> fours have done before him; although in fine this » offer would not ferus the turne.

But now to returns againe to the theo princes. Pot long after the departure of the pope Kom Wis Simon Dun. fors, Foulke earle of Anion found meanes to make Anno Reg. 14 an agrament betwirt king Penrie & king Lewes, this life.

anfwer fent to the pope. Ca

CCIL

1119 The two tome batteli. Ling Genrie hurt in the battell.

The carle of pationer.

France are accorded. Wil. Malm.

Eadmerus

st socots.

Cadmer In=

felmes difct=

The kings of to that Milliam sonne to king Henrie did homage England and unto hing Lewes for the duchie of Pormandie. And further it was accorded betweene them, that all those that had borne armour either on the one five or the o ther, thould be pardoned, those subjects somer they were. In like maner, Kafe archbishop of Cantur: burie returned into England, after he had remate ned long in Pozmandie, bicause of the controversie betwirt him and Thurstan archbishop of Porke, as is aforefaid.

Pow Mortlie after bis returne to Canturburie. mellengers came with letters from Alexander king of Scotland unto him, lignifieng, that where the lee Airpander k. of S. Andrews was void, the same king did infantlie require him to fend ouer Eadmer a monke of Canturburie (of whome he had heard great commendation for his lufficiencie of vertue and lears ning) to be seated there. This Eadmer is the fame which wrote the historie intituled Historia nouorum in Anglia, out of which (as may appeare) we have 20 gathered the most part of our matters concerning Anselme and Kase archbishops of Canturburie, in whole daies he lived, and was Anlelmes disciple.

Archbishop Kase was contented to satisfie the request of king Alexander in that behalfe, and obter ning the consent of king Henrie, he fent the said Eadmer into Scotland with letters of commendation on buto the faid king Alexander, who received him right infullte, and byon the third daic after his comming thither (being the feast of the apostles Peter 30 e Panle) he was elected archbilhop of S. Andrews by the clergie and people of the land, to the great retoicing of Alexander, and the rest of the Pobilitie. The nert daie after the king talked with him fecret lie of his confecration, and ottered to him how he had no mind to have him confecrated at the hands of Thurstan archbishop of Poske. In which case when he was informed by the faio Eadmer, that no fuch thing reeded to trouble his mind, fince the arche Canturburie, being primate of all 1826, 40 taine, might confecrate him as reason was; the king could not away with that answer, bicause he would not heare that the church of Canturburie should be preferred before the thurth of S. Andrews. Heretop on he departed from Eadmer in displeasure, and calling one William (sometime monke of S. Co. mundsbury) buto him, a man also that had governed (02 rather spoiled) the church of S. Andrews in the vacation: this William was commanded to take boon him the charge thereof againe, at the kings 50 pleasure, whose meaning was otterlie to remove Eadmer, as not worthie of that come. Howbeit, within a moneth after (to fatisfie the minds of his Pobles) he called for the fato Eadmer, and with much adougothim to receive the staffe of that bishopathe, taking it from an altar whereon it laie (as if he thuld have that dignitie at the Lords hands) whereby he was invested, went streight to S. Andrews church, where he was received by the quier, the schollers, and all the people, for true and lawfull biffop.

In this meane while Thurstan nothing slacking his lute in the popes court, obteined luch fauour (wherein the king of England also was greatlie laboured buto) that he wrote letters thrice buto the king of Scotland, and once buto the archbilhop of Canturburie, that neither the king thould permit Eadmer to be consecrated, not the archbishop of Canturburie in any wife confectate him if he were thereinto required. Herebpon it came to passe, that finally Eadmer, after he had remained in Scot land twelve moneths of thereabouts, and perceived that things went not as he would have withed (for that he could not get the kings confent that he shuld be consecrated of the archbishop of Canturburie, as it was first meant both by the archbishop and Eadmer) he departed out of Scotland, and returned a gaine to Canturburie, there to take further advice in all things as cause should mouchim. In like maner king henrie, hauing quieted his bulinelle in returnethinto France, returned into England, where he was res England. ceived and welcomed home with great for and triamph; but fuch publike reiotting latted not long with him. For inded, this pleasant nelle and mirth was thanged into mourning, by advertisement given of Ran. Higd. the death of the kings fons, William duke of Por wil. Malm. mandie, and Richard his brother, who togisher with Polydor. their litter the ladie Parie countelle of Perch, Ri- Matth. Paris. thard earle of Cheffer, with his brother Ditwell go fonnes and vernour to duke William, and the faid earle of The his daughter Acr his wife the kings nece, the archocacon of the with other reford, Beffrey Riodle, Robert Manduit, Milliam Robles are Bigot, and dinerfe other, to the number of an hun thipwiacie. dreth and fourtie persons, besides fiftie mariners, twhe thip at Partlew, thinking to follow the king, and failing footh with a fouth wind, their thip thos rough negligence of the mariners (who had drunke out their wits & reason) were throwne byon a rocke, and otterlie perithed on the coast of England, opon the 25. of Pouember, so that of all the companie none escaped but one butcher, who catching hold of the mass, was driven with the same to the shore which was at hand, and so saued from that dangerous thip wacke. Duke William might also haue cscaved Wil. Maim, berie well, if pitie had not moved him moze than the regard of his owne prefernation. For being gotten into the Chipboat, and lanching toward the land, he heard the fareking of his lifter in deedfull danger of drowning, and crieng out for fuccour; wherebyon he commanded them that rowed the boat to turne backe to the thip, and to take hir in. But such was the prease of the companie that strong to leave in with Marth. Paris. hir, that it Areightwaies lanke, to that all those which were alreadie in the boat were cast awaie.

There (by the way) would be noted the brainf. Loke in page fed speech of William Rusus to the thipmaister, 23. columne 2. whome he emboldened with a vaine and desperat persuation in tempestuous weather and high seas to hoife op failes; adding (for further encouragement) that he never heard of any king that was drowned. In which words (no doubt) he sinned presumptuous lie against God, who in one time punished that offence of his in his posteritie and kinred, even by the same element, whose fearsenes he himselfe seemed so little to regard, as if he would have commanded the formes to cease; as we read Christ old in the gospell by the vertue and power of his word. Here is also to be noted the variablenes of fortune (as we commonlie call it) or rather the bucerteine and changes able event of things, which oftentimes doth raile by (even in the minds of princes) troblesome thoughts, and grauous passions, to the great empairing of their quietnesse: as here we seeremplissed in king Henrie, whole mirth was turned into mone, and his 60 pleasures relished with pangs of pensifenes, contravic to his expectation when he was in the miost of his triumph at his returne out of France into England. So that we fee the old adage verified, Miscentur tristia Letis; and that faicing of an old poet iuftified:

Saua nouerca dies nunc est, nunc mater amica.

But to returne to the historie. King Henrie being thus deprined of issue to succeed him, did not a little lament that infortunate chance: but yet to restore that losse, thoutlie after, even the 10, of Aprill Anno Reg. 22, nert ensuing, he marico his second wife named A Eadmeius. belicia, a ladie of excellent beautie, and noble conditie then. Hunt. ons, daughter to the duke of Loudine, and descens rich againe. ded of the noble dukes of Loraine, howbeit he could

Ming Bentie

The kings against the

Cabmer recemeth his fraffe from an altar,

> Hefod in lib. cuitit. opera or dies.

Fadmerus.

The pope wai teth to king Henrie, in faarchbilhop Churftan. accurleth him with the archbilbop of Canturburie.

never have any iffue by hir. The archbishop Thur ffan (after the manner of obteining fuites in the court of Kome) found such favour at the hands of pope Calirt, that he directed his letters as well to hing Penrie, as to Kafe archbishop of Canturbus rie, by vertue whereof he accurled them both, and interdiced as well the province of Porke as Cantur burie from the vie of all maner of facraments; from baptifine of infants, the penance of them that died onclie excepted: if archbishop Thurstan were not 10 Inffered (within one moneth next after the receipt of those letters) to into his fe, without compelling him to make any promise of subjection at all. The king to be out of trouble, permitted Thurstan to returne into the realme, and so repaire onto Docke; but with condition, that he thoulo not exercise any inrisoint on out of his owne diocesse as metropolitane, till he had confested his obstinat errour, and acknowleged his obedience to the church of Canturburie. Whilest these things were thus a dwing, king Her- 20.

rie was aductifed, that the Welshmen breaking the peace, oto much hurt on the marthes, a speciallie ning therefore to be revenged on them to the viter:

most, he assembled an armicout of all parts of his Welthmen, hearing that the king was come with fuch pulifance to innade them, were afraid, and forthe with fent ambaffadours, belæching him to grant humble petitions, twhe hollages of them, 4 remitted them for that time, confidering that in mainteining of warre against such maner of people, there was more feare of losse than hope of gaine. But pet to proute for the quickness of his subjects which inhabis ted niere the marthes, that they shuld not be overrun and harried vailie by them (as oftentimes before they had bone) he appointed Marren earle of Shiewel burie to have the charge of the marines, that peace

Some after king Penrie caused a chanell to be sep to the citie of Lincolne, that vessels might have passage out of the river of Trent buto the same.

Mozeover, Kafe bishop of Durham began to build the cattell of Porham, upon the banke of the river of affer the peace was made betwirt king Henrie and the French king) began to picke a quarrell against king Henrie, for withholding the foindure of his daughter, who (as before you have heard) was marris ed buto William the kings sonne that was drowned. He also gave hir lifter in mariage buto Willi.

am the sonne of duke Robert, assigning buto him the earledonne of Maime to entoy in the right of his

At this time likelvice Foulke Carle of Aniou being now come out of the holie land (wither he went 50 them pardon and peace. The king moved with their 30

The wellh= men make sturres. Eadmerus. The bing rate in Cheshire where they had burned two castels. Weafeth an armic togo againCt the wellhinen. realine, and entred with the same into Wales. The

The wellhmen fue foz peace.

Moze doubt of lolle than hope of gaine, by the Sparres against the welshinen.

Simon Dun. A chancil cast cast along the countrie in Lincolnshire, from Took to Lincolne.

countrie.

Tinéd.

Porham ca freil bailt, H. Hunt.

Polydor.

wife. In the meane time, king Henrie vilited the north 6 parts of his realme, to binderstand the state of the countrie, and to provide for the suertie and god gos uernement thereof, as was thought requilite.

7122 13. Ralends of Donember. Anno Reg. 23.

In the yeare next enfining, the twentith of Dotober, Kafe archbishop of Canturburie departed this life, after he had ruled that fee the space of 8. yeares, in whose rome succeeded one William archbishop, tho was in number the eight and twentith from Augustine . Poseover , Henrie the sonne of earle Blois, tho before was abbat of Glasfenburie, was now made billion of Talincheffer, a man for his fine gular bountic.gentlenesse and modessie greatlie beloued of the English.

But to returne to the affaires of the king . It chanced about this time, that the parts beyond the fea(being now boid of a governour (as they suppose) by meanes of the death of the kings sonne) began to make commotions. Some after it came also to passe that Robert earle of Pellent revelled against the Anno. Reg. 24. king, tho being speedilie advertised thereof', sailed Robert carle foothwith into those quarters, and belieged the case of Melicut Kell of Ponteaudemer perteining to the faid earle, and toke it. About the same time also the king forth Hen Hune. fied the castell of Roan, causing a mightie thick wall The castle of with turrets therabout as a fortification to be made. Boan fortifica Likewife, he repaired the caffell of Caen,the caffels Matth. Paris, of Arches, Gilois, Falcile, Argentone, Damfront, Mernon, Ambres, with others, & made them firong. In the meane featon, the earle of Wellent (delirous to be revenged of king Penrie) procured ald where to be revenged of king Penrie) procured atomore Anno. Reg. 25, he could, and so with Hugh earle of Hountserf en Polydor. tred into Posmandie, walking and destroising the H. Hung countrie with fire and fwood, thinking per long to Matth Paris. bring the same to obedience. But the kings chambers laine and lientenant in those parts, named William de Tankeruile, being thereof aduertised, laid an ame bulh for them, and training them within the danger thereof, set byon them, and after long fight, twke them twaine prisoners, with divers other, and prefented them both onto the king, whereby the warres ceasted in that countrie for a time.

The king having in this maner purchased quiels nesse by the swood, gave himselfe somewhat to the reformation of his house, and among other things Longhaire which he redzelled, he caused all his knights and men redzelled in of warre to cut their haire thort, after the maner of the court. the Frenthmen, whereas before they ware the same Marth Weil.

long after the blage of woinen. After this also, in the yeare 1125. a cardinall nat med Johannes Crementis was lent into England Anno. Reg. 25, from pape Ponozius the second to se resormation in Crementis a certeine points touching the church: but his chafe legat fent errand was to correct profis that still kept their into England might be the better kept and mainteined in the 40 wines with them. At his first comming over, he for fourned in colledges of eathed; all thurthes, and in abbeics, additing himselfe to lucre & wantonnesse, reaping where he had not sowen. At length, about the featt of the nativitie of our ladie, he called a convocation of the cleargie at London, where making an o ration, he inucihed loze against those of the spiritualtie that were spotted with any note of incontinencie. Panie thought themselves touched with his words, tho having smelled somewhat of his secret tricks, that thereas he was a most licentious liner, and an buchast person of bodie and mind, yet he was so blinded, that he could not perceive the beame in his own cies, whilest he espied a mote in another mans. Heres bpon they grudged, that he thould in fuch wife call o. ther men to accompts for their bonest demeanor of life, which could not render any good reckoning of his owne: infomuch that they watched him so narrow lie, that in the evening (after he had blown his home folowd against other men; in declaring that it was o athamefull vice to rife from the fide of a frumpet, and prefume to facrifice the bodic of Christ) he was taken in bed with a Arumpet, to his owne Chame and reproch. But being reproved thereof, he alledged usut this this excuse (as some write) that he was no prest, but shuld not sam a reformer of practs. Howbeit to conclude, being to be any suft

> But to returne to king Henrie, who whilest he res the Lords be mained in Pormandie (with was a long time affer bie, # there'ore be must needs the appehention of the two forefaid earles) bnder be appate. ftod that his sonne in lawe Henrie the emperour was departed this life at Ultregt, the 23. of Spaiz last past. Whereupon he sent for his daughter the Anno. Res. 27.

that whereabout he was fent.

1123

ar

by tou

the tije

Wi

Ma

81 tw!

late hen

Pol

mı

ŧο

ma

to t

II 24

thus defamed , he got him backe to Rome againe excuse for M. from whence he came, without any performance of fame day he confecrated

empicae

1 1 2 6

Henriethe first.

Polydor. In oth taken by the lozos touching the incceffion of the crowns.

Stephan erle of Bullongne the first that offered to re= ceine the oth.

Wil, Malm,

1127 Matth.Paris.

dtrife be= twirt the pre= lates for pre= beminence.

Folydor.

militam fonne to Robert Currhofe made erie of Flanders.

Mairom Cue fil to the earle of Imon. Ger.Dor.

An. Reg. 28, 29, 30, 31. Henr emprette to come ouer unto him into popmanoie, and having fet his businesse in order on that side the sea, and taken hir with him, he returned into England before the fealt of S. Dichaell, where cal ling aparlement, he cauted hir by authoritie of the fame to be established as his lawfull heire and fuc. cello2, with an article of intaile byon hir iffue, if it should please God to send his any at all. At this parlement was David la of Scotland, tho succeded A lerander the fierce. Stephan earle of Poston and Bullongne, and son of Stephan earle of Blois, ne thue to B. Henrie by his litter Avela; thele two prins ces thefelie toke their oth amongst other, to obey the forefato emprelle, as touching hir right and lawfull claime to the crowne of England. But although Stechan was now the first that was to sweare, he became thortlie after the first that brake that oth for his owne preferment. I Mus it commeth often to valle, that those which receive the greatest benefits, dw oftentimes somest forget to be thankefull.

This Stechan latelie before by his bucle Ik. Hen. ries meanes, had purchased & got in marriage the onelie daughter and heire of Eustace earle of Buls longne, and to after the decease of his father in lawe, became earle there; and further, had goodic pollelle ons in England given him by the king, and yet (as farther shall appeare) he kept not his oth made with It. Denrie. Some write that there role no fmall Arife betwirt this earle Stephan, Kobert erle of Bloces Her in contending which of them Hould first receive this oth:the one alledging that he was a kings fon, 30 the other afterming that he was a kings nephue.

Shortlie after this parlement was ended. It. Hene rie held his Christmas at Mindlez, where Thurs fran archbishop of Poske (in psetudice of the right of Milliam archbithop of Canturburie) would have fet the crowne bpon the kings head, at his going to the church: but he was put backe with no finall reproch; and his chapleine (whom he appointed to beare his croffe before him at his entrance into the kings chappell) was contemptuoullie and violentlie thaut out of the dozes with croffe and all by the freends of the archbishop of Canturburie. In short time, this unsæmlie contention betwirt Thurstan and William the two archbishops grew so hot, that not ones lie both of them, but also the bishop of Lincolne went to Kome about the deciding of their frife.

In this yeare Charles earle of Flanders, the fuccelles of earle Baldwin, was traitosoullie murthes red of his owne people: & bicause he left no issue be hind him to lucceed as his heire, Lelves the French king made William the sonne of duke Robert Curthole earle of Flanders, as the next confine in bloud to the same Charles. Truth it is, that by his fathers lide, this William was descended from erle Baldwin surnamed Pins, whose daughter Mand being maried buto William Conqueroz, bare by him the forefaid Robert Curthole, father to this Willis am, now advanced to the government of Flanders, but he wanted not advertaries that were competitoes and malignant lutoes for that earledome, who 60 fought to preferre themselues, and to displace him.

king Penrie milliking the promotion of the faid William, although he was his nephue, for that he supposed he would sæke to revenge old displeasures if he might compatte to have the French kings att stance, thought goo with the advice of his councell towithstand the worst. Where by on he take order for the maintenance of the warre abroad, and the supplie of fouldiers, and other things necessarie to be consis The empresse dered of for the suertie of his realme.

After this, bicause he was in despatre to have to fue by his fecond wife, about Thitfuntive he fent o ner his daughter Paud the empreste into Pormans die, that the might be married onto Geffrey Dlan tagenet earle of Aniou, and in August after he followed himselfe. Pow the matter went so forward, that the mariage was celebrated betweet the faid earle and empresse upon the first sundaie in Aprill, which fell byon the third of the moneth, and in the 27. of his rejane.

In the peare enfuing, king Henrie meaning to Anno Reg. 28, cause the French king to withdrawe his helping Matth. Paris. hand from his nephue William earle of Flanders, palled forth of Pormandie with an armie, and inuading France, remained for the space of eight daics at Hipard, in as good quiet as if he had beine within his owne dominions, and finallie obteined that of the French king which he fought for, namelie, his refulall to aid his nemue the faid earle of Flanders. Who at length contending with other that claimed the earledome, chanced this yeare to be wounded, as Anno K he pursued his enimies buto the walles of a towne called Alhuft, and some after vied of the hurt the 16. of August.

It was thought that the great felicitie of king william earls Henrie was the chiefe occasion of this earles death, of flanders who meant (if he might have brought his purpole to beccalethof a passe, and be once quietlie set in the dominion of wound. Flanders) to have attempted some great enterpaise The fortunat against king Henrie for the recoverie of Porman agod hap of die, and delinerie of his father out of pillon. Thich k. Penric. was knowen well inough to king Penrie, who mainteined those that made him warre at home, both with men and monie; namelie, William of Up, william de pres, tho take byon him as regent in the name of Stephan earle of Bullongne, whome king Henrie procured to make claime to flanders also, in the title of his grandmother quæne Paud, wife to TAil liam Conqueroz. But to proceed with our historie.

When king Henrie had fred his businesse in 1202 mandie, where he had remained a certeine space both Anno Reg. 30. about the conclusion and folemnizing of the mariage made betwirt his daughter Mand the empresse and the earle of Aniou, and also to sæ the end of the wars in Flanders, he now returned into England, where he called a great councell or parlement at London, in August: wherein (amongst other things) it was decræd, that præfts, which lived buchastlie, Chould be punished and that by the kings permission, who here Polydor. by take occasion to serve his owne turne: for he res An accagaints garded not the reformation which the billyons true buchalt Med (by his plaine dealing) would have followed but profis. put those precits to their fines that were accused, and fuffered them to keepe their wines still in house with them, which offended the billiops greatlie, who would have had them sequestred asunder.

After this parlement ended, the king kept his Chillmalle at Worcester, and his Castermalle following at Modfocke, where a certeine Poble man named Beffrey Clinton was accused to him of high treason. In this 31. yeare of king Henries reigne, great death and murren of cattell began in this land to univertallie in all places, that no towne not village escaped fræ: and long it was before the same discontinued of ceased. Ling Henrie palling over into Pozmandie, was troubled with certeine Arange dreames or villons in his fleepe. Polydor, For as he thought, he saw a multitude of plough men with fuch twles as belong to their trade and occupation; after whom came a fort of fouldiers with warlike weapons: and last of all, bishops approching towards him with their crofter staves readie to fall bpon him, as if they meant to kill him. Pow then he awaked, he lept fouth of his bed, got his Iwood in his hand, scalled his fernants to come & belpe him. Peuerthelette, repretting those perturbations, and somewhat better adulting himselfe, parilie by his

C.ij.

Anno Reg. 29

1129

1130 Anno Reg. 37.

Wil. Malm.

owne reason, and partic by the counsell of learned gentlemen, was persuaded to put such fantalies a wate, and was admonished withall, that whilest he had time and space here on earth, he thould redeme his passed offenses and sinnes committed against Ged, with repentance, almelowds, and abstinence. Teherefore being mound herewith, he began to pradife an amendment of his former lewd life.

There it shall not be amisse to compare the two liam Kulus, and Penric Beauclerke togither; and to confider among other events the supernaturall dieames where with they were admonished, to ercellent god purpose (no doubt) if they could have applied them to the end thereto they were directed. For Talilliam Rufus(as you thall read in pag. 26. col. 2.) negleating to be admonified by a diedfull dieame therewith he was troubled, Choetlie after receined his deaths wound by calualtie or chancemedie, even in the prime of his pastime and disport. This of 20 ther brother 1). Beauclerke had the like warnings by the same incanes, and (to a good effect) as the lear ned dw gather. Their rath opinion therefore is much to be decked, which contemne drames as more deluforie, alleoging by waie of disprose an old errontous verse:

Somnia ne cures, nam fallunt plurima plures,

Speaking indefinitelie of dreames without diffin ction: thereas in truth great valure is in them in respect of their kind and nature. For though some 30 fort of dreames (as those that be physicall) are not greatlie to be relied byon; yet those of the metathy. ficall fort, having a speciali influence from aboue natures reach, are not lightlie to be ouerdiped. To des termine this matter I remit the Audious readers to that excellent chapter of Peter Martyr, in the first part of his common places, pag.32.columne 2.where Dreames In genere are copioulite handled.

About the same time, Paud daughter of this Benrie, being forsaken of hir husband Oeffrey earle of 40 Aniou, came to hir father then being in Mormandie. That the cause was thy hir husband put hir from him, is not certeinlie knowen: but the matter (belike) was not verie great, fifth thoulie after he receiv ued hir againe, and that of his owne accord. During the time also that king Henrie remained in Roy mandie, pope Innocent the 2. came into France, to aucid the danger of his enimies: and holding a councell at Cleremont, he accurled one Peter fitz Leo, who had blurped as pope, and named himselfe 50 neither by water not other wife it could be quenthed. Anacletus. Afterward at breaking by of the fame counsell at Cleremont, he came to Dzleance, and then to Charters, meeting king Henrie by the waie, nocent meet at who offered unto the pope to mainteine his cause as gainst his entinies to the vitermost of his power, for the which the pope gave the king great thankes: and faming as though he had beine more carefull for the desense of the common cause of the chastian common-wealth than for his owne, he exhorted king Penrie to make a fournie into the holie land, as 60 gainst the Saracons and entinies of the christian religion.

Wil.Malm.

1121

Anno Reg.; 2.

Ring Denrie

Charters.

Polydor.

The fong of learning,

In this enterulew betwirt the pope and the king, the Komans were moved to marvell greatlie at the infedome and tharpneffe of wit which they percrived in the Posmans. For king Benrie, to thew what learning remained amongst the people of the Robert crie of well parts of Europe, caused the sommes of Robert Modent praise earle of Welent to argue and dispute in the points and subtill sopisines of Logike, with the cardinals and other learned chapleins of the pope there prefent, who were not assamed to confesse, that there was more learning amongst them here in the west parts, than ever they heard of linew of in their owne countrie of Italie.

Bing Penrie after this returned into England, King Denrie and boon the fea was in danger to have beene doow returnethinned by tempest: so that sudging the same to be as a to England. warning for him to amend his life, he made manie volves, and after his landing went to S. Edmunds burie in Suffolke to do his denotions onto the fer pulchie of that king. Pow at his comming from thence, being well disposed, towards the reliefe of his formes of Tailliam the Conquerour; namelie Taile 10 people, he leffened the tributes and impolitions, and did inflice aswell in respect and favour of the pope as of the rich.

Pot long after, Geffrey earle of Aniou had a fon 1132 named Henrie by his tuffe the empresse, who (as be Anno. Reg. 33. fore is faid) was after king of England: for his grandfather king Henrie haning no issue male to fucceed him, caused the empresse and this Henrie hir sonne to be established heires of the realme: all the Pobles and other estates taking an oth to be their true and locall subjects. After this king Henrie kept his Chrismasse at Dunstable, and his Caster at Anno Reg. 34 Modifocke. In the same years, ox (as other Priox of L. in the beginning of the years precedent, ox (as other Divaldas Modifocke. In the same yeare, 02(as some haue) Matth. Paris. haue) in the yeare following, king Henrie ereded a Wil. Thorne bishops see at Carleil, in whith one Arnulfe or rather hath, and Athelivolfe, who before was abbat of S. Bothoulfs, likewife and the kings confestor, was the first bishop that was Matth. Paris. instituted there. This man immediatlie after his confectation placed regular canons in that thurth.

Pot long after,ograther befoge (as by Wil. Malmes. it thould sæme) king Henrie passed ouer into Pozmandic, from whence (this being the last time of his going thither) he never returned alive. And as it came to passe, he twhe thip to faile this last fournie thither, even the same date in which he had afore time received the crowne. On which date falling byon the Anectipa, wednesdaic and being the second of August) a wonderfull and extraozdinarie eclipse of the sunne and mone appeared, in somuch that Wil. Malmes. who then lived, writeth that he saw the starres plainlie as bout the sunne at the verietime of that eclipse. On the fridaic after such an earthquake also happened in In earths this realme, that manie houses and buildings were quake. overtheowne. This earthquake was to fensible, or rather so visible, that the wall of the house wherein the king then fat, was lift by with a double remoue, at the third it seiled it selfe againe in his due place. Pozeover at the verie same time also fire burst out of certeine riffes of the earth, in so huge siames, that

In the 34. peace of his reigne, his brother Ko bert Curthole departed this life in the castell of Cardiff. It is said that on a festivall date king Henrie Manh. Paris put on a robe of scarlet, the cape therof being freid, he rent it in Ariuing to put it over his head : and pers Anno Reg. 35: ceiving it would not ferue him, he laid it alide, and faid; Let my brother Robert have this robe, who hath a tharper head than I have. Which when it was brought to duke Robert, and the rent place not forw ed by, he perceived it, and asked whether any man had worne it before. The messenger told the whole matter, how it happened. Wherewish duke Robert take such a greefe for the scornefull mocke of his brother, that he wared wearie of his life, and faid; Row The decease I perceive I have lived to long, that my brother of Robert shall cloth me like his almes man with his cast and Curthose. rent garments. Thus curling the time of his nativitie, he refused from thenceforth to eat or drinke, and so pined awaie, and was buried at Gloceffer.

King Penrie remaining Mill in Pozmandie rode round about a great part of the countrie, thewing no small love and courteste to the people, Audieng by all meanes possible to win their favours, and being merie amongst them. Howbeit nothing reinised

C

Ãi

贯

DC i:f

M

Æ

37

Đị.

M Si

1133

Matth, West.

Gji,

him more, than that his daughter Mand the empresse at the fame time was delinered of hir fecond fonne named Geffrey, to that he faw himfelfe prouided of an affured fucceffour.

Polydor. 1125

Matth. West. San Duncle

Sting Penrie

Wit whilest he thus passed the time in mirth and folace, he began some after to be somethat diseased, Anno Reg. 35. and never could perceive any evident cause thereof. Taberefore to drive his græfe away, he went abrode to bunt, and being somewhat amended thereby (as he thought) at his comming home he would needs 10 eat of a lampley, though his phylician counselled him to the contrarie: but he delighting most in that meat (though it be in qualitic verie hurtfull to health) would not be distuaded from it, so that his stomach being annoted there with, he fell immediatlie into an ague, and so died thoutlie after, on the first day of acparteely this December, being as then about 67. yeares of age, after he had reigned 35. peres, 4 foure moneths lack= ing foure dates. His bodie was conncied into Engs land, and buried at Reading within the abbey durch 20 thich he had founded, and endowed in his life time with great and large possessions. It is written, that his bodie, to avoid the ffench which had infected mas nie men, was closed in a buls hide, and how he that clensed the head died of the saudur which issued out of the braine.

Matth.Weft. Ran.Higd. Sim.Dunel.

> Allows we lie that even princes come to the like end by as bale meanes as other inferiour persons; ac coading to that of the poet:

Dant alios furia torno spectacula Marti, Exitio est auidis mare nautis: Mista senum ac inuenum densantur funera,nullum Sauacaput Proserpinafugit.

And here we have to note the neglect of the phylicis ans counsell, and that same ill disposition in diet which the king chose rather to satisfie, than by refraining it to avoid the danger whereinto he fell. But this is the preposterous election of untoward patients, according to that:

Nitimur in vetitum semper, cupimus á, negata.

The iffue of king Denrie the first.

Touching his issue, he had by his first wife a sonne named William, dioloned (as pe have heard) in the sea: also a daughter named Paud, whome with bir sonnes he appointed to inherit his crowne and o ther dominions. We had iffue also by one of his concubins, even a sonne named Kichard, and a daughter named Darie, who were both drowned with their brother William. By an other concubine he had a forme named Robert, tho was created buke of Tlo, cester.

Dis fature.

He was frong of bodie, flethie, and of an inotife rent Cature, blacke of haire, and in maner bald bes fore, with great and large cies, of face comelie, well countenanced, and pleasant to the beholders, special, lie when he was disposed to mirth.

Dig bertueg.

Dis bices.

He excelled in the vertues, wiscome, eloquence, and valiancie, which not with standing were somewhat blemished with the like number of vices that reigned in him; as conetoninelle, crueltie, and flethlie lust of bodie. His covetousnesse appeared, in that he 60 fore oppelled his lubiects with tributes and impolitions. His cruckic, in that he kept his brother Kobert Curtchose in perpetuall pulon, and likewise in the hard bling of his coline Robert earle of Doztaigne, thome he not onelie deteined in prison, but also cau fed his cies to be put out: which act was kept secret till the kings death reucaled it . And his flethlie luft was manifelf, by keeping of fundic women.

his wilcome.

But in his other affaires he was circumfpect, in defending his owne verie earnest and diligent. Such wars as might be audived, with honourable peace he ever fought to appeale; but when such insuries were offered as he thought not meet to lufter, he was an impatient revenger of the fame, onercomming all perils with the force of vertue and manlie courage, His manlie thewing himselfe either a most louing friend, or an courage, extreame enimic: for he would subdue his focs to the bittermost, and advance his frends above mea-

With fulfice he ruled the commons quietlic, and enterteined the nobles honorablie. Theues, counter, Dis reale to feiters of monie, and other transgressors he caused willie. to be fought out with great diligence, and when they were found, to be punified with great feneritie. Peither did he neglect reformations of certeine naughtie abuses. And (as one author hath written) Simon Dun. he ordeined that theues should suffer death by hange ing. When he heard that such perces of monie as hanged. were cracked would not be received amongest the people, although the fame were god and fine filner, he caused all the coine in the realme to be either broken of fit. He was fober of viet, bling to eat rather for the quailing of hunger, than to pamper himselfe with manie daintie forts of banketting diffes. De neuer dranke but when thirst moved him, he would siepe foundlie and more oftentimes till he awaked there with. He pursued his warres rather by policie than his policie. by the fword, and overcame his entimies so neere as he could without bloudthed, which if it might not be, yet with as little flaughter as was possible. Locon= clude, he was not inferiour to any of the kings that his praife for reigned in those dates, in wisedome and policie, and government. so behaved himselfe, that he was honoured of the Pobles, and beloued of the commons. He builded diverse abbeies both in England and Pozmandie. but Reading was the cheefe. He builded the manour Reading about of Modfocke, with the parke there, therein (befide bey builded. the great floze of dere) he appointed diverse frange beaffs to be kept and nourished, which were brought and fent buto him from foren countries, farre diff tant, as lions, leopards, lynres, and poscupines . His estimation was such among outlandish princes, that few would willinglie offend him.

Purcherdach king of Ireland & his successors had Burcherdach him in such reverence, that they durit ow nothing but $. of Ireland. what he commanded, noz write any thing but what might stand with his pleasure, though at the first the same Poschad attempted something against the Englichmen moze than held with reason, but afters ward (bpon restraint of the entercourse of merchandisc)he was glad to thew himselse more frændlie.

Poseover the earle of Dalmey, although he was The earle of the king of Porwaies subject, yet of he what he Drance. could to procure king Henries franoship, sending fuch strange beasts and other things to him often times as presents, wherein he knew the king twhe great delight and pleasure. He had in singular far nour above all other of his councell, Koger the bis Roger bishop Moyof Salisburie, a politike pielate, and one that of Salisburie. knew how to order matters of great importance, unto thome he committed the government of the realme most commonlie whilest he remained in Pormandie.

As well in this kings bates, as in the time of his brother William Kufus, men forgetting their owne fer and flate, transformed themselves into the habit and forme of women, by fuffering their haire to grow in length, the which they curled and trimmed verie curioullie, after the maner of damoscls and yong gentlewomen: infomuch that they made fuch wearing long account of their long buthing perukes, that those haire. which would be taken for courtiers, contended with women who should have the longest tresses, and such as wanted, fought to amend it with art, and by knits ting wreathes about their heads of those their long and lide locks for a branerie. Det we read that king Henrie gaue commandement to all his people to cut Manh. Weft. their haire, about the 28, years of his reigne. Prea

Thœues appointed to be

Citt.

Stephan of Bullongne.

An. Dom. 1135.

e

Si

Po

M

Œ

批生

Ra Li

diers indeed inucied against such unlæmise maners in men, as a thing more agreable and fæmelie for the contrarie fer.

Wil. Malm. reciteth a tale of a knight in those daies that twice no small liking of himselfe for his faire and long haire, tho chanced to have a berie terrible dreame. For it fæmed to him in his flæpe that one was about to strangle him with his owne haire, which he wraped about his throte and necke) the impression whereof fanke so deepelie into his 10 mind, that when he awaked out of his flepe, he Areightwaies caused so much of his haire to be cut as might sæme superfluous. A great number of o.

ther in the realme followed his commendable eram ple, but the remode of conscience herein that thus caused them to cut their haire, continued not long, for they fell to the like abuse againe, so as within a tivelue moneths space they erceded therein as farre beyond all the bounds of læmelie order as before.

In this Penrie ended the line of the Pormans as touching the heires male, and then came in the Frenchmen by the title of the heires generall, after that the Pozmans had reigned about 69. yeares: for fo manie are accounted from the comming of Wil liam Conquerour, buto the beginning of the reigne of king Stephan, who lucceded the late Henrie.

Thus farre the succession and regiment of the Normans; namelie, William Conquerour the father, William Rufus, and Henrie Beauclerke the sonnes.

Stephan earle of Bullongne.

1135 Anno Regu.

Tephan earle of Bullong ne, the sonne of Stephan erle of Blois, by his wife Adela, daughter to William Conquerour, came ouer with all speed after the death of his 20 bucle, and take byon him the government of the realme of England, partlie through confidence which he had in the puillance and Arength of his brother Theobald earle of Blois, and partlie by the aid of his brother Henris bishop of Winchester and abbat of Gla-Aenburie, although that he with other of the Pobles had swozne afoze to be true buto the empresse and hir issue as lawfull heires of king Henrie latelie de ceaffed.

3 tempelt. Matth, Welt.

The fame day that he arrived in England, there chanced a mightic great tempell of thunder horrible to heare, and lightning dreadfull to behold. Pow bis cause this happened in the winter time, it seemed a gainst nature, and therefore it was the more noted as a forespelving of some trouble and calamitie to come.

This Stephan began his reigne over the realine of England the fecond day of December, in the yere of our Loed 1135, in the eleventh years of the empc= 40 rour Lothair, the firt of pope Innocentius the fccond, and about the rrott of Lewes the fenenth, furnamed Craffus king of France, David the first of that name then reigning in Scotland, fentring into the twelfe of his regiment. De was crowned at Weffminster voon S. Stephansday, by William archbishop of Canturburie, the most part of the Pobles of the realme being prefent, and swearing feals tie buto him, as to their true and lawfull souereigne.

Howbeit, there were dinerle of the wifer lost of 50 all estates, which regarding their former oth, could have beine contented that the emprelle Chould have governed till hir some had come to lawfull age; not with flanding they held their peace as pet, and confented bnto Stethan. But this breach of their other Periuric pri was worthilie punished afterward, infomuch that nithed. as well the bishops as the other Pobles either died an euill death, or were afflicted with diverse kinds of calamities and milchances, and that even here in this life, of which some of them as occasion serveth thall be remembred hereafter . Vet there were of them (and namelie the bilhop of Salisburie) which protested that they were free from their oth of allegis ance made to the faid emprelle, bicause that without the confent of the loads of the land the was maried out of the realme, whereas they take their oth to receive hir for quæne, bpon that condition, that with out their affent the thould not marrie with any perfon out of the realme.

Moreover (as some writers thinke) the bishops The bishops twhe it, that they thould do God god feruice in p20- think to pleafe niding for the wealth of the realme, and the advance. God in breat ment of the church by their perfurie. For whereas the king their oth late deccassed king vieo himselfe not altogither for their purpole, they thought that if they might let op and creat a king cheeflie by their especiall meanes and authoritie, he would follow their counsell better, and reforme such things as they sugged to be amille. But a great cause that moved manie of the logds bnto the violating thus of their oth, was (as some au Matth, Paris, thous rehearle) for that Hugh Bigot, sometime steward to king Henrie the first, immediatlie after the decease of king Penrie, came into England, and as well before the archbishop of Canturburie, as divers other loads of the land, twke a voluntarie oth (although most men thinke that he was hired so to do bicaule of great promotion) declaring opon the fame that he was present a little before king Henries death, when the same king adopted and chose his ne thue Stephan to be his heire and fuccessour, bicause his daughter the empresse had greenoustic displeased him. But buto this mans oth the archbilhop and the

Wil.Malm. The bishop of Salisburies

Matth.Paris Wil. Mal. Simon Dun.

Pol

Atr.

imon Dun. 1126

Polydor. Simon Dun. Matth Paris.

Stephan.

Polydor. Ran.Higd. Licence to build calleis,

Wil. Malm. In nonella hiforia.

: bilhop of

e bill; ops

h to pleafe

j in brea-

; their oth

hurics

The refort of Arangers to ferue king

🛳 tephan.

Polydor,

o her loods were so hastie in gluing of credit. Pow 4 e faid Hugh for his periurie, by the full indgement of God, came thostlie after to a miferable end.

But to our purpole. Bing Stechan (by what ti tle socuer he obteined the crowne) immediatlie after his coronation, went first to Reading to the burb all of the bodie of his bucle Denrie, the fame being now brought over from Posimandie, from whence after the buriall he repaired to Drenford, and there calling a councell of the loods & other effates of his 10 unter of king realme; amongst other things he promised before the whole assemblie (to win the harts of the people) that he would put downe and quite abolish that tri bute which oftentimes was accustomed to be gathered after the rate of their acres of hides of land, commonlie called Danegilt, which was two thillings of cuerie hide of land. Allo, that he would so provide, that no bishops sees not other benefices should remaine void, but immediailie affer voon their first bacation, they thould be againe belfolved byon some 20 convenient person meet to supplie the rome. Fur ther he promised not to seize byon any mans woos as forfeit, though any private man had hunted and killed his dere in the same wods, as the maner of his predecessour was. A Fora kind of forfeiture was deutled by king Henrie, that those should lose their right inheritance in their wods, that chanced to kill any of the kings dere within the same.

Mozeouer, be granted licence to all men,to build either cattell, tower, or other hold for defense of themselnes upon their owne grounds. Al this did he chieflie in hope that the same might be a safegard for him in time to come, if the empresse should inuade the land, as he doubted the thootlie would. Dozeouer he aduanced manie poing & luftie gentlemen to great linings. For fuch as were of any noble familie, and thereto through a certaine foutneffe of fromach fought preferment, easilie obteined of him the postel fion of castels and great loadships, diverse of whom hehonoxed with titles of dignitie, creating some of 40 the king gauchim the earledome of Huntington to them earles and some loods. Pow, such was their importunate lute in demanding, that when he had little more to bellow amongst them, having alreadie given fundzie portions that belonged to the crowne, they ceaffed not to be in hand with him for more and being denied with reasonable excuses on his behalfe, they thought themselves ill dealt withall, and so turning from him, fortified their castels and holds, making open warre against him: as hereaster shall appeare.

There came over onto him also a great number of Flomings and Britons to ferue him as fouldiers, whom he reteined, to be the Aronger and better able to defend himselfe against the malice of the empresse, by whom he laked to be molested he wist not how lone. Wherefore he shewed himselfe verie libes tall, courfeous, and gentle towards all maner of persons at the first, and (to saie truth) more liberall. familiar, and free harted than food with the maieffic of a king: which was afterward a cause that he grew 60 into contempt. Thut to fuch meanes are princes deluen, that atteine to their effates more through favour and support of others, than by any goo right or title which they may pretend of themselves. Thus the government of this prince at the beginning was nothing bitter or heavie to his subjects, but full of gentlenesse, lenitie, courtesse, and mildness.

Powbeit whilest these things were a dwing, certeine of the English Pobilitie, abhoring both the king and the present state of his government, went privile out of the realine into Scotland to king Dauid, declaring unto him what a detestable activas committed by the loads of England, in that (contraric to their oth made but othe empresse Hand, and bir issue) they had now crowned Stephan. Where forc they belought the faid king to take in hand to revenge such a vile injurie practiced against hir, and to restoze the kingdome buto the faid empresse, which if he vio, it should be a thing most acceptable both to God and man.

thing Dauld having heard and well weled the eff The king of feet of their request, fouth with was so mouce at their Scots inuawords, that in all possible has he assembled an ary beth the Enmie, and entring into England, first twhe the citie Sim. Dunel, and castell of Carleil: afterward comming into Matt. Paris. Porthumberland, he toke Pewcalfell, and manic of Polydor. ther places byon the bodders there. Thereof king Stechan being aduertifed, ffreight waies affeinbled a power, and forthwith halfed into Cumberland, meaning to recover that againe by force of armes, which the enimie had stolen from him by crast and Subtiltie. At his approch nere to Carleil, he pitched It. Stephan downe his field in the evening, thinking there to encamped state till the morning, that he might buderstand of necre to his what power the enimie was, whome he know to be k.of Scots, at hanb.

Bing Danio also was of a fierce courage, and redie inough to have given him battell, but yet when he beheld the English standards in the field, and diligentlie viewed their older and behaulour, he was at the last contented to give care to such as intreated for peace on both lives. Therebyon comming to king Stechan, he entred a frændlie peace with him, wherein he made a surrender of Pewcastell. with condition that he thould reteine Cumberland by the free grant of king Stephan, the hoped there made betwirt by to find king Daulo the moze faithfull onto him in the two kings time of need: but pet he was deceined, as after, Stephan and wards manifellie appered. For then king Ster Danid. than required of him anoth of allegiance, he answer red that he was once swoone alreadie buto Mand the empresse. Howbeit to gratifie him, he comman-hold of him for ever. The Scotily chaonicles let out the matter in o Hec. Bectius. ther order, but yet all agræ that Henrie sware feab tie to king Stephan, as in the faid historie of Scotland you may lie more at large. Pow after that king Stephan had concluded a peace with king Das Simon Dun. uid, he returned to London, and there kept his @a. Matth. Paris. ffer with great for and triumithes: who whilest he was yet in the middelf of all his pastime, about Ko gation weeke, he chanced to fall ficke of a litargie, by reason wherof a rumoz was spred over all the realme phanticke. that he was dead. Which though it was but a vaine tale, and of no importance at the first, vet was it after the occasion of much enill. For byon that report fallernmores great sedition was raised by the kings entinies at what hurt mongst the people, the minds of his frænds were as they often= lienated from him, a manie of the Pozmans (which were well practiled in perturies & treasons) thought they might boldlie attempt all mischeses that came to hand, and her boon some of them undertoke to defend one place, and some another. Hugh Bigot Bugh Bigot. erle of Porfolke a valiant chieftein entred into Por wich, Baldwin Reduers twhe Erceffer, & Robert Robert Duisquere got certeine castels also into his hands.

ded his son Penrie to receive that oth, for the which

King Stephan hearing what his enimies had done, though he was somewhat moved with this alteration of things, pet as one nothing afraid of the matter, he fato merilie to those that stod about him: The are alive pet God be thanked, and that thall be in knowne to our enimies per it be long. Peither » doubted he any thing but some secret practic of treason, and therfore bling all diligence, he made the more half to go against his entinies, whose attempts though areight water for the more part he repreded,

Simon Dun. King Ste=

times dw.

Baldwin Reduers. Quilquere.

An. Dim. 1138.

pet could be not recover the places (without much adm) that they hav gotten as Greeker, and others: tibith when he had obtained, he contented himselfe for a time, and followed not the victoric any further in purling of his enimies. Therebyon they became more, baid afferivard than before; in fomuch that fone after they practifed dinerle things against him, whereof (God willing) some in places convenient thall appears: howbeit they permitted him to remains in quiet for a time. But whilest he studied to 10 take order in things at home (perceiving how no fmall number of his subjects did dailie thew themfelies to bearehim no hartie god will) he began by little and little to take awaic those liberties from the people, which in the beginning of his reigne he had granted buto them, and to denie those promiles which he had made, according to the lateng, What " which I have given, I would I had not given, and that which remaineth I will keepe Mill. This sudden alteration and new kind of rough dealing purchas 20 fed him great envicamongst all men in the end. As bout the fame time great commotions were railed in Pomandie by meanes of the lood Beffrey earle of Anion, husband to Mand the empresse, setting the thole countrie in trouble: but yer any neives there. of came into England, king Stephan Went against Waldwin Reduces, who being latelie (though not without great and long fiege expelled out of Exces fter)got him into the Fle of Wlight, and there began ming snodenlie into the Ile, take it at the first as fault and criled Baldwin out of the realme. Having thus with god fuccelle finished this ere terpile, and being now aductifed of the businesse in Popmandie, he failed thither with a great armie: and being come within two dates tournie of his enfthis the earle of Aniou, he fent footh his whole power of horstenien, divided into three parts, which were not gone past a dates tournie forward, but they encountred the earle, finding him with no great force 40 about him. Therebpon graing the charge bpon him. they put him to flight, and due manie of his people. Which enterprise in this maner valiantlie atchined cuen according to the mind of king Stephan, he tob ned in frændlig with Lewes the fenenth king of France: and having latelie created his sonne Eustace duke of Posmandie, he presentlie appointed him to ewhis homage buto the faid Lewes for the Theobalderic of Blois at that time in Poymandic, found himfelfe græned, that Stephan the ronger brother had blurged the lands that belonged to their uncle king Henrie, rather than himselfe, Stephan to stop this fulf complaint of his brother, and to allaic his mod, agreed with him, covenanting to paie him yearelie two thouland marks of fuch current monie as was then in vie. Furthermore, wheras Geffrepthe earle of Anion demanded in right of his wife the emploffe with him, king Stephan was contented to fatiffic him with a rearclie pention of five thouland marks, which composition he willinglic receined.

Thus when he had provided for the fuertic of Por mandie, he returned agains into England, where he was no lonce arrived, but aductifement was giuen him of a warre newlic begon with the Scots, whose king under a colour of observing the oth to the empielle, made dailie inforrections and invafrom sinto England, to the great diffurbance of king Stephan and the annotance of his people. Wher with being fomethiat moned, he went Areightwaies to ward the north parts, and determined first to beliege Bedford by the wate, which americand to the earles dome of Huntington, by gift made buto Henrie tha forme of king Dauid, and therebpon at that prefen ! liept with a garifon of Scotish men.

This place vio the king beliege by the space of 30. Simon Duni daies tegither, giving thereto everie daie an affault oralarme, in found that coming thither on Christs made date, he spared not on the mozow to assaile them, and so at length wan the towne from them by mere force and firength. Bing Dauld hearing those Anno Reg. 3. newes, and being alreadie in armour in the field, entred into Posthumberland, and licensed his men of King Danid tred into Posthumberland, and ucenied his mental inuaded 1902-warre to spoile and rob the countrie thereabout at thumberland their pleasure. Herebpon followed such crucitie, that Matth. West. their rage Aretched buto old and young, buto press Polydor. and clearlic, yea women with child escaped not their Mart. Paris, hands, they hanged, headed, and flue all that came in their waie: houses were burnt, cattell driven awaie, and all put to fire and fluord that ferued to any ble for relæfe, either of man or beaff.

I Pere we lachat aband of calamities do accompanie and waite boon warre, wherein also we have to consider what a traine of felicities do at tend byon peace, by an equall comparing of which tivaine togither, we may easilie perceive in how bravenlie an estate those people be that live bnoer the scepter of tranquillitie, and contrariwise what a hellish course of life they lead that have sworne their fervice to the fword. The may confider also the inordinat outrages of princes, their frantike fierles to occure a new confpiracic. Howbeit the king come 30 mes, who esterne not the lose of their subjects lines, the estusion of innocent bloud, the population of countries, the ruinating of ample regions, ac: fo their will may be satisfied, there desire served. And M.Pal. in sin therefore it was aptile spoken by a late poet, not be capric lide this purpole:

> Reges at que duces dira impelluntur in arma, Imperiumque sibi miserorum cade lucrantur. O caci, ô miseri, quid ? bellum pace putatu Dignius aut melius? nempe hoc nil turpius, or nil Quod may is humana procul à ratione recedat. Candida pax homines, trux decet ira feras.

But to our Corie. Ling Stephan hearing of this a. Stephan pitifull spoile, hasted forward with great fournies to make the hast the rescue of the countrie. The Scots put in feare of to rescue the specie comming to encounter them, deele backe in north parts. to Scotland: but he pursued them, and entring into reire their countrie, burned and destroied the south parts to. Stephan of that realme in most miserable maner. Whilest burnethe king Stephan was thus about to beat backe the fouth parts Poly thereas his elver brother Theobald earle 50 forcen entinies, and renenge himselse on them, he of Seviland. was affailed by other at home, 4 not without the fuff vengeance of almightie God, tho meant to punify him for his perturie committed in taking byon him the crowne, contrarie to his oth made buto the emprese and hir children. For Kobert earle of Gloce fter, base byother buto the emprelle, and of hir printe af Sinceffer. councell, fought by all meanes how to bying king Stephan into hatred, both of the Pobles and commons, that by their helps he might be expelled the the whole kingdome of England, to be at in end 60 realme, and the government restored to the empresse

> Such earnest trancil was made by this earle of Cloceffer, that manie of his frænds which favoured his cause, now that king Stephan was occupied in the north parts, joined with him in conspiracie as gainst their sourceigne. First the said earle him felfe toke Bultowe: and after this diverle other Bullow ta townes and castels there in that countrie were tas ben. ken by him and others, with full purpose to keepe the fance to the behave of the empresse and hir sonne. A. mongit other William Talbot toke bpon him to Simon Dun. befend herefoed in Wales: William Louell held Calbot, the callell of Cary: Paganell of Painell kept the Levell, castell of Lindson. William to Manuell kept the Levell. callell of Lublow: Chilliam be Youn the callell of Paincil.

Simon Bun,

Quid.

The Scots

ゴ

SARTU

ai Ti

Œ eti 813

th er H

R

to are

Sin

Polydor.

Geffrey earle of 3 mion.

Simon Duncl. Wil Parous. Polydor.

Anno Reg.2. 1137 is.Diephan patieth into Mormandic,

The earle of Anion put to flight.

Lewes king of France. Enfrace fon to hing Stephan.

Matth.Paris. of Blogs.

It. Stephan agrath with the carle of A mou.

Polydor.

The Mosts inuade the English box derg.

Dunesto::

Duneffor: Robert de Picholl, the cattle of Warram: Custace fitz-John, the castle of Walton; and Wil liam fits-Alain, the castle of Shewesburie.

Then word hereof came to king Stephan, he was maruelloudie vered : for being determined to have purfued the Scots cuen to the ottermost limits of their countrie, he was now driven to change his mind, and thought it god at the first to stop the proexdings of his enimies at home, leaft in giving them space to increase their force, they might in pro- 1 celle of time growe so Arong, that it would be an hard matter to relift them at the last. Herebpon therfore he returned fouthward, and comming bpon his enimies, recovered out of their hands divers of those places which they held, as Hereford, and the castle of Shewesburie. About the same time one Walkeline peloco the castle of Douer buto the quiene, who had belieged him within the fame.

ucred to the queenc. Polydor. &hurstan

Tothe made

Simon Dun.

Matth. Paris. of he caftle of Doner Deli=

archbishop of licutenant of fortified.

The Scots eftlones in= nade Moz=

Archbishop Churltan Taifeth a now er to fight with the Drots.

Simon Dun. Capteines of the armie.

Bafe bilh. of Durham fup plicth the rome of the archbishop.

Matth Paris. Sint Dun.

Pow king Stephan knowing that the Scots were not like long to continue in quiet, returned 20 northwards againe; and comming to Thurstan the archbishop of Porke, he committed the keeping of the countrie onto his charge, commanding him to be p north parts, in a redinesse to defend the borders byon any sud, den invalion. Thich thing the couragious archbishop willinglie bndertoke. Bythis meanes king Ste than being ealed of a great part of his care, fell in hand to beliege the relidue of those places which the rebels kept: but they fearing to abide the danger of into another; whom the kings power of hortemen Aill pursuing and overtaking by the way, flue, and toke no small number of them puloners in the chase. Thus was the victorie in maner wholie atchined, and all those places recovered, which the entimies had

In like maner when king Daulo heard that the king was thus bered with civill warre at home, he entred England againe in most forceable wife: and senoing his horsemen abroad into the countrie, 40 thumberland, commanded them to walke and spoile the same after their accustomed maner, But in the meane time he purposed with himselfe to bestege Pozke: which citie if he might have wone, he determined to have made it the frontier hold against king Stephan, and the rest that toke part with him . Herebpon calling in his horstemen from strateng further abroad, he marched thitherwards, and comming nere to the citic, pitched downe his tents.

In this meane while the archbishop Thurstan, to 50 whom the charge of defending the countrie cheefelie in the kings absence amerteined, called togither the Pobles and gentlemen of the thire and parties adfoining, whom with to pithic and effectuall words he erhorted to relift the attempts of the Scots (whose cruell dwings could keepe no measure) that incontinentlie all the power of the northparts was raised. and (bnder the leading of William earle of Albemarle, Malter Cipeke, Milliam Penerell of Pottingham, and two of the Lacies, Walter and Gils 60 bert) offered even with perill of life and limme to trie the matter against the Scots in a pight field, and ets ther to drive them out of the countrie, or else to lose their lives in the quarell of their prince.

It chanced at this time, that archbishop Thurfan was licke, and therefore could not come into the field himselfe, but pet he sent Rase bishop of Durham to suplie his come, who though he saw and perceived that everie man was readie enough to encounter with their enimies; yet he thought god to vie some erhoptation onto them, the better to encourage them, in maner as here ensueth.

Dest noble Englishmen, and pe right valiant Pormans, of whose courage the Frenchman is a fraid, by you England is kept onder, by you Apulfa doubthouth, and buts you Ferufalem and Antioch have yælded their subjection. Wile have at this pres >> fent the rebellious nation of Scotland (which of right ought to be subject to the crowne of England) come into the field against bs, thinking for euermore to " rid themselves of their submission, and to bying both >> bs and our countrie into their bondage and thealdome. Pow albeit I fee in you courage sufficient, to beat them backe from any further attempt; yet least >> when you hall come to the triall, by any manner of chance, you hould lofe any piece thereof, I lamenting the Cate of my countrie (those greuances I with you thould redrette) do means to ble a few >> words buto you, not for that I would exhort you to dwany man wrong, but rather to beat them backe which offer to do you injurie. Confider therefore that " you shall here fight with that enimie, whom you have >> oftentimes vanquilhed, and oftentimes offending in periurie, haue oftentimes most worthilie vunished: thome also (to be breefe) raging after the maner of cruell robbers, wickedie spoiling churches, and fas >> king away our goos, you did latelie constreine to , lurke in defert places and corners out of fight. As gainst this enimic (I say) therefore worthic of re- >2 uengement for his fo manifold outrages, thew your felnes valiant, and with manlie Comades drive him out of our confines. For as far as I can perceive, the victorie is yours, God furclie will aid you, tho can >> an affault, fled away, some into one part, and some 30 not longer abide the finnes of this people. Wherefore ec he that loseth his life in so tust a quarell (according to the faieng of our fautour) thail find it. Let not their rash and presumptuous bolonesse make you >> afraid, fith so manie tokens of your appoured valie ancic cannot cause them to frand in doubt of you. Pou are clad in armour, and so appointed with hele met, curale, grsines, and target, that the entinte >> knoweth not where to Arike and hurt you. Then fith you hall have to do with naked men, and fuch as ble not to weare any armour at all, but more met for brablers and ale-house quarrellers than men of war bled to the field: what thould you frand in doubt of ? ,, Their huge number is not able to fand against your skilfull order and practifed knowledge in all warlike >> feats and martiall discipline. A rude multitude is but a let, rather than a furtherance to atchine the victor rie. A small number of your worthie elders have of tentimes vanquished great multitudes of entmies. >> As the bilhop was thus speaking to the English armie, and before he grew to an end of his erhortation on, the Scots approched with their battels, fürst certeine of their bands of horstemen were fent afore, to take the higher ground: which when the Englishmen The English perceived, they stated not till the enimies should be men fet boon gin the battell, but ffraightivaies caused their trums the Scots. pets to found, and fo gave the onfet.

The Scots were as readie to encounter with them, to that the battell began to be verie hot, and ex uen at the first out flew the arrowes, and then the formen foined, who fought most siercelie on both fides . Herewith a wing of them of Lodian, which The Scots were in the Scotish bauntgard , brake in byon the of Lodian dis vauntgard of the English: but yet closing togither order the againe, they kept out the enimies, and casting about Simon Dun. with a wing, compatied the Scotily horfemen round Matth. Paris. about, and panching their horses, they sue a great number, and confireined the relique to retire. Which thing when their felowes in the other wing faw, their hearts began to faint, and by and by betwhe them to

The rumoz of this flight being notified to the matire vattell of the Scotish men, there king Dauto him The Scots felfe was fighting with his enimies , discomfited putto fight.

Englifhmen.

them also, in such wife, that they in like sort began to Chainke backe: ara by parts, and after by heaps togis ther. The king did what he could to fair them: but the Ciglith preffed to bpon them, that there was no res concrie. Therefore he himfelfe was glad in the end to beare his men companie, in læking to faue hims felfe by flight, and make such thiff as he could a mongif the relidue.

Maririe carle of Hunting: con his balt: ancie.

His some Henrie the earle of Huntington more regarding his honour, than the danger of life, neither moved with the flight of his father, not the overthrow of the other, came in amongst his men, being readie to turne their backes, and with bold countenance spake these or the like words onto them, as the short, co nells of the time would permit . Whither go you god fellowes. Here hall you find armour and force, " neither hall you, while the remaineth in your cap ce teine (whom ye ought to follow) depart without the or victorie. Therefore choice whether you had rather trie the matter with the enimies by battell, or to be put to a tham efull death at home after your returne this 20 co ther. The Scots moved with these vehement words of their valiant capteine, recoiled bpon their enimies, and began to make hauocke of them: but being no great number, and befet with the English fortuen before, and the hordemen behind, they were Mortlie brought to diffreste, and for the more part ev ther taken of Caine.

At length earle Penrie perceining how the matter went, and that there was no hope left of recover rie, fled also with those that could escape, bitterlie cur: 30 fing the frowardnesse of fortune, and mishap of that daies chance. The number of them that were killed at this battell was above ten thousand. In which The number, number there were not manie of the English: but pet among other, Walter Lacie the brother of Oil vert Lacie, one of their chafe capteines is remem= bred to be one. Wis battell was fought in the moneth of August, in the fourth of king Stephan, who hearing of this vidorie, greatlie refolled, and gave infinite commendations to his lubicas (the En, 40 glithmen and the Posmans) but principallic prais fed archbishop Thurstan and the bishop of Durham for their faithfull and diligent service theired in this behalfe.

On the other fide he himselse vling the like god facceffe amongst the rebels at home, overcame them, and chased them out of the land. For in this meane time he had taken the castels of Dereford, Glocester, Mebbeley, Briffowe, Dudley, and Shrelvesburie. Likewise Robert carle of Glocester not being able 50 to relift the king thus prevailing against his adverfaries on ech hand, fled into France buto his fifter the empresse. After this, about Aduent, the popes legat one Alberthe bishop of Hossia, held a synod at London, within Paules church, there by the kings consent, Deobald abbat of Bechellouin was conse crated archbishop of Canturburie, being the 37. archi bishop which has ruled that see, after Augustine the taken the castell of Leives, and brought the state of the realme to a moetlie good Caie, thought it expedient after the late overthrow given to the Scots, to purfue the victorie, and viterlie to fubdue them with all expedition. We brought his armie therefore into Scotland, first wasting and spotling the countrie, and afterward preparing to fight with such Scots as came forth to defend their gods and houses. B.Da uid perceining himselfe to be to weake, made sute to the king for peace, which with much difficultie he obteined at length, by delivering his sonne Benric butoking Stephan in pleage for the fure performance of conenants concluded byon betwirt them. Herebpon king Stephan having thus ended his bu finelle in Scotland, returned into England; and al ter directing his to:nie towards Wales, he came to Ludlow: which towne (being held by his adversa Ludlow when rics) he wan yer long out of their hands.

After this he went to Orenford, where whilest he remained, a great brute was spred abroad, that the empecife was comming with hir brother the earle of Glocester: which caused him to put the lesse trust in his people from thenceforth, in to much that he began to repent himselfe (although tw late) for that he had granted licence to so manie of his subiects to build castels within their owne grounds. For he had them all in suspicion: and amongst other, he vehementlie Boger buhop suspected Roger bishop of Salisburie (the had done of Salisburie, verie much for him) and Alexander bithop of Line Alexander B. coine nephue to the faid billion of Salifburie, or (as of Lincolne, some thought) more niere to him in kindred than Wil. Malm. his nephue, I meane, his sonne. For the sato Roger had builded diverse callels, as at Shierborne, at the Ties, and at Palmelburie. The law Alexander was built following his vincles example, believed his by the village by the village Mies, and at Malmesburie. The said Alexander likemonie that way berie freile, having builded one car of salifonit, ffell at pewarke, and an other at Sieford.

The king therefore having committed both these Simon Dun. bilhops to pillon, and furthermore fent Aigellor De Marke till the biffop of Clie into erile (which Pigell was ner the biffop of phue also to the foresaid bishop of Salisburie) he Lincolne. threatened to keepe them without either meate or The B. of Ca drinke, if they would not cause these castels to be der lie banished. lincred into his hands, whereby he obteined them, and moreover found in the bilhop of Salisburies cofers 40. thouland marks, which he toke to his owns ble, by way of confilcation for his dilloiall demeanor: The billion of This ingratitude of the king wounded the bilhops Saliburie This ingratitude of the sing wounded up ongops but hof hart, infomuch that taking thought for the following thought. houles and monte, he pined awate, and died within a Wil. Malm. while after.

The quarrell which was first picked at these bis storia. Mops, role by occasion of a fraie betwirt the bishops men and the fernants of Alaine duke of Britaine, about the taking op of Innes at their comming to Drenford. In which fraise one of the dukes men was killed, his nerbue almost slaine, and the residue of his folkes love beaten and chased. Herebyon were the bishops first committed to ward, and afterward handled at the kings pleasure, as partlie pe have beard.

I Deere by the way, good reader, thou haft one er- fortunes in ample worthie to be marked of fickle fortunes in constance. constancie, whereof the poet speaketh verie ercellentlie;

-variat semper fortuna tenerem, Dinerso gandens mortalia voluere casu. Nam qui scire velit, cur hunc fortuna vel illum Aut premat aut sursum tollat, nimu ardua quærit : Terrarum siquidem est illi concessa potestas Maxima, & huic illam prafecit Iuppiter orbi.

For this Roger bishop of Salifburie, was in the dates of William Kufus a poze præft, serning a The king having now accomplished his purpose, 60 cure in a village nere the citie of Caen in Romandie. Pow it chanced, that the losd Benrie the kings brother came thither on a time, and called for a preft to say made before him. Wher byon this Roger comming to the altar, was by and by readie and quicke at it, and therewithall had so specific made an end thereof, that the men of warre then attendant on the faid lood Henrie, affirmed that this press about all other, was a chapleine meet to fay malle before men of warre, bicause he had made an end when manis thought he had but newlie begun. Perespon the kings brother commanded the press to follow him, informed that when opostunitie feruco, for his dille gent scruice, and readie dispatch of matters, when Henrie had atteined the crowne, he was by him

In nonella lise

M. Palinfra

aduancea

N. Triuct. Simon Dun. Matth. Paris.

Pan.Higd.

Caltels reco

nered by king

dtephan.

Polvdor.

Hen Hunt,

Simon Dun.

Wil. Paru.

Polyder.

Matth. Paris.

Choobald. archbillop of Canturburie.

Anno Reg. 5. 1140 Polydor. Maith Paris.

R. Stiphan inuabeth Scotlano.

A peace cons cluded be= twane the two kings of England and Drorland.

Balisburie made load Chancelour. lour of England, after bilhop of Salisburie, grows ing fill into luch effination, that he might do moze

But to returne to king Stephan, who after he had thus impuloned the aforefaid bilhops, manned thole castles which he toke from them with his owne soldiers, in like maner as he had done all the rest which he had taken from the rebels, that he might the bet ming he cuer feared. De began also to thew himselfe cruell towards all men, and namelie against those that had thiedie furthered his title to the obteining of the crowne. This (as manie twhe it) came to palle by the providence of almightie God, that thole Mould luffer for their periuries, which contrarie to

B. Stephan to truft.

De cotracteth affinitie with the French king.

Wil, Malm. Polydor. Matt.Paris. Miberike De Mar pleabeth the bings canfe.

The empreffe England.

what power the brought with hir.

Wil. Malm.

Polydor,

Carle Robert Glocefter.

The bishop of advanced to great promotions: as first to be Chance with the king than any other of the councell.

> ter withstand the empresse and hir sonne, whose com: 1 law and right had confented to crowne him king.

In dad he will not well whom he might trust, for boubts whom he floo in doubt of all men, bicause he was advertifed by credible report, that the empresse sought for aid 20 on all fives, meaning verie shortlie to come into England. For this cause also he thought good to procure the frændship of Lewes king of France, which he brought to passe, by concluding a mariage betwene his sonne Eufface and the ladie Constance fiffer to the faid Lewes. But within a few yeares affer, this Eufface died, and then was Conffance maried to Kaimond earle of Tholouse.

> In the meane time, namelic on the first daie of therein earle Alberike de Acer pleaded with great eloquence the kings case, in creuse of his fault for imprisoning the bilhops, which was soze law to his charge by his owne brother the billiop of Winchester, being also the popes legat: who (togither with the archbilhop of Canturburie and other bilhops) had called this councell for that purpole. Howbeit they got nothing of the king but faire words, and promis fes of amendment in that which had beine done o therwise than equitie required, which promises were 40 biterlie unperformed, and so the councell brake up.

In the moneth of Julie the empresse Mand land landed here in ded here in England at Portesmouth, Elwent frait to Arundell, which townse (togither with the countie of Suffer)hir mother in law Avelicia king Henrics fecond wife, wedded to William de Albenay, held in right of allignation for hir dolver. There came in with the empresse hir brother Kobert and Hugh 156 got, of whom ye have heard before.

Some write that the empresse brought with hir a 50 great armie, to the intent that toining with Ranulph earle of Chesser (who twice part with Robert erle of Glocester, bicause the same Kob. had maried his daughter) the might fight with king Stephan, and trie the battell with him. Differ occlare that the came to England now at the first, but with a small power (as feuen score horsemen or nich of armes as we may call them) in hope of Gods affurance (who seldome faileth those that fight in a rightfull cause) and agains byon trult of aid of freends, who for the 60 benefits received at hir fathers hands, would be readie to go against king Stephan. Therebpon his brother earle Robert leaning his litter in the castle of Arundell, rode with all speed buto Glocester tho rough his enimies countrie, not taking with him past 12. men of armes, and as manie archers on hollebacke, that upon his coming thither he might leuic an armic with so much speed as was possible. Pow when he came to Glocester, though the citie ivas kept with a garifon of foldiours placed there by king Stephan, yet the tolunclmen, after they heard that their earle was approched to the gates, they drone out the garison, received him into the towne, where he remained a time, partlie to assemble an armie, and partlie to practife with other tolones and cafels thereabouts, to revolt but o his lifter. Amongst Matt. Patis. all other, the earles sonne Basan, and Diles of Olo atte of Siocefter were right folfull of the news of the empresses cefters some, arrivall, and gladic prepared themselnes to sight in Wiles carle defense of hir cause.

In the meane time king Stephan, hauing know Polydor. The empress ledge of the landing of the emprelle, and other hise belieged in F nimics, came frait to Arundell, where he belieged rundell caftel, hir in the callle, and spent his labour certeine vaies in vaine about the winning of it. Howbeit at that present he did not prevaile, for there were certeins with him, who in favour of the empresse bare him in hand, that it was not possible to win that fortresse, and therefore adulted him to raile his ficge, and luffer the empreste to be at libertie to go to some other place, where he might with more ease and lesse day mage get hir into his hands. The king not perceis The king uing the drift of those secret practisers, followed their raiseth his counsell. Therebpon the empresse being now at libertie, went from place to place to trie and folicit hir freends: and as a river increaseth in the passage, so the further the ladie went, the moze his polver increafed. About the midft of the next night after the fiege was raised, the departed out of the castle, and with great fournies sped hir towards Bullow, which was The empress alreadie revolted to hir tide.

These things being thus bruted abroad, the Peeres of the realme reforted to hir, as they that well re-September, a councell was holden at Wincheffer, 30 membred how in time past by oth of allegiance they were fuerlie bound to hir and hir issue. The king in k. Stephan the meane time belieged the callle of Wallingford, beliegeth but after he understood that the empresse was not wallingsord ten to Bullow, repenting himfelfe for his light crea dit given to cuill counsell, he lest off the siege of Wallingford, and drew towards Briffow, that he might (if it were possible) inclose his adversaries within that walled citie. But the empresse, being aduertised of his determination (by such of hir frænds as were resident about him) first went to Gloces Ner, and after to Lincolne, there the provided bits tailes and all other things necessarie for hir armie and defense: purposing to remaine in that citie, till the matter were either tried by chance of warre bes twirt hir and king Stephan, or that by the peoples helpe revolting to hir live, he might be driven out of the realine, and the restored to the whole governes ment. The king followed hir vericearnestlie, and Anno Reg. 6. comming unto Lincolne besieged it, assateng on e uerie side which waie he might best find meanes to win it, t enter into the same. At length the empresse Sim. Duncl. found Wift to escape from thence, and within a little R. Houe. while the king got possession of the citie. But thost in Stephan lie after Robert early of Alexader and Armedia lie affer, Robert earle of Blocester, and Ranulph Lincolne. earle of Cheffer, Hugh Bigot, and Robert of Moz Ran, Higd. ley affembling their power, aswell of Welthmen Simon Dun. as others, to come to the fuccour of those that were Polydor. thus besieged, came to Lincolne, & pitching downe N.Trues. their tents neere to the enimies, they refted the first night without making any great attempt.

In the morning being the fecond date of Februar rie, so some as it was daie, they let their men in order of battell, and brought them forth in fight of the king and his hoft: tho on the other fide, not meaning to of the kings refule the conflict, ordered his men readie to encouns armie readie ter them, whome he divided into 3. severall battels, to give bat= The chiefest part of his armed men he amointed to tell. remaine on fot, amongst uhom he placed himselfe, Simon Dun Matt.Paris, with certeine noble men, as earle Baldwin, and o thers. The relique being horstemen, he disposed into two severall wings, in one of which were Alaine The earles bulke of Britaine, Hugh Bigot earle of Porfolke, of Porfolke. Simon earle of Hampton, and two other earles, Manpron, Mellent and Waren: howbett they were not furnt waren.

of Hereford.

goeth to Abzia flow.

Simon Dura

Che carle of Albemarie. william de Tuica. of the battels on the kings aduerfarieg part.

The oration of the earle of Chefter.

Ran, Higd.

thed with fuch number of nun as had beine requilit; for as it fell out, they brought no great retinues with them. The other wing was governed by the earle of Albemarle, and William de Pp2cs.

Pow on the adversaries live, the earle of Cheffer The ordering led the fore ward, and those whome king Stephan had differited, were placed in the middle ward. In the rere ward the earle of Glocester with his companie had the rule. And besides those three battels, the Welthmen were let as a wing at one of the lides.

> Here the earle of Chester (to viter the god will which he had to fight) appointed in faire armour as he was, spake these words in effect as followeth, dire cting the same to the earle of Glocester, and other the capteines, faieng: I give you hartie thanks, most invincible chiesteine, and you my fellow solds ers, which declare your hartie god wils towards me, ce even to the feoparding of your lives at this my request and instance. Sith then I am the occasion of copour perill, it is convenient that I make the first en 20 ce trance, and give the onset of the battell byon that most distofall king, who granting a truce, hath broten the peace; and swearing to be a subject, is now 66 prouced a most wicked blurper: I therefore trusting ce both opon revenge of the unfull dealings of this king, and allo boon mine owne force and courage, thall Araitivaies breake in funder the arraie of his ec armie, and make wate through the middelf of the ex confinies with swood in hand. It shall be your parts uen now my mind giveth me, that I thall passe tho c rough the battels, tread the capteines under fot, and corun the king through with this my tharpe fword.

The earle of Glocefters answertothe earle of The= Mers oration.

When he had thus ended, the earle of Blocesfer answered in this wife: It is not against reason that you hould require the honoz of the first onset, both for the nobilitie of your house, and also in respect of the prowelle wherein you excell; but yet if you fand cc bpon nobilitie, for my part, being the sonne and necc phue of a king, ought not I to be preferred . If boon 40 ing by their hands to God) abiured all intention to valiancie, here are manie verie worthie men, afore " thom there is not one alive that may chalenge any co prerogative. But another reason moveth me most chieflie to be the formoff. The king, tho contrarie to his oth made to my litter, hath cruellie vsurped the cc hingdome, and fetting all in trouble, hath beene the cc cause of manie thouland mens deaths, and diffris buted lands and livings to such as have no right to the same, which he hash violentlie taken from the cc rightfull owners, who are quite ditherited. This king 50 (F faic) is first to be assailed with the assistance of the righteous indge, who prepareth punishment for wicted dwers. For almightie God, who wageth his pear ce ple with equitic, will loke downe from his heavens ce lie habitation, and will not leane be comfortleffe in this fo great a necessitie. One thing there is, most c valiant capteines, and all youright hardie fouldiers, ec which I would have you to confider, that through the fennes, which with much add you have patted, there vanquish the entinies, or else vie in the field: for no hope of fafegard remaineth in fleing awaie. This onelie refleth (F faie) that you make waie for you to enter the citie with force of your weapons. If I be co not deceined in that which my mind giveth me to co confecture, the lacke of meanes to cleape, otherwise than by the wing your felues valiant men, by Gods. ce helpe will bring be the victorie. For he must néeds ce plaie the man, who hath not other fuccor to avoid the conger of debruation. The citizens of Lincolne. tho thall fight to neere their houses as you thall fee, will er not fraie long to get them thither for their refuge. ec And herewith confider and weis (I besech you) as gainst whom you hall match in this battell. There is Alanc duke of Britaine, who commeth armed a Plane duke of gainst you, yea rather against God, a wicked person, Butaine. and spotted with all kind of filthinesse; who in mas lice bath no pere, as one that never wanted defire to do mischefe: and who to be comparable in crueltie would indge it a great reproch. There commeth > also the earle of Mellent, a man full of all guile and The carle of deceit, in whose hart iniquitie is roted, and nothing founding in his mouth but onthankfulneffe; befides >> this, he is flothfull in deds, prefumptuous in words, >> not halfie to fight, but fruit to run awaie. Then commethearle Hugh, who hath not thought it sufficient Carte Profit to breake his oth to my litter the empresse, but he must commit periorie the second time, in advouch. 33 ing (bpon a new oth) that king Henric granted the 39 kingdome to Stephan, and disabled his daughter. After him marcheth the earle of Albemarle, a man The carle of of fingular constancie in cuill, verie readie to at Aibemarie. tempt and loth to give over a mildhefe: whole wife, The carte of through irkesomnes of his filthic behausour is gone Albermarles from him; the that keepeth hir, cometh with him also wife. against vs, an open adulterer, tone well esteemed of Bacchus, but nothing acquainted with Pars. Then fetteth fouth Simon earle of Pampton, whose deds conflit in words, t whole gitts reft in promiles. For of Hampton, then he hath late, he hath done; a then he hath promiled, ye get no more. Finallie there come togither a Like mailer, knot of Pieres & Poble men, like to their king and like fernants, maifter, accustomed to robberies, enriched with rathen to follow me, who will lead you the wate: for e- 30 pines, embrued with manuaughters, to chamed with " perfurie. Dou therefore (most valiant capteins & har, >> die fouldiers) uhom king Henrie hath aduanced, and this man hath brought bnoer fot; whom he made wealthie, and this man hath impouerithed; boon " trust of your worthy valiancie, year ather voon trust >> of Gods luffice læke your reuenge thus offered by ,.. God bpon these wicked wretches, & with manlie for machs bow to go forward, t fortwere stepping back.

When the earle had made an end, all the armie (lift-flee, and so made themselves readie to set forward.

Ling Stephan having no pleasant voice of himfelfe, appointed earle Baldwin to give an exportation on to his armie, wherebpon getting himselfe to an high place where he might be fæne & heard of them, he thus began. All such as thall give battell, ought Earle Balo: to forelie three things: first, that their cause be winhis oparighteous: feconolie, the number of their men to be tion in the becaugh at the least; and third is the ground on the balle of hing equall at the leaft : and thirdlie, the godneffe and ful- Stephan. ficiencie of them. The righteoulnes of their cause Thee things ought to be regarded, least men runne in danger of to be fore-the foule; the number of men is to be respected, least french then then should be amounted with multitude of mining. they thould be oppelled with multitude of entinies; give battill, and the gwonesse of the soldiers is to be considered, " least trusting in the multitude, they thould presume ,, bpon the ald of fæble persons, fluch as are of small ,. valure. In all these points we see our selves sufficientlie furnithed. The inflice of our cause is this : that observing the thing which we vowed to our king bes ,, is no wate to cleape by flight. Here muft we either 60 fore God, we fand to the fame against those that ,... have fallified their faith, cuen to the perill of death. ,, Dur number is not much lelle in hoallemen, and in , formen we erced them. As for the gooneffe or fuffi. ciencie of our men, who is able to expecte the noble, prowelle of somanie earles, of so mante lords and ,, foldiers, trained by euer in warres ? The palling bas 32 liancie of our king may fland in place of innumera, ble fouldiers. Sith then he being the loads annoin, ted, is here amongst you, onto whom ye have volved, allegiance, performe your boto. For the more earneffly and faithfully pe forue pour prince in this bate, tell, which you are readie to fight against periored ,, persons, the more thall your remard be at the bands ,, of God and him. Therfoze be of god comfort, thave "

The necessi: baliantlie.

Eric Robert. battell. The force of erle Robert is well knowne, his maner is to threaten much, to worke little, for ions Checale of harted in deds. The earle of Chester what is he aman of unreasonable boloneste, bent to conspira cie, inconstant to performe that which he rashlie tas " hethin hand, readie to run into batell, bucircumfped com danger, practifing things of great importance, fice king after things bnpoffible, bringing with him few 10 god foldiers, but gathering a bagarant rout of ral, ce cals. There is nothing in him that we ought to be afratoof, for lotte that soeuer he attempteth man. fullic, the same he give thouer womanlie, in all his dwings unfortunate, in all encounters either he is co overcome and fleth awaie, or if he get the opper hand (which feldome times chanceth)he fuffeineth greater ioffe than they whom he ooth vanquish. The Wielthmen, whom he bringeth with him are ce little effemed of vs, tho pretenda naked rathnelle 20 without any ble of armoz, so that as men without any knowledge of martiall policie, they fall as brute ce bealts upon the hunters taueline. The other, as well the nobles as the common fouldiers are but runna gates and bagabounds; of whom I would with the number greater than it is: for the more they be, the co inwalle in effect their feruice thall pawe in time of co need. Poutherefoze (mod worthie cheefetaines) you men of honoz, it standeth you byon to have in regard ce renowine, and follow the foresteps of your famous anceffors, leave to your fonnes an ever lafting commendation. The continual luccelle of victorie ought apponocation to be a pronocation but o you to do manfullie : the of boldinesses. continuance of cuill speed may be to yonder side an occasion to run away. For even alreadie (Force say) co they repent them of their comming hither, and could be contented to be gone, if the nature of the place would lufter them to depart. Then fith it is not poll " ble for them either to fight or to fle, that other thing 40 of bilhop Penrie, though he was king Stephans cc can they do, but (as appointed by Gods ordinance) offer themselves and all they have about them prefentlie unto bs . Die fe then their horffes, their ar-" mour, and their bodies readie here at your pleasure, ce lift by your hearts therefore, and reach your hands to take that with great chearefulnesse of mind, which the Lood bath thus offered and frælie presented bu-

Pow per he had all made an end of his words, noise of trumpets and other instruments, and the fight began with a verie fore and cruell flaughter. Pard it was in the beginning to gelle the should have the better. The wing of the disherited men overthely and bare downe their adverfaries, which were led by the duke of Britaine, and the forenamed carles. On the contrarie part, the earle of Albemarle and William de Ppres put the Wielhmen to flight, but by the earle of Chester and his retinue, the same afrely, and put out of order. Thus was the kings fide put to the worle, namelie his horfemen, who being placed in the forefront, and there overmatched, fell to galoping. Which thing when the king beheld, he was not pet any whit therewith abathed, but like an har die captein (as he was no lesse inded) comforted his formen whom he had about him, and rulhing open his enimies, bare them downe, and overthiew fo manie as frod before him, to that with the point of his weavon he made himselfe waie . Dis formen. tho were but a few in number to the multitude of his crimics, countervailed in all points the protocs and manlike doings of their king and capteine, informuch that felo bat tels had beene better fought, no: with greater flaughter on both sides, if the kings fore ward (which in maner at the first shranke backe and was difordered, not without some supicion of treason) had fraied the brunt of the enimies a while, as it had been requilite. At length the king encountring with the earle of Cheffer, being overcharged with multitude, was taken palloner by one William de Cahames.

Earle Baldwine, who had made the oration in the Simon Dun. kings behalfe, was also taken , after he had fought Hen. Hunt. valiantlie and received manie fore wounds: likes wife Kichard Fitzbale, who on that daie had the wed god profe of his manhod, and had given and receined manie a loze fripe. To conclude, all fhole that Matth. Paris. above with the king, and namelie all the formen were taken pulloners, those which were slaine in the place excepted. This battell was fought in the firt W. Paru. yeare of king Stephans reigne, upon Candlemas date, being fundate, as Niger faith.

The king being appehended and brought to the Polydor. The king led empresse lieng at Glocoster, was commanded by to Bustow. hir to be conneied in fafetie unto Bustow, where he was kept as prisoner from that time of his taking, untill the feast of All faints next enfuing . Pot long after this field fought, as pe have heard, Geffrey earle of Aniou hulband to the emprelle, receiving advertisement of this victoric atchived in England, forthwith invaded Pormandie, inducing all the Pobles of the countrie to incline onto him: for by pubor pour vertue and dignities. This day advance your 30 lifting the captinitie of king Stephan, it was easie for him to come by the pollettion of the fame.

Moreover, David king of Scotland entred into Posthumberland, and by commandement of the em Sects taketh vielle toke the countrie into his hands, whilest the Porthumbers (like a woman of great wifedome, as the was no land into his lesse indeed subging that it stood hir open to vie the possession. Polydor. bictozie which fell to hir lot , Cept not hir bulinelle, but Tolyaor. The emprelle went forward, and fetting from Bloceffer, the came foloweth the to Minchester, there she was honozablie received victorie. brother, and inwardie lamented the milfortune of the king . Then came the backe agains to Willton, and to to Drenford, from thence to Reading, and then to S. Albons, into all which cities and fownes

the was received with great triumph and honour. Haning thus paffed through all the fouth parts of She comety the realme on that five, the finallie came to London, to London. where the citizens welcomed hir in most joifult and hartie maner. Pow being come to London, and conthe batels were readie to joine, they met with great 50 fulling with those of hir councell for the quieting of the whole state of the realme, queene Daud wife to The queene king Stephan (for to the was also called) made fueth to the humble fuit buto hir to have hir husband fet at lie empresse to bettie, momissing that he should referre his chale the delucrie bertie, promising that he should resigne his whole of hir husband claime and title into hir hands, and content himfelfe with a private life. But hir fuit was to farre off from being granted that the was rejected and cast off with reproductive words. Wherebyon the conceived a most high displeasure, and understood well inough; that carle and Cililiam of Price were flercelle affailed 60 peace was to be purchased by force of armes onelic, and not by any other meanes: infomuch that with all diligence the fent to hir fonne Gufface (then being in Bent) & willed him to prepare an armie, which he did most spædilie.

It chanced at the same time that the citizens of London made great and laborious fuit onto the faid empresse, that they might have the lawes of king Coward the Confesiour restored, and the straight lawes of hir father king Henrie abolithed . But for fo much as they could get no grant of their petition, and perceived the empresse to be displeased with them about that importunat request, wherein onelie The Lenda the ouershot hir selfe, they deuised how and by what rees conspired to take the meanes they might take hir prisoner, knowing that empress,

W. Paru. Hen.Hunt.

Matth. Paris.

Hen Hant.

Polydor,

5+

all the Lieunichmen would beloe to Grengthen them in their enterprise. But reckoning with hir felfe that i pacorit propera tutius esse fuga And being warned thereof , the fled by night out of recognition the citie, and went to Orenford, determining to be ontoftheeme, rouenged bpon bir aduerfartes ichen time thould ferus hir turne. Percivith the began to war more difpleafed both against those Pobles whom the kept in pulon, tother also whom the troubled, but name; he hing Stechan, whom the commanded to be loden 10 with prons, and ferued with verie flender diet.

Pow when the had thus fled out of London, which was about the feath of the nativitie of S. John Bap till, the tower of London was belieged, with Geffer rey de Pandeuile held, and valiantlie defended. The fame Ceffreyrufhing out on a time, came to ful The billiam of ham, where he toke the bishop of London then lodge ing in his mano: place, being one of the contrarie fied by the bis chelter.

milliam de

ypielli.

Ia. Meir.

floria.

ner.

D. Triact.

Geffren De

Alandeude.

Londo taken.

Polydor.

Henric bishop of Windester perceining the weath 20 of the emprette more and more to increase dailie as gainst hir people, thinking it wiscoone to serve the Callels fortis time, manned all the callels wich he had builded ivilipin his dicces; as at Waltham, Farnham, and o ther places, and with one whimselfe into the castell of Minchester, there to remaine, till he might see to what end the furie of the woman would grow. This being knowne, the empresse toke onto hir Dauid hing of Scotland that was hir bucle, who immediate lie wining their armies togither, went to Winches fer and belieged the castell. In the meane time the quene and hir sonne Custace, with the helpe of their frænds, as the Lientiffmen, the Londoners and other had affembled a great armie, and appointed the go. nernement and generall conduct thereof buto one William of Popesa Fleming, who for his valians cie was by king Stephan created earle of Bent: he was some to Philip of Flanders, begotten of a concubine, his father also was sonne to Robert carle of Flanders, furnamed Frifius. This William was bar 40 niffed out of his countrie by Theodorike Clfas earle of Flanders, bicause he attempted to bereaue him of his earledonic.

Wil.Malm. In novella hi-N. Triuet. Sim.Dun. Polydor. The empresse armie put to flight. Wil.Malm. Robert carle of Glocefter taken pulo-

Matt, Paris.

Wil.Paruus. N. Triuct. Daund king of Socots reti red home. Simon Dun, R. Houe. Alberthe de Cler flaine.

Wil.Malin,

The quanes armie thus committed to his guiding, came nere unto Wincheffer, and kept the cm. presse and his people in maner besieged: at length perceiving the advantage after the comming of a great suplie of Londoners to their aid, they fet bpon hir armie as the fame was ocparting, with fuch vio lence, that fraightwaics hir hoff was put to flight 50 and discomfited. The empresse was glad to faine hir felfe dead, and fo to be conneied in a coch as a dead corps unto Cloceffer. Hir brother Robert with manie other of the Pobles that Caied behind, till the and other might get out of banger, were taken pais foners. And bicause the king was kept at Bustow buder the custodie of the faid Robert, the quæne caw fed him to be hardlie handled, that he might proue the mords of the gospell true: With what measure ye remeasured buto you. He had deserved berie evill of the king heretofose, and therefose it was now remembred. De was taken (in maner abouefaid) on the feast day of the evaluation of the cross.

David king of Scotland was not at the battell himfelfe, but hearing of the discomuture, got him out of the countrie, and by helpe of truffic guides returned into Scotland, while alberike de Tier was Claime at London in a seditious fumult raised by the citizens. The kingdome being thus divided into two feuerall factions, was by all fimilitudes like to come to viter ruine: for the people kindled in hatred one against another, sought nothing else but revenge on both fives, and fill the land bias spoiled and wasted by the men of warre with locged within the caffels and fortreffes, and would often iffue out to harrie and Polyder. spoile the countries. But now that the two cheefest heads were priloners, there was good hope conceived that God had so wrought it, whereby might grow some overture of talke, to quiet such troubles by frændlie peace and agræment.

Hereopon those loves that wither well to the common-wealth, began to intreate betwirt them, and articles were propounded for a concord to be had, and an erdiange of puloners on both lives. But the empresse and hir brother would not hearken to any as græment, ercept that the realme might Wolie remaine to the faid empresse. Whereby the entmics were rather increased than decreased by this treatie, Gerualius so that at length the king and the earle (weried with Dorober. tedious yeklomnesse of yeons and hard impulons The king and ment, and putting all their hope in the chance of war) the carie of about the feat of All faints made erthange by de: Glocefter belivering of the one for the other, without making change. mention of any peace at all : and so kindled with Anno Reg. 7. new displeasures, they renewed the warre.

king Stephan being belivered in luch wife as you Geruafius Dohave heard, comming to London, and there being robernensis. accompanied with his brother Henrie billiop of called. Winchester (then the popes legat) Theobald archbis Mop of Canturburie, and others, he called a parles ment, wherein the king occlared the prefent fate, how the enimic was brought to this point, that if it would please the Pobles of the realme to mainteine him with men x monie, he trufted now fo to worke, as they thould not need to feare submission to the poke of a womans government : which at the first they ferned much to militie, and now lithens (to their great grefe) had proued to be intollerable. The fumme of his talke tended to this end, that those which were able of themselves to aid him with their owne persons, should prepare them out of hand so to dog and the relidue that were not met (as bishops, and such like maner of men) should be contributors to aid him with hired fouldiers, armour, and monie.

This was gladlie agreed byon, with the generall consent of all the assemblie. And bicause the bishops theired themselves verte liberall towards the aduancing of the kings purpose, there was a ffatute made at the same parlement, that who so ever did late any violent hands on a facred person, occise toke upon him to appehend any of them, for that Affatute effafault focuer, without the bishops licence, he should be bliked in faaccurred, and not be affolled of any maner of perfon, nour etpeans ercept of the pope, as by a canon it was alreadie decreed, but not obeied among the Englishmen till that daie. The cause of making this statute was thest lie for that precis during the time of the civil wars, were dailie either flaine, or taken priloners, and fo put to their ransoms, or charged with great penalties and arecuous fines.

The bilhop of Minchester at this councell also began an other brail among the cleargie, for being meat unto other, with the fame by other thall it be 60 brother to king Stephan, armed with the popes aw thoritie as his legat in England, by reason of erers ciling his authoritie, fell at variance with the billyop of Canturburic, who toke himselfe for his superior, bicause he was his primat. This quarell grew to far in question, that they went both to Kome to have the controversie decided, and so beinging their intes thither, contented well the eares of them that had the hearing of the same: for the more weightie the cause feemed the better it liked them.

> A late writer, noting in clergiemen of his age a Tank, Lane, in countrie not onelie the aspiring vice of ambition, Chron ciaizm but other vilogers also, and monstrous cutrages, fag.760. affer a complaint made that gold (by which title he calleth those of the ecclesialticall ofter) is turned into drotte, and sweet wine become fart vineger, concludeth with the illation of the cause hereof compais fed in this metricall accouplement, fateng:

1142

Dum factor rerum prinaret flamine clerum, Ad sasana votum successit turba nepotum.

Which he inferred byon occasion against the prepolicrous elections of bumeet men into episcopall fies, for that they were not so qualified as the dignitie of the place required; otherwise peraduenture enabled with competent knowledge and learning. 10 And fuerlie, we may note these inordinate affections from the beginning of this our chronicle in the best (Imeane in respect of their estates) of this linerie, and may infilie impute it to the defection of Gods spirit in them, whose nature is to plant peace and mækenesse in the harts of his tenants, not discord, not ambition, not the works of barknesse, which besæme not the chilozen of light. But to the purpose.

Matth. Paris. Earle Robert palleth ouer into 1002= mandic.

Mozmandie mone by the sarie of An-104.

Wil.Malm. Carle of Glo= cofter retur-

Ger.Dor.

Wil, Malm.

The Ile of Circefter.

belieged in Drfozd.

As the king began (after his libertie obteined) to provide for warres, so earle Robert (after he was 20 discharged) sailed ouer into Pozmandie, taking with him the sonnes of dinerle Poble men tho fand red the empreste, whome he delivered to hir husband the earle of Antou to be kept as pleages, a earnessie befought him to paste over into England with an armic to ato the empresse. Howbeit bicause he was newlic intred into the conquest of Pozmandie, and had alreadic won the most part thereof, he thought good to make first an end of his warres there, has ning somewhat to do against certeine revels of his 20 owne countie of Aniou, which did not a little molest him. But he recovered (whilest the earle of Glocefier was there with him) Alney, Mortaigne, Tenerchbray, and diverse other places perteining thief lie to the earle of Portaigne: about the same time also they of Constances submitted themselues buto him. Thus the earle of Aniou being occupied in those parties could not well come into England. Wherebpon the earle of Bloceffer came backe a gaine himfelfe, and beinging with him somewhat 40 leffe than foure hundred men of armes (imbarked in 52. Chips) landed with the same at Warrham, and belieged the castell there, which his enimies had won out of his hands whilest he was absent in Pormandie. In the end they that were within it (buder the government of Derebert de Lucy)fell to agræment by composition, that if they were not succoured by a certeine time, they thould deliner the castell buto the earle. Hing Stephan himselse the same time held a siege before Priord within the which he had inclosed 50 the empresses hereafter thalbe the wed: so that they within the castell of Warrham had no succour sent but othem, and therefore (according to the articles of their composition) they pæloed by the hold, after erle Robert had lien the weekes before it.

This castell being thus wone, earle Kobert subdued also such as kept the Ile of Postland, and had fensed it after the maner of a fortresse: afterwards became to Circester, and there assembled all those all convenient speed to go to Drford, there to give battell to king Stephan, if he would abide it. Tho after his deliverance from captivitie, had affembled The empress agreat host of men, and comming to Oxford, where the empresse then laie, suppenlie besieged hir, before the loked for him. And to the end also that he might compell the townsmen to væld, or else kæve them from entring which would come to their fuccoss, he ranged abroad into the countrie with part of his armic, walting all aforehim by fire a fluord. This flege continued almost two moneths, in maner from his deliverie in the beginning of November, untill Chilimalic immediatlic following: in formuch that through lacke of vittels they within the towne be gan to raile mutinies. The emprelle therefore boubs ting the sequele, and seeing hir provision to occare, deuised a thift how to escape that present danger, which by force the was unlikelie to performe.

It was a verie hard winter that yeare, the Thames and other rivers thereabouts were frolen, so that both man and horse might safelie passe oucr bpon the yee, the fields were also concred with a N.Triuet. thicke and depe inow. Derebpon taking occasion, Simon Dun. Wil. Paru. the clad hir felfe and all hir companie in white away Ran, Higd. rell, that a far off they might not be discerned from Matth. Paris the fnow; and to by negligence of the watch that The empresse kept ward but flenderlie, by reason of the erceding escapeth out cold weather, the and hir partakers secrettie in the Polydor. night issued out of the towns, and passing over the Wil. Malm. Thames, came to Malingford, where the was receis Simon Dun. ued into the castell by those that had the same in keeping to hir ble: of whom Brian the forme to the erle to the earle of of Glocester was the chiefe.

I Pere we may lee the subtiltie of the empresse, thereby the obteined free and fafe pattage out of hir enimies hands, who otherwise had taken hir in their net. So that it will be true, that hath never beine false, which Aneas Sylvius (and before him many Aeneas Sylvius, moze driving opon the like argument) doth fair in this diffichon:

Non audet stygius Pluto tentare, quod audent Effrans monachus plenáque fraudis illa,

Meaning Mulier, a Woman. And therefore loke that they want in magnanimitie, in firength, in courage, the same is supplied by deceit, by circumuention, by craft, by fraud, by collution; fometimes aplied to a god intent, but most commonlie direded to an euill meaning and purpole, as the cuents themselves domanie times declare. But let us sæ what followed byon this escape of the empresse.

After hir departure from Orford, the townsimen Polydor. pælded unto the king, tho having taken order for Simon Dun. the képing of them in obedience, marched toward N. Triuet. Walingford, minding to beliege the castell there: but being encountred in the way by his enimies, he was driven backe, and so constrained to turns and ther waie. Carle Robert hearing that his litter was Anno Reg.8: escaped and gotten to Wallingford, hasted thither with all fred to vilithir: & (as some write) brought hir sonne lord with him hir fonne the load Penrie that was come Benrie. with him from beyond the leas, to lie his mother : lo that the empresse now beholding both hir sonne and brother, received them with all the ioy and honour that the could or might presentlie make them. Hir fon remaining under the government of earle Robert, was then appointed by him to abide within the citie of Brillow, there continued for the space of 4. veres being committed to one Patthew his scholes mailler, to be instructed in knowledge, and trained bp in civill behaviour.

Bing Stechan (after the spoiling of sundric chur) thes, the robbing and burning of manie townes and villages by the hunds of his hired fouldiers, who for that favoured the part of the empresse, meaning with 60 the more part were Flemings) came at length with his brother the bishop of Winchester stronglie ar, The king med buto Wilton, where he toke in hand to fortifie commeth to the nunrie in feed of a castell, to relist the incursi wilton, ons and invodes of them of Salifburie, who in the behalfe of the empresse had done manie displeasures buto his freends: but earle Robert understanding of his doings, got a power togither with all speed, and the first daie of Julie about sunne setting came to Wilton, and suddenlie set the towne on fire.

The king being lodged within the nunrie, and fearing no luch matter, after he heard of the ludden al semblic of his enimies, was put in such feare, that he twhe himselse dishonourablie to flight, leaving his men, his plate, and other riches altogither behind F.y.

Matth, Paris. Wian fonne Glocelter.

The comprette

Wil Paru. Sim Dun. Matt. Paris.

Miles carle of herefozd Decealed.

Ger.Dor. The earle of Eller taken.

The earle of Arunocil.

N.Triuct. Wil, Paru.

Anno Reg. 9. 1144 Hen. Hunt.

Sim.Dunel. John Pike. Matth. West. N.Triuet.

Wil.Malm. Wil. Paru.

him. The earles fouldiers egerlie affailed the kings people, killed and spoiled them at their pleasure, rifled the kings treasurie without resistance, and satisfied themselves with greedines. In this broile was will liam Barcell oz Bartell taken patfoner by earle Moberts men, a led to the castell of CCI allingfood, where Brian the earle of Glocefters some having charge of that caffell, kept him in close pailon, and vied him hardie, who by reason of the opinion which men had conceived of his valiancie, could not be delivered, till he had paid 300. marks for his ransome, and belines red the castell of Shirboane into the earles hands. Mithin a few daics after, Piles earle of Pereford departed this life, whose death was verie grænouslie taken of the empresse, for he was one of hie cheefe frænds and councellers. His eldelt sonne Roger succeded him, a gentleman though young in yeares, pet valiant and forward in feats of armes. William Pandeuile earle of Offer, an ancient capteine, an expert warriour (who had ferued the empresse, was 20 taken also at S. Albons) but not without great flaughter of the kings fouldiers: in fo much that as mong other, the cric of Arundell mounted on a couragious palfrie & a verie valiant man was ouertheowen in the middest of a water called Haliwell, by a knight named Malkeline de Dzcaie, so that the same earle was some brutled in his bodie, and als most drowned. The king was present himselfe at the taking of the fair Pandeuile, whom he spoiled of all his gods, and confireined by way of redemptiv on of his libertie, to deliuer into the kings hands the Tower of London, the castell of Malden, and Ples they. Bereupon the fame earle being releafed was ortuen through ponertie to læke some reconerte of his lottes by fundrie spoiles and roberies. First of all therefore he sposled the abbeie of S. Albons, and then the abbeie of Ramley, which he fortified and defens ded as a fastrelle, calling the monks out of dozes, and in everie place there soever he came, he robbed the countrie before him, till at length in the miost of his reuenge and malicious doings, he was that tho rough with an arrow amongst his men by a sillie fortman, and so ended his life with confusion, receiv uing worthie punishment for his vingodlie behauf our. For he was a man of high fromach & loffie com rage, but veric obstinate against God, of great in-towards his maker, as writers report of him. Likewise Robert Patmion, who had attempted the semblable robberie & spoile in the abbeie thurth of Couentrie, was flaine before the same abbeie by a like mischance. For going forth to encounter with the earle of Cheffer (his mostall enimic, and being approched as then towards the citie) he fell with his horse into a vitch, which he caused to be covertlie made for the destruction of his enimics: and before he could be relieved, a fouldier of the earles part Acpt to him, and Aroke his head from his Moulders in light of both armics. Crnulfus the sonne of carle Geffrey Pandemie that kept the church of Kamley as a fortrelle, after his fathers drath, was taken at 60 length and banished.

duffric in worldie bufinesse, but passing negligent

Thus we see how Gods sudgement hunteth and pursueth the wicked, in somuch that they be o nertaken in their olone imaginations: according to that of the scripture. The wicked and bloudthirstie man thall not line halfe his daies. And true it is, that as men live, so commonlie they die: for, as one faith veric well;

M. Pal.in fue feer.

– bona milla (celestis Et instis mala nulla quidem contingere possint. About the same time advertisement was given, that the citie of Lincolne, which the earle of Cheffer had in keeping, was but denderlie manned. Where bpon the king concessing some hope to win the fame, haffed forward: and comming thither in the night, laid flege thereunto, and began to caft a trench Lincolne beto stop them within fro making any salies without, sieged,

The earle at the first being somethat amazed with the ludden approch of the enimie, yet beholding from the walles the maner of them without, he perceived the rankes to be verte thin; and thereby getting their number to be but small, suddenlie issued forth at the gates to encounter with them. The king as bode not the giving of the charge, bicause he was The siege but weake and therefore fled; neither could the earle raico, follow the chace convenientlie, for the like cause; but fetting bpon those that were about to make the trench, be flue 80. of the workemen, and then retired N. Triuce. into the castell.

This yeare was an hemous ac committed by the Achilo cru-Jelves at Portwith, where they put a child to death, effect by the in crucifieng him opon a croffe to the reproch of chate Iewes.

Mian religion. In the yeare following; namelie, in the 10 yeare Matth. Paris, of king Stephans reigne, Robert earle of Gloceffer Simon Dun, and other capteins toke in hand to build a cassell at Anno. Reg. 10, Faringbon. But king Stephan affembling an ar Beaftell buit mie of Londoners and other, came thither, and belies at Faringged them within. Pow whilest earle Robert and o don. thers of the empresses capteins remaining not far Hen. Hunt. off, taried for a greater power to come to their aid, the king with tharpe affaults (but not without loffe of his men) wan the fortrette: thereby his tide bes winnethin gan to war the fronger, and to be more highlie ads by force. uanced. After this he came with a mightie armie bu to Wallingford, and there builded a firong caffel Anno Reg. 11, over against the other castell which his adversaries belo against him.

Thither also came the earle of Cheffer with a great Ran. Higd. traine of knights and gentlemen unto the king, and Math. Paris. to at length they were not unfeignedlie accorded and Simon Dun, made frænds, but in apperance on the kings behalfe. For thortlie after, the earle was craffilie taken at a parlement holden at Porthampton, by the practice of H. Steman, and could not be belivered, till he had furrendzed the citie and castell of Lincolne, with o ther fortresses perteining to the crowne into the Ran. Higd. kings hands. About that time did the Wielihmen The weith-Destroie the province of Chester, but at last they were men wate diffressed. This peare also the load Beffrey earle of Ger. Dor. Antou lent thice Poble men into England, accompanied with certains men of warre, but o earle Ros bert, requesting him to send ouer his sonne Henrie into France, that he might lie him, and if need requi red, he promifed to fend him backe agains with all convenient speed. Carle Robert was contented to fatisfie his request: and so with a god power of are med men brought the lord Benrie buto Warham, there he toke leave of him, never after to lie him in this world. For then the child was transporthis world. How with the fills was trampuly The earle of ted, earle Robert returned specific to the parties Giocoster from whence he came, and there falling into an ague, deperteth departed this life about the beginning of Poneme this life. ber, and was buried at Bristow. The losd Henrie comming to his father, was infully received, and remained in those parties for the space of two yeares and foure moneths.

In the meane leason, the build proceedings of B. Anno Reg. 12. Stephan against the carle of Chesier, purchased him ______ 1 4 7__ new hatred of his old adner faries, and like supicion of fuch as were his frænds, for it founded not a little to his dilhonoz. Querie man therefore was in doubt of his dealing, and judged that it find them boon to Simon Dun. take hed to themselucs. But he (as one that thought entrethins he had atchived some high exploit) in triumphant Lincolne wife Mostlie after entred into Lincolne in his roiall with his robes, and his crowne on his head, thereas it had crowne on not his head.

The king

1146

not beine heard that any king had done the like mas

nie yeares before.

It is reported by some writers, that he did this, to rot out of mens minds a falish superstitious conceit, which believed that no king with his crowne bpon his head might enter that citie, but some mis mance Could light opon him : where opon he fæmed by this meanes to mocke their superfittious imagination.

About the same time manie of the pobles of the 1 realme (perceining the kings authoritie to represe violent wrongs committed by entil dwers to be defeatue builded fundate frong castels and foatrestes bpon their owne grounds, either to defend them, sclues, of to make force opon their enimies nære adioining. After the departing of the king from Lincolne, the earle of Cheffer came thither with an armie to allaie if he might recouer that citie . But his lieutenant that had the leading of his men, was flaine at the entring of the northgate, and to the erle 20 mas beaten backe with the loffe of manie of his men : and the citizens having got the opper hand, re. toffed not a little for the victorie.

But here (to fray a little with temporall affaires) it thall not be amille to rehearle the effect of a contens tion which fell about this time betweene that king and the archbilhop of Canturburie. For lo it hames ned (as Gerualius Dorobernensis writeth) that pope Eugenius came this yeare into France, about the middelf of Lent, and afferward held a lynod occouns 30 cell at Rhemes: wherebuto Theobalo archbishop of Canturburie, with others of the English bishops were fummoned. The archbilhop therebpon alking licence of the king, anot obteining it, found meanes to steale awaie in a small bote, not without danger of his person.

Pow therefore the case of this Theobald food berie hard: for Benrie bishop of Winchester the kings brother through envie had so wrought, that if the archbilhop palled over without licence, he fould be 40 confined of the king. Againe, he was fure, if he came not to the councell, that he should be suspended by the pope. Herebpon the archbilhop meaning rather to offeno the king than the pope, got over, as it were fwimming, rather than failing; the vessell where in he passed oner being starke naught: for all the posts were kept by the kings fernants, so that he was glad to take such a bote as came next to hand. In consideration whereof he was highlic comment ded by the pope.

In this councell the prebendaries of Porke, togither with Penrie Pozdach then abbat of Founts ney, presented themselves, exhibiting their conv plaint against William archbishop of Poske, for that (as they alledged) he was neither canonicallie cholen, nor lawfullie consecrated, but intruded by the kings authoritie. At length archbishop Willis ant was convided and deposed, Albert bishop of Ho. " Tia pronouncing fentence in this wife: Tile do des crow by the apostolike authoritie, that Tuilliam arche 60

" bithop of Poske is to be depoted from his fix, bicaute " Stephan king of England, before any canonicalles

" lection, namedhim.

Then, for that pope Eugenius had thus deposed archbishop William, although not with the consent of the more part of the cardinals, the chapiter of the thurch of Poske, by his commandement comming togither, part of them chose Pilarie bishop of Chiches Cer, and the other part elected Henrie Hordach abbat of Fountney. Pow pope Eugenius, when both elections were thewed him at Aurerre, confirmed the election of Benrie Hordach, and disamulted the other, and then confecrated the foresaid Penrie with his owne hands. The late nominated archifficy

William being thus deposed, teturned into Eng. land, and remained at Windelfer with king Henrie till the death of pope Eugenius, following the counsell of the same bishop in all things.

Pow when the councell at Kheines was ended, archbishop Theobato returned into England, and comming to Canturburie, was received with great honox of the covent and citizens there. But the king remaining then at London, when he heard of it, was fore displeased, and came with great speed buto Canturburie, where much conference being had betwirt him and the archbishop (although to small purpose) for the bringing of them to an agreement, at length the king compelled the archbilhop to depart the realine. Wherebpon, after a few daies respit, he went to Douer, where he twke thip and failed into France. But within a while he was called backe by the quene and William of Ppres, buto S. Omers. that they might the koner advertise him of the kings mind and pleasure . Here he consecrated Bilbert the elea bilhop of Hereford, the fift date of Septems ber, Theodoxic bithop of Amiens and Picholas bi-Mop of Cambre allifting him.

After this, when by fending of mellengers to and fro, aswell bishops, abbats, and other, both spirituall persons and temporall, there could no agreement be made, he directed his letter to certeine churches here in England, pronouncing by a certeine day, namelie the twelfe day of September, a sentence of interdiction to be observed through the reline. The monks of Canturburie loze offended herewith, before the prefixed day of this fentence to be put in bre fent two mankes of their owne house, Pigell and Absolon, buto the pope: whose errand when the pope had bus derstod, he commanded them to returne home, and to obeie their archbilhops lentence in all things.

In the meane time the arthbilhops men and tes nants were lose oppelled, and his rents and rence nues leized to the kings ble, vea even before the daies of paiment. Which maner of proceeding fore græued the archbishop: in so much that departing from S. Dmers, he came to Graveling, and there taking the leaseroffed over to a towne called Goleford that belonged buto Hugh Bigot erle of Porthfolke: which earle received him with great honour, and fent him all necessarie proutsion, so long as he remained in his countrie. At the terme appointed, he interdice ted all the kings dominions, and would not renoke the fentence, till Robert bilhop of London, Pilarie bishop of Chichester, and William bishop of Pose with, with manie other Poblemen, came to him bnto Framelingham in Porthfolke, a calfell appertel ning to the faid earle, where at length an attonment was concluded betwirthim and the king: where bpon he was brought home buto Canturburie with great foy and honoz.

He accused the monks of Canturburie, for oilobeing the interdiction, trusting that the pope would not heare those two monkes whom they had sent, as he did not indeed. De ercommunicated also all those that had received the facraments among if them, du ring the time of the interdiation. Pow these monkes being at their wits end, dispatched with all speed of ther two mankes to the pope, to obtaine an absolution on , before the archbiffop fould understand it : but they were fent backe againe with checks, and commanded to obeie their archbilliop in all things, as the other were, which had beene there with him be-

The monks of Canturburie that were fent to Gerualius. Rome, returning, came from thence to Bullongne, Anno Reg. 13. where they found those that were first sent thither: and so they all source came to Canturburie. The pope allo had fent a primie commandement to the archbi

F.W.

Simon Dun.

Ger.Dor.

thop, that he Mould ductic punith as well them as the other. Cohere upon the archbilhop taking counfell with his freends, depoted Sylnefter the prior, and fulpended William the fecretarie of the boule from env tring the quiere. It was decreed also, that the relique thould rease so long a time from fateng service, as they had faid it before bulawfullie, against the archvilhops commandement. For it was thought reason, that whilest other lang and were merrie, they should kape filence, which willfullie toke bpon them to fing, 1 willest other held their peace and were still . They began therefore to ceale from fateng divine feruice, and from ringing their bels in the fecond weeke of Lent: + fo kept filence from the twelfe day of Parch, untill the first day of August.

The queene wife to king Stephan in this meane ichile lay much at S. Augustines in Canturburie, bicaule of halfening forward the building of Feuer tham abbeie, which the and hir hulband had begonne from the verie foundation. And bicause the monkes 20 of S. Augustine might not celebrate diuine service, The called thither commonlie the monks of Chilles thurth to fay fernice before bir . Thus much for that purpole: and now to other matters.

The L. Denrie returneth into England Anno Reg. 14. 1140

iacis made knight.

R.Houed.

The lord Benrie Kitzemprelle after all thele bulinelles returned into England, in the moneth of Pay, with a great companie of men of warre both bootlemen and formen; by reason thereof many reuolted from king Stephan to take part with him: any exploit against him. But now incouraged with the presence of the lord Henrie, they occlared them. felues freends to him, and enimies to the king. Immediatlic after his arrivall, he take with him the carles of Cheffer and Pereford, Kanulfe and Roger, and divers other Poble men and knights of great fame, before those whom he had brought with him out of Mormandie, and went buto Carleil, where he found his coun David king of Scotland, of Wome he was most foifullic received: and byon Whitlun, 40 day with great folemnitie, being not past sixtiene yeares of age, was by the same king made knight, with diverse other young gentlemen that were much about the same age.

Some write, that the king of Scots received an oth of him before he gave him the honor of knights hod, that if he chanced to atteine buto the possession of the realme of England, he Mould restore to the Scots the towns of Pewcattle, with the countrie of Porthumberland, from the river of Twed, to the ri- 50 uer of Tine. But ichether it were to og not, Jam not able to make warrantize.

Pow king Stephan hearing that the king of Scots, and his aducrfaric the lood Henrie with the chefest loods of the west parts of England lay thus in Carleil, he raifed an armie, and came to the citie of Parke, where he remained for the most part of the with an armic moneth of August, fearing least his enimies should attempt the winning of that citie. But after the one part had remained a time in Carleil, and the other in 60 Poste, they departed from both those places without any further exploit for that feafon, fauing that @uflachtus hing Stephans sonne (having also latelie received the order of knighthad did much hurt in the countries which belonged to those Poble men that were with the lord Benrie.

Matth.Paris. Great raine.

It Enterfien

commetly to

The great raine that fell in the lummer leason this peare did much hurt buto come flanding on the ground, fo that a great dearth followed. In the winter also affer, about the tenth day of December, it began to freese extreamelie, and so continued till the nineteenth of Februarie: wherby the river of Thames was to frosen, that men might passe over it both on fot and horffebacke.

In the meane while Benrie Buke of Pomantie, Anno Reg. :. affer he had returned from the king of the Scots, _ 1 1 5 0 failed backe into Pormanoie, about the beginning of Augult, leaving England full of all those calanic ties, which civill warre is accussomed to bring with it, as burning of houses, killing, robbing, and spotling of people, to that the land was in danger of viter destruction, by reason of that pestilent discord.

This yeare the 23.0f Februarie, Galfridus Monumetenfis, other wife called Galfridus Arthurius, tho turned the British historie into Latine, was confecrated billiop of S. Allay, by Theobald archbilliop of Canturburie, at Lambeth, Wailliam bishop of Pozivich and Walter bilhop of Rochester allisting Mozoner, this peare (as fome witters have recor Ger. Der. Posoner, this yeare (as some witters have terry. The earle of Ded) Beffrey earle of Aniou, hulband to the empresse Amoufather Maud, departed this life, on the leuenth day of Sep to Benry fur tember leauing his sonne Henrie onelie heire and empresse de succession in the estates of the duchte of Posmandie parteth this and countie of Aniou. The bodic of the faid earle was buried at Pans, with a great funerall pompe: his the fonnes Benrie, Beffrey, and Milliam being present.

But king Stephan all aulting the faire citie of worcester at Worcester with a great power of men of warre, toke it, and confumed it with fire, but the castell he could not win. This citie belonged to earle Maleran de Wellent, at that feason : for king Stephan to his thereas before they fat Will, and would not attempt 30 owne hinderance had given it unto him. Pow after the men of warre had divided the spoile amongst them, they came backe, and palling through the lands of their enimies, got great boties, which they also twhe away with them, finding none to relift them in

In the yeare following Theobald archbithop of Anno Reg. 16. Canturburie, and legat to the le apostolike, held a generall synod of councell at London in the Lent Ger. Dorober, feason, where king Stephan himselse with his some Aspurd as London Eustachius, and other the peeres of the realme were present. This councell was full of appeales, contravie to that had beene bled in this land, till the time that Henrie bilhop of Winchester buto his owne harme (whilest he was like wife the popes legat) had by but tull intrulion brought them in, and now at this councell he was himfelfe theife appealed to the hearing of the popes owne confiftorie. After this king Stephan in the fame years bake into the citie of Worceffer, and othereas he could not the last time win the cafell be now endeudured with all his force to take it. But when those within made valiant reliffance, he raised two castels against it, and leaning in the fame certeine of his Pobles to continue the fiege, hehimselse returned home. Thus (as yes fee) the kingspropertie was to attempt maniethings bas liantlie, but he proceded in them offentimes bes rie flowlie: howbeit, now by the policie of the earle of Leicester, those two castels which the king had rais fed to beliege the other castell, were sportlie after defroied : and to the belieged were delivered from dans ger. This earle of Leicester was brother to the earle The earle of of Wellent . Thus the kings purposed intention and there of the contents painefull travellon that behalfe came to none effect. of weilers.

In the meane while Penrie duke of Pozmandie Anno Regira maried Elianoz duches of Buien or Aquitaine, late: lie dinozed from the French king, and to in right of the discort for the became duke of Aquitaine, and earle of Deice discount for the was the onclic daughter to William market the duke of Buien, and earle of Poiaou, and by hir father ducheile of created his fole and lawfull heire.

The French king was nothing pleased with this The french mariage, in somuch that he made soze warre byon king maketh buke Penrie, soining himselfe in league with hing the oute of the buke of the Stechan, with his fonne Cufface, and with the lood Mounandie

Aguitaine.

A fort frost.

Geffrev

An.Reg.17.

Bettrey brother to duke Henrie, so that the said Denrie was constreined to defer his fournie into England, and applie his power to defend his countrics and lubicas on that live of the lea. For where as he was readie at the mouth of the river of Barbe to palle ouer into England, not long affer midlums mer, the French king, with Cultace king Stechans forme, Robert earle of Perch, Henrie erle of Champaigne, and Geffrey brother to duke Henrie, having affembled a mightie armie, came and besteged the 1 castell of Pewmarch, and fent forth the load Beffrey with a firong power to win the castell of Angers. Buke Penrie aduertifed hereof, departing from the place where he folourned, halted forth to fuccour his The castell of people that were besieged, but the castell of Peins march was delinered to the French king, through treason of those that had it in keeping, before the duke could come to their refcue.

Gewmarch actinered to the French

Tieniqueline. e: Meurin.

Wherebpon the faid duke having knowledge by the wate that he hould come to late thither, he en 20 camped first byon the five of the river of Andell, and wasted a great part of the countrie of Teurin 02 Meulguefine, furnamed Le Pomant, which lieth betwirt the river of Epte and Andell. This countrie belonged fomtime to Momandie, but Beffrey earle or Anion the dukes father had religned it to the French king, to the end he should not aid king Ste than. The duke also burned the castels of Bascher. uille, Chitrey, Stirpiney, and the castell of Fort, that belonged to Hugh de Courney, with diverte other. 30 received an oth of fealtie onto king Stephan. About the end of August he left his townes in Pozmandic fufficientlie furnished with garilons of foulviers, and went into Aniou, where he belieged the cafell de mount Sotelli, till he had taken it, and all those that were within it, amongst whome was the loed thereof named William. The French king on the other five entring into Posmandie, burnt part The castell of of the bosough of Rieule, and either then or shortlie after that duke Penrie was gone ouer into England, he twice the towns and castell of Aernon.

Whilest these things were thus a dwing in France, it. Stephan would have caused the archbi thop of Canturburies diverse other bishops, whom for that purpose he had assembled, to crowne, and noint, and confirme his sonne Oufface king over the realme of England. But the archbilhops and bis thous refused to to doubleause the pope by his letters fent to the archbilhop, had commanded to the contra-rie; namelie, that he isould in no wife crowne the the possession of the land against his oth received in behalfe of the emprette. The father and sonne being not a little offended herewith, committed most of his billious to ward, leeking by threats and menacings to bring them to his purpose. The bishops also were in no small perpleritie: for according to the truth, the king never fæmed greatlie to favor church men, bicause of their strength (as in former times by his rigo; vied agains the bilhops of Salisburie and these men væld to his pleasure: where opon although they were let at libertie, they were neverthelette de prined of their temporall pollections, which notivith-Canbing afterwards byon the kings owne motion

Howbeit the archbilhop of Canturburic perlifling fill in his opinion, was forfaken of diverte of the bilhops, who through feare durit not fand against their princes pleature. But the archbilhop, when he perceived how the matter went, & that all the blame was like to light and rest on his Coulders, he got himselfe by a marnellous hap over the Thames, and with speed riving to Douer, passed the sea, to auoid both the fathers and sonnes revengefull displeasure.

were restozed unto them.

Simon Dun.

The pope is againft it.

The billiops

are threatned.

Fier.Dor.

The archbi= then of Canturburic flicth out of the realme.

Herebpon the king feized into his hands all the lands a possessions that belonged to the archbishop.

This yeare quene Paud wife to king Stephan Matth. Paris. veparted this life at Hangey castell, that belonged Ger.Dor. to earle Alberike de Mér, about the third daie of Paie, and was buried in the abbeie of Feuersham. which the with hir hulband king Stephan had latelic founded.

This yeare through great and immoderate rainc that fell in the lummer, the growing of come was fo hind zed, that a great death of people infued.

This yeare also was the battell of Monadmore The battell ef fought in Ireland, where the flower and chiefest perfonages of Mountter and Leynister were staine. Mozeoner one John, a monke of Sagium, was Matth. Paris. made the second bilhop of the Ile of Dan: the first also the first bishop that was there instituted hight Wilmond a bishops of monke of Sauinte, who for his importunate milde Man. menour in some respects, had his cies put out, and was displaced.

John Papirio a cardinall, being fent from the Hen. Marle. pope as legat into Ireland, ordeined foure archbis Hops there, one at Dublin, an other at Aromach, the third at Castels, and the fourth at Connach. The fee of Dublin he changed into an archbishops lie, one The bishop of Gargozie at that time possessing the same : to whom Dublin made he gaue the first and chiese pall, and appointed the archbishop. thurth of the bleffed Trinitie to be thurth metropo litane. As this cardinall pasted through England, he

The same peare also king Stephan by siege and The castell of force of affault did win the castell of pewberie not Dewberis far from Mincheller. This done he went to Male won, lingford, and belieging the castell, he builded at the entring of the bridge a fortresse to stop them within from illuing out, and likewife from receining any reliefe or fuccour by their freends abroad. The defens dants perceiving themselves so hardie late at, sent to the duke of Pozmandie (in whose name they kept 40 that castell) desiring him either to laccour them, or else give them licence to yield by the castell to the king. Herebpon duke Henrie haning dispatched his businesse on the further side of the sea, began to be kindled with a feruent delire once againe to at. Duke Henris tempthis fortune here in England for recoverie of returneth into that hingdome, and so with the thousand fortmen, England. $ 7. score horstemen, with all speed possible failed or tier into England, where he landed about the 12. Daie in Chaistmasse. He was no soner arrived, but a Ger. Dor. hings fon, bicause his father king Stephan had got 50 great number of luch as twhe part with his mother came flocking in buto him: wherevoon being now furnished with a great and pullant armie, he mars thed footh to Palmelburie, where in the castell was be beliegeth the called of a great garifon of foldiers placed by king Stephan. Duke Henrie planted his siege about this castell the Matth. Paris. thirteenth daie of Januarie, and enforced himselfe to Polydor. the ottermost of his power to win it.

Poly king Sterban hearing of his enimies artis uall, with all half possible got his armie on fot, and Lincolne it plainelle appeared) and yet would not 60 comming suddenlie towards the place where his es the Stephan nimies were pitched, he caused duke Benvie to raise confreineth him to vaise his flege, and following after, offered him battell. his fiege. But duke Penrie, knowing that his entities were far more in number than he was at that prefent, and also conceining with himselfe that by prolonging of time his owne power would increase, absteined from fighting, and kept him within the cloture of his campe. Thus have some written, but other an Wil. Pare those write, that Benrie kept himselfe indeed with in his campe, and refused to give battell, but yet res moued not his stege, till the king departed from thence, after he faw he could not have his purpole, and then did duke Penrie win the callell of Balmel burie og rather the maister tower og thefe bungcon of that callell. For as (Simon of Durham witteth) he had won by affault the other parts and lims of the caffell before king Stephan came to remoue him.

Monadmore.

0.5

Simon Dun. Cier. Dor.

This tower that thus held out, was in the keeping of one capteins Zordan, who eleaping forth came to the hing, informing him in what frate he had left his men within the tower: wherevoon the king (making all the power that he was able fet forward, and cont ming to Circiter, lodged there one night, and in the morning purpoling to raile the flege, or to fight with 10 his entinies (if they would abide battell) marched forth towards Walmelburie. But bpon his approch to the dulses campe, the date following his comming thither, there role such a hideous tempest of wind and raine, beating full in the faces of bing Stephans people, that God fermed to fight for the duke, who in respect of the number of people was thought to weake to deale with the firong and pullant armie of the king: howbeit the fromie being on his backe, ces, they were not able to hold their weapons in their hands, in found that he perceived he could not passe the river that can betwirt the armies: where, byon confireined in that fort through the violent rage of that cold and wet weather, he returned to London full cuill amaied, in that he could not fatif fic his expectation at that prefent.

The tower that duke Penrie had hardlie belieged immediatlic herewith was furrendzed unto him, & then making provision for vittels and other things, 3 The castell of to the reliefe of them that kept the castell of Wallingford, he haster thither, and finding no relistance by the way calily accomplished his enterpaire. There were diverse castels thereabouts in the countrie furnithed with garifons of the kings fouldiers, but they kept themselves close, and durst not come abroad to The castell of frop his passage, Shoullic after he besteged the castell of Cranemers, and cast a trench about it, so as his people within Wallingford castell might have free libertie to come forth at their pleasure: but as for 40 those within the castell of Transmers, they were so hardlie holden in, that there was no wate for them to fart out.

The king advertised hereof, got all his host togb ther, and marched forward verie terriblic toward duke Henries campe. But thewing no token of feare, he caused the trench wherewith he had inclosed his campe fouth with to be cast downe, and leaving the fiege, came into the fields with his armie fet in order of battell, meaning to trie the matter by dint 50 of fword, although he had not the like number of men as the king had: whose armie perceiving their enimics to come in the face of them, were fricken with a sudden feare: neverthelesse, he himselfe being of a good courage, commanded his people to march forward. But here with certeine Poble men. that loned not the advancement of either part, buder a colour of god meaning lought to treat an agree ment betwirt them, so that an intermission or cesing from war was granted, and by composition the ca- 60 ffell thich the king had built, and the duke belieged, ivas razed to the ground. The king and the duke alto came to an enterview and communication togither, a river running betwirt them. Some write that they fell to agræment, king Stephan bnbertaking Gustace king to rase the castell of Cranemers himselfe, and so lais eng armour affec for that time, they parted alunder.

But Cufface & Stephans fon was fore offended herewith, and reprouing his father for concluding fuch an agreement, in a great rage departed from the court, & taking his waie toward Cambridgeshire (which countrie he meant to overrun) he came to the abboie of Burie, and upon S. Laurence daie caused all the come in the countrie about, and namelie that thich belonged to the faid appeie, to be spoiled and brought into a caffell which he had in keeping not far from thence. But as he fat downe to meat the fame daie opon receiving the first mosfell he fell mad (as . Euflace hing writers have reported and milerablie ended his life. Stephans The fame weke Simon carle of Porthampton des ion and dr parted this world of a like difeate, and to two of the mon carle of parted this world of a like direals, and is rubble up. Northapton thisfelf aduct laries which duke Permis had, were rid depart this out of the wate. Eufface was buried at Teuersham life both in in Bent, and carle Simon at Porthampton.

About the fame time allo that noble and valiant earle of Chefter called is anylic departed this life, a Chefter deman of fuch floutnelle of Comach, that death could ceaseth. scarselic make him to yeald, or thew any token of feare: he was poisoned (as was thought) by Willis am Deuerell. After him luccaded his fonne Dugh, a man likewife of palling frengthand bertuc. pow although earle Kanulfe favoured the part of duke Henrie, pet in these later yeares he did but little for and beating extremelie in king Stephans mens fat 20 him : therefore it was thought that the death of this earle was not so great a losse to the duke, as the deaths of Gustace, earle Simon, and other the kings freends deceating about the fame time feemed to fur. ther him: so that his part became dailie Aronger, and the kings weaker.

About the same time the castels of Reading and Beertwell were delivered to duke Henrie, and the la-Die Bundzeda countelle of Warwike daue out the Math. Paris. fouldiers that held it for king Stephan, and deline. Rob Mont. red the towns to duke Henrie. In this yeare duches Clenoz, wife to Benrie Fitzempzelle, was brought to bed of hir first borne fon, whom they named Will liam, after the maner of the ancient dukes of Aqui

Thus came things to patte in fundic places with lo god luccelle as duke Henrie could with, where byon meaning to follow the Reps of prosperous for tune, he marched forth to Stamford, and taking the Stamford towne at his first comming late siege to the castell, was taken Pow they that had it in keeping fent mellengers to Ger.Dor. king Stephan, requiring releue, but the fame time he had laid fiege to the castell of Siplwich, which Siplwich or Hugh Bigot kept against him: and bicause he wold Iphwich be not bepart from that segetill he had the castell gis lieged. uen op into his hands (which came at last to passe) in the meane time the castell of Stamford was yelded N. Trivet, by to duke Penrie, who immediatlie therebyon departed from Stamford callward, meaning to come to the fuccour of his freends befreged at Sipfwich or Ipswich (as it is commonlie called) not understand ding as yet that they had furrendeed the hold: but has ning knowledge by the way what was happened, he returned and marched freight to Potingham, Poting, au. and got the towne eatilie; for they within the castell had let it on fire, therfore he belieged the castell start bing bpon the point of a liépe craggie rocke, and was furnished with a strong garison of men, and all things necessarie for defense, so that it could not ear filie be inone.

When duke Henrie had affaced all the walcs how Duke Henrie to take it, and faw that he could not preuatle, he mine raiseth his ded to love no more time; but raising his siege from fiege from thence, he ranged abroad to get other places into his Polydor, possession, and finallie came to his mother, and laie at Mallingford. Ling Stephan in the meane time being Arong in the field, fought time and place to have Penrie at some advantage, who in his young yeares (as yet not having tafted any missortune) he thought would rathlie attempt some braduised enterpile. I But thereas the realme of England had bene now manie yeares miserablie turmoiled with civill warre which the verie heathen have so de The miserie tested, that they have crelaimed against it with a time of the sind of the familiary of the familiary of the same kind of irkomnece; as:

uill Warre.

Stephans fonne.

Matth. Paris.

Ger.Dor.

ode.35.

Eneu cicatricum & sceleru pudet, Fratrisinque : quid nos dura refugimus Act.us? quid intactum nefasti Linquimus? unde manus innentus Metu deorum continuit? quibus Pepercit aris? iam litui strepunt, lamfulgor armorum fugaces Terret equos equitumque vultus)

Idem lib.car.2. ode.I.

> Taherein (belives millians of extremities) honest matrones and mens wives were violated, maids and virgins rauthed, thurches spoiled, townes and villages robbed, whole flocks and heards of hope and beafts destroice (inherein the substance of the realme chæftie confifted) and men without number flaine and murthered, it pleased the godnesse of almightic God at length to beliver the land of these miscries, which were notified to all countries round about that fore lamented the fame.

Pow whereas king Stephan was the cause of all the troubles, in having blurped an other mans right 20 full inheritance, it pleased God to moue his hart at length to defire peace which he had ever before abhor red. The cause that moued him chefelie to change his former purpole, was for that his sonne Gustace by specie death was taken out of this world (as before you have heard) which lotte feemed great not one; lie to the father, but also to all those loods and others which had alwaies taken his part, bicause he was a poing man so well liked of all men, that he was fudfrance twhe his death verie forowfullic, and the more indeed, for that the had no iffue by him, therebpon Mostlie after the was fent honourablie home to hir father king Lewes with hir dower, and other rich and princelie giffs.

Bing Stephan leing himfelfe thus deprined of his onlie sonne, but o whom he minded to leave the kingdome which he so earnest lie sought to consirme and affure but o him by warlike endenoz, and that as gaine the French kings aid would not be fo readie as heretofoze it had bæne (wherevoon he much faied, now that the bonds of affinitie were abolithed) he began at length (though not immediatlie bpon his sonnes occease) to withdraw his mind from war, and bequeathed it wholie to peace. Thich alte ration being perceined, those Pobles that were cline his mind glad to lie the Cate of their countrie quieted, did their best to further it; & cheeflie Theobald archbishop of Canturburie tranclled earnesslie to bying the princes to some agreement, now talking with the hing, now fending to the duke, and bling all means possible to set them at buitie. The bishop of Wintheffer also, who had caused all the trouble, opon confiveration of the great calamities wherewith the land was most miserablie afflicted, began to with an end thereof. TTherespon the loads spirituall and temporall were called togither at TAinchester as about the latter end of Ponember, that they with their consents also might confirme whatsocuer the king and the duke thould conclude byon.

Ger. Dor.

A. Stephan

begaato in-

Mauh. Paris,

The ladie

Constance wife to Eu= face fent home.

In allemblie of lozds at winchester.

A peace con= cludeobetwirt carefull fute of the archbishop of Canturburie) had the king and the duke.

= ixa omo & ters hauere= mouto pre-

1 That king Stephan, during his naturall life, honlo remaine king of England, and Henrie the empresses some should enjoy the dukedonte of Por mandie, and be proclaimed heire awarant to suc-

Thus was a publike assemblie made in the citie of Wlinchester, whither also duke Henrie came, who being initiallic received of the king in the bilhops par lace, they were made frænds, the king admitting the duke for his forme, and the duke the king for his father, informed that the agreement, which (through the bone laboured with such diligence to god effect, was now confirmed: the chefe articles whereof were ced in and have the regiment of England, after fentlic by this the decease of Stephan.

2 That such noble men, and other, which had held realing of either with the one partie or the other, during the time England. of the civill warres, thould be in no danger for the fame, but enloy their lands, possessions and livings, according to their ancient rights and titles.

3 A)at the king thould refume and take into his hands againe, all fuch portions and parcels of inher ritance belonging to the crowne, as he had given as way, or were otherwise blurped by any maner of person, and that all those possessions which by any intrution had beine violentlie taken from the right owners, fince the dates of king Henrie, thould be restozed to them that were rightlie postessed in the fame by the dates of the fato king.

4 That all those castels, which contravie to all reas Matth Paris. fon and god order had beene made and builded by Caffely to be any maner of person in the dates of king Stephan, rased in nums should be overtheolone and cast downe, which were beritis.

found to be eleven hundred and fifteene.

5 That the king thould reforme all fuch diforders as warre had brought in; to restore farmers to their holdings, to repaire decaied buildings, to foze per Aures and leadues with cattell, hils with thepe, ac.

6 That by his meanes the cleargie might entoy their due quietnesse, and not be oppessed with any bre fulf cracions.

That he Mould place Chirifes where they had ged to be borne to much honour. But his wife Con- 30 biene accustomed to beare rule, with instructions gis uen them to deale opzightlie in causes, so as offenders might not escape through bythes, or any other respect of frændship; but that everie man might receive according to right and equitie.

8 That foldiours thould convert their twoeds (as Efaic faith)into culters a plough theres, their speares into mattocks, and fo returne from the campe to the plough: and that fuch as were wont to keepe watch in the night leason, might now sleepe and take their rest without any danger.

9 That the hulbandman might be let free from all trouble and veration, by meanes wherof he might follow his tilth, and plie his culture.

10 That merchant men and occupiers might entoy their trades and occupations to their advances ment.

11 That one kind and manner of filuer coine thould run through the land, sc.

12 There was also consideration had of a sonne which king Stephan had , named William , who though he were verie young, was yet appointed to sweare fealtie unto duke Henrie as lawfull heire to the crowne. The same William had the citie of Porwich, and diverse other lands alligned him for the maintenance of his estate, and that by the consent and agrament of duke Henrie his adopted brother.

These things being thus concluded at Minches ffer, and the warre that had continued for the space of 17. yeares now ended and fullie pacified: the king 60 take the duke with him to London, dwing to him all the honour he could denile. The newes whereof being spredabrode, eucrie god man reioised thereat. Mons through the great mercie of God, peace was reflozed but othe decaied flate of this reline of Eng. land. Which things being thus accomplished with greating and tokens of love, king Stephan and his new adopted some ouke Henrie toke leave either of other, amointing thoulie after to mét againe at Drenford, there to perfect everie article of their as greement, which was thus accorded a little before Culfmas.

1But by the way, for the better bnderstanding of the faid agreement, I have thought good to fet bowne the verie tenoz of the charter made by king Stechan.

as I have copied it out, and translated it into English out of an autentike boke conteining the old laives of the Saron and Danish kings, in the end thereof the same tharter is exemplified, which bothe is remaining with the right worthipfull extilliam Flatwood efquire, now recorder of London, and sargeant at law.

The charter of king Stephan, of the pacification of the troubles between him and Henrie duke of Normandie.

Tephan king of England, to all archbishops, bishops, abbats, earles, insticers, sherifes, barons and all his faithfull subjects of England sendeth græting. know væ that I bing Stephan, haue ogbeined Benrie Duke of Pomandie after me by right of inheritance to be my successour, and heire of 20 the kingdome of England, and so have J given and granted to him and his heires the kingdome of England. For the which honour, gift, and confirmation to him by me made, he hath dome homage to me, and with a corporall oth hath assured me, that he thall be faithfull and lotall tome, and thall to his power preferue my life and honour : and I on the other fide thall maine 30 teine and preserve him as my sonne and heire in all things to my power, and lo far as by any wates of meanes I may. And William my some hath done his william fonne lawfull homage, and assured his fealtie toking Ster buto the laid duke of Pozmandie, and the phan.

Carle war=

The caltels of

duke hath granted to him to hold of him all those tenements and holdings which I held before I attemed to the polletton of 40 the realme of England, wherefoeuer the same be in England, Pormandie, or elsewhere, and whatsoever he received with the daughter of earle Marren, either in England og Pozmandie, Elikewise what: soeuer appertemeth to those honoures. And the duke thall put my sonne Tuilliam and his men that are of that honour in full possession and seizure of all the lands, boroughs and rents, which the duke there= 50 of now hath in his demaine, and namelie of those that belong to the honour of the earle Actarren, and namelie of the castels of Bellencumber and Mortimer, so that ber and Moz- Reginalode Marren hall have the kee: ping of the same castels of Bellencumber, and of Mortimer, if he will; and therebpon thall give pledges to the duke: and if he will not have the keeping of those castels, 60 then other liege men of the faiderle War= ren, whome if thall please the duke to appoint, wall by fure pledges and good fuertie kæpe the said castels.

APozeoner, the duke thall deliner buto him according to my will and pleasure the other castels, which belong but o the earle-The carloome dome of Mortaigne by lafe cultodie and of Mortaigne, pledges, so some as he convenientlie may, lo as all the pleages are to be restored but o my some free, so some as the duke thall have the realme of England in possession. The augmentation also which I have gi-uen buto my sonne TTilliam, he hath likes wife granted the same to him; to wit, the callell and towne of Pozwich, with featien Dogwich, hundled pounds in lands, so as the rents of Morwich be accounted as parcell of the fame featien hundred pounds in lands, and all the countie of Aoxfolke; the profits and rents which belong to churches, bishops, abbats & earles excepted; and the third pennie whereof Hugh Bigot is earle, also trugh Bigot excepted: sawing also and reserving the kings rotall turifoiction for administration of fulfice. Also the moze to strengthen my fauour and love to himwards, the duke hath given and granted buto my faid sonne whatsoener Richer de Aquila hath of the Richerde honour of Penenley. And mozeoner the cas Egle. stell and towne of Peuenley, and the ler-uice of Faremouth, belide the castell and towns of Douer, and whatsoever apperteineth to the honour of Douer.

The duke hath also confirmed the church The church of of Jeuertham with the appurtenances; feuerham and all other things given or restored by me buto other churches, he thall confirme by the counsell and aduice of holie church and of me. The earles and barons that belong to the duke, which were never my læges, for the honour which I have done to their mailter, they have now done homage and swome fealtie to me, the coues nants betwirt mea the faid duke alwaies saued. The other which had beforedone homage tome, have swozne fealtie to me as to their sourreigne lood. And if the duke thould breake and go from the premises, then are they altogither to cease from dos ing him any feruice, till he reforme his mil doings. And my sonne also is to constraine him thereto, according to the aduice of holie church, if the duke thall chance to go from the covenants afore mentioned. My earles and barons also have done their læge and homage buto the duke, fauing their faith to me folong as I live, and chall hold the kingdome with like condition, that if I do breake and go from the premitted covenants, that then they may cease from dwing me any service, till the time I have reformed that which I have done amille.

The citizens also of cities, and those persons that dwell in castels, which I haue in my demaine, by my commande ment haue done homage, and made affurance to the duke, saving the fealtie which they owe to me during my life time, and so long as I thall hold the kingdome. They which keep the calle of Islallingford have wallingford done their homage to me, and haue ginen cadell. to me pleages for the observing of their fealtie. And I have made but o the duke fuch affurance of the castels and strengths which I hold by the counsell and advice of holie church, that when I chall depart this life, the duke thereby may not run into any losse or impeachment, wherby to be debarred from the kingdome. The tower The tower of London, and the fortresse of Ullindsor, of London. by the counsell and advice of holie church windles

0

IR:

9P

102

N E

are delivered buto the load Richard de Lucie, safelie to be kept, which Richard hath taken anoth, and bath delinered his sonne in pledge to remaine in the hands and cu-frodie of the archbilhop of Canturburie, that after my decease he chall deliver the fame caltels buto the duke. Likewise by the counsell and adulfe of holie church, Roger de Bulley kæpeth the caltell of Dr ford, and Jordaine de Bulley the caltell of Lincolne, which Roger & Jordaine haue fwozne, and thereofhaue delivered pled= ges into the hands of the archbilhop, that if I thall chance to leave this life, they that render the same castels to the duke with= The billiop of out impeachment. The billiop of Winches iter bath also given his faith in the hands of the archbithop of Canturburie, that if A chance to depart this life, he thall render 20 by buto the duke the callels of Uninche= tier, and the fortrette of Hampton. And if any of them, but o whom the custodie of these fortresses shall be committed, fortune to die, or otherwise to depart from his charge, an other thall be appointed to the keeping of the same fortresse, be fore he shall depart forth thereof, by the counsell and advice of holie church. And if any of those persons that have any castels or fortresses belonging to me in their cu-Stodie Chall be found disobedient and rebell, A and the duke thall constraine him to satilfie our will & pleasure, not leaving him in rest till he be so constrained. The arch= bishops and bishops of the realme of England, and the abbats allo, have by my commandement (worne fealtie buto the duke; and the bishops and abbats that hereafter hall be made and advanced here with in the realme of England Chall likewife Iweare fealtie to him. The archbilhops alfo and bithops on either part, have bnder= taken, that if either of by Chall go from the forelaw covenants, they thall fo long cha-Aile the partie offending with the ecclelis asticall censures, till he reforme his fault, and returne to fulfill and observe the said 5 covenants. The mother also of the duke, and his wife, and his brethren, & lubiens whom he may procure, thall likewife af fure the premises. In matters belonging to the Cate of the realme, I chall worke by the dukes aduce. And through all the realme of England, as well in that part which belongeth to the duke, as in that which belongeth to 60 me, I chall fee that rotall inflice be executed. These being witnesses, Theobald archbilhop of Canfurburie, Hen. of Iclin= chester, Robert of Excester, Rob. of Bath, Goceline of Salisburie, Robert of Lin coine, Pilarie of Cicelter, William of Porwich, Richard of London, Pigell of Clie, Gilbert of Hereford, John of Wior celter, Talter of Cheller, Walter of 180-chelter, Geffrey of S. Afaph, Bilhops: 180vert prior of Bermondley, Othon knight of the temple, Civiliam earle of Ciceller, Robert earle of Leicelter, William earle of Glocester, Renold of Cornewall, Baldwin de Toning, Roger de Pereford, Hugh Bigot, Patrike de Salisburie, William de Albemarle, Earle Alberike, Roger Clare, Richard erle of Pembroke, Richard de Lucie, William Martell, Richard de Humer, Reginald de Alarren, Mahaser Bilet, John de Port, Richard de Came= uille, Penrie de Ester. Leuen at IIest= minster.

ayota de Ope

Thus far the Charter: and now to proceed with the historie. Immediatlie affer Christmasse, euen Ger. Dor. in the Octaves of the Epiphanie, the king and duke Anno Reg. 19. Henrie met againe at Drenford, where all the earls and barons of the land being affembled, fivare fealtie unto duke Henrie, their allegiance due unto king Stephan, as to their fouereigns losd and fur preme governour fo long as he lined, alwaies referued. The forme of the peace was nowallo ingrofted and registred for a perpetuall witnesse of the thing, in this yeare 1 154, after their account that begin the yeare at Chaiffmalle, as about the fealt of S.His larie in Januarie commonlie called the twentith daie. Thus was Henrie the some of the empesse made the adopted forme of king Sterhan, and therebpon the faid Henrie faluted him as king, and named him father. After conclusion of this peace, by the power of almightie God, all debate cealled, in fuch wife, that the state of the realme of England did marnelousie for a time flourish, concord being mainteined on ech hand. ¶ Where be thich affirme, that an other cause bound hing Stechan to agree to this attonement chiefelie, namelie for that the eme Polydor. presse (as they saie) was rather king Stechans paramour than his entimie: and therefore (when the faw the matter growns to this point, that they were readie to trie battell with their armies readie ranged Marth. Paris, on a plaine in the westerne parts called Egelaw Egelaw heath)the came fecretlie buto king Stephan, Thake heath. buto him on this wife: That a mildicuous and bunaturall thing go ye about. Is it meet that the father The words of should destroie the sonne : Is it lawfull for the sonne the empattle to kill the father: For the love of God (man) refraine phan. thy displeasure, and cast thy weapons out of thy hand, fith that (as thou thy felfe knowest full well) Benrie is thine cione forme. With these and the like woods The connecte the put him in mind, and covertlie fold him, that he confedeth hir had to do with hir a little before the was maried on feife to be to earle Geffrep.

The king by such tokens as the empresse gave him, take hir words to be true, and thereupon all his malice was freightwates quenthed: fo that calling fwith the archbithop of Canturburie, he vitered to him the whole matter, and toke therewith fuch direation, in lending to his adverlaries for auciding battell at that prefent, that immediatlie the armies ou both flocs wrapped up their enlignes, and every mair was commanded to keepe the peace, that a communication might be had about the conclusion of some pacification, which afterwards enfued in manera boue mentioned.

I But twether this or forme other cause motico the king to this peace, it is to be thought that God was the worker of it. And surelie a man may thinke it and reason, that the report of such secret companies keeping betwirt the king and the emprette, was but Slanders des a tale made among the common people opon no wise by make ground of truth, but opon some standerous device of cloub heads. a malicious head. And admit that hing Stedian had to do with hir; pet is it like that both of them would do for best to heepe it secret, that no such reproch might be imputed either to Bentie, who was taken to be legitimate; or to his mother, whose honour there

C

W

A

Breticles not performed.

Zunstable.

by Mould not a little be fained.

But now to the purpose. Shortlic after that the hing and duke Genrie had bene togither at Drenford, where they ended all things touching the peace a concord betwirt them concluded, they met againe at Dunstable, where some cloud of displeasure so med to darken the bright funthine of the late begun love and amitie betwirt those two mightie princes. the king and the duke. For where it was accorded (among other articles) that all the castels which had bone built fince the daies of the late king Henrie for entil intents and purpoles, thould be razed and theolone downe: contrarie therebuto (not with franbing manie of them were overthowne and destroied to the accomplishment of that article) vivers through the kings permission were suffered to stand. And when the duke complained to the king thereof, he could not get at that time any redieffe, which some what troubled him: but yet bicause he would not gine occasion of any new trouble, no offend the 20 hing, to whom (as to his reputed father) he would freme to yello all honour and due reuerence, he palsed it over.

The king and duke come to Canturburic.

Within a while after, the king and he came to Canturburie, where they were folemnlie received of the couent of Chilles church with procession. After this, in the Lent feason they went to Douer, where they talked with Theodoxike earle of Flanders, and with the counteste his wife who was aunt to duke (as it was bruted) the duke thould have beine murthered, through treason of the Flemings that enul the flamings to both the dukes person, and also that peace which he had concluded with the king. But fee the hap. As this feat thould have beine wought on Berhamdowne. William earle of Poethfolke king Stephan his fonne, who was one of the thefe conspirators, fell befive his bootle, and brake his leg, to that everie man by that fudden chance was in a maje, & came wonbering about him. This no doubt came to palle by 40 the providence of God, though such accidents are commonlie imputed to casualtie or chance medie. For it is the worke of God either to prevent, or to intercept, 02 to recompense the bunatural conspirat cies of traitoes and rebels with some notable plague: according to that of the poet;

Hesiod in 16 cui sis. op. & di.

Οἱ ἀυΤῶ χακὰ τέυχει ἀνης ἀλλφ χακὰ τέυχων, Η΄ 5 χαμή βελή τώ βελέυσαν Ιι χακίς Η, Noxius ipfe sibi est aly qui quarit obesse, Consiliumg, malum danti fert maxima damna.

Duke Penrie herewith getting knowledge of the treason intended against him, or at the least sub peaing somewhat, got him backe againe to Cantur, buric, and so audided the danger. After this, taking his way to Rochester, and so to London, he got him a thipboid, and failed by long feas into Pozmandie, where he arrived in fafctie.

After his departure, king Stephan went the fund part of the realine, the ming all the courteffe he could deuife to the people in all places where he came; er cept where he found any rebellious persons, as in Duke Beurie paffeth ouer into Moz manbie.

Wil.Paru. Philip Dc Co= lemille. Ebe caftell of Diar.

Poskthire, where Philip de Coleville (in trust of his castell which he had stronglie fortified at a certeine place called Dear) spewed himselfe disobedient to the hing, who affembling a power in the countrie, befie ged that castell, and shortlie wanne it, without any great ado.

Withen duke Henrie was departed (as pe have heard) and gone over into Pozmandie, now that he Chepuillance had concluded a peace with king Stephan, his pulls of dulie perie, fance was thought to be fuch, that he was able to mainteine warres with the mightiest prince that then reigned. For in right of his wife, he had gotten pollettion of the duchie of Agnitaine, and the earles dome of Poicton; and further by his mother, he entoted the duchie of Posmandie, and laked to lucced in the kingdome of England: and in right of his father he was earle of Aniou, Thouraigne, and Paine. He also renoted into his hands certeine parcels of his demeane Linds, which his father had given away, and palling from thence into Aquitaine, mightilie subdued certeine loads and barons there, that had rebelled against him.

About the same time a peace was concluded be a peace contwirt the French king, and this duke Henrie: the cluded be king restozing buto the duke the townes of Pew twirt the march and Clernon, which he had before taken from french king him, and the duke giving to the king 20000, markes Winrie. of filter, for the harmes done by him, within the Matth. West.

realme of France.

But now to returne onto king Stephan. De Chall bnderstand, that within a while after he had made his forefaid progresse almost about the whole realine, he returned buto London, where he called a parlement as well to confult of matters touching the fate of the commonwealth, as to furnith the lee of Porke Wil. Paru. with a lufficient archilhop. Where opon one Roger Roger Treb that was before archdeacon of Canturburie, was decon of Canchosen to that dignitie, and consecvated the tenth day turburie made of October, by archbishop Theobald, as legat to the archbishop of pope, and not as archbilhop of Canturburie. Then Benrie . At their comming towards Canturburic 30 allo was Thomas Becket made archdeacon of Can Thomas turburie by the fato Apeobald. The now archbishop Becket arch Roger first went to his fæ at Pooke, icherc after he deacon o had received his inflyonization, and fet his hulineile Centurbinie there in order, he toke his fournie towards Kome to fetch his pall in his owne person.

king Stephanallo after the end of the parlement went to Douer , there to meet the earle of Flan- The earle of ders, who came thither to talke with him of certeine Flanders. businesse. The earle was no somer returned backe, but the king fell ficke, and was to greenoutlie to: mented with a paine in his bellic, and with an old dis ease also, where with (as thould appeare) he had beene thing Stee offen troubled, namelie, the emrods, that finallie he phan depart died in the abbey on the five and twentith day of Dc, ted this life. tober, in the nine and fortith years of his age, and af ter he had reigned eight one yeares, ten moneths, and od dates, in the yeare after the birth of our Saul our 1154. His bodie was interred in the abbeic of Fenertham in Kent, which he had builded, where his 50 wife also, and his somme Culface were buried before. I Thus farre of the acts and deeds of Stephan; noto a little of other beefe remembrances, and first touthing the profopographie or description of his per-

He was comelie of Cature, of a verie god com his Cature. plerion and disposition, of great Arength, in qualities of mind berie excellent expert in warre gentle, curteous, and verie liberall. For though he continued all his time in a maner in the maintenance of wars, mer featon of this yeare, in going about the most 60 yet he levied but few tributs, or almost none at all. Indeed he put divers bishops to greenous fines, and that not without the full indgement of Almightie God, that they might so be punished ductie for their perinrie committed in helping him to the crowne. Ulices wherewith he chauld be noted I find none, but that boon an ambitious veltre to reigne, he brake his oth which he made buto the emprelle Wand.

In his dates, the abbetes of Tiltey, Fontneis, Abbetes Rieualle, Coggethall in Effer, Peterbourgh and Coggethall Beland, Permale in Marwikelbire, Garedon in he feunded Leicesterchire, kirksteed in Dockethire, with diverse himfelfe, and ofter in other parts of the realine, were founded, in fontacions for much that more abbris were created in his dates, forethand than had beene within the space of an hundged yeares in Rent.

Matth. Paris. N.Triuet. 1154

brfore.

 $_{3}An.Reg.1,2.$

before, as William Paruus writeth.

A great number of castels also were builded in bis vales (as before ye have heard) by the Pobles of the realme, either to defend the confines of their countries from inuations of forrenners, and violence of homelings; or as fortifications to themselues when they ment or intended any inrode or breaking bpon their neighbours.

Dinerle learned men namelie hilfogiographers lived in these dates, as William Malmesburie, Henrie Huntington, Simon Dunelmensis, Galfridus Arturius, otherwise called Monumetensis, Caradoc Lancarnauenfis, William Reuellenfis, among thom Thurstan archbishop of Porke is not to be forgotten, belides many moze, who in diverle leiences were berie expert and skilfull, as by treatises of their setting forth to the world hath sufficientlie ap-

Thus far Stephan of Bullongne:

Henrie the second, the second sonne of Geffrey Plantagenet.

Anno Reg. T.

Enrie the second of that name, a French man borne, the lecond sonne of Geffrey Plantagenet earle of Anion, begotten of Paud the empreffe, daughter to Denrie the first, began his reigne ouer England the five and twentith of Daober, in the the yeare after the incarnation of our faulour 1 154. about the beginning of the third yeare of the emperour Frederike the first, the second of pope Anasta fins the fourth, the fewententh yeare of Lewes the fenenth king of France, and second of Palcolme then king of Scotland. Immediatlie after he was advertised of the death of king Stephan, he came o uer into England, landing at Direham about the fenenth day of December. After he had got his come panies togither, which by tempest were scattered in 20 his pallage, he came first to Winchester, where he received homage and fealtie of the Pobles of the realme reforting onto him. This done he let forth to wards London, where he was crowned king by Theobald archbithop of Canturburic the twentith date of December.

N.Treuet. The archbi= thop of Rouen.

N. Triuet.

Manh Paris,

Polydor.

Councellers cholen.

Ran Higd.

yeare after the creation of the woodd 5 1 2 1. and in 10 The archbishop of Konen, with thee of his luffra.

gans, the archbithop of Dozke, and manie other bis thops of England: Theodorus the earle of Flanbers, with a great number of other earles, loods and 20 barons were prefent there at his coronation. De was at that time about the age of three and twentie peares, and to win the peoples love, he tpake manie comfortable words buto them, to put them in hope (as the manner is) that they thould find him a louing prince. He bled the loods also verie courteoutlie. And first of all after his atteining to the crowne he chose to him councellers of the gravest personages, and best learned in the lawes of the realine, with whose probent admice be perufed thole lawes, and amended 40 them where he thought necessarie, commanding thieffie, that the lawes established by his granofather Penrie the first Chould be observed: and in mante things he relied upon the adute of Theobald Thom. Becket to Ehomas Becket to be his chancellour, thich Becket the fair archbiftop had made archdeacon of Canturburie the yeare before.

Pozeouer, by the fentence and dome of his cours

cellers, to the intent that peace and quiet order might take place, and be the better mainteined, he Anno Reg. 2. commanded by wate of publishing a proclamation, that all strangers (which to get som what by the wars Nic. Triver. had flocked into the realme, during the time of the Polydor. civill discord between him and king Stephan) shuld Strangers depart home without further delate: therefore he appointed to amointed them a date, before the which they should as depart the noto opon perill that might infue. It was a woolds realme. wonder to fie and marke how suddenlie these als Aliens anoid ens were quite vanished, as though they had beene the land. phantalmes. Their abiding here was nothing profitable to the subjects of the realme, as they that were accustomed to attempt one threwd turne by on an others necke, and thought it lawfull for them so to dw. Amongst them was a great number of Flentings, whom the king hated moze than the re-

By bertue allo of this edict, William of Ppres, William be thom king Stephan (as pe haue heard) had made ypres. earle of Bent, was constremed with others to bepart the realme, king Henrie leizing all his pollelly ons into his owne hands. Diverse castels were throwne downe and made plaine with the ground at the kings commandement, which private men by Matth Paris. king Stephans permillion had builded, or elle for that they stoo not in such places as was thought meet and erpedient; pet some he caused to be fortifis Wil. Paruus. ed : and further moze, toke intohis hands againe fuch Matth. Paris. lands and pollellions as awerteined to the crowne, and were alienated buto any manner of person, of what degree so ever he was. This wounded the minds of many with an inward grudge, as well co nough percetuing that the king would lake so neere to his owne commoditie, that nothing thoulo be left for them that might any way be recovered and gotten to his vic.

In this vere queite Elianoz being then in the citie of London, on the last of Februarie was delivered of hir fecond fonne named Benrie. About the same M. Triuet, time allo, William Penerell of Potingham a noble Matth. Paris. Matth. West. man and of great polletions was differited by the william Peking for forcerie and withcraft, which he had practis verell diffefed to kill Ranulfe earle of Cheffer, as it was renea, rited. led openlie, and brought to light. In accomplishing of which hainous crime and detestable act, many o thers were of counsell, and found giltie with him, which escaped not brountlied.

On the tenth of Aprill, king Henrie allembled the pæres

Caffels ouer= throwne.

1 3c.Treuct.

Matth. Paris. Nic. Treuct. iongh de Dotimer. The caftell of Cleberie.

Roger Fitz Mailen.

Anno Reg. 2. The king go eth into the north. Scarbozough Wil.Paruos. Nic.Treuet. The ocath of the kings fon william . achelleth.

Wil.Paruus.

an Engilh= man borne. A dispensatio Nic.Treuct.

perest great loss of his realme together at Wal lingford, and caused them to sweare allegiance onto his clock sonne William: prouiding, that if he chanced to die, then they frould do the like but his bro ther Penrie. Also inherens Hugh ve Portimer had fensed his cattels against king henrie, he besteged the fame, and taking the castell of Cleberie, he bes Aroied it. Wherebpon, the forefaid Hugh Mortlie af ter was at peace with the king, and furrendzed to him the two castels of voligmore and Bridgenorth, r which hitherto he had holden. Horeover, whereas there was variance kindled betwirt the king, and Roger Fit; Piles of Glocester (tho was earle of hereford for the lands of Glocester, that variance was also quenched: for affer the same Koger was dead, his brother Walter lucceeding him in the earldoine of Hereford, was constrained to depart with the citie of Glocester, which the king held and reteis ned in his owne hands.

went to Poske, and in that countrie toke into his hands divers callels which had beine long in pottette on of panate men; namelie, the castell of Scarbos The castell of rough, which William carle of Albemarle held, and now was confireined to religne it up, full fore as gainst his will. This yeare William the kings el dest sonne departed this life, and was buried at Reading. The realme of England was brought on all fives into verie god quiet; but per long, wood came kings brother to la. Benrie, that his brother Deffrey had begun a 3 rebellion on the other fide of the fea. For their father Geffrey (uhen he died) left thice fonnes behind him. Henrie, Beffrey, and William, ordeining by his tes frament, when Penric Hould have gotten pollellion of England and Pormandic, that then the countrie of Anion Hould remaine buto Geffrey, and in the meanetime, he to have these thee townes, Chinon, Lodun, and Dirabell, to mainteine his effate; and when the time came that the whole heritage should fall unto him, he wight by policilion of these thee 40 have a readier meane to come by all the reft. Fur thermore, fearing least his clock some Denrie (who as then was absent) would not consent to the perfore mance of this his will, he caused certaine bishops and other of the Pobles to Aweare, that they Mould not fuffer his bodie to be committed to buriall, till his formes had fivorne to fulfill his last will and tefament in all other things, but especiallie in this behalfe, wherin he judged not amille. For though Henrie was loth to take his oth, pet bicause his fathers 50 bodie should not remaine unburied, he was content ted to sweare.

But after he had obteined the kingdome of Eng. land, his conetous defire, increasing fill with abune dance alreadie obteined, found meanes to procure Pope Norian of pope Adrian the fourth (who was an Englishman boine) a dispensation for that oth : where boon (bauing got licence to depart from the office both of right, law and equitio) neglecting his fathers ordinance, he patted oner into Posmandie, and making war as 60 gainst his brother the faid Geffrey, cafilie erpelled him out of those places, which were assigned him by bequest in his fathers testament, and so toke the earledome of Anion into his owne policilion. Holy beit, he game buto his faid brother a pension of a thouland pounds English, & two thouland pounds of the monie of Aniou, with the towne of Lodun, and certeine other laws to live byon; tho neverthelette thinking himselfe cuill bled at the kings hands, rebelled and died.

There we have to note the lacke of conscience and religion, not onlie in the pretended successor of Deter in giving a dispensation for an oth, but also in his god ghostlie some, who was no lesse forward in revolting from his oth, than the other was willing to acquite him from the force thereof . But if thefe men had beene profiting ledolers in the univerlitic of the pagans, as they were arrand truants and ranke dullards in the schoole of chaidians, they might have learned by profane examples, that as oths are not to be rashlie taken, so they are not to be unaduscolie broken. Herebuto alludeth Aristotle in his Meta phylikes, thewing the cause thy poetrie hath feig. ned that the gods in old time vied to iweare by was ter, as Jupiter is reported to have done in this manner;

per flumina iuro Infera sub terra stygio labentia luco.

To fignifie bnto be,that as water is a berie ancient and ercellent element, and so necessarie that with out it the life of man cannot confut; even so we ought to esteme of an oth, than the with we thould thinke nothing more religious, nothing more holie, In the fecond yeare of his reigne, king henrie 20 nothing moze chiffian. Herebnto allo tendeth the fable of the transmutation of mariners into dolphins 3, fab. 8,9,10, to perturie: importing thus much for our instructs ou, that the breaking of an oth, in a cafe that may pretudice, procureth græuous punishments from God against them that so lewdlie dwoffend. But such is the impudencie of the pope, that he will not grant ob fpensations onlie for oths, but for incest, for treason, and for any other finne: which he may dw (as he boar ffeth) by vertue of his absolute and uninerfall juris diction: as we have latelie in most lamentable fort tene exemplified. But to the course of our fforie.

Shortlie after, when king Henric had dispatched his businesse in Pormandie, and made an end of troubles there betwirt him and his brother Geffrey, be returned into England, bicaule he receiued ad. Ring Benrie uertifement, that Balcolme king of Scotland be- the Scots. gan to make war against his subjects that bordered nert buto him, wherebyon he halfed northwards: and comming first into Cumberland, he toke the ch tie of Carleil, feiging all that countie into his he wan Carhands; and going affer into Porthumberland, he leit and formwan the towne of pewcastell, with the castell of castell and a Bamburg, and toke into his polletion all that coun thers. trie which his mother the empresse had sometimes granted unto king Dauid, as before ye haue heard: howbeit bicause he would not seeme to offer to much wong, and be chemed briningfull of former benefites received, he fuffered king Palcoline to entop the earlebonne of Buntington, which king Stephan Che earlbone had ginen buto his father earle Henric, fonne to of Puntingto. king Dauid, as before is partlie touched.

William allo the earle of Poitaigne, and War william earle ren sonne of hung. Stephan, were compelled to fur: Marth. Paris. render to king Henrie, the castell of Pemscy, the ct. Nic Trever tie of Porwich, and other townes and castels which he held, americining to the demeane of the crowne: to whom the king in recompense restored, those lands which his father king Stephan held in the daics of king Henrie the first.

About this time Theodoxike early of Handers Anno Reg !. (going with his wife butg Jerufalem) committed 1 1 5 7 bis some Philip with all his lands, to the custopie of Cheoderike the king of Spaland. Dugh Bigot also religited his earle of Plans callels into the kings hands callels into the hings bands.

But while thing Henric was about (as before pe have hearo to recover and get backe the portions of his kingdome made away and dimembred by his Rebellion of prepecelliss, be was informed that the William wellburgh wellburgh railed a rebellion against him; to repress those aff. tempts he haued forth with all diligence. Polp at his first approch to their countrie, his souldiers being the king in fet bpon in the straits, were verie fiercelie put back uaveth them. by the enimics, in formuch that a rumoz ran how king Henrie was flaine, which puffed by the Wielly

Ouid. Mes, lily 1.fab.6.

Ouid. Mes. lib.

1156

An. Reg. 4,5.

men with no small hope, and dalunted the Englishmen with great fcare. In ded, diverle of the Englith nobilitie were flaine, and (amongit others) Eus Cufface Fits face fits John, and Hobert de Curcy, men of great honor and reputation.

, ohn , 1 180bert de Curcy flaine.

menric of

Giler. Matth. West.

Wil. Paruus.

A combat be=

twirt Genrie

ne Effer, and

Month. West.

The welch=

The caltellof

Rutiand and

Matth Paris.

Anno Reg.4.

Becket lozo

Chanceloz. 1158

Chomas

men fubmit

themfelues.

Those which escaped in returning backe, not know, ing that the king passed through the straits without banger, occlared to their fellowes that followed and were approxing to the faid fraits, that (fo farre as they kinew) the king and all the rectour were lost. 10 These newes so discomforted the companies, that Henrie of Gaer, hipshibare the kings damoard by right of inheritance, thee wooding the fame, and fled: thich vilhonozable ded was afterward late to his charge by one Robert de Mountfort, with thom (by order taken of the king he fought a combat in triall of the quarrell, and was overcome: but yet the king qualifieng the rigos of the tadgement by mercie par boned his life, and appointed him to be a thome months, and put into the abbry of Reading, taking 26 his lands and possessions into his hands as forfeited: howbeit this combat was not tried till about the 9. peare of this kings reigne.

Pow the king, hearing that his armie was dis comfited, came to his men, and thewing himfelfe to them with open visage, greatlie revived the whole multitude, and then proceeding against the enimies; his people were afterwards more warte in loking to themselves, infomuch that at length (when the in. prepared to inuade the Welthmen both by water $ 30 land)they fought to him for peace, and wholie fubmit-ted themselves buto his grace and mercie. About the same time, king Henrie builded the car Balingwerke fell of Kutland, the castell of Balingwerke, and one house also of Templers. In the moneth of Septem: ber also this yeare, the kings third some was borne at Drenford, a named Kichard. This yeare was Thomas Becket preferred to be the kings Thancellor. The king holding his Christmas at Worcester in great rovaltie, fat in the church at service, with his 40 Matth Paris. Crowne on his head, as the kings view in those dates eth his crown to do on solemne feaffs ; but as some as malle was ended, he take his crowne from his head, and fet it Coincalcred, pointe byon the altar in figne of humblenes, so that he never after valled for the livearing of a crowne. The fame yeare also the king altered his coine, abzo. gating certeine pecces called balels.

In the moneth of August he went over into Poze mandie, and came to an enterview with the French king neere to the river of Cata, where they intreated 5 of a league, and of a marriage, which was after agrad bpon, betwirt Henrie the sonne of king Henric; and the ladic Pargaret, daughter to the French hing: at with time Thomas Becket (then being the hings chancelloz) was fent to Paris in great arais to fetch hir: who among other furnitures had nine long charrets (as Matthew Paris writeth.) Pow then this ladie was delivered to Thomas Becket the lood chancellos, and brought from Paris, the was appointed from thencefooth to remaine in the house 60 of Robert de Pewburge, a Poble man of great honot, butill luch time as the mariage thould be foleme

Affer the two kings were departed in lunder, k. Benrie prepared an armie against Conan duke of Britaine, who had leized the citie of Paunts into his hands, after the occcase of Geffrey the kings brother, who was earle of Paunts. At length, the same Conan perceining himselfe not able to relist the king of England, byon the date of the feath of faint Dicha el the archangell came to king Henrie, and furren deed the citie of Paunts into his hands, with all the whole countrie therebuto belonging. Some after which relignation, and vpon the 24. of August, Gelfrey the kings fourth some was borne of his wife Gestrey the quæne Chanoz.

In December following, Theobald earle of Blois was accorded with king Henrie, to deliner to him tivo of his castels. Likewise Petroke earle of Perch Petroke carle furrendzed two castels onto king Henrie, with he of Perch. had blurped of the demeanes of Pozmandie in the Daies of king Stephan: one of which callels the king gave him againe, receiving homage of him for the fame.

i Pozeover king Henrie and Kaimond carle of Raimond cric Barzelone met togither at Blaime, there they consideratione, the cluded a league by water of allegiance, so that Riskings some thard the forme of king Henrie thould take to wife offered to eric the daughter of the faid Kaimond in time convenis Raimonds ent; and that the king of England thould give buto daughter. the faid Richard the duchie of Aquitane, 4 the couns tie of Poicow. This earle Raimond had married the daughter and heire of the king of Aragon.

n the meane time, a fecret grudge that had long vependen betiveene king Henrie and king Lewes of France did Itill continue, and though there was a Extenditip agreed betweene them (as ye have heard) to have ertinguished the same, yet was it but a fais A fained ned friendship : for upon eartie new occasion they millioned were readie to breake againe, as it came to palle of Aquitane.

thortlie after.

William buke of Aquitane, grandfather to quæne Clianoz, married the daughter and heire of the earle of Tholouse, and going buto the warres of the holie land, he engaged that earledonte unto Kaimond the Carle of faint earle of faint Biles, and died before he could returne. Biles office Pis sonne William, father to quene Clianoz, suf wife Tho-fered his carledome to remaine fill buredented, etc ther for want of sufficiencie, or through negligence and carelefnelle: so that the earle of faint Giles kee ping possession thereof buto his dieng daie, lest it to his sonne Raimond, who intoyed it likewise. Pow when king Lewes (having married the forefaid C lianoz) demanded restitution as in the right of his wife, earle Kaimond flatlie at the first denied to reffore it, but after confidering his lacke of power to reliff the kings puissance, he plied the K. with hum: ble petitions, and so prevailed by faire words, that in the end king Lewes granted him his fister Con-Cance in marriage (which Constance, as ye have heard, was married before unto Eufface the fonne of king Stephan) with hir granted him libertie to reteine the earldome of Tholouse as it were by waie of endowment: whereto the other accorded. Howbeit king Penrie hauing maried the forciaid quene Anno. Reg. s. Elianoz, after the divorte had betwirt hir and king Lewes, made claime to the fato countie of Tho Matth. Paris. louge in the right of his wife. Herebyon earle Katmond, trusting now to the aid of his brother in law king Lewes, denied to restoze it; so that king Benrie determined to recover it by force, and entring by and by into Galcoine with an armie, he drew to wards the countrie of Tholonge, & began to inuade the same with great force and courage.

Diners great loods of those parties somed with Wil. Paruus. king Henrie in his war which he attempted against the earle of faint Giles, as the earle of Barzelone, and the losd William Trencheuile, a man of great power in those quarters, having under his rule ma Trencheutle. nie cities, castels and townes, not with francing that he had of late lost many of them by violence of the foresaid earle of Tholouse, but now by the aide of king Penrie he recovered them all. Palcolnie also N. Triver. king of Scotland came buto king Henrie, wilest he was fouth in this tournie, to affociate him in this

The earle hearing of king Henries comming with an armie, was put in great feare, and thereup OIL

67 kings fourth

william d the

1159

william

Additions to John Pike. The loca Becket fent into France. Matth. West.

on wrote letters to his brother in law king Lewes, requiring him with all speed possible to come buto his aid. Aing Lewes byon receipt of the letters, tow derstanding the present danger of the earle, made fuch haff in continuing his cournie both daie and night, that he came to Tholouse, before king Henrie could arrive there. Thich when king Henrie under flod, and perceined how he was prenented, he changed his purpole of belieging the citic, and fell to spot reconcred certaine places that latelle before had renoted from his government, t (amough the rest) the citie of Cahors, which he furnished with men, munito on and vittels, appointing his chancello: Thomas Becket to the cultodic and keeping thereof: he fortis fice other places also which he has gotten, placing capteines and men of warre to lake buto the des fense of the same. Whilest the king was thus abrove on his fournic in the parties of Aquitaine, William audition carle earle of Bullongne and Dortaine the some of king 29 of Bullongne. Sterhau, and Paimon earle of Gloceffer departed this life, which two carles went thither with him.

Finallie, when he had let things at a ffaic in thole parties, he returned towards Posmandie, and comb ming to the citie of Toures, he gave the order of knighthod onto Walcolme king of Scotland, and fo in the moneth of Actober he came backe into Pop mandic, and there augmenting his armie with new implies, entred into the countie of Beaucoilin, burs ned manie villages in the fame, and deffroicd the 30 frong castell of Gerberie, ercept one turret, which his fouldiers could not take, by reason of the fire and finoke which stated and kept them from it. Pozeouer, Simon earle of Auranches delivered buto king Henric luch fortrettes as he held in France, as Roch fort, Dontfort, and such like, which was no small oilcommoditie and inconvenience to the French king, bicause the garisons placed in those fortresses impeached the passage betwirt Paris and Dileance.

Wrinitie in the yeare next following. In the moneth of Paic also insuing, a peace was T peace con- concluded opon the former articles and conditions: for further confirmation thereof, the mariage was folematica betwirt Henrie the kings sonne being fenen yeares of age, and the ladic Hargaret daughter to the French king, being not past them yeares old : as writers do report. The marriage was celebrated at Peinborough on the second date of Pos 50 nember, by the authoritie of two legats of the apofloithe fee, Henric bishop of Pila, and William bi thop of Paula, both profis and cardinals.

the moneth of December, but o the feast of the holic

About the same time came certeine Dutchmen of the fort called Claldoies over into this realme, to the number of thirtie or more, who held opinions in religion contrarie to the faith of the Romane church, for (as one author affirmeth) they which first speed the os pinions which thefe men helo, came from Balcoigne, and picualled so greatlie in setting fouth their do 60 arine, that they mightilie increased through the large regions of Spaine, France, Italic, and Germanie: fimple men (God wote) they were for the most part, as is written of them, and of no quicke capacitie. Dolobeit, those which at this time came over into England, were indifferentlie well learned, and their principall or ringleader was named Gerard. Dow also was a councell assembled at Orford, whereat these dogmatists were cramined byon certeine points of their profession. The forland Gerard undertaking to answere for them all, protested that they were good christians, and had the doctrine of the apofiles in all renerence. Worconer, being cramined what they thought of the labstance of the godhead and the merits of Agitt, they answered rightlie, and to the point; but bring fauther eramined bpon o Cheir cramither articles of the religion then received, they fwar, nation a pios nco from the church, and payer lies in the ble of the ofuine facraments, derogating such grace hem the fame, as the durch by his authoritie had then afteri bed thereto. To conclude, they would in no luffe re. The Claideig nounce their apintons, in famuch that they were condemned, condemned, burned in the forthead with an hot from, ling of the countrie thereabouts: at which time he 10 and in the cold lealors of twinter frequentials from the girdle feat byward, mails thipped gut of the to inne; with proclamation mane; that no manthonio be so hardie as to recoincided into any house, upliene themswith meat, drinks of any other hind of They are for meanes: inhere opon it fell out in fine that they were bidden meat farned to death through rold and hunger: howbett and drinke. in this their affliction they demed to reioile in that, They are flore they luffered for Gods cante, as they made account. ned to beach,

The fame years, Patthew fonne to the earle of Flanders married the lapie Parie the abbeffe of Ramfic, daughter to king Stephan, and with hir had the countie of Bullongne. About this maringe grew The first fall the first falling out betweet the hing and his chancel, ling out belor Thomas Becket (as some have written) but none twick the k. more than the faid Datthew was offended with the faid dancellos, bicause he was so sore against the faid Anno Reg. 7. contract.

Bing Denrie, Cottlie after the marriage was Matth. West. consummate betwirt his sonne the French kings baughter, got into his hands the castell of Gisos, with two other castels, situate boon the river of Cata in the confines of Posmandie and France. For it was accorded betweet the two kings, that when the marriage fould be finished king Henrie Sould have those three castels, bicause they apperteined to Pozmandie; in the meane time, the same castels were delinered into the hands of Robert de Poi Rog. Houed. ron, Toftes de Saint Diner, and Robert Haftings, thee knights templers, tho bpon the confumma-Arrucctaken But Chortlie after, a truce was taken to last from 40 tion of the marriages before laid, and according to the trust committed to them, surrendeed the pos fession of the said castels into the hands of king Denrie.

But the French king was not a little moued, for that king Denrie had leised opon them without his licence, in to much that he raised a power of armed men, and fent them into Posmandie, where they had one cruell conflict about the rest with the Pointans, Gaguinus, till the night parted them in funder, by meane where The french of the Frenchmen withdrew to Chaumount, and the & Mormons Romans to Gilozs. The next daie, as the French fight. men came forth againe, purpoling to have won Offors, they were beaten backeby the Pormans, who issued out of the towne to skirmish with them. Thus was the warre renewed betwirt thefe two princes; Nic. Triver. and by fetting on of Theobald earle of Blois, the matter grew to that point, that the English and French powers comming fouthwith into the field, and marching one against an other, they approched so nere together, that battell was prefentlie loked for, first in Canlgedine, and affer in the territorie of Dunc; but pet in the end such order was taken betwirt them, that their armies brake by.

The three Templers also ran in displeasure of the French king, for the deliverie of the callels before knights they knewhis mind, so that he banished them the templers. realme of France for enermore : but hing Henrie Rog Houed. received them, and gave them honogable enterteines ment. Some write that there were but two castels. Offors and Meall, which were thus put into their hands, and by them delinered as before is mentioned.

About this time Deobald archbishop of Cantur, Theobald buric departed this life, after he had gouerned that archbifiop of N.Triuet.

& Thomas 25ccket. Matth.Paris.

1161

Chice.

Match. Paris. The death of for Caturbutie.

The citie of Cahors. N.Triuct. The load chancelloz. Becket.

Rob.Houed.

The countie of Useaunoilin

Anno Reg. 5.

1160 clubed. M.marriage concluded.

Matth.Paris.

Legats.

Wil.Paruus. Certeine of the Claldotes came into England being Dutchme.

A councell at Drford.

The profes fions of the Claidoics.

The power icmantine an-

The authori=

Ficialconfe-

crated archb.

1162

Quadrilogium

ex vita einsdem

Wil, Paru.

le the space of 22 yeares who at his going to Konic, and receipt of the pall of pope Innocent the fecond, was also created legat of the see apollolike, which of, fice he exercised so diligentlie, and so much to the anaile of the church, that the dignitie of legatihip reneced to Cant. mained ever after to the archbilhop of Canturburie by a speciall decree, so that they were intituled Legati nati, that is to fav Legats borne (as mine author doth report.) This Theobald greatlie fauoured Thomas

This Becket was borne in London, his father hight Gilbert, but his mother was a Syrian borne, and by religion a Saracen: howbeit (no regard had of his parents) he grew to highlie in favour with the tie of Becket, king, and might do so much in England, that he fee. med to reigne as if he had beene affociat with him alfo in the kingdome, and being Lord chancellor, the king fent him ouer into England (Richard Lucie being in his companie) with fundrie letters in his fauour, thereby to procure his election to that lee: which 20 fure against him. was brought to palle according to the kings defire at Westminster. Afterward he was ordeined at Canturburic on saturdaie in Whitsunweike, by Benrie bishop of Winchester (although there be that write how Walter bishop of Rochester div conses crate him) which confectation was in the 44. yeare of his age, and in the fift yere after his first advance, ment to the office of Lozd chancelloz, so that he was the eight and thirtith archbishop which governed in

The archbifh. a better cour= preacher.

The quiene brought to bed of a daughter.

In enternem.

Anno Reg. 9. 1163

N.Triuct.

called him his forme. This yeare Aniene Clianoz was brought to bed at Kohan of a daughter named Elianoz.

Loward the end of the same yeare, Henrie the kings sonne received homage of the barons, first in Pormandie, and after in England. In the yeare enfuing, the king his father committed him to archbithop Becket, that he might lie him brought op and trained in maners and courtlie behautour, as apper-teined to his estate: where byon the archbishop in test

In like maner the kings of England and France received pope Alexander the third at Cocie upon Loire with all honoz and reucrence, infomuch that they attended byon his Airrup on fot like pages 02 lackies, the one boon his right fide, and the other on his left.

Pote here the intollerable price of this antidate frian pope in assuming, and the basemindednesse of these two kings in ascribing buto that man of sinne such dignitie as is otterlie butit for his indignitie. 50 But what will this monster of men, this stupor mundisthis Diaboli primogenitus & hares not arrogate for his owne aduancement; like puie climing aloft, & choking the træby whose helpe it cræpeth up from the rot to the top. But the end of this seauen homed beaff to ertolling and lifting it felfe by to heaven, is

- Erebo miserè claudetur in imo Atque illic miris cruciatibus afficietur.

Domage of the

In Januarie enluing, the king returned into L. of Scots. England, and the same yeare the king of Scots did 60 ued in mind, he set forth lawes against the spiritual committed by homage buto Benrie the yonger, and delivered his yonger brother Daulo to the king his father, with dinerse other the sonnes of his loods and barons in pledge, for affurance of a perpetuall peace to be kept betweene them, with some such castels as he required.

I connectlat

In the meane time archbilhop Thomas went to the councell holden by pope Alexander at Tours in the Dataucs of Pontecost, where he resigned his bi-Mornike into the popes hands (as the fame went) being troubled in conscience for that he had received it by the kings preferment. The pope allowing his purpose, committed the same pastorlike dignitic to him agains by his ecclefialticall power, whereby the archbilhop was eased verie well of his greefe, and Mostlic after his returne from his councell, sæmed delirous to reduce & cause to be restozed such rights as he pretended to belong buto the church of Canturburie, whereby he ran into the displeasure of manie, and namelie of the mightieff.

Poseover he required of the king the kieping of Rochester castell, e the custodie of the tower of Low don. He alledged also that Saltivod & With belong. The archbis. ed peculiarlie to the leigniozie of his fee. De called practieth trea Roger earle of Clare buto Wellminster, to do his hangage buto him for the castell of Tunbrioge; but Homage for the earle denied it through the fetting on of the king, the callell of alledging all the fee thereof to americine rather to Tunbrings. the king than to the archbithop. Thus was the archbithop troubled, and he grew dailie more and more out of the kings favour. For you must understand, that this was not the first nor the second, but the eight: time that the king had thelved tokens of his displeas

After this, bpon the first day of Julie, Mice prince Matth. Paris. of Southwales, with diverte other loods and nobles Matth, West, of Males, did homage both to the king and to his sonne Henrie at Moditocke . Hamline the kings vallard brother married the countelle of Warren, the widow of William earle of Portaigne baltard Anno Reg. 10 forme to king Stephan. Dis countelle was the fole Bomage of the daughter and heire of William the third earle of welchmen. Charren, which went with Lewes king of France N. Triver. 30 into the holic land, and there vied. Some after, the Welthmen rebelling with their prince Rice and his uncle Diven, did many milchefes on the marthes: and by the death of Walter Giffoed earle of Buc. kingham (who deceased this yeare without heire) that earledome came to the kings hands.

On the 20. date of September were the circles feene to compatte the fun, and to continued the space of the houres togither: which when they vanished as wate, two funnes appeared and sprang forth after a o maruellous maner. Which strange sight the commonpeople imagined to be a figne or token of the controversie then kindling betweet the king and the archbilhop.

About this time the king called a parlement at Meliminster, to treat of matters concerning the commonwealth, wherein great discord arose befinist Discordiffit the king farchbithop Becket, about certeine points kindleth betouching the liberties of the church. For the king has twict the king mearnest seale but of infice and command and the archining an earnest seale buto inffice, and commanding the ludges to punish offenders without respect, bus derstood by their information, that manie things by them of the lpiritualtie (against whome their authoris tie might not be extended) were committed contrarie to common order: as theff, rapine, murther, and mandaughter; in so much that in his presence it was made notozious, that fith the beginning of his reigne, aboue an hundred mandaughters had beine committed within his realme of England by prefis and men of religious orders. Hereupon being mo tie, wherein he thewed his zeale of inflice. For as the prefits. cause proceeded from the bilhops of that age, so did the fault also, fith contrarie to their owne canons they permitted preeffs to live over licenticultie without due correction, fludieng onelie to mainteine the W. Paruns, liberties and immunities of the church, and not to reforme the irregularitie of the regulars. Dethis crew Matth, Paris, was one Philip de Broc, a canon of Bedford, who being arreigned before the kings inflicer for a murther, ottered distainefull woods against the same infficer: which when he could not denie before the arch bishop, he was deprined of his prebend, and banished the land for two yeares space.

These things troubled the king, who therefore has Gin.

fon fecrettie.

1164

Matth. Paris.

The king ancanect. Le bathle the fp: rungitu fif ppelampraode deming. The meiars againfi the ting.

thing alreadic let downt luch expers as fhould brible the speciments from their wicked doings thought that if he reight gri them confirmed in parlement by consent of the bulyops and cierque from the same though take place and be received fe; latines. Court feet he carnellius required at this parlement, that it empts be enauce against all such of the spiritual tic, as fhould be taken and conmuced for any houses oftense, they should lade the priviledge of the shares and be belierred berto the cand magnifrate, the though he them rufter execution for their offenfest, in like maner as he might any of the kings febreds being late men. For otherwise for bing allebach, that they would bold in prefume to do much more mildiefe, ef affer ecclesialneal viscipline, no fecutercorremon about follow. Ind likelie it was that they brould patte but little for their bilgrading and lette of their order, who in contempt of their calling mould not ablicing from commuting most mildic nous abhornmations and hainous enormities.

Unto these reasons thus proponed by the king to haut his purpole take effect the archbilhop and his luftragans with the reft of the bullops, andwered verte pithilie, labouring to prove that it was more as gamen the liberties of the church, than that they maght with reason well allow. Whereboon the king iring mourd exceedinglic against them, demanded inhether they bould observe his rotall latives and co-Boures Linds the archbilhops are bilhops in the time of his grandfather did hold and obvie on not - There but other made autwere, that they would observe them, Jalus ordine fue, Their order in all things faurd. 13 at the king being highlic offended with fuch erceptions. baged the matter to, that he would have them to take their oth absolutely, a without all exceptions, The bury of but they would none of that . At length he departed from London in berie great displeature with the bis thops, having first taken from the archbishop Too mas all the offices and olgnities which he enivied fince his first being created chancelloz.

Howbeit, after this, manie of the bilhops læing itherboto this broile would grow, began to thunke from the archbilhop, and inclined to the king. But the artibitinop find thillie in his epinion, and would not beno at all, till at length not onclie his luffragans the bilhops, but also the bilhop of Lileur itho came over to do some god in the matter and the abbat of Clemolina (tho was lent from the pope) perinabed him to agree to the kings will, in so much that being our come at last with the earnest suit of 50 his frænds, he came first to Woodsocke, and there promifed the hing to observe his lawes, Eina fide, Faithfullie, and without all collusion or deceit.

Shortle after in the featt of S. Dilarie, a councell was holden at Clarendon, thereto the archbilhop, and in manner all the loods spirituall and temporall of the land made their repaire. Here the archbishop would have willinglie farted from his promife, if first the bishops, and after the earles of Leicester and Cornewall, Robert mo Reignald which Reignald 60 was bucle to the king and lastlie two knights templers, had not mouce him to yale to the kings will. Laut among the relightese two knights, namelie Lie charo de Pattings, and Policus de Boloigne were veric carne it with him, * at length prevailed, though not for conscience of dutic, where with he thould have bane touched; pet with feare of banger, which by refusing to satisfie the kings will; he should have brought not onclie byon himfelfe, but also byon the the other bishops there present.

Thefe knights fæmed to lament his cafe, as if al readie they had fine naked swoods shaken about his cares. And indeed, certeine of the kings fernants that attended byon his perfon after the manner of a gard, ment to and fro, rudbing by and downs the chambers, thaking their bright battell ares teame appointed, are looking as if they would forthwill run opon the vilhops. There's pain the arthbillion being touched with compale, and froming to Arine against his acterminat purpole conferned to ober the bings Heature, and to promited in the total of a prest, five Man Paris. ring furthermore, that he toould oblerue the hings The arcine latives aribentionies, without expeding their words, frop Berset ine ordine mee, Pine order faurd, which he had bled before. The like of bit all the vilhops take. But the archbillion refuled at that time to feale to the tech fing that contained the articles of the oth which he though have observed, requiring as it were a time to confider of them, fith in to weightie a matter no thing ought to be done without god and deliberate abinice, wherefore he toke with him a copie thereof, and foods the archbiffiop of Postse an other, and the there remained with the king

Shortlie after, the archivilher confidering further be recemen of this of tible he had taken, reperted himfelfe him in that he gramoullie theref, in found that he abstrinite from had received faicing of malle, till be had by confession and fruits Manthe with of penance as faith Mauch. Paris obtained absolute on of the pope. For addressing and lending out mellengers with all speed unto the pope, with a certificat of the thole matter as it laie, he required to be affoiled of the bend which he had breadilfolic enters into. This fuit was sone granted, in so much that the pope directed his especiall letters but o him, conteining the fame absolution in berie ample and large manner, as Marth. Paris doth report it. And thus began a new broile.

The archbilliop in the meane time, perceiving that the liberties of the church were now not onclie em: beselled, but in maner erringuillied, and being loth to make any further attempt against bis former dealings, would now without the kings knowledge) have departed the realme, where byon comming to Romnie, he twie Chipping, to have palled ouer into The entite France, and to to have gone to the popes court. But the Becker by a contrarie wind he was brought backe into would be England, and thereby fell further into the kings bil fed out office pleasure than before, in so much that, thereas an action was commented against him of late for a ma: no: which the archbishops of Canturburie had of long time held: now the matter was to bled, that the archbithop loff the maner, and was moreover condemned to paie the arrerages, and thus his troubles increased even through his owne malapertnesse and brainelicknelle; whereas all these tumults might have beene composed and laid allege, if he had beene wife, peaceable, patient, and obedient. Foz,

Vir benne Capieni questifique emma sacem, pultqueminira pati methens grædtra pættæte Nepamu en igni Gelerata incendia Gregant.

In the end, the archbilliop was cited to appeare be: The archbi fore the king at Corthampton, where the king pled hop and to him somethat roughlie, placing his hoises at his appear at Inne, and laid dischedience to his charge, for that he con. bid not personallic appeare at a certeine place before R Houes. his highnelle, boon lummons given buto him fo; the same purpose. Therefore though the archivilies alledged that he had fent thither a fufficient deputie uen against to make answere for him and could be make answere for him. to make answere for him; yet could be not be so ere the arithm culed, but was found giltie, and his gods confileat hopto the kings pleasure.

Poin when the archbishop heard that sentence was in luch wife pronounced against bini; That maner " of indgement faith he' is this? Though 3 bold my " peace, pet the age that thall hereafter follow, will not ,, hide it in filence; for fithens the foorld began, it bath 🦽 not bone heard, that any archbishop of Canturbirie 💂 hathbone indged in any of the king of Englands ,

Œ.

fiue

mai

An

of b

Œ

cal

acc

M. Paler, in pe ar Lu

fc

pl

ß

ŧ

ſæg.

courts

the bilipaps.

fundet fouth

Their erber

Lauct.

RHound

R.Houed. 1164 Ger. Dor. A councel! at courts for any maner of cause; partie in regard of the dignitie and authoritie of his office, and partlie bicause he is spirituallic the father of the king and all his people. This is therefore a new forme and or ce per of mogement, that the archbishop thould be inde ged by his luftragans, or the father by his fons.

Ger.Dor.

The next dais the king required of him the repalment of five bundged marks, which he had lent him then he was chancellos. Pow although he affirmed that he received the fame by wate of giff, and not by conbemned in waie of lone; yet bicause he consessed the receit, he was condemned in that debt, forfomuch as he could not prove the title of the gift.

On the morrow after, the archbilhop with his fee low bishops being set in councell, by commander ment of the king (* the dozes fast locked that they should not get out) this was proponed against the archbilhop, that whereas he helocorteine bilhops læs as their vacant, with abbeies, and other revenues of his sourcigne lood the king in his hands, and had 20 made none account to him for the same of long Thearchbill). time; the king required now to be answered at his hands, and that with all fpeed, for he would have no velaic. The fumme amounted to thirtie thousand markes.

When the archbishop had heard the variable sentences of the bithops in this cale, he answered after this maner: I would (faid he) speake with two earles thich are about the king, and named them. Tho bes ing called, and the dozes fet open, he faid but o them; Wie have not here at this present to thew whereby the thing may be more manifelt : therefore we alke respit for answer till to morrow. The councell theres fore brake op, and the multitude of people, which came with the archbithop thither, being afraid of the kings displeasure, fell from him. Wherefore he caused his fernants to fetch a great number of poze and impo; tent people to his looging, fateng that by the feruice of fuch men of warre, a moze spædie victorie in thort space might be gotten, than by them which in time of 4 temptation chamefullie dzew backe. Herebpon his house was filled full, and the tables set with such as his fernantshad brought in, out of the lanes and ffreats abroad.

Apon the tueldate, the bilhops all amazed and full of care, came buto him; and bicause of the displear fure which the king has conceived against him, counfelled him to fubmit himfelfe to the kings will, og elfe in fine, they told him plainelie, that he would be ind ged a periured person; bicause he had swome onto 50 the king as to his earthlic fourreigne, touching all temporall honor in life, lim, and member; and name: lie to observe all his rotall lawes and customes, which of late he had established.

Thereunto he answered: Dy beetheen, ve see how the woold roseth against me, and the entimie riseth bp, but I more lament that the sonnes of mp mother fight against mc . If I should hold my peace, yet " would the world come to declare how ye leave me alone in the battell, and have judged against me 60 " now these two daies past, I being your father, command you te by vertue of your obedience, and vpon perill of your order, that you be not present in any place of indges " ment, where my person may fortune to be adjudged: in tellimonie whereof Japeale to our mother the church of Rome. Furthermore, if it chance that tems pozall men late their hands bpon me, I charge you co likewise by vertue of your obedience, that ye erercife the consures of the church in the behalfe of your " father the archbishop as it becommeth you. This one ce thing know pe well, that the world roseth, the fleth ce trembleth and is weake, but I (by Gods grace) will not thinke, not leave the flocke committed but account.

fine hundren

An affemblie

markes.

of billiops.

After this he entred into the church, and celebrated the malle of faint Stephan (otherwise than he was accustomed to do) with his pall: which being ended, the gorth to he put on his facrificing bestieres, with a cope byon the court. them all, and so went to the court. Furthermore, bis cause he was astraid, he received the sacrament secrettie with him, and bearing the croffe in his right hand, and the reine of his brivell in his left, he came in that order to the court, where he alighted, and entred the place, Mill bearing the croffe himfelfe, till he came to the kings chamber doze, the other bishops follows ing him with great feare and trembling. Pow being come thither, the bithop of Hereford would gladlie have taken the croffe, and have borne it before him, but he would not luffer him, faieng : It is moff rea ?? fon that I thould beare it my felfe, under the defense >> thereof I may remaine in safetie : and beholding ,, this enligne, I need not boubt bider what prince I serue.

At length, when the king had exhibited great complaints onto them all generallie against him, they atraitour. cried that he was a traitoz, fith he had received fo manie benefits at the kings hands, and now refused to do him all earthlie honoz as he had Iwozne to do. To be sport, when the billyops came to lit upon the matter in councell, they appealed to the fee of Koine against the archbishop, accusing him of periurie: and in the word of truth bound themselves by promise, to do what they might to depose him, if the king would pardon them of that indgement which now hanged ouer the archbishops head. Then comming to the archbishop they faid: Thou wast sometime our arch; bishop, and we were bound to obeie thee; but fifth >> thou half swozne fealtie to the king, that is, life, ,, member, and earthlie honour, & to observe his lawes and customes, and now goest about to destroic the The bishoos fame, we say that thou art guiltie of periurie, and we distinguishing will not from henceforth obey a periured archbilhop. archbilhop. Therefore we cite the by ameliation to ameare before the pope, there to answer thine accusors. Then they amointed him a day, in which they ment to pro: >> fecute their appeale. Theare you well (faid the arch - >> bilhop.) The princes and pieces of the realme did also ludge him a periured person and a traitour. Among thome (manie then being present) the earle of Leis ceffer accompanied with Reignald carle of Comes wall, came buto him and faid; The king command bed thee to come and render an accompt of that which is objected against thee, or else heare thy sudgement. 39 Audgement : faid the archbilhop, [and therewith ris >> fing op faid,] Paie sonne earle, first heare thou: It is ,, not bulunowne to the how faithfull I have bene to the king, in confideration whereof he advanced me " to the archbishops se against my will (as God can >> be my indge:)for I knew mine ofwne infirmitic, and I was contented to take it byon me rather for his pleasure, than for Gods cause, and therfore doth God >> both withdraw himselfe and the king from me . In . the time of mine election he made me free, and dil charged me of all courtlic bondage. Wherefore as touching those things from which I am fre and oc- >> linered, I am not bound to answer , neither will 3. ,, So much as the foule is more worth than the bodie, fo much the moze art thou bound to obeie God and me, rather than any earthlie creature. Peither will >> law nor reason permit, that the somes thould tudge or condemne the father : and therefore I refuse to Cano to the luogement either of the king, or of any other, and appeale to the pope, by thome (under God) >> Jought to be indged, referring all that I have buto ,. Bods protection and his, and butor the defenie of his authoritie I depart out of this place . Hauling thus ??

De appealeth of Rome.

The billiops

perfuade the archbilhop to feifto p kings pleafare.

Wie archbifh.

bzethzen,

fubinit bim=

De is reputed spoken,

Ger. Der.

The flout courage of the arcl)b:=

thop.

spoken, went incontinent to fake horte.

Poin as he palled on his waie, the kings fernants and others of the court did cast out manie reprochfull woods against him, calling him traitor and false fortworne cattife. At which words turning himfelfe, and loking backe with a fferne countenance be faid : That if it were not for his order of prienthood, and that it were lawfull for him, he would sucrlie clere himselfe of periorie and treason, in defending pon in band.

When he was come to the otter gate, he found the fame fast locked, whereat they began all to be amazed: but one of his fernants espieng where a bunch of heies ried to a clubs end were hanging on a pin, he take them down, trico which was the right kep, by profe thereof he found it at the last, opened the gate, and let the archbishop out, the posters standing fill as men amazed, and speaking not one wood against it.

Pow when he was got out, a great number of poze, weake and impotent people met him, faieng: " Bleffed be God, which hath delinered his fernant from the face of his entinic. Thus with a great rout or companie, and with the clergie, he was honorablic converted to the abbeie of S. Andrews : and loking behind and before him, as he passed thitherward, he faid unto those that went with him; How glozious a procession doth bring me from the face of the eni-" inte: Suffer all the pope people to come into the co place, that we may make merie togither in the Lord. Dawing thus spoken the people had entrance, so that all the ball, parlours, and chambers being furnished with tables and foles, they were convenientlie placed, and ferued with vittels to the full.

The verie fame night before the cockerowing he issued forth by a little posterne gate, and taking with him onelie two monks of the Ciffeaur order, the one named Robert Canne, and the other S. Capman, with one of his owne fervants called Roger de Bioc, he fled awaie disguised in a white besture and a monks coule, and changing his name, cauled himselse to be called Dereman, & sourneied Still all the night, and by daic laie close in one freends house or other; till at last he got to Sandwich, and there taking thip, he failed ouer into Flanders, and fo went to France, where at the citie of Sens be found pope Alexander, into whose bosome he emptied whole cart lodes of complaints and granances.

The king opon knowledge that the archbishop both bishop of was fled the realme, sent Gilbert Follioth bishop of London was London, and William earle of Arundell in specdie ambassage to the king of France, to signific unto him the whole matter and circumstance of the falling out betwirt him and the archbishop, requiring him not to receive the archbishop into his realme, but this request was little regarded of the French king, as appeared: for the archt. Chops cause was far usured of manie, and the blame imputed to king Henrie, so that the archbishop found great grace with the French king, and no small favour at the 60 hands of the pope.

> Pow when king Penrie heard that he was accufed by the archbithop but othe pope, he appointed Ros ger archbishop of Pocke, the foresaid Gilbert bishop of London, Hilarius bishop of Chichester, Koger bis thop of Warcester, Bartholomew butten of Exce fer, with diverse bishops, deanes, archdeacous, $ 0ther learned men of god accompt, to the number of 15. to passe in ambassage into the pope, that they might ercuse his dwings, and burden the archbishop with the note of rebillion, whereof he had good profe.

Being admitted to declare their mediage in the thop of yorke conditionie before the pope, they opened the whole cire cumffance of the matter, from the beginning to the with others, end, declaring that betweet Thomas the archbilliop are fent to of Canturburie and the bing there was a controuct. the pope, fie moned, and by both their confents a date appoint ted for the hearing and determining thereof, as inffice should require. At the which daie by the kings commandement) all the thefest loads of the realme both spirituall and temporall were assembled, to the end that the more generall the meeting should be the and mainteining his cause against them with wea- 10 more manifest might the discoverie of the fraud and malice of the archbiftop appeare.

At the daic amointed (faie they) there came before >> the catholike prince his prefence, the Pobles of his realme: and amongst other, the archbishop the dis quieter both of the kingdome & church, tho (as one ?) not well affured of the qualitie of his owne before, uings) bleffed himfelfe with the figue of the croffe at his comming into the court, as though he thoulo" have come before some typant or schismaticall per- >> fon. Potwithstanding all which contemptuous and ,, ambitious behaviour, the kings maicific was no thing offended, but committed the indgement of his " cause to the faithfull order of the bishops, meaning so to deliner himselfe of all suspicion of wrong dear ,, ling. Then it refled in the bishops hands to make an end of the controucrsie, and to set a finall busion " and agreement betwirt them. But the archbishon 12 would none of that, alleging how it thould be a de rogation to the fee apostolike and his metropoliticall dignitie, to stand before the king in indgement, or as >> nie other tempozall magifirate. And albeit (faic they) some diminution of eclipse might have chanced to the dignitic of the church by that indgement, vet it " had beene his part to have diffembled the matter for >> the time, to the end that peace might have beene refiszed to the church. He further objected (alcriving to himselfe the name of father, which seemed to sawour ?? fomewhat of arrogancie) that the children ought not to come togither to indge the fathers cause, but it ,, had beine far more necessarie that the bumblenesse of the fons thould mitigate the paide and temper the " ambition of the father.

To conclude, the kings ambassadoes made earnest suit, that two legats might be sent from the pope, to have the hearing & disculling of all the mats The kings for betweet the king and the archbithop without any tale conta other amealing. But the kings tale could not be heard in that court, the archbishop having alreadie persuaced the pope to the contrarie. For comming The archite to the pope, he offered his complaint as followeth: thep Beceet. Post holie father, 3 do here come for succour to Man. Paris. pour audience, lamenting that the ffate of the thurth, and the liberties spercof are brought to ruine by the couctous dealing of kings and princes. There >> fore when I thought to relift the disease approching, 3 >> was suddenlie called before the king, to render ac , compts as a late man about certaine wards ,for whom (while I was the kings chancellos) I had not >> withstanding given accounts; and also, when 3 was made bishop, and entred into the dignitic of ruling the archbishops la, I was released and discharged of all reckonings and bonds by the kings eldeff fonne, >> and by the chase inflicer of the realme: so that now, ,, where I loked to have found aid, I was destitute thereof, to my great hinderance and veration. Con, " fider furthermose (I praie pou) how my loods and >> backbeen the bishops are readic at the pleasure of the ,, Poble men of the court to give fentence against me, fothat all men being about to run bpon me, I was " almost opperfied: and therfore am now come as it >> were to take breath in the audience of your elements cie, which doth not for lake your children in their erfreme necessitie, before whom I here stand, readie to " declare and tellifie that I am not to be indged there, Additions to John Pike. Marth. Paris. Ger.Dor.

Rog.Honed.

The archbi=

than Wecket

ned awaie in

Bilbert -Foi=

french bing.

the mabt.

Roger archhi-

conorpet at all by them . For what other thing hould that be, but to plucke awate the right of the church? What elfe then to submit spirituall things to tempo-" rall? This crample therefore once forming by, might ce give an occasion to manie encountries to follow. The billiops dw lay, Thole things that are Celars, ought to be reflosed to Telar . But admit that in manie, things the king is to be obeied, is he therefore to be cobeied in things wherein he is no king a Forthole my fake they would not, yet ought the billhops for stheir owne lakes to have relifted him . For wat co should be the cause of such deadlie and brinaturall has tred, that to destrois me, they Hould destrois them, see solues? Therefore whilest for temporall things they conegled spirituall, they faile in both . Weigh then most holie father, my flering awaic, and my perfecus tion, and how for your take I have bene prouoked with injuries, vie your rigour, confirmine them to cc amendement, through whole motion this hath chair 20 cc ced; let them not be borne out by the king, who is rather the obstinate minister, than the finder out of c this practile.

The popes answer to the arcibilhop.

The pope having heard his woods, take delibera. tion in the matter, with the aduce of his cardinals, and therebpon answered the archbishop in effect as followeth: That the lower power may not indge the higher, and chefelie him whome he is bound to obeie. all the lawes both of God and man do witnesse, and the ordinances of the ancient fathers do manifestlie 3 ... declare: Perespon we (to whome it appertemeth to reforme disorders) do clearelie reverse and make boto the indocment pronounced against you by the barons and bishops, whereby as well against the ox der of law, as against the customes of the thurth, co pour gwds were adjudged forfeit, thereas the fame gods were not yours, but the churches of Canturbus ric, over which you have the onelie cure and charge. But if those that have violentlic entred opon the pob festions and gods of your church, and have thereby 40 wranged either you or yours, will not upon admonition given to them, make restitution with sufficient amends, then may you (if you thall thinke convenient)exercise ecclesiasticall instice upon them, and we thall allow of that which you thall reasonablic do in that behalfe. Dowbeit as touching the king himselfe we will not give you any special commandement, neither per do we take from you any right belongs ing to your bishoplike office, which you received at ce your confecration. But the king onlie we will spare, 50 and exempt from your excommunications and cenfures. After these and manie by-matters were over passed, the archbishop resigned his pall but o the pope, but the pope game it him againe, and appointed him to remaine at Pountney an abbeie of monks Ci= feaur in the discesse of Aurerre, till the variance were brought to some god end betwirt the king and him . This was done in the yeare of our Lozd 1164.

The king having knowledge by his amballabous 60 rie is common, and as one faith, what answer the pope had made, became granouslie offended in his mind, and therebyon confileated all the gods that belonged to the archbishop and his complices, and feised their revenues into his hands, appointing one Randall de Broc to have the cuffodie of all that belonged to the fee, which Beoc was no thing frendlic to the archbifthop, being his knowne entinic of old, but favoured the monthes, and would not luffer that they should take wrong or displeasure at any hand.

In the years 1 1 65, quæne Cliano: was deliues red of a daughter which was named Foans. Also on the 26. day of Januarie, there chanced a maruellous earthquake in Posthfolke, in the Ne of Clie, and in Suffolke, so that men as they food on the ground were overtheorone therewith, and buildings to that ken, that the belies in freezes knolled: the like had also chanced in the Aduent season then last before paffed.

The Wellhmen this yeare spoiled a great part of The wellhthose countries that bordered boot them : where, menmakewas with the king being foze moued, levied an armie on the Engwith all speed as well of Englishmen as Grangers, belong not to Cefar, but to a typant, Therein if for 10 and (without regard of difficulties and dangers) did Wil. Paruus. goagainst the rebels, and finding them withdrawne Polydor. into their ffarting holes (I meane the wood and madethwales. Arait pallages he compalled the fame about in veric forceable maner. The Wellhmen perceiving themfelues now to be brought into fuch leopardie, as that they could not well beuile how to escape the same, consulted what was best to be done. After consultation, calling awaie their weapons, they came foith to the king, alking incrcie; which somewhat hardie they obtained. Few of them were crecuted in comparison of the numbers that offended: but yet the capteines and cheefe authors of this rebellion were so punished, that it was thought they would never have prelumed to rathlie to offend him in like fort as gaine. Foz (as some writers affirme) he oid inflice on Rog. Houed. the formes of Rice of Rees, fallo on the formes and pundbment baughters of other noble men that were his complie bled by king ces verie rigozoullie: cauling the cies of the young henry against Arciplings to be pecked out of their heads, and their the weldmen. notes to be cut off or flit: and the cares of the young gentlewomen to be Auffed.

But yet I find in other authors, that in this jour nic king Henrie did not greatlie pzeualle against his enimies, but rather loft manie of his men of warre, both hortemen and fotinen: for by his leucre proceeding against them, he rather made them more eger to læke reuenge, than quieted them in any tu- Ger. Dor. mult. They toke the castell of Cardigan, and in be Ran. Cogge. fieging of Briges, the king was in no fmall banger Cardigan caof his life; for one of the enimies thating directic fiell wonne by at him, had perfed him through the bodie, if Hubert hubert de &. De Saint Clere coneffable of Coldeffer, percefuing Clere coneffathe arrow comming, had not though himselfe betwirt bie of Colche the king and the fame arrow, and so preferring his fter. mailter, received the ffripe himfelfe, whereof he died presentlie after, beseiching the king to be good lood to one onelie daughter which he had, whome the king bestowed in mariage voon William de Langualie, william de togither with hir fathers inheritance, thich William Langualco. begat of hir a sonne that bare both his name and furname. A prefident of gratitude & thankfulnes is here committed to memorie. And furelie the king could do no lette, than some way requite the benturous courage and hartie zeale of the gentleman, who with the lotte of his owne life preferred the hing, if not from death, pet from some dangerous wound that might have put him to extreame anguish and paine. This may incite men to be minofull of benefits received, a vertue no leffe rare than the contra_inueniuntur

Quidam sedrari, acceptorum qui meritorum Aßiduememores, c.

But to conclude with this fourneis which king W. Paruns. Henrie made at this time against the Welshmen, although by reason of the cumbersome difficulties of the places, he could not enter within the countrie so farre as he wilhed, yet he to impounded and confired ned them to keepe within the wood and mountains, that they durft not come abroad, infomuch that at the length they were glad to fue for peace.

William king of Scots, successor of Walcoline william king (who departed this life in the yeare last past) after of Scots both his homage to be had received the crowne of Scotland, came about king Penrie,

Ger.Dor.

The archbift, religneth his

1165 Matth.West. Matth, Paris,

this present time into England, and finding king Henrie at London, did his homage to him as his predecessour apalcoline had done before. De made fuit allo to have Porthumberland reffored unto him, uhich the hing of Englands mother the empresse had in timespaff giuen onto king Dautd. But king Denrie gaue diuerle reasons to crense himselfe thie he might not beliver that countrie to him at that present, namelie, without consent of a parlement : therespon king William perceiung how the mate 10 ter went, gaue oner his fuit for that prefent, meaning (then occation ferued) to attempt the getting thereof by force, fith that by praier and fuit he fame well in ough he thould not obteine it.

Spozeouer, the Scotish king bring required by hing Henrie to go over with him into Pormandie; granted to to do: infomuch that king Denrie, hauing fet all things in order within his realine of England, in the Lent following passed ouer into Posmandie. But before he twhe his tournete, he fet forth a beere 20 confiding of these points in effect as followeth.

1 That no man thould bring any letters or commandement from pope Alexander, or Alomas arch, bilhop of Canturburie into England, conteining an interdiction of the realine: bpon perill to be appres hended and punished as a traitour to the king, and an entimie to the realme.

2 That no religious person or prest thould be permitted to palle the feas, or to come into the relime of England, except he had letters of fafe conduct 30 from the inflicers for pallage over, and of the king for his returne from thence.

That no man Goulo appeale to the faid pope or archbithop, not by their appointment hold any plat: and if any person were sound dwing the contrarie herebuto, he should be taken and committed to pil-

4 That if any maner of person, either spirituall or temporall, were obsorent to the sentence of the inrealme without velaie, and all his linage with him, so as they should not conucie with them any of their gods, the which togither with their possessions should be feised into the kings hands.

That all spirituall persons, which had any benea fices within England, Chould have warning given to returne into England within foure moneths after the fame fummons pronounced, and that if they failed hereof, then should the king seize byon their gods and pollellions.

6 That the bishops of London and Postwich, Mould be (and by vertue hereof were) fummoned to appeare before the kings fulficers, to make answer for that they had interdicted the lands of erle bugh, and ercommunicated him.

That the Peter pence should be gathered and kept.

In the octanes of Caster king Henrie came to an enterview with the French king at Gilors, Ehis yeare the quine was deliucred of a sonne named John, who afterward was king of this realme.

Pozeoner, hing Henrie calling a councell of his billious and barons in Pormandie, caused and order ned a collection (by their adule) to be made through all his countries and dominions, of two pence in the pound of cueric mans lands and gods, iewels and apparell onelie ercepted: to be paid this yeare 1166. and for the space of source yeares nert ensuing, one penie of cuerie pound to be paid yearelie: and those that were not worth twentie thillings in gods or lands(being hontholders notwithfanding) or bare any office, fould paie a penie to this contribution, which was onelie granted for the relecte of the chailians in the east parts, and those that warred against the milcreants there. The paiment thereof was appointed to be made in the feast date of faint Kemi, gins,02 within tittene dates after. It was also ordets ned, that all fuch as departed this life, within the terme that this collection was in force (their debts being paid thould give the tenth part of the relidue of all their good buto this to necessarie a contribution.

Ming Penrie remaining now in Pormandie, and understanding that diverse loads and barons of Paine, and the marthes of Britaine, would not in his ablence thew themselves obedient unto his wife quene Cliano, but were about to practic a rebellion, raised an armie, and went against them, casilie subduing them whom he found obstinate: and besieging the eastell of Foulgiers, twhe and otterlie des The castell of Arojed it.

Some after the archbilhop of Canturburic came Tizelep. from Pountney to Mizelcy, and there (on Alcention The erchbidate) when the thurth was most full of people, got thop Becket him into the pulpit, and with boke, bell, and candell in England folemnelie accurssed all the observers, defenders, that maintain and mainteiners, with the promoters of luch cue ned the cue foms, as within the realme of England they terme from of their the custome of their elders; amongst others that were accurled, was Kichard de Lucie, Richard the archdeacon of Poiaiers, Jocelin de Bailleuille, A lane de Peuille, and manie other. But they being ablent, a neither called not convinced (as they alleged notwithstanding they were thus ercommunicated) fent their messengers buto the archbishop, and appear led from him, and so feared not to enter into their

De had before this also written certeine letters buto his fuffragans, denouncing some of these and R. Houe, other persons by expresse name accursed, not onelie teroidion, the same person thould be banished the 40 for mainteining the matter against him, touching the ancient custome of the realme; but also for the schisme raised in Almaine by Reignald archbishop of Colein, for the which he accurred one John of Dr ford. Poreover, he accurred Kanulfe de Broc, Hugh de S. Clere, Thomas Fitz Bernard, for violentlie feising boon and deteining the gods and possessions belonging to his archbishopzike, without his consent oz agræment therebuto.

The king on the other part banished out of Eng-50 land, and all parts of his other dominions, all those persons that were knowen to be of kin onto the archbishop, both young and old: and furthermoze sent advertisement to the abbat of Pountney and to his monks, with whom the archbilhop by the popes appointment remained, that if they kept him fill in their house, he would not faile to banish all the monks of their order out of England. Solv the archbishop, after he had remained there scarse two veares, departed from thence of his owneaccord, France enters there they had conference togither of fundzie mats 60 and came to the king of France, who courteouslie received him, and fent him to the abbeie of faint Columbes necre to the citie of Sens, where he remain ned a certeine feafon, as thall be thewed hereafter.

Shortlie after this, two legats named William Marth. Paris of Paula, and John of Paples both cardinals, came Legats from from the pope to Pontmiriall, whom the archbillion the popesuspected rather to favour the kings cause than his: yet he was contented that they should have the judge ment thereof committed buto them: fo that first (according to the rules of the church) restitution might be made both to him and his, of such goos as had beene taken from them. For being spoiled, as he was, he would not fland to any judgement, no; could not be compelled therbuto by any reason (as he sato.)

Foulgiers. Matth.Paris. accurled those

14. Triuct. Matth. Paris Ger.Dor. Anedia against the archbilhop wechet.

> Appeales fozbioten.

The kings of England and mew.

Chro.Sigeb. Matth.Paris. Ring John

Ger.Dor.

3 contri= bution.

An. Reg. 13, 14, 15. FICTH 16 to legate faw that they could not bring any thing to palle, they departed without any thing concluded.

Eomes Sa: gientis.

N Triuct. Mierium.

Conan duke ot Battaine beccaffeth. Matt.Paris.

A mariage conclubed be= and the Du= taine. Wil. Paruus.

Ųţ

le

1167 N.Triuct. king Henrie muabeth the erle of Almer=

Ger. Dor. Che carle of Bolongne picpareth innade Eng= land.

Matth. West.

The lie of 17 yeares. from the eni-

Cerous.

About this time William Taiuan earle of Sagium (by the confent of his fons and nechues) deliucred into the hands of king Denrie the castels of Ales rum, and Roch Laberie, with all the appurtenances to the callels belonging.

About this feafon also Conan the duke of Biffaine departed this life, leaving behind him no iffue, but 10 one onelie daughter begot of his wife the outchesse Constance, the daughter of the king of Scotland, which fucceeded him in the estate. Wherevoon king Penrie made earnest suit to procure a marriage betwirt Seffrey twirt hir and his sonne Beffrey, which at length he the kings fon brought to palle, to the great comfort and contentar tion of his mind, in that his some had by such god fortune atteined to the dukedome of Britaine.

At that feason in Britaine were certeine Poble men of fuch firength and power, that they distained 20 to acknowledge themselves subject to any superioz, in formuch that through ambitious defire of rule and preheminence, they warred continuallie one against an other, to the great destruction and otter budwing of their miserable countrie, so that the land some= time fruitfull by nature, was as it were a wildernes. Thereupon, those that were the weaker, percetuing themselnes to much oppessed by the stronger, submitted themselues buto king Henrie, and required his aid and fuccour . King Henrie reinling to have 2 logod an occasion and opportunitie to reduce them Anno Reg. 13. to reason, with all speed asoed these suplicants and subdued the resistants, notwithstanding their great pullance, the Arength of the places which they kept.

In the meane while Benrie came over to his father, and found him at Pointiers, from whence (thorte lie after Caffer) he remoued, and with an armie entred into the lands of the earle of Aluergnes, which he wasted and spotled, bicause the said earle had renounced his allegiance to king Henrie, and made 4 his refort to the French king, læking to fow discord betwirt the foresaid two kings: which was kindled the moze by a challenge pretended about the fending of the monie over into the holie land, which was gain thered within the countie of Tours: for the French king claimed to fend it, by reason that the durch there americaned to his dominion: and the king of England would have fent it, bicause it was gathe red within the countrie that belonged to his gouernement.

This yeare a great preparation of thips was made by the earle of Bullongne, to have muaded England, but by the warlike provision of Richard Lucie, lood governour of the realine, the fea-toalfs were fo provided of sufficient desense, that the earles at tempts came to nothing. The cause why he made this brag, was for that the king withheld from him certeine revenues which he claimed to have here in England, and therefore he ment to recouer them by The decease force. The empresse Band mother to the king of 60 of the empresse England (a woman in foutnesse of fformach and warlike aftempts more famous than communitie as ny of that fer) deceaffed this yere the roof Septem?

Also Robert bishop of Lincolne departed this life. I incoine boid after whose decease the feeof Lincoine was bacant by the space of seventiene yeares, the king in all that Anno. Reg. 14. meane time receiving the profits. The elect of Coe In amballage lein came amballabour from the emperous onto the hing of England, requiring to have one of his daughters given in marriage buto the emperours some, and an other of their bute denrie duke of Saronie: which request the 18. bit willing the grant, and therebpon was the quene fent for to come ouer into Accomandie, and to bring his foiche the lost Riv thard and hir daughter the ladie Wand with hir: which ladie was married buto the duke of Saronie, in the beginning of the yeare next infuing; and had issue by him thee sons, Henrie, Dtho, and William, of which the middlemost came to be emperour.

The variance still depending betwirt the king and the archbithop of Canturburie: there was also about the same time a great bebate betwirt the em. Debate beperour Frederike the first and pope Alexander the twirt the pope third: therebon king Henrie wrote to the emperor, perour. and fignified unto him, that he would aid him if ned k. Henricofthould require against the pope, tho mainteined ferethtoaid fuch a runnagate traito; as the archbishop Becket theemperour. was. Pozeouer at the same time the king caused all his subjects within the realme of England, from the thild of twelue yeares old buto the aged person, to for sweare all obedience that might be pretended as due to the same pope Alexander . The king for the space of two yeares togither, remaining Mill in Posmandie, and in other places beyond the feas, subdued diverferebels, as the earle of Angoulesme, Aime, rike de Lucignie, and his fonnes Robert and Hugh.

Also he came to an enterview with the king of An enterview France betwirt Pacie and Paunt, where they come betwirt the muned of such inturies as were thought to be at, king of Engtempted on either part. Hoz the Poictouins had and and king made their resort to the French king, and were con. The kings federate with him against their suppeme lood king met against Henrie, and had delivered pledges for affurance to commen thereof, which pleages the French king would not re- of peace. Noze. But yet there was a truce concluded betwirt them, to endure till the feat of S. John Baptiff.

About the featt of Cafter Patrike the earle of Atruce. Salifburie was flaine by treason of the Poictouins, of Salifburie and was buried at Saint Pilaries : after uhome his Cainc. sonne William succeeded in the earlebome.

The Britons practifed rebellions dailie: but king Henrie entring their countrie, wan diverle frong townes and castels, and brought them at length but der his lubication. Pozeouer in this fummer leafon the two kings met againe at Fert Bernard to treat of peace, but they departed without concluding any agreement at all. For there were manie of the Poice touins and Butons, which twke part with the king of France, and having belivered buto him holfages, had a promise made them, that the French king thoulo not conclude an agreement with the king of England without their confent. Herbpon they made warres either byon other, till finallie (about the feaff of the Epipanie) a peace was accorded befwirt Anno. Reg. 15. them: and then Penrie the king of Englands sonne made his homage buto the French king for the countie of Anion : and the French king granted him the office of the Senelchalcie of France, which ancientite belonged onto the earles of Anton'. Alfo Weffrey duke of Britaine did homage to his elder Geffrey duke brother the aforefait henrie, by commandement of of Britaine. his father, for the duchte of Bittaine. And afterwards the fame Geffrey went into Britaine, and at Kheines received the homage and fealtie of the loods and barons of that countrie.

Bing Himte in the means thile invoued certeine troels in Calcaine, and returning into Posmandic, built a gwolle totone ind fortrette nære to Pate de Walaster, veleped Beautier.

About the fame time one Harrier be Buon, tho Barucy be had married the daughter of one William Boteth, Yuon, what oled in his fournie which he take into the holic tand) delinered certains castelainto the hands of hing Benrie, bicaule fie was in delpalte to keepe them a. Faint Theobald earle of Chartres, tho through the French kings aid, lought to disposses him of the fame cattels: there opon the war was renewed be-Twirt the king of England and the faid earle of Char-

1168

Matth. West.

Watrike earle

tres. Beuertheleffe king Benrie making no great accompt of those wars, went into Britaine with his forme Seffrey, there going about the countrie to visit the cities and townes, he reformed many disor bers, laieng as it were a maner of a new foundativ on of things there, fortifieng the castels, cities and townes, and communing in courteous manner with the loops and pares of the countrie, fought to win their god wils: and fo in fuch exercises he spent a great part of the time.

Anno Reg. 16.

De kept his Christmalle at Pauntes, thither all the great loos and barons of Britaine resorted to him. The folemnitie of which feat being paft, he entred into the lands of earle Eudo, and wasted the fame, till the faid earle fubmitted himfelf. At length, after the king had taken order for the god governes ment of Pormandie, and his other countries on that ude the sea, he returned into England in the first wake of Warch, but not without great danger, by reason of a tempest that twke him on the seas, begin: 20 ning about midnight, and not ceasing till 9. of the clocke in the morning, about which hours be came on land at Portelmouth, not with many of his thips, the rest being tossed and desiren to seeke succour in surv drie craks and hancus of the land, and one of them which was the cheefest and newest, was lost in the unddle of the flouds, togither with 400 persons, men e women: among whome was Henrie de Aguell with two of his fons, Gilbert Sullemmy, and Kafe

After this the king held his Caffer at Minfoz, whither William the Scotill king came with his brother David, to welcome him home, and to congratulat his hapie successe in his businesse on the further five the feas. They were honorable enterter ned, and at their departure princelie rewarded. The king thus returned into England, punished the this riffes of the land very grauoulie for their ertortion.

buberie, and rapine. After this, fludieng how to al confideration remembring that no living creature was more subject to the uncerteintie of death than

Adams heires, and that there is ingraffed fuch a feruent delice in the ambitious nature of man to go uerne, that so off as they once come in hope of a kingdome, they have no regard either of right 02 wrong, God or the divell, till they be in possession of their delired prep: he thought it not the worlf point of wifedome to forclæ that which might happen. For fons young, and not able to mainteine wars through lacke of knowledge, it might fortune them through the ambition of some to be defranded and disamour ted of their lawfull inheritance. Therefore to preuent the chances of fortune, he determined whilest he was aline to crowne his clock fonne Benrie, being now of the age of 17. yeares, and to to muest him in fure the estate of the realme buto his sons, boon god 40

Polyder, Dauid was mabe knight by R. Denrie 15 Houeden hath,

I pinbent confidera= tion of the king.

Mans nature a.ubinoug.

the kingdome by his owne act in his life time: which ded turned him to much trouble, as after thall appeare. Being byon this point resolute he called togither a parlement of the loads both spirituall and term potall at London, and there (on S. Wartholometus daic) proclaimed his faid sonne Benrie fellow with bim in the kingdome, whom after this on the fundate Denric the fon following, being the fouretenth daie of June 1170. Roger archithop of Porks did crowns according to the manner, being communiced to to dodge crowned the 18, of Julie faith Matth. Paris.

R. Houed,

W. Paruus.

the king. This office apperteined buto the arribithor of Canturburic, but bicause be inan bauthed the realine, the king appointed the archbillop of porhe to do it, which he ought not to have done inithout he cence of the archbilhop of Canturburic within the piccina of his pionince (as was alledged by archbishop Becket) the complained thereof bute pove Alexander, and so incensed the pope, that he being biablic moued by his letters, forbad not onelic the archbishop of Borke, but also Gilbert bishop of Lon- The archb. of don, and Jocelin bishop of Salisburie (who were press Yoske is significant at the coronation) the vice of the sacraments, of the sacraments, of the sacraments. which made king Penrie far more displeased with ments. the archbilhop Thomas than be was before.

Thon the date of coronation, king Denrie the far Matt. Paris, 10 ther ferued his fonne at the table as fewer, byinging Polydor. ther ferued his lonne at the table as level, stringing the bing by the boxes head with trumpets before it, according to be bing by to the maner. Ther boon (according to the old adage, to his form, (Immutant mores homines cum dantur honores) the young man conceining a prior in his heart, be Honours held the francers-by with a moze fratly countenance change ma than he had been wont. The archbithop of Yorke, who ners. fat by him, marking his behautor, turned onto him. e fato. Be glad my good conne, there is not an other yong menter prince in the world that hath luch a fewer at his tae by in dignite ble. To this the new king answered, as it were dis callie forget dainefullie, thus: Why dook thou marnell at that? themselves, My father in doing it, thinketh it not moze than be " commeth him, he being borne of princelie blond onlie " on the mothers fide, ferneth me that am a hing borne " having both a king to my father, and a quæne to my n mother. Thus the young man of an enill and per: » uerle nature, was puffed by in prive by his fathers » bnsæmelie dwings.

But the king his father hearing his talke, was Ecumount the kings pylician shouthold fernant. 30 berie forrotofull in his mind, and faid to the archbithop lofflie in his eare: It repenteth me, it repenteth » me my load, that I have thus advanced the boy. For » he gested hereby what a one he would prove after. ward, that the wed himselfe so disobedient and from ward alreadie. But although he was displeased with himselfe in that he had done bnotscrætlie, pet now when that which was dome could not be browne, he caused all the Pobles and loads of the realme, togis ther with the king of Scots and his brother Danid, to do homage unto his faid some thus made fellow with him in the kingdome: but he would not release them of their oth of allegiance, wherein they Umo bound to obeie him the father, to long as he lived.

Thombeit some waite that he renounced his estate, first before all the loads of the land, and after caused his somme to be crowned: but in such uncerteine points let fouth by parciall writers, that is to be received as a truth, which is confirmed by the oze der and sequele of things after done and put the pinif he thould chance to depart this life, and leave his 50 cile. Fortrue it is, that king Penrie the father lo long as his forme lived) of their himfelfe formetime as fellow with his some in government, and some time as absolute king: and after his sons decease, he continued in the entier government, to long as he lined. But to proceed.

The French king hearing that his forme in lato was thus crowned, and not his daughter the wife The French of Henrie the sonne, was highlic offended there king offenta with, and threatned to make war against king Hen-60 rie the father, ercept his daughter Margaret might receine the cromme allo as queene immediaties.

The cause taly the was not crowned, was by reafon of his pung peares, and for that the had not as pet accompanied with hir hulband. Wut It. Henrie the father inderstanding the French kings theats, failed ouer into Pommendie, where while the prepared for war on both fines, by the earnest diligence of Chesbald earle of Blois, both the kings come to An enterwise air enterme wat Chendoline, where at length they of the bings. were accorded, byon promise made by king then rie, that he would cause his some to be crowned as gaine, and withhim his wife the face Pagaref the French kungs banghter as quiene.

The Frenchking contented thereforth, departed bomemaros.

ine made his icftament. Rog. Honed.

joincwards, and king Henrie returning came to Acrnon, where he fell into fo great a ficknesse, that anon it was notice over all the countrie. Infomch that he was in such despaire of life, that he made his testament : wherein he assigned his sonne Kichard the butchie of Aquitaine, and all those lands which carrie by quiene Cliano: the mother of the fame Rimard. And to his sonne Beffrey he bequeathed Battaine (with the daughter of earle Conan) which he his some king Henrie he gave the outdie of Poz mandle, and all those lands which came by his father Geffrey earle of Aniou . And to his yongest sonne John he bequeathed the earledome of Doztaine. And finallie appointed there he would have his bodie to be buried.

Polydor. ding Genrie the fonne his milozder.

1170

The king and the arch.

25cchet met

In the meane time Benrie the sonne remaining at home in England, fell from all god order of meas fure keping, and gaue himfelfe to all erceffine riot, fpending and walting his revenues inordinatelie. 20 of which behausour his father being advertised, returned into England, where he tarted not long, but Anno Reg. 16 palled ouer againe into Pormandie, hauing his faid fonne in his companie, meaning thereby to remoue him from the companie of those that were verie like to corrupthis nature, and frame the same to all lewd. nette : for he knew that

-commercia turpia sanctos Corrumpunt mores: multi hoc periere veneno, Labimur in vitium o facile ad peiora mouemur.

In this means wile Thomas the archbilhop of Canturburic remained in erile almost fir yeares, and could not be reffored, till partlie by swelling threats of the pope, and partlie at the earnest fuit of Lewes the French king, Theobald earle of Blois, and others, king Henrie began somewhat to shew himfelfe conformable towards an agræment.

Where by on the two kings met diverle times, and Ex Quadrilogio. the archbishop Ahomas comming with the French king, at one time humbled himfelfe fo to the king of 40 king to bring him to the court, for the Arend king England, that knæling downe at his fæt, he faid: My louercigne liege loed, I commit the whole cause presence of the of the controversie betwirt your grace and me, bu-French aing. Of the continue the vertices of the continue of t

The king offended with that ambiguous erception " on, faid to the king of France: What soeuer displeas " feth this man, is taken (as he interpreteth it) contra ris to Gods honour, and so by that thift will be cha-" lenge to himselfe all that belongeth buto me. But bis 50 " cause you shall not thinke that I go about to refift Gods honour,og him, in any reasonable ogder, loke what the greatest and most holie of all his ancestors " have done buto the meanest of mine ancestours, " let him do the fame butome, and Jam contented " therewith.

All the companie present crico, that the king hums " bled himselfe enough . Dy lood archbishop (said the French king) will you be greater than faints, and " better than faint Peter-Wherof fand you in doubte 60 " Behold, your peace is at hand. The archbilhop made " answer in commendation of the present state of ho a lie church, as thus: App holie predecessours in their time, although they cut not all things away that extolled it felfe against God, pet did they cut off divers: but if they had plucked op all by the hard rots, which might offend, who should now have raised the fire of ce temptation against vs ? Tele are in much better case cc (thanks be to God) and as we have laboured in their lot and number, so are we partakers of their labour co and reward. What if any of them had beene defective ce of ercellition any point, are we bound to follow the crample of their defection overcesses CAe blame Per ter for his denieng of Chilli, but we praise him in re-proming of Peros violence with danger of his life. The church hath rifen and increased out of manie dangerous oppellions, our fathers have fuffered mas >> nie things, bicause they would not forsake the name of Christ; and ought I to suppelle his honour, to be reconciled buto any mans fauour ? God forbid, God forbio.

When the Poble men present heard this answer of Ekarehb.

a subject against his sourceigns, they all held against med of arrounds of arrou has purchased to his vie of the French king. And to 10 him, imputing the fault to the archbishops arros gancie. gancie, that the peace was not made betweene the king and him infomuch that there was an erle which openlie sato; Sith he resisteth the will of both the realmes, he is not worthie to be succoured by either of them from hencefwath: and therefore being call 22 out of England, let not France receive him.

The councell then being broken op, the kings departed without bidding the archbilhop farewell, and fuch as were mediatours for peace, in departing from this meeting, spake manie reprochfull words to him, alledging that he had beene ever fout and wife ket wifful in in his owne conceit, and a folower of his owne will his owne opis and opinion: adding that it was a great hinderance nion, to the church, that he was ozocined archbishop, and that by him the church was alreadie in part destrois ed, and would shortlie be altogisher brought to bte ter ruine.

But the archbishop setting a watch before his mouth, kept filence (as though he had not heard) and 30 followed the French king with his people. Panie faid by the waie as they fourneied, Behold the archi bishop yonder, which in talke the last night would >> not for the pleasure of the king denie God, nor kepe his honoz in filence.

After this, when the archbishop was come to Sens, and aduited with himselfe whether it should be best for him to go, at length he faio, God is able in the last point of miserie and distresse, to helpe those that be his . Herewith came a mellenger from the French >> (as one that had beene better instructed in the matter)repented himselfe that he had sudged evill of his answers at the last meeting, and herebpon received The French bim againe into his fauour, and reffed not to travell the receiveth fo much in his cause, that at length another meeting the archothop was alligned at a certeine place nære the confines gaine into faof Pormandie, whither king Henrie came, and there wour. found king Lewes, the archbilhop of Rouen, and diuerse other bithops together, with the foresaid arch The archb. bishop, who after they had reasoned of the matter to the king. throughlic as they faw cause, king Penrie received the archbilhop into his favour againe, and promiled to redrelle all that had beine done amille, and pardon all those that had followed him out of the realms. Where boon the king and the archbilhop being reconciled, the archbilhop the same day came before the king, and talked with him. Pow among other things he required of the k.that it might be lawfull for him (without offending of his maiestie) to punish (according to the censures of the church) the injurie done but him by the archbi Mop of Porke, and other bishops in the coronation of his forme. The bing granted this, and the twed him felfe fo courteous at that time, that (as it is faid) he held his firrup wiles he mounted on horfebacke. I Potwithstanding which obsequiousnes of the king, it is to be presumed that all inward repining could not be so abolished, as that no fragments remained; but that the archbilhop for his part, for the mainter nance of his great title, the la. for the laportation of his lovereigntic, when opportunitie forued, fought to get aduantage one of another, acquit their harts with a new renenge of an old gradge: for ... Immortale odium & nunquam fanabile vulnin. 12 1111 Iumen fac. 15.

Che profent Beckets bates.

But

Chelling Spottly not Biderleper first the arch Edb p.

Matt. Paris.

含akwad,

Thi French

Sings abuse to the arch

billi. ISecher.

But thereastwife within a few daies affer, the king and the faid archbishopmet at masse, the king refused to kille the par with him. This was marked as a figne of a fained reconciliation, though in ded he afterwards interteined him berie courteoullie, and at his departure ouer into England, toke leave of him in frændlie manner, and directed letters bu der his feale to his sonne the new king in forme as

A letter of the king touching the pacification betweene him and Thomas Becket.

Now ve that Thomas the archbi-Thop of Canturburie hath made his peace with me at my will and pleature; and therefore I command you, that both he and his may re- 20 maine in peace; and that he and al those which for his cause departed out of the realme, may haue all their goods restored, and in such quiet citate be now possessed of them as at any time within three moneths before their departure from thence. And further, cause to come beforevs of the best and most ancient knights of The honor of the honor of Saltwood, that upon their oths they may find what fee the archbishop ought 30 to have within that honor, & that which shall appeare to apperteine vnto him, as in fee, let him injoy the fame. And thus farewell.

> The archbishop (before he toke his fournie into Chaland) went to vill the French king, and to give him thanks for his great paines and travell susteb ned in his cause, tho addiced him in no wife as pet to commit himselfe to piesent danger amongsthis new reconciled enimies, but rather to ffaic till their 40 malice were somewat allwaged. For he perceived by king Henries words & countenance such a deepe roted displeasure in his hart, that he agreed to recome him into favour rather by compultion and as gainst his will than other wife.

But when the archbithop would needs depart & go oner into England, the French B. luffered him to to do, doing him all the hono; he could at his leave taking. Then the archbishop departing out of France, came into England, and landed at Sandwich about 50 the first of December, in the seuenth yeare after his returned two lirst departure out of the realme. Shortlie affer his arrivall, Roger the archbishop of Poske, Gilbert bi thop of London, and Zocclin bilhop of Salisburie, with dinerte other, came but ohim as to the popes tegat, and required that it might please him to reffore them to the ministration of their offices againe: whose request he granted, but yet byon condition, that they thould undertake to trand to his judge: ment and order in all things, which (by the counsell 60 of the archbishop of Postic) they beterlie refused.

There authors agree not (as Polydor trulie faith) for some write that archbildop Thomas (inuncotatlic bpon his returne into England) benounced the arche bishop of Posks with the bishops of Salisburic and London accurifed, whereas before they were depriv tied of the vie and administration of the facraments. Someothers write, that now at his comming over imo Sugland from his exile, he deprined them onlie of the ministration of the facraments, together with the billiops of Creeker, Sieller, Rocheker, S. Afath, & Landaff, which had perfonable beine prefent at the reconation of king isemie the fonne, to the ocrogation of the dignitic of their primat the archbillion of Canturburic (as before you have heard.) It shuld some yet by Ger. Dorober: that the archbishop of Porke, and the bilhop of Durham were suspended, and the bishops of London, Salisburie, and diverse other ercommunicated.

But how we wer he vice them, the archbishop of Poske, the two bishops London and Salisburic, The archbish being offended with his dwings, failed ouer in of yorke and to posmandie, and there complained to king Den- other go ouer to formande, and there complained to hing the king to the king to rie of infuries bone to them by archibitop Thomas, complained groundlie acculing him that he went about to take the archbillion awaie their libertie of priesthod, to destroie, corrupt, Becket. and finallie to abolish both the lawes of God and man, togither with the ancient decrees and flatutes of their cloers; in found that be toke boon him to exclude bishops at his pleasure from the companie of christian men, and so being ercluded, to banish them for ever: to derogat things mærelie prejudiciall to the kings rotall prerogative; and finallie to take as waic from all men the equitic of lawes and civill

The king giving eare to their complaint, was fo displeased in his mind against arthbishop Thomas, that in open audience of his lords, knights, and gene tlemen, he fair thefe or the like words: In what miferable fate am I, that can not be in reft within words that mine owner caline, by reason of one onelie prest - cost bish. Wice Peither is there any of my folkes that will helpe to ket his like. deliner me out of such troubles.

There were some that stoo about the king, which gested by these words, that his mind was to signific how he would have some man to dispatch the archbis thop out of the waie. The kings displeasure against the archbishop was knowne well inough, which came sed men to have him in no reverence at all, so that (as it was faid) it chanced on a time, that he came to Strowd in Bent, where the inhabitants meaning to do somewhat to his infamie, being thus out of the kings favour, and despised of the world, cut off his hoeffes taile.

There were some also of the kings servants, that thought after an other maner of fort to revenge the The knights displeasure done to the kings maiestie, as sir Dugh that flue the Poscuile, sie William Tracie, sie Richard Bittaine, and fir Reignold Fitz Urle, knights, who take king advice togither, and agreeing in one mind and will, toke thipping, & failed ouer into England, landing at a place called Dogs hauen, nere Douer.

Powthe first night they lodged in the castell of Saltwood, which Randulse de Broc had in keeping. The next morning (being the 29. of December, and hist date of Christmasse, which as that veare came as bout fell vpon a tucloaie) having gotten togither certeine fouldiers in the countrie thereabouts, came to Canturburie, and first entring into the court of the abbeie of S. Augustine, they talked with Clarens bald the electablat of that place: and after confes rence had with him, they proceeded in their businesse as followeth.

The first knight sir Reignold Fitz Arle came Reignold to him about the elementh house of the daic, as the firstisc. archbishop sat in his chamber, and sitting downe at That is behis feet byon the ground without any manner of twens 4 and greeting of falutation, at length began with him ning. thus: Being sent of our sourceigne losd the king from beyond the leas, we do here present buto you? his Craces commandements, to wit, that you thould go to his sonne the king, to do but o him that which ,, americineth unto you to do unto your soucreigne lord, and to do your fealtie buto him in taking an 30 oth, and further to amend that wherein you have of fendediffs maieffie. Cherebuto the architipop ans fwered: For that cause ought I to confirme my fealtie buto him by other or therinam I giltis in offen: " of the kings

archbilhou

Matth. Paris. The archbie England.

the baronic.

mothreque bing the kings Paickie . Sir Reignold faid : fog reportunities pour baronie, scaltie is demanded of you with an oil, and an other oth is required of those clerkes, with you have brought with you, if they meane to continue within the land. The archbithop answered: ec Horny baronic Jam readic to do to the king what former law or reason thall allow : but let him for certains holo, that he thall not get any oth either of er mic or of my clerks. Tele knew that (faid the knight) proposed unto you. Proceed the king commandeth pouto ablolue those bithops that are ercommunicase ted by you without his licence. Wherebuto he faid: the bithops are excommunicated not by me, but by the pope, who hath therto authoritie from the Lozo. If " in deed he hath revenged the injurie done to my c church, I confesse that I am not displeased ther with. Chen faid the knight : Sith that fuch things in del vite of the hing doplease you, it is to be thought that cc and taken for king your felfe, but you thall miffe of pour purpose surelie therein. The archbishop answes red: 3 do not aspire to the name of a king, rather co would I knit the crownes but o his crowne if it lay ce in my power.

The hnights command the monko to fei kept late.

16500

irfc.

s be=

4. 8110

hiburic the archb. 15cc= heto chan:

The archbi= hops refolu= Ren.

The linighter put on their armot

in he months with force bilhop into the chareb

Che anights concernie thurch, Is though can be no frattato.

At length after these and such woods, the knights furning them to the monks, faio: In the behalfe of our fourreigne load the king, we command you, that the architelinop in any wife ve keepe this man fafe, and prefent him " him. The archbilhop fair : Dwye thinke that I will runatuare 3 came not to run away, but loke for the outrage and malice of wicked men. Truelie (faid ce they) you shall not runne away, and herewith went John de Sas out with noise and threatnings. Then maifter John of Salifburichis chancellog faid butohim: Mp logo, this is a wonderfull matter that you will take no mans counfell : had it not beene meet to have given them a more micke and gentle answer. But the arch rounfell that I will take, I know what I ought to dw. Then faid Salifburie, I pray God it may be god. " Dow the knights departing out of the place, and going about to put on their armour, certeine came to the archbishop, faid; Dy lood, they arme themselucs. Talhat forceth it? faid he, let them arme themselnes.

> How When they were armed, and manie other a: bout them, they entred into the archbifhops palace. Those that were about the archbishop cried upon him till the monks brought him even by force a against his will into the churth. The comming of the armed men being knowne, some of the manks continued linging of evenlong, and fonce fought places there to bide themselves, other came to the archbilliop, who was leth to have entred into the church, and when he was within, he would not yet fuffer them to make fast the boxes, to that there was a great four among them, but chastie when they perceived that the armed men went about to like for the archbilhop, by meane 60 prescribed to them by the pope, and fo at length view. thereof their enenlong was left unfinished.

At length the knights with their fernants having fought the palace, came ruthing into the church by the cleiffer doze with their fwords drawne, forme of them asking for the traitor, and some of them for the archbihop, tho came and met them, faleng; Here am I, no traites, but the archbifthop. The formost of the linights faid unto him: flee, thou art but dead. To whome the archbilhop faid, I will not fice. The knight Next to him taking him by the Acim, and with his " Iwayd caft his cap belides his head, and faid, Come ce hither, for thou art a prisoner. I will not said the arche bithop) do with me here that thou wilt: and plucked bis love with a mightie strength out of the knights hand. Wherewith the knight freped backs two or thee paces . Then the archbiffiop furning to one of The courage the knights, faio to him . What meaneth this , Keige of the archb. nold . I have done buto the manie great pleasures, ,, and commest thou now but o me into the church are med? Unto whome the knight piesentlie answered ?? and faid; Thou thalt know anon what is ment, thou >> art but dead : it is not pomble for the any longer ,; to live. Unto whom the archbilhop answered : Jam es that you would not do any of thefethings which we to readie to die for my God, and for the defense of his 30 fulfice and the libertie of the church; gladie do 3 im 3 beace death, so that the church may purchase peace and libertie by the speeding of my blod. And herewith taking on other of the knights by the haberges on, he dong him from him with fuch violence, that he had almost theowne him downe to the ground. This was fir Mill. Tracie, as he after confessed.

Then the archbishop inclined his head after the maner of one that would praise, pronouncing these co pon would take from him his crowne, and becalled 20 his last words : To God, to faint Parte, and to the 30 faints that are patrones of this church, and to faint Denife, I commend my felfe and the churches caufe. Therewith fir Reignold Hitz Urle Ariking a full Edward of blow at his head, chanced to light upon the arms of Cambridge. a clerke named Edward of Tambildge, who cast up his arme to faue the archbishop: but when he was not able to beare the weight of the blow, he plucked his arme backe, and so the Groke Stated upon the arche bishops head, in such wise that the blond ran downe , to the king when it thall please his grace to send for 30 by his face. Then they ftroke at him one after an or ther, and though he fell to the ground at the fecond The archbilize blow, pet they left him not till they had cut and paths is flains. ed out his braines, and dashed them about opon the thurch paucment. All this being done, they rifled his house, spoiled his gods, and take them to their owne bles, supposing it lawfull for them being the kings feruants to to do.

But doubting how the matter would be taken. after they had wrought their feat, they got them into bishop said: Surelic I have alreadic taken all the 40 the bishoppike of Dureline, there to remaine till they might heare how the king would take this their but lawfull enterprise: though (as they alleaged) they hav luffilie defended his cause, and revenged his quarell as faithfull fernants ought to do. Holvbett, it chanced otherwise than they loked it should have done: for king Henrie gave them folitle thankes for their piclumptuous act, founding to the cuill crample of The murthe other in breach of his lawes, that they despairing bis rers come to other in breach of his lawes, that they very attent of an cuillend, ferlie of pardon, sed one into one place, and another Match. Paris, to flix, but he fat fill and would not once remone, 50 into another, so that within foure yeares they all die W. Paruus, ed an cuill death (as it hath beine reported.) Some write, that they went to Rome by the kings come mandement, and there presented themselves before the pope, to receive such penance for their wicked act as he hould enfoine them. Herebyon the vove avpointed them to go buto Jerusalem, there to do their penance, where they remained certeine yeares, applieng themselnes verie diligentlie to performe the fatilization of their offense, according to the maner

This was the end of Thomas Becket archbichop Anno Reg. 17. of Canturburie, which was after he had entred into that fæeight yeares and fir moneths, in the yeare affer the birth of our Logo 1171. On Chaifmas day atter their before his death, which fell that yeare on the fridaie, account that he preached a fermion to the people, and then he had made an end thereof, he accurfted Pigell de Sache bay. tille, the violent incumbent of the church of Berges, Bobert de and Robert de Broc, both thich had (opon spite) Broc. curtailed the horffe of the faid arthbiffiop : and as the same day whilest he was at the altar, according to his custome, altogisher in teares and lamentation on; so at dinner he thewed himselse verie pleasant & nierrie, infomuch that when those that were at the

on Chailinas

1).u.

table fermed formelibat doubtfull to eat of the fleth that was let before them, bicaule it was friday; Thy do peabhore faith he to eat fleihe This day fleih hath a great printlege, for this same day the word was made flesh and came into light, and appeared buto vs. These his words greatlie contented all the com-

a Thus you have heard the tragicall discourse of ams bitious Becket, a manof meane parentage, and yet through the princes favour verie fortunate, if he had not abused the beneuolence of so gratious a sous refane by his infolencie and prefumption. Therein we have to note, how unfamelic a thing it was for him being called to fo facred a function, to lead fo fe cular and prophane a life, as if he had professed open hostilitie to the bocation which he prefended to hos nour and renerence. We are also taught, that promotions atchined by ambition are not permanent, and are fo farre from procuring fame and renowme to the obtainers, that they turns them in the end to 20 thame, infamic and reproch, after loffe of life and effu from of bloud. The iffue of all which tragedie is to be imputed to the promidence and counfell of almightie Coo, as one writeth verie agreeablie to this purpose, saieng, Peff. in lib. cul 818, 29.37 dies.

Nom facile extellist facile elation grefianat, Et durum obscurans, obscuri nomen adauget. Engit or miserum facile extinguitque superbum Iuppiter altifremus,cui celsum regia cœlum.

Ling Henrie force for the archb.13-cchets beath.

Polydor.

13ut to let this matter passe. Ling Henrie doubt leffetwas right pensiue for his death, bicause he wist well inough that it would be judged, that he himfelfe was privile to the thing; and even to came it to patte, for immediatlie byon notice given into France of the archbishops ocath, king Lewes, and Theobald the earle of Blois, as they that loved him most derelie tvere most societall for it, and sudging straightwate that king Penrie was the procurer, they wrote their letters buto pope Alexander, giving him to buder canfed it to be put in execution, requiring most infranklic, that such an insuried one to the Chistian religion, might specifie be punished. The pope was much offended, and determined to have the matter throughlie confidered and ordered, fo as might fand with his dignitie, and accordinglie as the hainous State of the case required. Thing Penrie whilest these things were adwing lay certein daies at Argenton, fo much displeased in his mind, that he would suffer no man once to speake to him about any maner of bufineffe.

Ding Henrie fenoeth ambaffadours to the pape.

At length, he fent his amballadous to Rome, part lie to purge himselse of the archbishops death, partlie to excuse his fault, for that in his furie he had bttered words against the archbishop, which had given occallon to naughtie men to contriue his death a partlie to require the pope to fend his legats into England, to make inquirie both for the death of the archbishop, and also of the state of the elergie. The kings ambassadors found the pope at Tinoli, and there were heard to declare their message: but little cre= 60 dit was given to their words, in so much that the pope plainelie told them, that he understood the mate ter to be much otherwise than they had declared. Det according to the kings request, he sent two of his cardinals into England, which byon due craminativ on, might biderstand the truth of the matter tho roughlis as apportained.

Matth, Paris.

There be that write, that the king fent ambassa. courstinice into the pope, for the first that went, could not come to his profence, nor be suffered to de clare their nufflage: those that were sent the second time, were received of some of the cardinals, but yet onclic with words without anic other way of frendlie interteinement. Atlength, when the feath of Cas ffer drew nière, on the which either absolution or excommunication was to be denounced against euerie man, there were certeine of the cardinals which gave intelligence to the English ambassadours, that the pope by aduice of the colledge, meant on the thursdaie before Caster daie to declare the sentence of interdiction against the king of England, and as gainst all his dominions, and to confirme that which had beene alreadie pronounced against Lichard the archbishop of Dozke, and the other bishops his come

The ambaltadours being brought to a Arcid iffue herewith, by helpe of some of the cardinals found meanes to have it put into the popes head, how the English ambassadours had commission to unders take, that the king of England Hould obcie in all things what order focuer it pleased the pope and his court to award him. Derebyon they toke their oth, that it should so be, and by that meanes they audided the interdiction. The mellengers of the archbis thop of Porke the other bilhops vied the like hift, but yet the same date the pope did ercommunicate the knights that had murthered the archbishop Tho mas, and all those that had procured, aided, succoured, or abetted them therein. Some write, that those am: Ger. Dor. balladours which the king lent to the court of Rome, could not be luffered to come to the popes presence, dours were till according to the fathion, they had given 500. glad to ble marks in reward, and so at length were admitted to a shift by his presence.

The amhatta-

Dowlocuer that matter palled, the king flod in great feare least his land should be interdicted, in so much that he commanded the wardens of the ports both on this fide the fea and beyond, to take good hed, least any coming with letters of interdiction should passe into England; but if any such came, that the bringer thould be arrested and committed to prison. Also he commanded, that no clearke were suffered stand both of the flaughter, and how king Henrie had 40 to come over into England, except he first toke an oth that he came about no businesse that might turne to the premotee of the king or his realme. This commandement he fet forth, at what time he transported ouer into England himselfe, where he landed this peare at Postesmouth the third date of August. As bout which time it came into the kings mind, to make a conquest of Ireland byon this occasion.

It chanced, whereas diverferulers ox (as we may Sundiem call them) petie kings reigned the same seson in that lers in Ire-Iland (which was divided into fenerall effates or land. kingdomes) that continuall Arife and diffention remained amongst them, so that oftentimes they made fore war after the manner of their countrie one as gainst an other, (for Nulla fides regni socys, omnisque potestas Impatiens consortis erit.)

Herebpon it fortunco, that one of those kings or rulers, about the 14. yeare of this kings reigne, was fore affliced and oppressed by his neighbours, where bpon taking advice what he might best do for reme-Die in that case, at length he sent his son into Eng' Matth. Paris. land to reteine fouldiours and men of warre, and fo W. Paruus. bring them ouer buto his aid in hope of gaine, & fuch So more commodities as he affured them of.

Pow it came to palle, that by the allifance of lach Englishmen as then came over, the foresaid Triff king began to recover his loffes, and in the end wared so strong, that he subdued all his enimies. When he had thus obtained the victorie, he did not onelie not send backe his aiders, but so liberallie reteined them ftill with him, that they had no half to returne home, but setled themselves in that countrie, where they lived a pleasant and verie licentious life. Hor this cause also the soutest lovos and rulers of hereof in

Luc.lib.I.

An. Reg. 17.
and Frish nation began fore to stomach the matter that had thus brought the English nation on into their countrie, in so much that the English men perceiving their malice, and therewithall has uing some feare of themselves, bicause of their small number, they fent ouer into England for fuch as wanted living, and were willing to læke for it in o ther countries, of which fort, great numbers went o uer thither within a short space, thereby the multitude of the English greatlie increased: but for as 1 much as they had no ruler to governe them, they procured Richard Strangbow earle of Struguille, alids Thepstow in Males to come over thither, and to receive the fourreigne government, with such honozable provision for maintenance of his estate, as thould teme requilit.

Erle Strang how. N.Triuct.

N.Triuct. Wil. Paruus.

$trangbow

Some write, that this earle Richard (being allo carle Darthall of England) for a rebellion moned as gainst king Denrie, had befoze this time forfeited all his lands; but others affirme that through riot and 20 more sumptuous port than his abilitie might beare, he had made awaie and confunct the most part of his living, and was run to far in debt, that he knew not how to fatisfie his creditors, and therefore was he the readier to incline to their request, which made labour unto him to come ouer into Ireland to have the governance of fuch English people, as had alread die planted themselves there to inhabit & remaine. Herebpon he prepared a naute, and affembled togic ther a great number of such as lacked living, and Mostlie determined to palle over into Ireland. But even as he was readie to let forward, there came but to him mellengers from king Henrie, commanding him to state, and not to take that fournie in hand. Howbeit the earle having nothing in England whereof to make anie great accompt, notwith flanding the kings commandement, twke the fea. and patted over into that countrie, where he greatlie delited such Englishmen as dailie had loked for his repaire and comming thither.

Shortlic after, toining those which he brought oner with him, with the other that were there before his comming, he thought to worke some feat, whereby be might make his name famous, & cause the Irith. men to have him in feare. Wherebyon he first astal. led the citie of Dublin, and by force wan it. He like wife wan Materfood, a diverse other townes neere buto the sca side. Also to have some freenothip as mongst those barbarous people, he maried the daughter of the confederate king, and fo grew into verie 50 great estimation in that countrie and region.

Howbeit, with these and the like doings of the strangbow marrieth Dernutiug his daughter.

Dablin won.

Poditions to Strangbow confined.

De fabeth to cocure the kings favour.

The king pardoneth N. Triuct.

earle, king Henrie toke such displeasure (but cheffie for disobeting his commandement) that he confined him the realme, leised his lands as forfeited, and by proclamation reffreined all his subjects from passing into Ireland with any kind of merchandize, promife on of vittels, or other commodities what focuer . By reason whereof, earle Strangbow, partlie by con-Areint, and partlie in hope to returne into favour 60 with king Henrie, and for other respects as may be contectured, aduertised him of the whole state of the countrie of Ireland, promiting him, that if it would please his grace to come ouer thither, he would so worke that he thould be admitted fourreigne load of all the land. Decrebpon king Benrie pardoned him of all former trespattes, and restored but o him all his lands and inheritances within England and Pop mandie: and further, confirmed to him luch livings abroad in Ireland out of the walled townes, as he held alreadie in right of his wife: and furthermore ordeined, that he should be high steward of Free land under him.

Bing Penrie then returning out of Posmandie into England about the firt day of August (as is a foresaid) caused a name of 400. thips to be made readic, and to affemble at Wilford haven in Wenbrokthire, with all fuch prouttion and furniture as Rog. Houed. was thought necessarie for such a tournie. Perewith also he levied a great armie both of horstenien and formen, and came forward with the same unto Ben Misord backe, and so when all his provision and thips were haven. readie, he entred the fea at Wilford hauen aforefaid landeth in the firtienth daie of Daober, and landed in Ireland, Ireland. at a place called Crowd, not past feauen miles from Crowch, Waterford the day nert following, about nine of the clocke : and on the morrow after being S. Luke the euangeliffs day, he with all his armie marched forth to Materford, where he found Milliam Fit; Aldeline his fewer, and Robert Fit; Bernard, with other whome he had fent thither before him for such purpoles as he thought most convenient. He remained at Materford fiftene baics, during which time, there came in buto him the king of Cooke, the king of Limerike, the king of Mazie, the king of Deth, Reignald de Waterford, and diverse other great princes of Freland. At his first arrivall, the The furrenforefaid earle Richard forrendred into his hands all dermade by those townes and places which he had subdued in that bow.

Herewithall the whole land began to tremble, to that the rulers of townes and countries sent onto him medengers; offering to become tributaries, and to deliver hollages: for whilest everie of these rulers which had the government of Ireland in their hands, Sundrierus feared their owne effate, and mistrusted their owne what weake powers, they all in maner submitted themselues, so nesit causeth. that this victorie chanced to king Penrie, without the drawing forth of his fluord, and in fuch wife, that he could not have withed for better or more speedie fuccesse therein. For whereas the whole Iland was divided into fundzie dominions, and ruled by fundzie gouernours, not drawing all one wate, but through 40 factions and contraric fludies one entiting an others wealth (for

Nonbene cum socijs regna venusque manent,

Socijsq, comes discordia regnis)
noshing moze hindzed the sterce and buquiet nation from making relitiance, than in that they could not agree to take councell togither for defending of their liberties, and entier state of the commonwelsh. Wherepon, whilest everie of them apart by himselfe was in doubt to attempt the hazard of war against so mightie a king, they were all overcome, as were the Britons likewise in the time of Cesar and the Sarons. Ling Henrie therefore gladie receined their humble submission, and they dwing homage vinto him, sware to be his liege and faithfull subjects. Onelie Koderike governour of Connagh refused to submit himselfe.

This Roderike prefended to be the chafe king of Roderike R. Ircland, and therefore kept continuall war with the of Connagh. other rulers, which was partlie the cause wherefore they submitted themselves so some buto king Henrie. The faid Roderike held that part of Irelatio which lieth toward the welf, being full of great and thicke woods, and defended with verie high agreat The nature mountaines, closed also with waters and marifhes, of the countrie fo that it should be berie hard, and speciallie in the of Connagh. winter feafon, to bring an armie buto it: with was the onelie cause whie king Henrie attempted no. thing against Roberike at that time, but toke in hand to plant garifons of fouldiers in places conuentent to keepe the land in quiet, which he had worte alreadie, and to give order for the government of the thole estate of the countrie to his behose and commoditie. Heropon going to Dublin, which is the chafelicitie of all Ireland, he allembled all the ru-

粉.似。

icrs in a land

Ould li 3 de ers. Stat 4.Th

Matth, Paris. Polydor.

lers and loves as well spirituall as temporall togis ther in councell, confulting with them for the al furance of the dominion of the land to him and his jetres foi enermoic.

ografications The state of the

The Irifgmen alleged for themselves, that his deuise therm could not be compassed, onles the popes authoratio were therein first obtemed : for they affire med, that immediatlie byon receiving the christian faith, they did fubinit themselves, rall that they had, buto the lie of Rome, so that they could not acknow to ledge any for their fourreigne lood, but onelic the pope. Thich opinion some of them although vaines he hancholden buto thefe our daies. Bing Henrie then understanding this matter, dispatched ambassa; dours to Rome, requiring of pope Alcrander, that he would by his authoritie grant him licence to foine the countrie of Ireland buto the realme of Cn. almo, the went thither with all expedition according to their charge.

And certemelie, the seambassadors whom the king 20 fent now out of Ireland to Rome in this behalfe, returned with better sped in their mellage, than did the other abom he had fent to him out of Normans die to creuse him of the death of the archbishop Thomas. For the pope byon good adulce taken in this matter confidering that he had now no profit growing to him by that Ile, and that the Triff people being wild and rude, were far off from all good offer of chaffianitie in diverse points, thought it would be a meane to bring some gaine to his cofers, and the peo 30 ple more eafilie from their naughtie customes, if they were once made subject buto some chaistian prince of pullance able to tame them, and confreine them by force to be more make and tradable. In confideration wherof, he was content to grant buto the hing all that herein he required.

Derevpon, king Denrie confidering in that re specithe pope was so readie to accomplish his request called a councell of the bishops to assemble at Callill, there manie things were decred and order 40 ned for the reforming of diverse customes vsed before among it the Brith men, and merelie repugnant to the la wes of the chaffian religion. There were als le appointed as folicitoes in thefe matters, and to fit The archdea- and listants with the Frish bishops, one of the kings conof Landal, chaplaines named Nicholas, and one Rafe the archi Deacon of Landaf.

& councell at

Caffell,

E.Houed,

- 1 Amongst other things there concluded, it was ordeined, that children thuld be brought to the church, there to receive baptiline in faire water, with thee 50 dignings into the fame, in the name of the father, the fonne, and the Holie-ghoff, and that by the preffs hands, except in cale where danger of death was feared, which then might bedone by any other person, and in any other place.
- 2 Alfo it was ordeined, that tithes Mould be paid to churches, and that such late men as would keepe wines, should keepe them according to the lawes of holie church, and not otherwise.
- his buls, lent to the king touching the same matter in the beginning of his reigne (with diverse other things) were in like maner appointed to be paid, fo that nothing was omitted that might pleasure the pope, or recover his gratious favour alreadie lost in the matters of Thomas Becket, whereof you have alreadic heard. Thus you heare what successe our amballabours had in this botage. I Now will 3 tell you per I proceed any further) what strange things did happen in England whilest the king was thus occupied in Ircland, and within the compatte of that Anno Reg. 18. years, and first of all, in the night before Chaiseman March, Paris.
 March, West.

 Day last passeo, there chanced such a tempest of lights A fore tempele ning and thunder, that the like had not bin heard of, which tempes was not onelie generallie throughout all England, but also in other forreine parts nore adioining, namelie in Ireland, where it continued all that night, and Chustmas daie following, to so great terro; of the people, that they loked for prefent orath.

The fame night at Andeuer in Hamthire, a praft being in his praiers before the altar, was friken with the tempell, so that he died per it was nine of the clocke in the morning. Allo, a temporall man that was there the same time, was burned with the light- Lightning ning, and whereas his brother being present, ran to him to have succoured him, he likewise was caught with the fire, and in like maner confumed. In Free Polydon land also, cuill diet in eating of fresh flesh and drinking of water, contrarie to the custome of the Cuglithmen, brought the flir and other difeases in the kings armie, to that manie died thereof, for Granisimum est imperium consuctudinis. Wherfore about the beginning of Lent, the king removed from Dublin, went onto the citie of Tacr: Rog House ford, where he remained till toward Caster, and then prepared to returue into England: but before he toke the feathe gave and by his charter confirmed to Hugh Lacie, all the lands of Weth, with the amurte The burgs nances, to hold of him this heires in fee by brughts gift buto fernice, as to find him an hundred knights or men of Lagh Last armes (as we may terme them for enermore. He gaue also onto the same Hugh, the keeping of the citic of Dublin, and made him chefe fufficer of Irc. land. Unto Robert Fitz Bernardhe committed the cities of Waterford, and Welleford, that he thould keepe the same to his bse, and build in them callels, for a more fure defense against the enimies.

Thus then the king had planted garifons of fouldiers in those t other places also where was thought needfull; and further had given order for the politike government of the whole countrie, so far as he had conquered; he first fent ouer his houshold fernants. which twice the water on Caster daie, and landed at Willeford, but he himselfe and other of the Pobles staid there all that daie, by reason of the high solem nitie of that featt: howbeit the date nere after they toke the lea togither, and landed neere to S. Dautos The king to in fouth Males, from whence (without delate) he has turneth into feed forth to Douer, and having his forme the rong England. king with him, he failed over into Pormandie in the crosse wake to mat the popes legats, thom he on See, Dor. derstood to be alreadic come thither. At his meeting legals. with them there, he gave them veriegod counter nance, and right honozable enterteinment, omitting nothing that might do them pleasure.

Here when the matter came to be discussed four thing the death of archbishop Domas, bicause it could not be certeinelie tried out in whom the fault reffed, much reasoning to and fro pasted, about obies ctions and excuses laid (as in doubtfull cases it of ten happeneth) so that ivelnere the space of source moneths was spent in debating of that matter. In 3 The Peter pence also that Adrian reserved in 60 which meane time, the king to auoid all contention and firife betwirthim and king Lewes, fent his fon Henrie togither with his wife over into England, there efflones to receive the crowne, and with them came kotrod the arthbithop of Kouen, Giles bithop R. Houes. of Eureur, Roger bishop of Morcester, and diverse Herespon the young king being arrived in England, called an affemblicof the loods spirituall and temporall at Eclinchester, where both he and his fast Rog. Hours wife Pargaret daughter to the French king was crowned with all folemnitie, by the hands of the faid Kotrod archbishop of Ronen opon the twentie one of Anonif.

In the meane time (faith one writer) his father

King Penrie might have foreliene and found means to have another the discord, which even now began to fpring by betwirt him and his children, cauting a fore and chill warre, if he had not beene a man that bts terlie did detest ail superstitious admonitions. Ho? being tolo (I wot not by whome) that if he did not repent and take more regard to minister infice, which is a pertue that conteineth in it felfe all other pers tnes; it would come to palle, that within thost time he Mould fall into great and manifold calamities.

3 ftrange appartition.

In his returne also out of Ireland (faith an other) boon the fundaie nert after the feaft of Caffer, com a monlie called Lowlundaie, as he should take his " hoese at Cardiffe in Males, there appeared unto him a man of pale and wanne colour, barefoted, " and in a white kirtell, who boldlie in the Dutch lanco guage spake buto him, and admonished him of a menoment of life, and to have regard that the fabtoth date (commonlie called the fundate) might be cono; bodilie workes be holden, vied, or done byon that day within the bounds of his dominions, except that thich awerteineth to decling of meats. And if thou cc dw(faith he)after this commandement, I affure the that all things which thou owell enterprise of god intent and purpole, shall fort to good effect and berie " luckic end.

But the king was not greatlie pleased with these words, and in French faid to the knight that held his " briole; Aske of this churle, whether he hath dreamed all 30 "this that he telieth or not. When the knight had ercopounded it in English, the man answered, Whether I have decamed it in my deepe of not, take thou hed to my words, a marke that day this is: for if thou ce amend not the life, and do as I have advertised thee, before a twelve moneth come to an end, thou thalt heare fuch tidings as will make the forewfull all the oaics of thy life after. The man having thus spoken, vanified atoaic suddenlie, and the king toke his was so suddentie gone, as he did likewise at his sudden appearing. Danie other warnings the king had (faith mine author) but he fet little thereby.

The fecond warning he received of an Friffman, that told him of tokens verie privie. The third time a knight of Lindley called Philip de Chesterby, palfing the fea, came to the king into Posmandie, and there declared buto him seauen articles, which he thould amend, which if he did, then he thould reigne scauen peares in great honoz and subdue Gods ente 5 mics. If he did not amend and redreffe those points, then should be come to death with dishonour in the fourth peare.

1 The first article or point was, that he should licks to mainteine holie church.

2 The lecond, that he mould cause rightfull lawes to be executed.

The third, that he fould condemne no man without lawfull processe.

gods and heritages to those rightfull owners from whome he had taken them by any wrong or bulate full meanes.

5 The fift, that he should cause everie man to have right, without bribing and gluing of méd.

6 The firt, that he thould paie his debts as well due to any of his lubicas, for any Auffe taken by of them to his vie, as to his fernants and fouldiers, who bicause they could not have their wages true lie paid them, fell to robbing and spoiling of true labouring men.

7 The seaventh and last article was, that he thould rause the Zeives to be anoided out of the land, by whom the people were fore impowerished with such bnmercifull blurie as thep exercised.

The king (notwithstanding these and other like warnings) twhe no regard to the amendment of his finfull life, therebpon (as is thought) the troubles which ensued did light byon him by Gods infl appointment.

Thowfocuer this man feme a fable, but no write ten veritie, therefore estæmed as the chaffe of summer flowers; yet as in the tales of Aclop many god 10 morals are compriled, to the scope whereto this away rition tendeth being necessarie, maketh the argument it felfe of the moze authozitic. The end therefore being (as you lee) to renoke the king from worle to better, from the swines-stie of vice to the statelie throne of vertue, from the kennell of finne to the riuers of fanaitie, promeththat even verie fictions of poets (though of light credit) have their drift manie times to honest purpole, and therefore bring with them a competent weight of profit to the readers. compared unit being the fame observed, so that no markets 20 So the scope of this tale being the same that Daulo pointeth at in the fecond pfalme, when he faith,

(At vos in populos quibus est permissa potesias, Et ius ab alta sede plebi dicitis, Errorum tenebras depellite, discite verum, &c.)

Fx. G. Buch paraph.inpfal,2.

maketh the narration it felfe (though otherwife fc ming mere fabulous) to be somewhat authenticall. But to returne to the course of our storie, and now to fair somewhat of this Henrie the seconds sonne the young king, by whom the troubles were moucd, (note you this) that after he had received the erotone togither with his latd wife, they both passed the feas R. Houed, incontinentlie backe againe into Pormandie, there Ger. Dor. on the seauen and twentith of September, at a generall assemblie holden within the city of Auranches King Denrie in the church of the apostle S. Andrew, king Henrie purgeth hims the father, before the cardinals the popes legats, archbishop and a great number of bishops and other people, Beckets made his purgation, in receiving an oth bpon the hor death. lie relikes of the faints, and boon the facred enanges inords but in sport: howbeit he wondered that he 40 lists, that he neither willed, nor commanded the archibishop Thomas to be murthered, and that when he heard of it, he was forie for it. But bicause he could not apprehend them that flue the archbishop, and for that he feared in his conscience least they had executed that bulawfull act byon a presumptuous boldnesse, bicause they had perceived him to be offended with the archbishop, he sware to make satisfaction

> In primis, that he would not depart from pope o the five Alexander, not from his catholike fucceffours, follong iccion babes as they thould repute him for a catholike king.

(for giving such occasion) in this maner.

Item, that he would neither impeach opeales, noz luffer them to be impeached, but that they might fredie be made within the realme unto the pope, in causes ecclesiasticall; pet so, that if the king have the parties suspected, they shall find him sucrties that they thall not procure harme or hinderance what foe ner to him or to his realme.

3 Item, that within the yeares after the native 4 The fourth, that he hould restore the lands, 60 tie of our lord next ensuing, he should take byon him the croffe, and personallie passe to the holie land, except pope Alexander of his luccessours twhe other of der with him.

4 Provided, that if byon any begent necessitic he chanced to go into Spaine to warre against the Saracens there, then fo long space of time as he fpent in that fournie, he might deferre his going into the east parts.

5 Item, he bound himselfe in the meane time by his oth, to emploie so much monie as the templers should thinke sufficient for the finding of two hun, died knights of men of armes, for one yeares ferme in the desense of the holie land.

6 Item, he remitted his weath conceined against freming a

those which were in evile for the archbishop Ahomas his cause, so that they might returne againe into the realme.

7 Item, to reffore all the lands and possessions which had beine taken awais from the fee of Canturburie, as they were belonging thereto in the yere before the departure of the archbillyop Thomas out of England.

8 Item, he sware to take awaie and abolish all in against the church, as presudiciall thereto.

All these articles faithfullie, and without maleingene to performe and fulfill in enerie degræ, he received a folemne oth, and caused his sonne the young king being there present, to receive the same for performance of all those articles, such as touched his owne person onelie excepted. And to the intent the same should remaine in the popes consistorie as matter of record, he put his scale unto the writing wherein the same articles were ingroffed, togither 20 with the feales of the above mentioned cardinals.

Shortlie after king Penric the father luffered the vong king his fon to go into France, togither with his wife, to visit his father king Lewes, according as their deputies required, which fournie verelie beed the cause of the diffention that followed betwirt him and his father. Ling Lewes most louingliere, ceined them (as reason was) and caused divers kinds of triumphant places and passimes to be shewed for daughter.

The French king feeketh

to low fediti=

Peuertheleste, whilest this young prince fotourned in France, king Lewes not hartilic fanouring the king of England, and therewithall perceiving the rath and headfrong disposition of the yong king did first of all inuegle him to consider of his estate. and to remember that he was now a king equall but o his father, and therefore adulted him to Mortlie on betwirt the as he could to get the entire government out of his father and the fathers hands: wherebut ohe furthermose promifed 40 all the aid that laie in him to performe.

The pong king being readic inough not onelie to worke unquietnesse, but also to follow his father in lawes counsell (as he that was apt of nature to ale pire to the fole government, and loth to have any partener in authoritie (according to that of the tra-and namelie luch one as might controll him) was the more encouraged thereto by a number of production gall currie favours, who by flatteric fethim aloft, oc: claring onto him that he was borne to rule, and not to obcie, and therefore it became not his highnesse to reigne by the appointment of an other, but rather to have the government freelie in his owne haves, that he might not be counted prince by permillion. Herebpon the youthfull courage of the young king be. ing tickled, began to war of a contrarie mind to his father: who suspecting indeed that which chanced; to wit (least his sonnes young yeares notable yet to dif. 60 cerne god and wholeforne counfell from cuill, might calille be infected with some finiter practile) thought it not goo to lufter him to be long ablent from him, and therefore fent for him: who taking leave of his father in law king Lewes in courteous maner, returned and came to his father king Benrie into Pop mandic, who when the feath of Chillimas delw neere, repaired towards Aniou, where in the towne of This non, he folemnized that featt, having left his sonne the yong king and his wife all that while in Pozmans die: but sending for him after the feast was ended, they went both into Auvergne, there being at of Morienne. mount Ferrat, Habertearle of Morienne came bu. to them, bringing with him his clock daughter As lice, whom king Henric the father bought of him for the fumme of fine thousand markes, that he might bestow hir in mariage upon his yongest sonne John Amarriage with the heritage of the countie of Mozienne, if hir contracted, father died without other issue, og at the leastwife the faid Hubert chanced to have any sonne lawfullie begotten, that then he should leave onto them and to their heires the countie of Kussellon, the countie of bellensis, Belle, as he then had and held the fame, Pierre ca. these customes, which in his time had beine brought 10 stell with the appurtenances, the vallie of Poual lette, also Chambrie with the apurtenances, Aiz, Alpermont, Rochet, mont Pagoz, and Chambies, with Burg, all which lieng on this five the mountaines with their apurtenances, the faid Hubert granted to them immediatlie for ever. And beyond the mountaines becovenanted to give buto them Turine with the apurtenances, the colledge of Gauozeth with the amurtenances, and all the fees which the earles of Canaucs held of him, togither with the fealties and feruices. And alfo, the fees, fealties, and feruices which belonged to him in the countie of A. mund, and in the vallie called Clale Dosta; and in like maner, the towne of Castellone.

Necregna socium ferre nec teda sciunt) Sen. in Agam.

All the forenamed places the faid earle gave and granted to the faid John, sonne to the king of England for evermore, with his daughter, to frelie, who, lie and quietlie (in men and cities, castels, fortrester, or other places of defense, in medalives, leasteines, milnes, wods, plaines, waters, vallies and mounthe honour and delectation of his forme in law and 30 tames, in customes and all other things) as ever he or his father had held or entoted the fame. And furthermore, the faid earle would, that immediathe (when it pleased the king of England) his people Chould do homage and featife to the king of Engi lands fonne, referuing the fealtie due to him fo long as he lined. Pozeoner, the fair earle Hubert granted to the faid John and his wife all the right that he had in the countie of Granople, and what locuer might be The countie got and cuided in the fame countie. It was also co of Granopic. uenanted, if the elder daughter died, that then the faid John thould marrie the yonger daughter, and enion all the like postions and parts of inheritance as he should have entoied with the first.

Finallie, that these covenants, grants and agree ments should be performed on the part and behalfe of the faid earle Dubert, both he, the faid earle, and the crie of Geneua, and in maner all the great looks and barons of those countries received an off, and undertwhe to come and offer themselves as hostages to remaine with the king of England, in case the faio earle Hubert failed in performance of any of the av forefato articles, till be framed himselfe to satisfic the kings pleasure in such behalfe.

Furthermore, Peter the reverend archbithop of Tarenfalia, and Ardune the bilhop of Beneua, and allo William the bilhop of Posicine, with the abbat of S. Dichell promifed byon their oth to be readie at the appointment of the king of England, to put bits ber the confures of the church the faid earle and his lands, refuling to performe the forelato couenants, and to to keepe him and the fame lands bound, till he had fatisfied the king of England therein.

William carle of Mandeuill, and William earle Thecarles of of Arundell sware on the part of king Penrie, that Mandeuille he thould performe the articles, covenants and agree and Finneth. ments on his part, as first to make paiment immes diatlic buto the faid Hubert of one thousand marks. and assome as he should receive his daughter, he should pay him an other thousand markes at the least, and the residue then remaining of the said sum of fine thouland markes, thould be paid when the mas riage was confummate.

It was provided also , that the faid earle Hubert might marric his yonger daughter where he would,

Comicatus

Rog.Houed. Anno Reg. 19. 1173

Dubert earle

with

without any great diminishing of the earledome af ter the first marriage consummate with the load Tohn, the king of Englands sonne. And that if either the faid load John, or his affianced wife chanced to Die before the confummation of the marriage, then thould the monie which the earle had received, be repaied to the king, or bestowed as the king should

Shoutlie after that the parties were agreed byon the covenants afore cited, the marques of Montfer, 10 rat 4 one Geffrey de Plozac with his sonne Wiles and other Poble men came to the king as amballa does from the earle of Postenne, and received an oth, that they Gould fee and procure the faid earle to performe the covenants and agræments concluded betwirt the king and him. When these things were thus ordered, as feemed good to both parties, for the establishment of the foresato marriage, the king the father, and the king the some removed to Limoges. whither the earle of S. Giles came, and was there 20 accorded with king Henrie and his sonne Richard duke of Guien, concerning the controvertie that had beine moved for the countie of Tholowse, dwing his homage as well buto the father as to the sonne for the same countie, and further covenanted to forue them with an hundled knights of men of armes (as we may call them) for the terme of fourtie daies at all fincs, bpon lawfull fummons. And if the king or his sonne duke Kichard would have his feruice longer time after the fourtie daies were er 30 pired, they should paie wages both to him and his men in reasonable maner. Pozeover, the faid earle condescended tagreed to give yearelic for Apolouse an hundred marks, or else 10, horstes with 10, marks a piece. Pow also, whilest the king socourned at Liv moges, the earle of Postenne came thither to him, and required to binderstand what parcels of land he would alligne but his sonne John . Therebyon the king resolued to allot but him the chamell of The non, Lodun and Mirabell, whereby he offended his 40 eldest sonne the young king (as after may ameare) who was glad to have occasion (whome the poets faine to be bald behind and hairie before, as this monastich insinuateth, Fronte capillata est post est occasio calua)

offered to broch his conceived purpose of rebellion which of late he had imagined, and now began to put in practile, bling the opportunitie of the time and the Nate or qualitie of the quarell then taken for his best advantage, and meaning to make it an ingredience 50 ozentrance to the malicious conceit which he had kept fecret in his hart.

This pare the monks of Canturburie (by the kings affent) those for their archbishop one Richard, who before was prior of Doner ,this man was the 39. in number that had ruled the church of Canturburie, being of an euill life, as he well thewed, in that he wasted the gods of the church inordinatlie. Roger the abbat of Bechellouin was first chosen, but he refused that dignitie rather for flothfulnes and idlenes 60 (as some take it) than for modestic or wisedome : so hard a thing it is to please the people, which measure all things to be honest or dishonest, as they ed or flow in profit and gaine.

The faid Richard, after that he was elected, did ho mage buto king Henrie, and Iware fealtie buto him (Salue semper ordine suo, His order alwaics faued) with out making mention of the customes of the kingdome. This was done at Westiminster in the chaps pel of S. Katharine, the kings inflicer giving his als fent thereunto, where a councell was held the fame time, and a letter of the popes read there before the bithops and barons of the realme, confeining as mongs other things this that followeth.

Abreefe extract or clause of a letter which the pope sent to the clergie of England, coc: for the making of a new holie daic.

Tadmonish you all, & by the authorizing which we reteine, doo streightlie charge you, that you celebrat the adaie of the suffering of the blessed man Thomas the glorious martyr, fometime archbishop of Canturburie, euerie yere in most folemne fort, & that with denout praiers ye endeuour your selues to purchase forgiuenes of fins; that he which for Christes sake suffered banishment in this life, and martyrdome in death by constancie of vertue, through continuall supplication of faithful people, may make intercession for you vnto God.

The tenoz of these letters were scarlie read, but everie man with a lowd voice began to recite this pfalme or hymne, Te Deum laudamus. Hurthermore bicause his suffragans had not exhibited due reuerence to him their father, either in time of his bas nithment, or at his returne from the fame, but rather perfecuted him; that they might openlie confelle their errour and wickennesse to all men, they made this collect: Be fauourable good Lord to our A collect bentfupplication and praier, that we which acknowledge fee in house of our selues guiltie of iniquitie, may be deliuered by the archbishop the intercession of Thomas thy blessed martyr and Becket. bishop, Amen.

This praise was bled by the coucut of S. Albons on the date of his martyzdome. Thus caca superstitionis Est facilisque via & cunctis iam cognita saclus.

A Potwithstanding all which honour of the pope then exhibited to his faint, as his canonization, with other folemnities procured for the maintenance of his memoriall in all ages fucceding; what remembrance is there now of Ahomas Becket: Where be the fhrines that were created in this church and that chappell for perpetuities of his name and fame? Are they not all defaced are they not all rumated are they not all converted to powder and dust? And although the pope ment by cauling luch thous to be creaco, to prefer Thomas as a perpetuall faint to all posterities, and thought as he that fato of his poems,

Exegimonumentum are perennius, Regalique situ pyramidum altius, Quod non imber edax non aquilo impotens Poßit diruere aut innumer abilis

Annorum series & fuga temporum, Det is he growne not into renownte, but infamie and thame in England, as our chronicles declare, which have published that Romith rakehels ambitious and traitozous heart to all successions. Paic, thereas in times past he was reckoned in the popes rublicke for a faint and a martyr, now it is come to patte (by the meanes belike of other faints whose merits have surpassed Beckets) that he is growne in obliuion even at Rome, and his name raced out of the popes calendar (as a learned man preached in a fo- Managhan lemme audience at a high festivall time, by whom he at Spitte the was so magnified. In which kind of discontinuing furface in this course him because the Course him his fauour to his swoone children, he sheweth him 1585. felse verie ingratefull, and not worthie of the dutie fulnesse wherewith (like buzzards as they be) they ouercharge their hellith (holie I would faic) father.

This peare the litter of the said archbishop Ris Ger. Dor. thard was made abbelle of Berking. But now tous Che archbia thing the new elected archbithop Richard, fue find, thous confethat comming to Canturburie on the laturdaie af trans diffuse ter his election, in hope to be there confecrated, he rong king.

The carle of D. Giles.

Mic.Triuct.

Eribute for Cholouse.

Ger.Dor.

Matth.West. N. Triuct,

Marth Paris.

E connecti holden at wellmin:

without any great diminishing of the earledome af ter the first marriage confummate with the load John, the king of Englands fonne. And that if either the faid load John, or his affianced wife chanced to Die before the confummation of the marriage, then thould the monic which the earle had received, be repaied to the king, or bestowed as the king should Shoutlie after that the parties were agreed byon the covenants afore cited, the marques of Montfer, 1 rat tone Geffrey de Plozac with his sonne Wiles and other Poble men came to the king as amballa does from the earle of Morienne, and received an oth, that they Gould fee and procure the faid earle to performe the covenants and agræments concluded betwirt the king and him. When these things were thus ordered, as feemed good to both parties, for the ex Stablishment of the foresaid marriage, the king the father, and the king the sonne removed to Limoges, whither the earle of S. Giles came, and was there 20 accorded with king Henrie and his sonne Richard duke of Guien, concerning the controucrise that had beine moved for the countie of Tholouse, dwing his homage as well buto the father as to the sonne for the same countie, and further covenanted to ferue them with an hundred knights or men of armes (as we may call them) for the terme of fourtie daies at all times, bpon lawfull fummons. And if the king or his sonne duke Kichard would have his pired, they should paie wages both to him and his men in reasonable maner. Dozeover, the said earle condescended agreed to give yearelie for Aholoute an hundred marks, or else 10. horstes with 10. marks a piece. Pow also, whilest the king sosourned at Lie moges, the earle of Postenne came thither to him, and required to binderstand that parcels of land he would affigue but o his founc John. Therewoon the king resolved to allot onto him the chamell of The eldest some the pong king (as after may amearc) who was glad to have occasion (whome the poets faine to be bald behind and hairie before, as this monastich insinuateth, offered to broth his conceived purpose of rebellion which of late he had imagined, and now began to put in practile, bling the opportunitie of the time and the Nate or qualitie of the quarell then taken for his best advantage, and meaning to make it an ingredience 50 ozentrance to the malicious conceit which he had kept secret in his hart.

Fronte capillata est post est occasio calua)

Chis pare the monks of Canturburie (by the kings affent) those for their arthbishop one Richard, who before was prior of Doner, this man was the 39. in number that had ruled the church of Canturburie, being of an euill life, as he well thewed, in that he wasted the gods of the church inordinatlie. Roger the abbat of Wechellouin was first chosen, but he re-(as some take it) than for modestie or wisedome : so hard a thing it is to please the people, which measure all things to be honest or dishonest, as they ebor slow in profit and gaine.

The faid Richard, after that he was elected, did ho mage unto king Henrie, and sware fealtie unto him (Salus semper ordine fue, Dis oper alwaics faued) with out making mention of the customes of the hings dome. This was done at TAciliminster in the chappelof S. Katharine, the kings inficer giving his als fent thereunto, where a councell was held the fame time, and a letter of the popes read there before the bishops and barons of the realme, confeining as mongs other things this that followeth.

Abreefc extract or clause of a letter which the pope fent to the clergie of England, c: for the making of a new holie daic.

Eadmonish you all,& by the autho-Fritie which we reteine, doo streightlie charge you, that you celebrat the daie of the fuffering of the bleffed man Thomas the glorious martyr, fometime archbishop of Canturburie, euerie yere in most folemne fort, & that with denout praiers ye endeuour your selves to purchase forgiuenes of fins; that he which for Christes sake suffered banishment in this life, and martyrdome in death by constancie of vertue, through continuall supplication of faithful people, may make intercession for you vnto God.

The tenoz of these letters were scarlie read, but everieman with a lowd voice began to recite this pfalme og hymne, Te Deum laudamus. furthermoze bicause his suffragans had not exhibited due reuerence to him their father, either in time of his bas nishment, or at his returne from the same, but ra ther perfecuted him; that they might openlie com feste their errour and wickennesse to all men, they made this collect: Be fauourable good Lord to our A collect bent= supplication and praier, that we which acknowledge feb inhonozof feruice longer time after the fourtie vaies were er 30 our selves guiltie of iniquitie, may be delivered by the archbifting the intercession of Thomas thy blessed martyr and Becket. bishop, Amen.

This praier was bled by the coucut of S. Albons on the date of his marty dome. Thus – cæca superstitionis Est facilisque via & cunclis iam cognita saclis.

Thotwith francing all which honour of the pope then exhibited to his faint, as his canonization, with other folemnities procured for the maintenance of non, Lodun and Pirabell, whereby he offended his 40 his memoriall in all ages succeeding; what remembrance is there now of Momas Becket: Where be the fixines that were created in this church and that chappell for perpetuities of his name and fame. Are they not all defacede are they not all rumated e are they not all converted to powder and duff : And ale though the popement by causing such thous to be erected, to prefer Thomas as a perpetuall faint to all posterities, and thought as he that faid of his poems,

Exegimonumentum are perennius, Regalique situ pyramidum altius, Quod non imber edux non aquilo impotens Possit diruere aut innumerabilis

Annorum series & fuga temporum, Det is he growns not into renownte, but infamie and thame in England, as our chronicles declare, which have published that Romith rakehels ambitious and traitozous heart to all successions. Paic, thereas in times past he was reckoned in the popes rubzicke for a faint and a martrz, now it is come to ! fused that dignitie rather for flothfulnes and idlenes 60 passe(by the meanes belike of other faints whose me rits have surpassed Weckets) that he is growne in oblinion even at Rome, and his name raced out of the popes calendar (as a learned man preached in a fo- 99. Araghan lemne audience at a high festivall time, by whom he at spice the was so magnified. In which kind of discontinuing tuctoate in big forent to his Cafter wake his favour to his swoone children, he theweth him 1585. felse verie ingratefull, and not worthie of the dutie fulnesse wherewith (like buzzards as they be) they overcharge their hellith (holie I would fair) father.

This peare the litter of the faid arthbilhop Ris Ger. Dor. thard was made abbelle of Berking. But now tous The archbis thing the new elected archbishop Richard, we find, shops confessible comming to Confushing on the faturations crans bishure that comming to Canturburie on the faturdate af bed by the ter his election, in hope to be there confecrated, he rong king.

The carle of D. Gilis.

Eribnte for Cholouze.

Ger.Dor.

Matth.West, N. Triuct.

Marth. Paris.

I connecti holden at wellmin:

loas bilappointed by letters that came from king Denric the forme in forme as followeth.

A letter of yoong king Henrie touching the disappointment of archbishop Richards confectation.

Enrie by the grace of God king of England, duke of Normandie, and Carle of Aniou, fonne of king Hen-rie; to our deere and faithfull freend

Odo, prior of the church of Canturburie, and to all the conuent there, sendeth greeting. By the affired report of some we understand, that in your church and in other churches also, my father goeth about to institute certein persons not verie meet for fuch calling: and bicause (without our consent) it ought not so be doone, who by reason of our kinglie annoin- 20 ting haue taken vpon vs the kingdome and charge of the whole realme: hervpon we haue in the presence of many persons appealed to the see of Rome, and have signified our appeale in that behalfe, made vnto our reuerend fathers and freends Albert and Theodorike, cardinals and legats of the apostolike see, by our writing and messenger, who like wise and discreet personages have assented therevnto. We have likewise signified the same our appeale to our faithfull freends the bishops of London, Excester, and Worcester, and as we have appealed, so likewise we doo appeale vnder your testimonic.

After the perulall of this letter, and the due confiperation of the substance and summe of the same, (albeit no such afterclaps were suspected before) the bishops were altogither orinen to their shifts, some of them desiring to go forward with the confe cration, and some supposing it better to yello buto the ameale. The cleat archbilhop therefore first fent mellengers to Rome with letters, not written onelie by himselfe, but also by all the bishops and convent of Canturburie. After this he followed himselfe in person, and comming to the popes court, found there divers adverfaries to his caule. For some were there that twke part with the king the father, and some with the king the sonne, and so his businesse could 5 have no specie dispatch. In the meane time the rancor which king Penrie the some had conceived as gainst his father was so ripened, that it could not but burff out, and thew it felfe to the breach of all outifull obedience which nature requireth of a sonne towards his father.

Poul have heard how king Henrie promifed the earle of Morienne, when the marriage was conclu ded betweet his fon John and the faid earles daugh ter, to give buto the said John certeine townes in 60 Pormandie, for the better mainteining of his estate and his wives. This gift of the fathers caused his eldelf some the yong king Henrie, the somer to powze out his poilon which he had lucked before at his being with his father in law king Lewes. For conceining an offense, that his father thould give away any pos tion of his inheritance, he would not condescend to any such gifts, but alledged that lithens he was king of England, and that all belonged to him, his father could not now have any title to give awaie that which did in no wife apperteine unto him.

There was another cause that troubled his mind also, and moved him to grudge at his father, which was; for that the proportion of his allowance for maintenance of his houlfiold and post was berie flender, and pet moze flenderlie paico. Also his fathet remoued from him certeine of his feruants, as Altulfe de S. Pilarte, and other whome he suspected to Affaile tra giue him enill counsell. Wherefore those that were Priarie a procurers of him to attempt the feiging of the go. counfeilers wernement into his hands, upon this occasion slept ter of king not, but put into his head fuch matter, that at length Genric the he openlie demanded to have the whole rule commit, found teo to him: which when he saw would not be obter. Polydon ned of his father by quiet meanes, he fled fecrettie a king Pennic wate but o his father in law king Lewes, requiring the fonne flea aid of him to recover his right, which king Henrie to the French the elder buiufflie deteined from him.

The French king comforted him, and bad him be of god cheare, for he ment to do for him all that in him late. Herewith he proclaimed him duke of Pop mandie, and received homage of him for the fame. King Henrie the father understanding that his sonne was thus fled to the French king, sent ams balladours foothwith to the same king, requiring him to give his son some good wholesome counsell, that he might repent, and not follow luch wilfulnelle of mind in swarning from his fathers frændship, but rather with speed to returne home againe; & to promile in his name, that if any thing were otherwise than well, he would be contented the same Chould be reformed by his order and correction. But so farre was king Lewes from meaning to let a quietnell's betwirt the father and the some, that he would not heare the amballadous declare their mellage, bicaule they named the father, king, to the derogation of W. Parsius, the sonnes right, to whome he sato he offered mante fest wrong in vsurping the government, which he had alreadie given over and refigued. Infomuch that then the amballadours had declared some part of their mellage, he asked them what he was that willed such things of him: and when they answered that the king of England had fent them with that mellage, That is a falle lie (faith he) for behold here is the king of England, who hathgiven you no commission to declare any medage from him onto me at all.

I here we lie philautic or felfe-loue, which rageth in men so preposterousie, that even natural dutie and affection quite forgotten, they bnoertake what mile thefe locuer commeth next to hand, without exception on of place or person; and all for the maintenance of Natelietitles, of lottie Miles, of honozable names, and fuch like banities more light than thittle-downe that flieth in the aire. A vice that hath been enoted to reigne in all ages, among all peres and people of all nations, both at home and abroad, as one verie well noteth and giveth his verdic therebpon, faieng, proh dy,nunc nomina tantum Magnifica, & claros titulos sibi quilibet optat, Arrogat, affectat, sequitur, rapit; vt merito iam Et se asinus pardum vocet & formica leonem. Quid tituli illustres praclarag, nomina prosunt? Quacitò morsrapit, o lethaus mergit in undus.

King Henrie the father perceiving hereby that King Henrie warres would follow, prepared the best he could for knoweth not his owne defense; but he was in great doubt on es whome he uerie lide, not knowing whome he might trust. And may trust. to increase this mischese, his wife quene Clianoz Polydoc Audied to mainteine the Arife betwirt hir sonnes. The yong king then getting an armie togither entred into Buian.

King Benrie was not hadie to go against blin, Richard but fought rather with gentlenesse and all courteous collor rothe meanes to reconcile him: infomuch that thereas rong bing, at dinerle grave personages being of the yong kings to his chipse counsell, and doubting to runne into the displeasure taine, sir Allusto of his father, revolted from the sonne to the father, with others. and brought with them the sonnes seale, which he vied Rog. House

M.Palin ving Ø ∫ag.

Wil. Parmus.

in scaling of letters. Howbeit , the father received them not, but fent them backe againe to his sonne, commanding them to continue faithfull in feruing him as he should appoint them, and herewith he fent ambastadours buto his some to entreate with him of peace and concord.

powithilest the father went about to allwage the somes displeasure, the mother quæne Clianoz did what the could to pricke him forward in his dif obedient attempts. For the being enraged against 10 hir hulband bicaule he kept lundrie concubines, and therefore delited the lette in hir companie, cared not what milchiefe the procured against him. Herebpon the made hir complaint to grauoullie buto hir fons Richard and Geffrey, that they folned with their bed ther against their father, & came to him into Buten, to aid him to the ottermost of their powers.

This may well feeme to be brought opon the king as a plague of his incontinent, buchaft and litable motive to kindle and continue honest love in wedlocke, did not with Manding most inordinatlie as bandon his bodie to beafflie and bulawfull companic keeping with frange fleth. Pote here how God Mirreth up the wife of his owne bolome, the fonnes descending of his owne loines to bethomes in his cies and godes in his lides for profaning lo divine and holie an ordinance; which the verie pagans did so honour and reverence, that they did not onlie give precepts touching the due observation thereof, but 30 denounced bindoubted bengeance for the violation of the fame, as appeareth in this old testimonie, Hesiod.in lib.crii 111.0p. & di.

Patrat & ingreditur quicung cubilia fratris Pxoremmaculans, fantta cubilia stupro, Hunc pater ipse deûm Saturnius odit, ipsi Hunc malê dy vexant, oc.

But we will remit this to the readers confideration on, and note the iffue of this mischefe now broched. The young king resolving that he had his brethren thus on his fide, readie to take his part, became more 40 convenient. fout than before, and for answere but o the messengers that came to him from his father, he declared that if his father would deliver by the whole government into his hands, he would be content to breake by his armie. As for fuch fouldiers as would willing lie take his part in this quarell, he caused them to Aware that they thould faithfullie ferue him against his adversaries : and those that had rather serve on the other five, he licenced them frælie to bepart and go to his father.

Ling Penrie the father receiving such a rebellious answer from his sonne, much lamented the mate ter, and so much the more, for that he saw there was berg were re- no remedie, but to have the controversie decided by temed by bing the swood. Therefore least he should be taken bupyouided, he kept his armie in a readinesse about him, having reteined certeine bands of Brabanders called the Rowts.

Wil.Paruus.

Denrie the fa-

iner as faith

R.Houed,

N.Triuct.

Polydor.

The loods that toke part with his forme, being adnertifed by elpials of the dwings of the father, and 60 hearing that he was readie (if he were constrained) to defend himselfe by battell, and yet willing to receine his fons into his favour againe, if they would be reformed, they take great care how to cause his fons to perfift in their enterpoile, till the father were compelled by force to refigne the government buto them. But none more than the French king coucted to mainteine the discorp, till it might be ended by force of armes: and therfore Cent unto king Benrie the some, willing him to come to Paris, where he caused a councell to be called, a there made a league betwirt the faid Denrie and himselfe, with William king of Scotland, Hugh early of Cheffer, William Patrike the elder, the three four of Robert earle of Wellent, whose castels king Henrie the cloer had in pollellion, Roger Doumbay, Dugh Bigot, and die uerle other complices of the conspiracie, Flabella feditionum, that twice part with Henrie the sonne.

Here after they had confulted of the maner how to mainteine warre, bicause they would affare the rong king that they ment not to forlake him, first king Lewes, and after all the relidue twke an oth to The french aid him with men and monie, till his father thould hing taketh either be driven out of his kingdome, or brought to an oit to aid agré with him at his will and pleasure. On the or the sonne. ther part, he sware never to conclude any peace Rog. Houed, with his father without their consent and god will. Ger. Dor. He also promised upon his oth to give, 4 by his char ter bnoer his scale he confirmed buto Philipearle of Philipearle of Flanders (for his homage) a thouland pounds of Flanders. pearelie revenues in England, and the countie of of Williangue. Bent, with the castels of Douer and Rochester, And to Patthew earle of Bullongne (for his homage)he bioinous life; who having Chara coning pignora, a no. 20 like wife promiled and confirmed the Soke of Kirs keton in Linoley, and the earldome of Poston, with the honour of Bey. Also to Theobald earle of Blois (for his homage) he gave and granted five hundred marks of yearelie revenue in Anion with the castell of Ambois, and all that which he claimed as his right within the countrie of Touraine, and furrenozed to him all the right which he and his father claimed and demanded to have in Chateau Reignold. To the It. Chateau Reig of Scots (for his afficiance) he gave and granted all noid. Posthumberland as far as the river of Tine. And to his brother Dauid (to have his fernice) he granted Carle Dauid. the counties of Huntington and Cambridge. To Hugh Bigot (for his feruice) he gave the castell of Hugh Bigot. Powith. All thefe gifts and grants (with diverse o ther to other persons) promised granted, he confirmed with his new feale, which the king of France had caused him to make. These things being thus Polydon ordered at Paris, everic man relorted to his charge, that he might provide for the warre with all fued

> Ling Henrie the father advertised of this new league of the conspirators against him, was in great perpleritie of mind, for that he faw himselfe in dans ger, not onelie of outward entinies, but also of his owne subjects at home. Det bicause the winter seafon was alreadie at hand, taking awaie all convenient occasions of attempting any great exploit by war for that time, he was in hope to compatte some agreement with his sons per the spring of the yeare thould returne, and therefore he made not so great provision for his defense, as had beine necessarie in so dangerous a case. But the Frenchmen, who were bent to fet forward this war with all diligence, were readic in the field immediatlie open the comming of rate inuabe the spring with king Henrie the sonne, and even at dominions of one instant made their invasions byon the lands of king Henris king Henrie the father in three fenerall parties; the father. namelie, in Pozmanoie, Buien, and Britaine, which (against the will of his some Geffrey duke thereof) king Henrie the father did hold and reteine in his owne hands. The Frenchmen thus inuading the for faid countries, did much hurt with robbing and spot ling, and also toke diverse castels and townes.

Moreover, about the same time, William king of The king of Scotland entred with a great power, first into Cum Scots inuas berland, and besieged Carleil: but hearing that an berland, armie was prepared against him in the south parties of the realine, and readie to fet forward, he raised his fiege, and entred into Posthumberland (which province king Henrie the sonne had given him in the last assemblie holden at Paris) endenouring to bring it into his possession. But the more carnefilie he went about to inforce the people to his will, the more little did they with cand his purpole, hating

N.Triuet, Polydor.

Wil Pariner.

Giernnett.

befinged.

champe.

him to much, that in no condition they were willing to come bnock his rule, whereby the Scots were put backe and repelled, and that to their great loffe. The kings power also comming into the countrie followed them, and palling over the water of Tweed, which divided their (as it douth at this date) the two realmes, made the like spoile in the land of the entimies, as they had made in the countries of Pozi thumberland and Cumberland.

But in Pormandie, whilest others in other places, 10 made their hand in fetching prefes and boties out of the enimics countrie, king Lewes belieged Mernw eil, which towne being ftrong of it felfe, Hugh Beauchampe and others that had charge thereof valiants lie defended, so that the French king was a moneth thugh Wean before it, per he could win anie part thereof. This towns of Ternueil was in those daies divided into these positions, befide the castell, everie of them as part from other with mightic wals and depe ditches full of water. Due of these parts was called the 20 great Burrow without the wals, where the French king had pitcht his field & planted his engins. About a moneth after whose coming thither, vittels began to falle them within, so that at length they required a truce onlie for the daies, t if no luccour came with in those thee daies, they promised to yeld that part of the folune called the great Burrow, the perempto > faccoz, king Penrie the fon, and Robert the French kings brother, with the earls of Trois & Blois, Henrie and Theobald, and Milliam archbill, of Bens, undertwike upon their othes that the hollages should then be reffored free without any hurt or damage. Ling Henrie being certified from them within > rie daie was the vigill or sue of S. Lauvence. Here bpon were holtages delivered by the burgeffes buto

the French king. Pow it was agreed that if they 30 peloco the towne at the daie appointed for want of

of the composition thus made, was driven to a verie hard thist: for he doubted nothing lesse than that any fuch thing thould have chanced. Pet confidering with 40 himselfe, that the saving of the towne stoo in his specie comming to the rescue, he hasted thisher with out any state, and came to the place the date before the third and last date of the truce. King Lewes perceining him to be come, doubting least he flould lose the precentifich he loked for, sent unto the king, and required that he might common with him on the nert dais, touching some means of agreement to be had betwirt him and his fons. This did he of policie, to feed him with hope of some end to be made in the 50 troubles betwirt him and his fons, till he had gotten policilion of the towne.

Pow as he forecast that matter, even so it came to palle, for whilest a great piece of the nert daie was spent in seined talke about an agræment; B. Leives amointed a great part of his hoft to close the tomne about, and to declare buto them within, that king Henrie was put to flight; which talke they within Tlernueil belowing, pelded the towne themfelues to the Frenchmen. Some after, king Lewes mis 60 Arulling least he should not be able to kepe it, set it on fire, and so burnt it, contrarie to the composition betwirt him and them agreed and concluded byon. We kept also the souldiers that had vælded it into his hands, togither with the holfages as prisoners, and doubting to cope with his enimic, went awaie in the thurfoair for night with as fill noise as was possible. Which evill eth R. Houed. dealing had not innaded his hart, but that euill meas ting Lewes ning had possessed it before, even at the composition fleet aware in making that he reported the composition making : but he neuer learned that,

Fidem qui perdit nihil potest vltra perdere.

Ling Denrie at length perceining the fraud, fent certeine bands of his hossemen after to pursue the emimie : but for that king Leives was alreadie got ten into the inner parts of his owne countrie, those which were fent, turned upon those that were lest in the hindermost ward, of whome they sue a great number both hoestemen and formen.

B. Penrie following his men, came to Hernuell, and fraieng there that night, toke order for the repair ring and new fortifieng of the towne. In the more row after he went to the castell of Danuille, and Danuille wan it, taking ofwerfe knights and peomen within it: this castell belonged to one Gilbert de Tileres. Gilbert de And thus it came to palle touching the attempt of Euleres, the Frenchking for the winning of Ternueil, as in some authors we find reported. Ther write other: Wil Parus wife of the mater, as thus, the French la. being fummoned by B. Henrie the father, either to depart from the stege of Mernucil, or to loke for battell; thearing also that in performance of the message B. Benrie approched with his power, he fent a bilhop a an abbat onto him to buder fand if he meant to give bat & Bentle be fell in deed. The mellengers met king Henrie as he thort arfure was advanced before his holf opon some occasion, to the frank with a small companie about him, buto whom they hings medin beclared that their maister the French king requis red to be affured whether he thould have battell or no. Bing Benrie armed as he was, with fierce counter nance and dreadfull voice made this thort answere; Bet you hence, and tell your king that I am here at 2 hand. The medengers returning to their mailter, declared that they had fiene and heard. Where byon (without longer fraie) he raised his field, and with a gallant and mightie armie departed home to his great dishonour, not winning the towne at all, as by the fame author it should appeare.

About the same time the earle of Flanders, one of the confederats belieged the towne of Alber Aibemarie marle, and the earle therof within it, which earle was won by the thought to betraie the towne, bicause it was so easis earle of lie wone, and both he himselfe, and those which king Denrie the father had fent thither to befend the towne were taken pissoners. Diverse other places which belonged to the same earle were also immediatlie delivered into the enimies hands, which increase fed the fulpicion.

After this towne of pewcaffell (otherwise called R. Houed, Daincourt) in thole frontiers was belieged, and fi- Ia. Meir. nallie wone by furrender, by the faid earle of Flan: Ger.Dor. ders, who reiotled nothing at the gaine of that towne: The earlest for his brother Patthew the earle of Bullongne wounded, who thould have beene his heire, was that into the and dieth. knie with an arrow, as he approched to the wals, and died of the hart within a few daies after. The earle of Flanders was so pentife for his brothers death, that he brake or his fournie and returned, blaming his cuill hap and follie in that he had attempted war against his colon germane king Penrie, who never had harmed him, but rather had done him manie great and fingular pleasures from time to time.

T God cause had the earle to give over the proses quuting of violence against his sourreigne, being dawnted with so heavie a chance, & griped also with the grudge of conscience, in so bukindlie rewarding his welwiller, at whose hands he confessed himselfs to have received manie a benefit. Wherein we are to note, that ingratitude never burteth anie so much as him or them in thom it is nessed. And hereto allw beth the comedie-writer, when he faith verie neatlie, morem hunc homines habent, quod sibi volunt Dum id impetrat, bons sunt : sed id vbs iam penes se babet, Ex bonis pessimi & fraudulentissimi sunt.

Mozeover Henrie the elder (after the fournie of Mernueil ended) came backe to Rouen, and there binderstanding that Hugh earle of Chester, and Kafe de Foulgiers, men of lingular prowelle (who long before were revolted to his sonne Henrie) had taken

Rog.Houed.

The French

tung requi-

The ninth of the night,

the cassell of Dolo in Britaine, and there making warre, brought all the countrie into trouble, he fent field fireightwaies certeine of his capteines with the Weabanders to aid his people in those parts the on the twentith day of August (being monday) encountring with the enimics, discomfited them in battell, toke feauenteene knights, besides dinerse o there both kollemen and formen, flue aboue fiftene hundred of the entimies being Britaines, and purfu ing the refidue, cutred the towns which they wan, 10 and drove their adversaries into the castell, where they befreged them, and with all speed advertised the king of that enterpile, who immediatlie with all pole fible haft came thither, applieng his whole diligence to win the place, that he might have them with force within the fame at his commandement.

To be Mort, it was not long per he had his defire, for being fuch a multitude, that they were not able long to continue within he Arcid a rome, for want of vittell they fell to a composition, pælding the ca= 20 Aeli buto the king, their bodies lines and lims faued, on the 25. day of August. There were taken within this callell 80. huights, belides peomen and other common fooldiers. In like maner, and with the femblable god for tune, about the fame time, his capteins in England ouercame his enimies: for whereas Mober tearle of Leicester that twke part with king Dennic the fonne, had affembled at the towne of Actester a great host of men, in purpose to set bpon Reignold earle of Cornewall and Richard Lucie 30 captaines on the five of king Henrie the father: they inderstanding his meaning, marched streight towards & election, and by the way met with their ent mic earle Robert, thome they to fiercelia affailed, serviced that they put him to flight, and affer approxing the ecclorent towns, had it furrendered but othem, permitting the inhabitants to depart with bag and baggage, and then burned the tolune: but the castell (which in those dates was of great Arength by reason of the Atuati on they could not win.

Powbeit some write, that by bondermining, the walles of the towne were subverted and theowne and diplace. Dolume, so that the towns was entred by force, al though they within withozew themselves into the castell and other strong houses, which they befonded for a time, till at length they furrendered all, one parreli of the calfell excepted, for the which by compositio on they paied by way of a fine the fum of thechunthe points to the vie of R. Henrie the father. The fiege began the feateenth day of Julie, and on the 28. 50 day of the fame moneth the armie departed from thence, a truce being granted to those that fill defenday a certains tower of the castell into the which they were withdrawne.

Callian all the Scotily king, with an armic of Acces and Gallowaimen inuaded Posthumbers last and passing by the confines of the bishopathe of Durham bid much hurt by flaughter, burning and healing the countrie. Penerthelesse, hearing of to reall him, he withdrew into his countrie. The Cuglin Cuglin, armic following him, walked the countrie of Condian, till at length by mediation of certeine religious men, a truce was granted to the Scots to inbure till the feath of S. Wilarie. For the which truce hamilie some rewards went before, and so the Eng. lift laids with spoiles and gaines returned homes

A few daies after these luckie chances thus happening to king Denrie, king Lewes perceining fertime to be on that fide, determined to affair thether the could obtain e his purpose by some means of treations at the least put bing becurie in hope of a peace for a time, knowing that he would rather fuffer all discommodities whatsomer, than once to trie the matter by battell with his formes : therefore he of Rog-Houed fered to come to a communication with him betwirt treame of Offices and Tric, the twing bread in the one hand (as they fay) and hiding a frone in the other.

thing Henrie was calilie intreated to heave of a nie talke for peace, and therefore comming to the place on tucldair the fifteenth daie of September, made to large offers, that he had almost connerted the poing mens minds buto concord. First he offer Rog Houed. red to his sonne Henric the young king, the moitie of The offer of one halfe of all the revenues belonging to the des R. Henricthe maines of the crowne within England, and foure father to his convenient castels within the same. De if his some tonnes, had rather remaine in Posmandie, he offered the halfe of all the revenues of that outshie, with all the rents and profits that were his fathers perfeiring to the carledome of Aniou, with certaine callels in Pormandie, one castell in Anion, one in Painc, and one in Towaine. To his sonne Kichard, he offered halfe the renemnes of Guien, and foure convenient callels in the fame. And to his fonne Geffrey he offer red all those lands that belonged by right of inherts fance buto the daughter of Conancele of Butaine, if he might by the popes god licence marrie hir. And further king Henrie the father pictor hims felse to fined to the order of the archbilhop of Eherent and other the popes legats, not refusing to aime his formes what rents and revenues focuer they hould fay were reasonable, reserving onclie to himselfe the administration of instice, and the power rotall.

These feemed to be large offers, but yet they could not be accepted. For certeine somes of Weliall, set bpon nothing but milchafe, troublers of common peace and quietnette, wrought to with them, that no conditions of peace (were the same never so reason nable) could content them, to that without effect this communication by ake by, but not without continue lious woods passed betwirt the parties, infomuch that the earle of Leicester (who being put from all his aid in England, was come over to the French king to purchale aid at his hands) could not refraine but giving credit to the cle adage, after many oppoblious woods bettered against king The earle of Henrie the father, laid hand on his fwood to have Leiceffer of Artisen him, but the Canders by would not luffer him fred to artiss and to they departed; which rath attempt of rather the king. distoiall enterprise,

Homo extra corpus suum est ciun irascitur,

Non fani esse hominis non fanus iuret Orestes.

On the morrow after, the French and English flirmished togither betwirt Curfeils and Gifors, in thich constit Enguerane Chastillone de Trie was taken prisoner by earle William de Mandenille, thopselented him to the king of England. King Lewes though he indged it his part to preferue his fonne in law from danger, yet he ment nothing leffe than to some battell with the English at that profent. But within a few daies affer, he fent Kobert a power raised by the English loops in those parts 60 earle of Leicester into England with an armie of Flemings and others, there to toine with Hugh 150 got, that both of them might as well by force as faire promifes and gentle perfusions bring the thole realme buto the obcoience of king Penrie the Conne.

The earle of Leicester therefore landing at Wlak Additions to fon the 21. of September, palled through the couns John Pike. trie unto Fremingham, where he was received of Dugh Bigot earle of Porthfolke; and after that an other flort of flemings were arrived for their aid, they went into Siplivich, where when they had remained a felv daies, and anymented their faces by Rog. House certaine bands of men of warre that belonged but o carle Bigot, they went to the castell of Paghenet peace.

Pub.Mics.

inch Paris,

Lowetter.

lie retrech, Contraction A 37400

Rog.Houed.

Rog.Housel.

The earle of Leicefter tax

ben puloner.

Rog.Haned.

Wil.Paruus.

Polydor,

that belonged unto Ranulph Broc) which they twke, Spoiled & burned, then returned to Fremingham.

After this, hearing that the countelle of Leicelfer wis arrived at Oxicford with an other power of Flemings, they went to meether; and so the earle of Leicester, hauing now aftrong armie about him, tohe leave of earle Bigot, and ment to patte through the countrie into Leicestershire, there to succour his fromos, and to worke forme feat for the behofe and furtherance of their quarell.

In the meane time the arrivall of the earle of Leiceffer being knowne, the people of the countrie lucre affembled togither. Also Richard Lucie loed thæfe inffice, and Dumfrey de 13oun high conesta; ble of England, with the kings power of horfemen thich latelie before had bone in Scotland and made inrodes there (as before is mentioned) came with all fpico to faue the countrie from spoile, having first tas ken a truce as before is faid with the king of Scots, till the feast of Saint Pilarie next ensuing (02 rather 20 Citer, hostages being belivered on both sides. Apon knowledge then had where the enimies were lodged, and that they intended to do, the faid Lichard Lucie 4 Dumfrey de Bouncame to Saint Comundibus rie whither Reignold earle of Comewall the kings uncle, Robert earle of Cloceffer, and William erle of Arundell resofted.

In the meane while, the earle of Leicelfer paffed forward on his wate to farre as Fornham a little village befide S. Comundiburie. The losd cheefe tub 30 toke thip and transposted over into France. tice a the earls before mentioned with a great armie, and among A others the laid Humfrey de Boun, who had the leading of 300. knights, or men of armes at the kings wages, came out of S. Comunosburie hav uing the baner of D. Comund boine before them, & in a marith ground betwirt Fornham & Comunds huric, they encountred with the faid carle of Leice. fter, and after long and cruell fight discomfited his people, and take him paloner, together with his wife the counteste Detronill, after he had done all that 40 belonged to a valiant capteine.

Some write that there were killed on that day of his people to the number of ten thousand and almost as manie taken berelie fall the formen of the fle mings being in number foure of five thousand were either taken or flaine: I the relidue that escaped fled towards Leicelfer, that they might both defend the towns 4 themselves from the danger of their foes.

That here is to be noted that it fremeth by thereport of some writers, how the earle of Leicester had 50 not fo great an armie there at that battell, as by o: thers account of the number flaine and taken it Mould appeare he had . For at his departure from his companion in arms bugh Bigot, he toke by on him to passe through the countrie (as some write) partlie byon trust that he had of the force and nume ber of his fouldiers, being about foure or five thous fand fout and valiant formen, befides 80 chosen and well appointed horstemen; and partie in hope that manic of those which were in hisaduersaries campe, 60 would rather turns to him than fight against him.

He had a great confidence in the Flemings, who indeed prefinned much boon their owne frength, fo that they made account of some great conquest, in fuch wife, that then they came into any large plaine where they might rest, they would take ech others by the hand, and leading a danfe, fing in their countrie language,

Hop hop Wilkine, hop Wilkine, England is mine and thine.

Ling Denrie receiving advertisement of the victoric which his capteines had thus gotten in England, was maruellous foffull, and commanded that the paloners should be brought ouce but him into Pormandie: thich being done, he went into Anion, and there fortified the towns and callels of the countric with fure garrifons of men, to reliff all sudden inuations, secret practiles, and other attempts of the R. Hound, enimics. On the feat of S. Andrew the apolle, he towned toke the towne of Clandoline by force, twich I'm wane, chard de Lauerdin held against him, hauing first er: pelled his father the earle of Clandoline.

About this lealon, or rather forcethat before, king So his litter Denrie the father contrarie to the prohibition of the before in page king his forme) and after the appeale made unto the 85. pope gaue not onclie onto Richard prior of Douer, the archbishoppike of Canturburie, but also to Reignolo fitz Zoceline the bishoppike of Bath; to Riv thard be Worceller archdeacon of Pointers the bishop: the of Wainchester; to Robert Foliot the bis Chopsike of Hereford; to Ceffrey Rivell archdeacon of Canturburie he game the bishoppike of Clie, and to John de Drenford the bilhoprike of Chicheffer.

But now to our purpole. The nobles of the realme Matt. Paris. of England (after the battell of S. Comundsburie) which was with an infinit number of men went against Hugh fought omte Bigot in purpose to abate his pride. But whereas they might active heart. they might easilie have had him at their pleasure, by meanes of such summes of monie as he gave in bribes, a peace was granted to him till Thitsuntide, within which time having gotten togither fourtene thousand Flemings, he passed through Ester, and so getting ouer into Bent, came to Douer, where he Ling Penrie the father held his Chairmaffe this Anno, Regard truce was made betwirt him and king Lewes to endure till Gaffer, og (as others write) for the terme of fir moneths. For ye have to biderstand, that the fame of the videozie gotten by the capteines of king Henrie the father against the earle of Leicester (being not onlie fpeed through England, but also blown over into France) put those that twke part with him in great feare; but speciallic king Lewes mistrus ting the matter began to war wearie that he had attempted to far, and fusteined to great travell and expenfes in another mans caufe.

Whilest this truce indured, the archbishop of Cam Ger. Doc. turburie being readie to returne home in despaire of his bulinesse, opon a feigned rumoz speed that there was a peace concluded betwirt the two kings, the father and sonne, he was called backe and confecrated by the pope the sundaie after Caster: and then furnished with the dignities of primat and les gat of England, and other privileges according, he toke his waie homewards towards England, affer he had laid forth great fummes of monie to difap point the purpoles of his adverfaries.

This yeare in June, the lood Oeffrey the elect of Lincolne the kings sonne besseged the castell which Roger de Dowblay had repaired at Linard Ferie, within the 3le of Orholine, and compelling the fouldiers within to yield, he beat downe and raced the same castell buto the verie ground. Robert How bray conestable of that castell, as he passed thorough the countrie towards Leicester, there to procure some aid, was taken by the men of Claie, and kept as pissoner. Dozeover, the fair elect of Lincolne twke the cassell of Malesert that belonged to the said Roger Howbiay, which being now taken, was orli ucred buto the keeping of the archbithop of Poske. The faid elect also fortified a castell at Topelife, and twheit to the kieping of William Stuteuille. In this means while the king twke the Arengths and for treffes which his some laichard had fortified at Lair ries, and in the fame forts and church (which was also fortified against him) 60. knights or men of armes, and 400, archbaliflers, that is, the best of them that fatth. Paris.

bare croffebowes.

Chr oth of the earle of Flanberg.

Tomitions to

33

Willip earle of Flanders in the presence of the French king and other the pæres of France, lateng his hand byon the holie relikes, sware that within 15. daies next inliving the feast of S. John then in frant to enter England with an armie, and to do his best to subdue the same to king Henrie the son. Apon trust thereof the young king the more presuming came downe to Whitland, the 14. daie of Ju lie, that he might from thence fend ouer into Eng. 1 land Rafe de la Paie with certeine bands of fouldiers. Wefore this the earle of Flanders had fent o uer 3 18. knights of men of armes, as we may call them. But after their arrivall at Dawell, which chansed the 14. of June, by reason that their associats were dispersed, and for the more part subdued, thep toke with them earle Hugh Bigot, and marching to Porwich, affaulted the citie and wan it, gaining there great riches, and speciallie in readie monie, ransomed at their pleasure. This chanced the 18, of Ger. Dor, Morth Paris.

I Tremember that William Paruus writeth, that the citie of Porwich was taken by the Flemings that came over with the earle of Leicester in the rearciall past, by the conduct of the faid earle before he was taken, and that after he had taken that citie, being accompanied with earle Bigot, he led those Flemings also onto Dunwich, purpoling to win and facke that towne also: but the inhabitants be 30 ing better provided against the comming of their ex nimies than they of Poswich were, shewed such countenance of defense, that they preserved their towne from that danger, so that the two earles with Flennings were constrained to depart without atthining their purpole. But thether that this attempt against Dunwich was made by the earle of Leicester (befoze his taking) in companie of earle Bigot, I have not to anouch. But verelie for the winning of postoith, Tumole that William Paruus mi 40 the Scots had wone it or not, they faied their pace, Naketh the time, except we thall faie that it was twife taken, as first by the earle of Leicester in the yeare 1173. For it is certeine by consent of most writers, and especiallie those that have recorded particularlie the incidents that chanced here in this land during these troubles betwirt the king and his sons, that it was taken now this yeare 1 174.by earle Bis got (as before we have thewed.)

But now to proced. The lords that had the rule of the land for king Henrie the father, perceining 50 earle Bigots proceedings, sent knowledge thereof with all expedition to the king, as yet remaining in the parties beyond the seas. Whilest these things were a doing, although the minds of manie of the conspirators against king Henric the father were inclined to peace, yet Roger Dowbzay, and Hugh Bigot (by reason of this new suplie of men got out of flanders) ceassed not to attempt fresh exploits: and cheffie they folicited the matter in such wise other quarters of the realme placed their parts, he entred into the confines of Cumberland, and first befieged the citie of Carleil, but perceiving he could not win it in any Most time, he left one part of his armie to keepe fiege before it, and with the refidue Callels wom marched into the countrie along it by the river of @= with Scors, den, taking by force the castels of Bourgh and Apple bic, with dinerle other. This done, he palled over the river, and came through Porthumberland (walting the countrie as he went) buto Alnewike, which place he aftempted to win, though his labour therein proued but in vaine.

This enterpife which he made into Posthumber land, he twhe in hand cheefelie at the fuit and request of Roger Powbray, from whome Geffrey who after was bishop of Lincolne) B. Henries clocif base son had taken two of his cattels, so that he kept the third with much adw. He had given his cloed fonne in ho stage buto the said king of Scots for assurance of such covenants to be kept on his behalfe as were palled betwirt them. In the meane time one Dun- Polydor. cane or Kothland, with an other part of the Scotilly Duncane a armie entered into Kendall, and wasted that counstine wasteth captrie in most cruell wife, neither sparing age notice, kendall, infomuch that he brake into the churches, fine those that were fled into the same for safegard of their lines as well prefix as other. The English power of hordemen which passed not the number of 400. was affembled at Pewcastell, under the leading of Ko Wil. Paruns, bert de Stoutenille, Rafe Blannille, William Ur R. Houed. fie, Bernard Balliolle and Doonet de Umfreis uille.

These capteines having knowledge that Dunand led awaie a great fort of prisoners whome they 20 cane was in one five of the countrie, and king Tail liam in another, determined to iffue footh and trie the chance of warre (which is doubtfull and buccrteine, according to the old fateng, Fortuna belli semper ancipiti in loco est)

Sen in The

against the enimies, fith it should be a great rebuke to them to suffer the countrie to be wasted after that fort without renengement. Herebpon riving forth one morning, there arole fuch a thicke fog and mift that they could not discerne any waic about them, so that doubting to fall within the laps of their enimies at bnivares, they staied a while to take adulfe what should be best for them to do. Powithen they were almost fullie resolued to have turned backe againe, by the comfortable words and bold erhortation of Bernard Balliolle, they changed their purpose, and Bernardes rode forward, till at length the northerne wind be Balliotle. gan to waken, and drove awaie the mist, so that the countrie was discouered buto them, and percetning where Alnewike flod, not knowing as yet whether and riving fofflie, at length learning by the inhabis tants of the countrie, that the Scotish king despate ring to win Alnewike, had raised his siege from thence the same day, they turned streight thither, and lodging there all night, in the morning got to their hooffes berie earelie, riving footh towards the enis mics that were speed abroad in the countrie to forrey the fame. They had anon espied where the king was. and incontinentlie compassed him about on everie five, who perceiving the English hossemen readie thus to affaile him, with all viligence called backe his men from the spoile; but the moze part of them being Araico far off through the Aweetnes they found in getting of prefes, could not heare the found of the trumpets, pet not with Canding with those his horder men which he could get togither, he encountred the English men which came opon him verie hastilie.

The battell was begun verie fiercelie at the first, and well fought for a time, but the Scotiff hortes with Atilliam king of Scotland, that whilest they in 60 men being toiled before in forreteng the countrie, could not long continue against the fierce assault of the English, but were either beaten downe, 03 else constrained to faue themselves by flight. The king with a few other (who at the first had begun the battell) was taken. Also manie of the Scots who being far off, and vet hearing of the fkirmilh, came running toward the place, 4 were taken yer they could binderstand how the matter had pasted. This taking of the king of Scots was on a faturdate, being the fenenth of Julie.

The English capteines having thus taken the Scotish king in the miost of his armie, conteining Wil. Parane the number of 80000 men, returned to Dewcastell. greatlie reiviling of their god fucceste, aductifing

The king of

3 dditions to

The king of Sots inua: deth Eng-

A.y.

Matt. Paris. Matth. West, Wil, Paruus, Ger.Dor.

hing Henric the father hereof with all foed, tho as then was come over from Normandic, and was (the fame day that the Scotill king was taken)at Canturburie, making his praiers there before the fepul ture of the archbillyop Becket (as after it shall ap

Polydor.

In the meane while and somewhat before this time, the earle of Leicesters men, which late at Leicester bider the conduct of Robert Ferreisearle of Darconflable or governour (if we thall to call him, as Roger Houeden faith)came to Posthampton, where they fought with them of that rowne, and getting This chanced the victorie, twke two hundred prisoners, and flue or wounded nicre hand as manie more, and so with this god fuccesse in that enterpasse returned againe to Leicester, from whence they first fet fouth. The kings hordenien herebpon came areightwales to Porthampton, and following the enimies, could not ouertake them.

Rob. Ferreig.

whitluntide.

Polydor. Rog.Houcd; Potingham taken.

Wil.Paruus.

Polydor.

Wil. Paruus.

Robert Ferreis carle of Darbie being now come buto Leicester in aid of them that laie there, stated not palt ten daies: but finding meanes to increase his number of hollemen, suddenlie made to Potine gham, which Reignold de Lucie had in keping, and comming thither earelie in the morning twhe it. droug out the kings fouldiers that laie there in garifon, burned the towne, due the inhabitants, and de mided their gods amongst his fouldiers: which thing put the countrie about in such feare, that manie of 30 the inhabitants submitted themselves onto him.

hing Penrie the sonne being hereof advertised by letters oftentimes fent unto him by this Robert Ferreis, and other his friends here in England, efflones conceined some good hope to obteine his purpole : and therefore determined to prepare for the warre. Herespon he purchased ato of king Leives, tho (bicause the truce which he had taken with king Henrie the father was now cryfred) thought it was farre as in him laie. Therfore he made his provision at Graneling, and there incamping with his people, stated till his thips were readie to transport him and his armie, which consisted of certeine horstennen, and of a number of Brabanders.

Ling Penrie the father being informed both of his sonnes purpose, and of the dwings in England, with all politible speed determined to passe over into England, and therefore got his fouldiers a thipbood, among whom were certeine bands of his Brabans 50 ders: and so some as the wind blew to his mind, he caused the failes to be hotsed by, and the name to set forward. Weing landed, he repaired first buto Canturburie, there to make his praiers, doubting leaft the bloud of the archbishop Momas Becket being thed through his occation, did yet require bengeance against him for that fact. From Canturburie he came to London, and twke order for the placing of capteins with their bands in certeine tolunes about the coast, to defend the landing places, where he 60 thought his sonne was like to arrive. Then went he to Huntington, and subdued the castell there the 19. of Julie: for the knights and other fouloters that were within it pielded themselves to the kings mercie, their lines and lims faued.

After this, affembling his people on all fides, he made his generall musters at S. Comundfburie, and determined to beliege the callels of Bunghep and Fremingham, which the earle Bugh Bigot held against him, who mistrusting that he was not able to defend himselfe and those places against the king, agreed with the king to have peace, patenghim the fumme of a thousand markes by composition. This agreement was concluded the 25, of Julie, Perebp on a multitude of the Flemings which Philipearle of The fle Flanders had fent into England (as before is men- inings fent tioned) byon their oth received, not afterwards to come as entinies into England, had licence to returne into their countrie. Also the bands of souldiers that came into the realme with Kafe de la Paie de: parted without impedment by the kings lufterance.

The king having thus accomplished that which R. Houed, ftwo with his pleasure in those parties, removed bie (as some write) orrather of Anketille Palorie 10 from thence and drew towards Porthampton. To which towns after his comming thither, the king of Scots was brought with his feet bound boder the fented to the hoeffes bellie. Thither also came the bishop of Durs king of Gre ham, and delinered to the king the castels of Dur gland. ham, Pozham, and Allerton. Thither also came to the king Roger Dowbzaie, and surrendzed to him the castell of Treske, and Robert earle Ferreis deliuered by into his hands the castels of Tutburic and Duffield, and Anketill Pallogie, and William de 20 Dive constables to the earle of Leicester veelded to the king the castels of Cicetter, Grobie, and Pounts fozell, to the intent that he thould deale moze courter oullie with the earle their maister. Also William The earle of earle of Slocester, and earle Richard of Clare sub, Slocester. mitted themselves to the king, and so he brought all there care we his aducrfaries within the realme of England buto fuch subjection as he himselfe withed; so that the king having atchived the opper hand of his enimies returned to London.

The king of

 All this hurlie burlie and bloudic fumult, was partlic to be afcribed to the king himfelfe, who over tenderlie favouring his sonne, did deied and abase himselfe to advance the other; partlie to the ambition ous disposition of the youth, who was charged with rotaltie, before he had learned sufficient loialtie, else would be not have made insurrections against his father, that himfelf might obteine the monarchie, and the old king do him homage: and partlie to the quænes discontented or rather malicious mind, reason to further his sonne in lawes enterprise to 40 whose dutie it had beine (notwithstanding such dishonour done hir by the king in abuting his bodie onlawfullie) so little to have thought of Airring commotions between the father and the formes, that the Choulo rather have fulled the contention alliepe, and done what the possiblie could to quench the fernent fier of Arife with the water of pacification. But true it is that hath bene faid long ago,

Mulier nihil nouit nisiquod vult, Et plenum malorum est onus.

But what insued herebyon even by wate of that Aisement, but that which commonlie lighteth pp on tumult-railers; namelie, either loffe of life, oz at least restraint of libertie? For the king after this happie atchivement of his warlike affaires, being ruled by reason and aduise (as it is likelie) would not that so smoking a fierbrand (as quene Elianor had proued hirfelfe to be) thould Will annote his eies, and Quane Gib therefore (whether in angrie or quiet mod, that is anoris com doubtfull) be committed hir to close prison, bicause muted to close the had procured his song Richard and Conference the had procured his fons Richard and Geffrey to some with their elder brother against him their fas ther (as before ye have partlie heard.)

But to proceed, king Lewes being advertised that there was no great number of menof war left in Normandie to desend the countrie, raised a power, and comming to Rouen, belieged it verie freitlie. Sportlie affer also king Henrie the sonne Polydor. and Philip earle of Flanders came thither, meaning to obteine the possession of Popmandie first, and after to go into England. The citizens of Rouen per Rouen believe ceining in what danger they food, without faint crech hung. barts prepared all things necessarie for defense, and Wil.Paruus. did enerie thing in order, purpoling not to give over their citie to, any threats or menaces of their ent-

Pub.Min.

R.Houed.

Bantington

caffell wone.

Matth Paris. Carle Bigot is accorded with the K.

tr t! 01 ti A

Polydor.

Whitluntide.

Rob. Ferreis.

Polydor. Rog.Houed: Dotingham taken.

Wil.Paruus.

Polydor.

Wil. Paruus.

Bantington caffell wone.

R.Houed.

Matth Paris. Carle Bigot is accorded with the R.

hing Henriethe father hereof with all speed, who as then was come oner from Pormandic, and was (the fame day that the Scotill king was taken)at Canturburie, making his praiers there before the fepul ture of the archbishop Becket (as after it shall ap pære.)

In the meane while and somewhat before this time, the earle of Leicesters men, which laie at Leicester bider the conduct of Robert Ferreisearle of Warconstable or governour (if we shall so call him, as Roger Houeden faith)came to Porthampton, where they fought with them of that rowne, and getting This chanced the victorie, twie two hundred prisoners, and flue or wounded nicre hand as manic more, and so with this good fuccesse in that enterpasse returned againe to Leicester, from whence they first set fouth. The kings hollenichherebpon came Areightwales to Porthampton, and following the enimies, could not ouertake them.

Robert Ferreis carle of Darbie being now come buto Leicester in aid of them that laie there, stated not pall ten daies: but finding meanes to increase his number of hollemen, suddenlie made to Poting gham, which Reignold de Lucie had in keping, and comming thither earelie in the morning take it, ozouc out the kings fouldiers that laie there in garifon, burned the towne, Que the inhabitants, and de nided their gods amongs his fouldiers: which thing put the countrie about in such feare, that manie of 30 the inhabitants submitted themselves onto him.

King Penrie the sonne being hereof advertised by letters oftentimes fent buto him by this Robert Ferreis, and other his freends here in England, efffones conceived some god hope to obteine his purpole : and therefore determined to prepare for the warre. Herebpon he purchaled aid of king Lewes. tho (bicause the truce which he had taken with king Henrie the father was now cryiced) thought it was reason to further his sonne in lawes enterpise so 40 farre as in him late. Therfore he made his prouttion at Graveling, and there incamping with his people, Stated till his thips were readie to transport him and his armie, which confifted of certeine horffenien, and of a number of Bzabanders.

King Henrie the father being informed both of his sonnes purpose, and of the dwings in England, with all politible speed determined to passe over into England, and therefore got his fouldiers a thipbord. among thom were certeine bands of his Braban 50 ders: and so some as the wind blew to his mind, he caused the sailes to be hotsed by, and the name to set forward. Weing landed, he repaired first buto Canturburie, there to make his praiers, doubting leat the bloud of the archbishop Ahomas Wecket being thed through his occation, did pet require vengeance against him for that fact. From Canturburie he came to London, and twke order for the placing of capteins with their bands in certeine townes about the coast, to befond the landing places, where he 60 thought his sonne was like to arrive. Then went he to Huntington, and subdued the castell there the 19. of Julie: for the knights and other fouldters that were within it peeleed themselves to the kings mercie, their lives and lims faued.

After this, aftembling his people on all fides, he made his generall musters at S. Comundsburie, and determined to beliege the castels of Bunghep and Fremingham, which the earle Hugh Bigot held against him, who mistrusting that he was not able to defend himfelfe and those places against the king, agreed with the king to have peace, patenghim the fumme of a thousand markes by composition. This agreement was concluded the 25, of Julie, Herebps on a multitude of the flemings which Philip earle of The fle Flanders had fent into England (as before is men- imings fent tioned) byon their oth received, not afferwards to hour, come as entinies into England, had licence to returne into their countrie. Also the bands of souldiers that came into the realme with Rafe de la Paie de: parted without impediment by the kings lufferance.

The king having thus accomplished that which R. Houed, food with his pleasure in those parties, removed bie (as some write) or rather of Anketille Palorie 10 from thence and drew towards Porthampton . To thich tolone after his comming thither, the king of Cheking of Scots was brought with his feet bound bnder the fented to the horses bellie. Thither also came the bishop of Durs king of En ham, and delinered to the king the callels of Dur gland, ham, Pozham, and Allerton. Thither also came to the king Roger Dowbzaie, and surrendzed to him the castell of Treske, and Kobert earle Ferreis deliuered by into his hands the castels of Tutburic and Duffield, and Anketill Pallozie, and William de Dive constables to the earle of Leicester pelded to the king the castels of Cicester, Brobie, and Pountfozell, to the intent that he thould deale moze courter oullie with the earle their maister. Also William The earle of earle of Glocester, and earle Kichard of Clare subs Glocester.

The earle Richard of Clare substitution of Cla his adversaries within the realme of England onto fuch subjection as he himselfe withed; so that the king having atchived the opper hand of his enimies returned to London.

All this hurlie burlie and bloudie fumult, was partlie to be ascribed to the king himselfe, who over tenderlie favouring his sonne, did deied and abase himselfe to advance the other; partlie to the ambition ous disposition of the youth, who was charged with rofaltie, before he had learned sufficient losaltie, else would be not have made insurrections against his father, that himfelf might obteine the monarchie, and the old king do him homage: and partlie to the queenes discontented or rather malicious mind, whose dutie it had beene (not with standing such dishor nour done hir by the king in abuling his bodie onlawfullie) so little to have thought of firring commotions betwirt the father and the sonnes, that the Chould rather have fulled the contention alliepe, and done what the possiblie could to quench the fernent her of Arife with the water of pacification. But true it is that hath biene laio long ago,

Mulier nihil nouit nisi quod vult, Et plenummalorum est onus.

But what insued herebyon even by waie of that Aisement, but that which commonlie lighteth by on tumult-railers; namelie, either loffe of life, oz at least restraint of libertie? For the king after this haptie atchiuement of his warlike affaires, being ruled by reason and adulle (as it is likelie) would not that so smoking a fierbrand (as queene Elianor had proued hirfelfe to be) thould fill annoishis eies, and Quáne Cu therefore (whether in angrie or quiet mod, that is anor is com doubtfull) he committed his to close prilon, bicaufe prilon, bicaufe prilon, bicaufe prilon, the had procured his fons Richard and Geffrey to toine with their elder brother against him their father (as before ye have partlie heard.)

But to proceed, king Lewes being advertised that there was no great number of men of war left in Posmandie to defend the countrie, raised a power, and comming to Rouen, belieged it verie Arcitlie. Shortlie after also king Henrie the sonne Polydor. and Philip earle of Flanders came thither, meaning to obtaine the pollettion of Pormandie first, and affer to go into England. The citizens of Kouen per Rouen belies ceiuing in that danger they flod, without faint Erechung barts prepared all things necessarie for defense, and Wil. Paruus. didenerie thing in order, purpoling not to give oner their citie for any threats or menaces of their ent-

Pub.Mim.

mi thi ou be the mics. Pow willest they within were busie in dout fing how to repell the affault, and to defend them, felues, the adverfaries about midnight came forth of their campe, and approching the walles with their ladders, raised them by, and began to scale the citie. But the citizens being adulted thereof, boldlie got them to the lops and towers, overtheen the ladders of the enimies that were comming by, and with arrowes, Cones and darts beat them backe, to their mics could not prevaile thus to get the citie by this affault, pet they continued the fiege, and fuffered not them within to be in quiet, but daie and night allate led them by one meanes or other.

Rog.Houed. Jung Denrie Pozmandie.

: 11

Ric

HER

Ling Penrie the father being advertised hercof, after he had let his bulinelle in order, touching the returneth into fuertie and fafe defense of the English estate, he returned into Pozmandie, and landed at Warflet on a thursdaie being the eight daie of August, bringing backe againe with him his Brabanders, and a thous 20 fand Welthmen. In this meane while, king Lewes continued ftill his frege before Kouen, confreining them within by all meanes he could deutle to pold by their citie. At length came the feath of Saint Lanrence, on which date the French king commanded that no man should attempt any enterprise against the citizens, granting them truce for that day, in worthip of that faint. This truce was to acceptable a thing to them within, that they forgetting thems felues, without all respect to the danger wherein the 30 citie flod, threw off their armour, and gave themfelues to fleepe and reff. Some also fell to banketting and other pastimes in verie distolute maner.

> Thut through this their remille blage and lofe behaviour, and forgetting that a temporarie truce is no lafe warrant of lecuritie and peace, they derived danger and destruction to themselves; which it had bone their parts providentlie to have prevented, and not through their carelemente to let open a gap of aduantage to their enimies, tho purfued them with 4 professed hostilitie, notwithstanding they reposed confidence in the truce that was granted . Derein ther are to be resembled to the coks of thome Plautus speaketh verie neatlie, saieng,

– coquos equidem nimis Demiror,qui tot vtuntur condimentis,eos eo

Condimento non viier quod præstat omnibus, Meaning lobatetie: lo thele delighting moze in their dithes, than millrufting their enimies, remenv beed to take the vie of any pleasure that the convente 50 entnelle of this present time might proffer; onelie as cokes among all their fawces do mind nothing leffe than sobernesse: so these in the abundance of their isies, thought nothing of afterclavs, which af terwards made them (like foles) to fing an unhapie had I wift . For the Frenchmen, perceiving this their negligence, required licence of the French king to give affault to the citie, declaring in what state the matter presentlie stod; who not meaning to violate the reverence of that day, and his promis 60 fed faith, with any fuch unlawfull attempt, comman ded his men of warre that made the request in no wife to fivre. Howbeit the fouldiers opon couctoul neffe of the spoile, raised the ladders to that part of dement of their king.
Two years, to that some of them mounting aloue, got by, and were about to helpe by their fellowes.

Pewit happened (as God would have it) that two pixils being gone up into the stæple of the chæfe thurth, to lake about them for their pleasures, fortuned to see where the French men were about to emfer the citie, and fireightwaies gave knowledge to the citizens beneath. There upon the alarum role, informuch that with all spico the people ran to the place, and with such violence came boon their ensmics The Frenchs which were entred byon the walles, that Areight, menareres water they flue manie of them, and chased the reft. pelled, due out of the oftenes, so that they returned with blee ding wounds to their campe, repenting them of their unhappie enterpiese, that turned them to such wo and granance.

The same day a little before night, hing Benrie file Polydor. father came buto Rouen, and was received into the great lotte and overthow. Howbeit though the ent. 10 citie with great top and gladnette: for he came this ther by chance, even about the time that the citie had thus like to haus bin surprised a taken at unwares.

There be that write, how the French king (in Matt. Parise mediatlie boon the arrivall of king Benrie) left his field and departed, greatlie to his diffonoz, burning ophis engines of warre, and not flateng till his men might have leffure to charge their wagons with their armoz and other Auste, which they were glad to leave behind for a prey to the English men illuing forth opon them. But other occlare, that the French king being nothing abothed of king Den. ries comming, continued the flege, in hope to win

The nert day earlie in the morning (or as other R. Houed. fay in the night feafon) the king did fend forth a cer. The wellh teinenumber of Welchmen to pade oner theriver mens gwo of Saine, which they did, and by force made them. selues wate through the French campe, getting without losse or danger buto a great wood, and flue that day of their adversaries above an hundred men. After this lieng abroad in the countrie, they fairmithed dailie with the french housemen, and off times Nic. Trivet. cut off such provision of vittels as came to nourish the campe. The king himfelfe on the other five rematning within the citie, caused his people to issue out at the gates, and to keepe the enimies occupied with fkirmilhes afore the citie. And moreover, where there Rog. Housed. was a great trench cast betwirt the French campe and the walles of the citie, he caused the same to be filled op with fagots, stones, and earth. But although the French men fawe this the kings oced well enough, yet none of them issued footh of their tents to hinder the English of their purpose.

Powking Lewes being fore vered with his enimies on ech fide, and perceiving the citie would not be wone within any thoat time, began to war wear ric, and to repent himselfe (as afore) for taking in hand so chargeable and great a warre for another mans quarell. Wherebpon he caused Milliam bis The French thop of Sens, and Theobald earle of Blois to go to king maketh king Henrie, and to promife vpon forbearance from for peace, warre for a time, to find means to reconcile him and his formes, betweene thome bunaturall variance refred. Whereof is. Henrie being most defirous, and taking a truce, appointed to come to Gilozs [in the feast of the nativitie of our ladie there to meet king N. Triver. Lewes, that they might talke of the matter and bring it to some good end.

The French king, so some as he knew that truce The French was taken , raised his siege , and returning home, king leaveth within a few daies after (according to the appoint; his fiege. ment) came to Bilois, and there communed with king Benrie: but bicaufe he could not make any as græment betwirthim and his fonnes at that time, he appointed another time to meet about it . Ling Henrie the father (whilest the truce continued with the French king) and his sonne Penrie went to Poidon, where his sonne Richard (whilest his father had beene occupied in other places) had gotten the most part of the countrie into his possession. But now hearing of his fathers comming, and that a truce was taken with the French king and with his brother, he confidered with himselfe, that without their additance he was not able to with franchis fas xlic2 ung.

The French men assault the citie, with= out comman=

J.ly,

Richard the hings fonne prepareth to relift his father.

the beginneth submitted themselves onto him, so that Richard beto orinaire of goo fucceffe.

Polydor.

not appoch nere his father, but kept alwfe, doubting to be entrapped. At length when he had considered his owne state, and weled how buthankefullic the French king and his brother had dealt with him, in having no consis ocration of him at fuch time as they twke truce, he octermined to alter his purpole, and having some good hope in his fathers clemencie, thought best to trie it, which he found to be the best wate that he could have taken. For offentimes it chanceth, that latter 20 thoughts are better adulted than the first, as the old thers power. Powbeit at length chosing rather to trie the matter with force of armes, than cowardie toyald, he prepared for defense, furnishing diverse townes and castels with garifons of men: and al fembling togither all the other power that he was able to make, come into the field, e pitched his tents not far off from his father. In the meane while, which way locuer his father palled, the townes and callels

fatengis, Δέυτορου Φερίντιδες σοφότορου.

The fon fab: feife to the father.

Herebpon Richard lateng armour alide, came of his ofone accord buto his father on the 21. of Sep tember, and alked pardon. His father molt courtes oully receiving him, made so much of him as though he had not offended at all. Which example of courtes sic prevailed much to the alluring of his other sons to come to a reconciliation. For the bringing where 30 of to specie effect, he sent this Richard buto king Lewes, and to his other some Benrie, to commen with them of peace, at which time earle Kichard did fo effectuallie his message, that he brought them both in good for wardnelle to agree to his fathers purpole, fo that there was a date amointed for them to meet with their father, betwirt Towges in Touraine and Ambois.

Ger.Dor. fonnes are ac= corded.

The conditi= ong of the a= grament.

R. Honed.

Thing Henrie reioising hereat, kept his daie (be-The father a ina the morrow after the feast of S. Dichaell) and 40 in maner aforesaid, who being well pleased with the Wil Paruus, there met him both king Lewes, and his two sonnes Henrie and Geffrey, where finallie the father and the sonnes were accorded; he promiting to receive them into favour byon these conditions.

1 First the prisoners to be released fredie with out ransome on both sides, and their offenses, which had taken either the one part of the other, to be like wife pardoned.

2 Dut of this article were excepted all those which compounded for their raunsomes, as the king of Scots, the carles of Leicester and Chester, and Rafe Fulgiers, with their pleages.

3 It was also agreed, that all those callels which had beene builded in time of this warre, should be rat ced and throwne downe, and all fuch cities, townes, castels, countries and places, as had beene some by either part during these wars, thould be reflozed but to those persons that held the same, and were in posfestion of them 15, daies before the departure of the 60 fonnes from king Henrie the father.

That king Penrie the father thould afficine to his fons more large revenues for maintenance of their estates, with a caution included, that they Should not spend the same riotouslie in any prodigall fortor maner.

5 To the king his sonne, he gave two castels in Pormandie, with an increase of yearelie revenues, to the fumme of 15. thousand vounds Anionin.

To his some Richard he gave two houses in Poicton, with the one halfe of all the revenues of the countie of Poiston to be received and taken in Beffrey.

R.Houed.

Richard.

7 And to his fonne Geffrey he granted in monie.

the mottie of that which he should have by the mariage of earle Conans daughter, and after he had maried hir by licence purchased of the pope, he should entop all the whole livings and revenues that de-Cended to hir, as in hir fathers writing therof more at large was confeined.

8 On the other part, king Henrie the Con couenanted to & with the king his father, that he would performe and confirme all those gifts, which his father gan to despaire of the matter, insomuch that he durif 10 should grant out of his lands, & also all those gifts of lands which he either had made and affured, or hereafter should make and asture buto any of his men for any of their feruices: & likewife thole gifts which he had made but o his sonne John the brother of king John, Henrie the sonne; namelie, a thousand pounds in lands by yeare in England of his demaine and ercheats with the appurtenances, and the castell and countie of Potingham, with the castell of Parles brough a the appurtenances. Also a thouland pounds Aniouin of yearelie revenues in Pozmandie, and two castels there. And in Aniou a thousand pounds Aniouin, of such lands as belonged to the earle of Aniou, with one castell in Aniou, and one in Touraine, and another in Paine.

> Thus were the father and lons agreed and made frænds, the formes covenanting never to withdraw their services and bounden dueties from their father, but to obeic him in all things from that day for ward. Derewith also the peace was renewed betwirt king Penrie and king Lewes, and for the further confirmation, a new aliance was accorded betwirt & marriage them, which was, that the ladie Adela the daughter concluded, of king Lewes thould be given in martage buto earle Kichard the fonne of king Henrie, who bicause the was not pet of age able to marie, the was conucied into England to be binder the guiding of king Denrie, till Gecame to lawfull yeares.

Thus the peace being concluded, king Henrie forgetting all injuries palled, brought home his fons agræment, attended their father into Pozmandie, where Richard and Geffrey did homage to him, receiving their othes of allegiance according to the maner in that cafe required. But king Penrie the fonne did no homage, for his father (in respect that he R. Houed. was a king would not luffer him, and therefore toke faieth that be onelie lureties of him for performance of the coue did homage nants on his part, as was thought expedient.

All this differtion and frife was kindled (no before the concluding of this peace had alreadie 50 doubt) by the meanes of certaine sowers of discord. fycomants, paralits, flatterers, clawbacks, gpickee thanks, who had learned their lefton, that Principibus placuisse viris non vltima laus est and thinking by their emboffed speech to tickle the eares and harts of the poing princes, who by reason of their young yeares and nakednelle of experience in the course of wooldlie maters, sought their owne advancement, even by flinging fivie faggots of diffention betweene them, whose harts naturall affective on had bnited. For by the tenor of the florie (marke it who will) we shall fee that no attempt of the sons against the father but had oxiginall from the sugger frions of euill disposed persons, who like wees that fatten not in faire running water, but in muovic motes and ponds) fought honour in hurlie burlies, e reached out long armes to riches by manie a ones impoverishment. This to be true, the finall event and iffue prometh; namelie, the mutual attonement and reconciliation woven betweene the father and the formes; their remode for their undutifulnes, his louing favour and gratiousnesse; their promptnesse to yeld to conditions of agreement, his forwarenes to give consent to covenants required; their reads nesse to do the old king homage, his acceptable ad-

Wil. Paruus

An.Reg.21.

million of their proferred feruice; with other circumfrances to be collected out of the frazie, all which do prove that this their difficiall reliffance sprang rather by others incitement, than of their owne feets ing. Thus we fee what alterations happen in the actions of men , and that cuill things manie times (though naturallic bad) do inferre their contraries, as one aptlie faith, ica cut of pri=

eileis delis nered by the Liof Scois.

N. Trinct. Matth. Paris.

Rog.Houed. 1175

England and at Giloza.

33bilip carle of flanders.

Polydor.

Discordia sit charior concordia. At length king henric went to Faletle, and there 10 Stots believe delinered out of captinitie William king of Scot land, Robert carle of Leiceffer, Hugh earle of Thes ffer, with diverse other Poble men which were kept there as pissoners, putting them to their ransomes, and receiving of them pleages with an oth of allegiance. This king Denrie the father released for his Parfoners res part the number of nine hundred 69. unights of men of armes (if yelift to to terme them) which has beene taken fince the beginning of these palled warres.

As for king Denrie the sonne he also fet at liber tie aboue an hundred, and that without ransome pateng, according to the articles of the peace (as before you have heard .) But yet some (as is alreadie specificd) were excepted out of the benefit of that article, as William king of Scotland, who being not a ble to paic his ranfome in present monie, deliuered by in gage foure of the Arongest castels within his realme into king Denries hands , namelie, Bars wike, Coenbourgh, Rorbourgh, and Sterling, with condition, that if he brake the peace, and paied not the monic behind due for his raunsome, king Henrie and his fuccessours thould entop for ever the same castels. He also covenanted, not to receive any English rebels into his realme. Other write that the king of Scots did not onelie become the king of Englands liegeman at this time, and covenanted to do homage buto him for the realme of Scotland, and all other his lands, but also delivered the castels of Barlotte, and Rorbourgh to be possessed of the fame king of England and his heires for ever, with out any couchant mentioned of mozgage.

Things being fetled thus in god order, king Henrie leaning his sonne Henrie at Rouen, went to Ar genton, and there held his Chaillmatte, and after. wards, namelie in the feath of the purification of our ladie, both the kings (as well the father as the fonne) were at Pauns, and opon their returne from thence into Pomandie, came to a communication with The kings of the French king at Biloss, and then being come backe into Pormanoie at Bure, the sonne (to put the father out of all boubt and mistrust of any entil meaning in him) sware fealtie to him against all persons. and so became his liegeman in the presence of Ko. theod archbishop of Rouen, Denrie bishop of Baieut William earle of Pandeuille , Aichard de Punnes his conestable, and manie other.

After this they kept their easter at Chirebourgh) from whence they came to Caen, where they met with Philipearle of Flanders, who had latelie before taken on him the croffe, to go to the holie land: where king Penrie the father required him to release all 60 fuch concuants as king Henrie the foune had made buto him in time of his last warres, which he freelie vio, and delinered up the writing that he had of the fame king concerning those covenants, and so they confirmed but ohim the yearelie rent which he was wont to receive out of England, before the faid warres.

Finallie, when king Penric had bilited the most part of the countrie, he came to Harflew, and caused his navie to be decked and rigged, that he n.ight faile ouer into England. Whilest he tarried here till his thips were readie, he fent letters to his sonne king Henrie, willing him to repaire unto him, and meaning that he should accompanie him into England. The at the first was loth to obeie his fa- Envious perthere will and pleasure herein, bleaste some emiliforge matters ous persons about him had put in his head a doubt, of suspension. least his father had not altogither forgot his former grudge, and that he ment at his comming into Engs land to commit him to palon. Which was a furmize altogither void of likelichod, confidering that the father, in the whole procede of his actions betweene himselfe and his sonnes, was so farre from the desire of inflicting any corporall punishment, or lenieng as nie fine opon them for their mistemenour, that he alwaies fought meanes of reconcilement and pacification. And though this Henrie the sonne for his part deserved to be roughlie dealt withall; yet the father handled him to gentlie with courteous letters & mellages, that Mortile after he came of his owne accord buto Partiew, from whence shortlie after thep failed both togither over into England, landing The two at Bostlmouthon a fribaic being the ninthof Baic, kings the fafrom thence they take their fournie freight to Lone ther and the bon, all the water being full of people that came to fome returns for them, and to thew themselves glad and soffull of into England, their concord and happic arrivall . At their comming to the citie they were received with great reisiting of the people, belowhing God long to preferue them both in health and honour.

The fame yeare William de Breause haning william de got a great number of Melfhmen into the caffell of Breaule, Abergauennie, under a colourable prefert of communication, proponed this ordinance to be received of them with a corporall oth; That no traneller by the wate amongst them should beare any bow, or other unlawfull weapon. Which oth when they refused to take, bicause they would not stand to that ordinance not well dealt he condemned them all to death. This deceit he vied withall. towards them in reuenge of the death of his uncle Benrie of Bereford, whom opon eaffer euen before, they had through treason murthered, and were now acquited with the like againe. The same yeare died Reignold earle of Comwall, N.Triuct. baffard sonne to king Henric the first without heirs Reignold eric male, by reason whereof the king twhe into his hands occurred this all the inheritance of lands and livings which he held life. within England, Pormandie and Wales, ercept certeine postions which the daughters of the same earle had by allignement allotted to them. Also Richard earle of Gloceffer deceaffed this yeare, and his fonne

Abhilip lucceeded him. The fame yeare was a fynod of the cleargie kept Matth. Weft. at Westminster, therein many things were decreed A synos held for the conservation of religion. Amongst other at London, things it was promided, that those abbeies and thur, thes which were vote of governours, and could have none placed in them by the time of the late civill warres, thoulo now be committed buto men wor thie to entop the fame, for the reformation of difore ders growns and plentifullic sprong by in time of the bacations.

The realist now brought into god order and delinered from the troubles of warre, as well at home as abroad, the king being at good leifure determined W. Parmis. to ribe about a great part of the realme, and com. Cheking of ming to Poske, fent for the king of Scots to come homage to the and do his homage. Pow the king of Scots (accos king of Engding to covenants before concluded) came buto land. Booke in the moneth of August, where doing his hos mage about the twentith day of the fame moneth in S Peters durch, the king granted further by his letters patents, that he and his faccestours kings of Socotland, thould do homage and featite to the kings of England, so often as they Gould be necessarilie required therebuto. In figure and token of which fubteation, the king of Scots offered his hat and his fad-dle opon the altar of S. Poter in Pople, which for a remembrance here of was kept there many yeares after that day.

The welldme

The charter conteining the articles of the peace and agreement concluded betwixt the two kings, which was read in S. Peters church at the same time, exemplified as followeth.

R.Houed.

7. Ilhelmus rex Scotie deuenit homo ligius domi-3, ni regis Anglia contra omnes homines, de Sco-Ma tia & de alijs terris sius, & fidelitatem ei fecit vt ligio domino suo sicut aly homines sui ipsi facere solent. Similiter fecit homagium Henrico filio regis salua fide domini regis patris sui.

2 Omnes vero epife abbates & clerus terra scotia & successores sui facient domino regi sicut ligio domino sidelitatem, de Henrico filio suo & David & hæredibus eorum.

Concessit autem rex Scotia, frater eins, barones, aly homines sui domino regi, quod ecclesia Scotia talem subie-Etionem amodò faciet ecclesia Anglia, qualem facere debet, solebat tempore regum Anglia pradecessorum suorum.

4 Similiter Richardus episcopus Sancti Andrea, Co Richardus episcopus Dunkelden & Gaufridus abbas de Dunfermlin. Herbertus prior de Coldingham concesserunt, vt ecclesia clesta. Et de hac concessione sicut quando ligiam sidelitatem domino regi & domino Henrico filio suo fecerint, ita eos inde assecurauerint.

5 Hocidem facient aly episcopi & clerus Scotia, per conuentionem inter dominum regem Scotia & David fratrem suum Darones suos factam, comites or barones or aly homines de terra regis Scotia (de quibus dominsus rex habere voluerit) facient ci homagium contra omnem hominem, ofilelitatem vt ligio domino suo sicut aly homines sui facere ei solent, & Henrico filio suo en haredibus suis salua fide domini regis patris 40 fui. similiter haredes regio Scotia & baronum & hominum fuorum homagium 🗢 ligiantiam facient haredibus domini regis contra omnem hominem.

6 Praterea rex Scotia & homines fui nullu amodo fugitiuum de terra domini regis pro felonia receptabunt, vel in alia terra sua nisi voluerit venire ad rectum in curia domini regis & stare indicio curia. Sed rex Scotia & homines sui quam citius poterunt eum capient, & domino regi reddent, vel insticiarys Juis aut balliuis suis in Anglia.

7 Si autem de terra regus Scotiæ aliquis fugitium fuerit pro felonia in Anglia, nisi voluerit venire ad rectuin curia domini regis Scotia, & stare indicio curia, non receptabitur in terra regis, sed liberalitur hominibus regis Scotia, per balliuos domini regis vbi inuentus fuerit.

8 Praterea homines domini regis habebunt terras suas quas habebant, habere debent de domino rege, hominibus suu, derege Scotie de hominibus sus. Et homines regis Scotie habebunt terras faas, quas habebant, & habere debent de domino rege & hominibus suis. Pro ista vero conuentione 60 & fine firmiter observando domino regi & Henrico filio suo & haredibus suis à rege Scotia & haredibus suis,liberauit rex Scotia domino regi castellum de Roxburgh, castellum Puellarum, castellum de Striveling, in manu domini requ, co ad custodienda castella assignabit rex Scotia de redditu suo mesurabiliter ad voluntatem domini regis.

9 Præterea pro prædicta conuentione & fine exequendo, liberant rex Scotia domino regi Danid fratrem fuum in obsidem Comitem Duncanum, Or comitem Waldenum, similiter alios comites o barones cum alys virus potentibus quorum numerus 18. Et quando castella reddita fuerint illis, rex Scotia C Dauid frater fins liberabantur. Comites quidem & barones prænominati unusquisq postquam liberauerit obsidem suum, scilicet filium legitimum, qui habuerit, valy nepotes suos vel propinguiores sibi haredes, & castellis ve dictum est reddicis liberabuntur.

10 Præterea rex Scotiæ & barones sui prænominati assecurauerunt,quod ipsibona side, & sine malo ingenio, & sine occasione facient ut episcopi & barones & cateri homines terra sua, qui non affuerunt quando rex Scotiæ cum domino rege finiuit: eandem ligiantiam & fidelitatem domino regi & Henrico filso suo quam ipsi fecerunt, er vi barones, er homines qui affuerunt obsides, liberabunt domino regi de quibus habere voluerit.

10 11 Praterea epife. comites & barones conuentionauerunt domino regi & Henrico filio fuo,quòd sirex Scotia aliquo casu à fidelitate domini regis & fily,& à conuentione prædicta recederet,ipsicum domino rege tenebunt sicut cum ligio domino suo contra regem Scotia, & contra omnes homines ei inimicantes. Et episcopi sub interdisto ponent terram reg is Scotia donec ipse ad sidelitatem domini regis redeat.

12 Pradictamitag conuentionem firmiter observandam bona fide, & fine malo ingenio domino regi & Henrico filio suo & haredibus suis à Wilhelmo rege Scotia & Dauid fratre suo quibus balbere voluerit, sicut alij episcopi sui ipsi facere solent, 🕉 20 & baronibus suis prædictis, & hæredibus eorum assecurauit ipse rex Scotia, David frater eins, omnes barones sui pranominati sicut ligi homines domino regis contra omnem hominem,& Henrici fily sui (salua fidelitate patrussui) hys testibus, Richardo episcopo Abrincensi, & Iohanne Salisburia decano, Roberto abbate Malmesburia, Radulpho abbate Mundesburg, nec non alys abbatibus, comitibus & baronibus, & duobus filis suis scilicet Richardo & Galfrido.

These things being recited in the church of S.Pebet labere: & quod ipsi non crunt contra ius Anglicane ce-Danio the king of Scots brother, and before an innumerable number of other people, the bishops, earles, barons and knights of Scotland Iware fealtie to the king of England and to Henrie his fonne, and to their heires against all men, as to their liege and fouereigne loads.

King Henrie having ended his butinette at Pozke with the king of Scots and others, which like wife did homage to him there, returned to London, in the octaues of S. Michaell, and he called a parlement at Aparlement Windles, whereat were present king Henrie the at windles. fonne, Kichard archbishop of Canturburie, and other bishops of England, Laurence archbishop of Dublin with a great number of earles and barons of this realme. About the same time the archbithop of Tua: Ambaliabous mon, and the abbat of S.B. 2 and on, with Laurence nagh. the chancellog of Koderike king of Connagh in Ireland were come as amballadours from the laid Roderike, buto king Henrie, who willinglie heard them, as he that was more delivens to grow to some accord with those sauage people by some freendlie oze ber, than to war with them that had nothing to lofe: so that he might in pursuing of them sæme to fish with an hoke of gold. Therefore in this parlement the matter was debated, and in the end a peace concluded at the request of the said ambassadours, the king appointing Roderike to paie unto him in token or hides. of lubication, a tribute of or hides.

3

A tribute of

The charter of the agreement was written and subscribed in forme as followeth.

Mecht finis & concordia que facea fuir aqua the character windshove in octauis fancti. Michaelis an. Grathe chericros the agras tie 1 1 75. inter dominum rezem Anglia ment.

Henr. secundum, & Rodericum rezem Co-Accest finis & concordia que facta fuit apud The teno: of nacia, per catholicum Tuamensem archiep. & abbatem C.san-Eli Brandani, & magistrum L.cancellarium regis Conacia. Scilicet quod rex Anglia concedit pradicto Roderico ligio homini suo regnum Conacia, quandiu ei fideliter serviet, vi sit rex sub co, paratus ad servicium suum sicut homo suus, o ve teneat terram suam ita bene & in pace, sicut tenuit antequam dominus rex Anglia intraret Hiberniam, reddendo ei tribu-

In Reg. 22. Henrie 1 6,5 instices or tributum regi Anglia integrè persoluant, & per manum eius suatura sibi conseruent. Et illi qui modò tenent, teneant in pace quamdiu manserint in fidelitate regis Anglia, & fideliter & integré persoluerint tributum & alia sura sua qua es debent per manum regis Conacia, saluo in omnibus iure & honore domini regis Anglia o suo.

2 Et si qui ex eu regi Anglia & ei rebelles fuerint, O tributum & alia iura regu Anglia per manum eius soluere noluerint, à fidelitate regis Anglia recesserint, ipse 10 eos insticiet & amoueat. Et si cos per se insticiare non poterit, conflabularius regis Anglia, Familia sua de terra illa iuua-bunt eum ad hoc faciendum, cum ab ipso fuerint requisiti , & ipsi viderint quod necesse fuerit. Et propter hunc finem reddet prædictus rex Conacia domino regi Anglia tributum singulis annis, scilicet de singulis decem animalibus unum corium placabile mercatoribus, tam de tota terra sua, quam de a-

3 Excepto quòd de terris illis quas dominurex Anglia retinuit in dominio suo, T in dominio baronum suorum , ni- 20 hil se intromittet, scilicet Dunelina cum pertinentys sun , & Midia cum omnibus pertinentijs suis, sicut unquam Marchat Wamailethlachlin eam melius & plenius tenuit, aut aliqui qui eam de eo tenuerint. Et excepta Wesefordia cum omnibus pertinentys sun scilices cum tota lagenia. Et excepta Waterfordia cum tota terra illa, qua est à Waterford víg, ad Duncarnam, ita ve Duncarnam sit cum omnibus pertinentys suis infra terram illam.

4 Et si Hibernenses qui aufugerint, redire voluerint ad terram baronum regis Anglia, redeant in pace, reddendo tri- 30 Lutum prædictum quod alij reddunt, vel faciendo antiqua seruicia qua facere solebant pro terris suis. Et hot sit in arbitrio dominorum suorum. Et si aliqui corum redire nolucrint, domini corum & rex Conacia accipiat obsides ab omnibus quos ei commissi dominus rex Anglia ad voluntatem domini regis & suam. Et ipse dabit obsides ad voluntatem domini regu Anglia illos vel alios, & ipsi servient domino de canibus & aubus sus singulis annis de presentis suis. Et nullum omninò de quacunque terra regis sit , retinebunt contra voluntatem domini regis & mandatum. Hys testibus, Richardo episcopo 40 Wintonia, Gaufrido epifcopo Elienfi, Laurentio Duuelinenfi archiepiscopo, Gausvido, Nicholao, & Rogero capellanis regu, Guilhelmo comite de Essex, & alus multu.

Pozeover, at this parlement the king gave an Irithman named Augustine, the bishoppike of Materford, which for was then boid, and fent him into Ireland with Laurence the archbillyop of Dubline to be consecrated of Donat the archbishop of Cassels. Fgreat derth. The same yeare, both England and the countries ad: 5 foining were fore vered with a great mortalitie of people, and immediatlie after followed a foze dearth and famine.

1176 # parlement at Morth: hampton.

Matth. Paris.

1

King Henrie held his Christmas at Wlindfox, Anno Reg. 22, and about the feath of the convertion of faint Paule he came to Posthampton, after the mostalitie was well ceased, he called a parlement, whereat was prefent a deacon cardinall intituled of S. Angelo, being fent into England as a legat from the pope, to take order in the controverties betwirt the two archbis 60 thops of Canturburie and Poske. This cardinall twole name was Hugh Petro Lion, allembled in the same place a convocation or synod of the billyops and cleargie, as well of England as Scotland: in which convocation, after the ceasing of certeine Artifes and decrees made as well concerning the Cate of common-wealth, as for the honest behanis our of mans life, the caroinall confented that (accor. ding as by the kings lawes it was alreadic order Enact ageinst ned) all maner of persons within the facred orders profes that of the cleargie, which upone home becomes becehunters, grounds and kill any of his deare, should be connected to the connected to of the cleargie, which thould hunt within the kings ted and punished before a temporall sudge. Which lis bertie granted to the king, old to infringe the immu nitie which the cleargic prefended to have within this realme, that afterwards in manie points, preffs were called before temporall judges, and punithed for their offences as well as the laitie, though they have grudged indeed and mainteined that they had wrong therein, as they that would be exempted and indged by none, except by those of their owne Polydor,

Pozeover, in this councell the matter came in question touching the obedience which the bishops of Obedience of Scotland did owe by right buto the archbilhop of the church of Pocke, whom from the beginning the popes of Rome the church of had constituted and ordeined to be primat of all England. Scotland, and of the Iles belonging to that realme, as well of the Dekeneis as all the other. Which con-Mitution was observed by the bishops of those parts manie yeares togither, though after they renounced their obedience. Theropon the archbishops of Poske (for the time being) continuallie complained, to that these popes, Paschall the second, Talyri the second, Honozius, Innocentius, Eugenius the third, and As drian the fourth, had the hearing of the matter, and with often fending their letters, went about to rea duce them to the pronince of Porke. But the Scots ffill withstanding this ordinance, at length the mate ter thus in controversie was referred to pope Aler. ander, who fent the foresaid cardinall Hugh as well to make an end of that contention, as of diverse of ther: but pet he left it undecided.

William king of Scotland came personallie on, Rog. Houed. to this parlement at Posthhampton, by commandes The king of ment of king Henrie, and brought with him Richard meth to the bilhop of S. Andzew, and Josseline bilhop of Blas parlement. cow, with other bithops and abbats of Scotland, the which being commanded by king Henrie to thew such subjection to the church of England as they were bound to do by the faith which they owight to him, and by the oth of fealtie which they had made to him, they made this answer, that they had never thewed any subjection to the church of England, noz ought. Against which deniall, the archbishop of Porke replied, and brought forth lufticient privileges granted by the forenamed popes, to prove the subjection of the Scotilh bilhops, and namelie Glascow and Whiterne onto the lee of Yorke. But bicause the archbishop of Canturburie meant to bying the Scotiff biffops whoer subjection to his fee, he wrought fo for that time with the king, that he suffered them to depart home, without pelving any subjection to the durch of England. The letters which the forefaid popes did fend touching this matter, were remaining fafe and found amongst other writings in the colledge at Pocke, then Polydor Virgil wrote the histories of England, the copies whereof in an old ancient boke he confesseth to have seene and read.

But to speake further of things ordered and done at this parlement holden at Porthampton, the king R. Houed. by common confent of his Pobles and other flates, Dimition of divided his realme into fir parts, appointing the circuits for fusfices itinerants in everie of them, as here follow nerants. eth, Bugh de Creffie, Walter fitz Robert, and Robert Mantell, were deputed buto porthfolke, Sul folke, Cambziogethire, Huntingtonthire, Beoford thire, Buckinghamshire, Eller and Hertfordhire: Hugh de Gundeville, William Fitz Kafe, and William Ballet were appointed to Lincolnshire, Potinghamfhire, Derbithire, Staffordibire, War, wikefhire, Porthamptonfhire, and Leicestershire: Robert fitz Bernard, Richard Bifford, Roger fitz Remfrey, were alligned to Bent, Surrey, Hamp thire. Suffer, Berkthire and Defordhire: William Fitz Stechan, Bertheam de Merdon, Thurlan fitz Simon were ordeined to Herefordihire, Gloceffer, thire, Woscelferthire, and Salopthire: Rafe Itiz Stechan, William Ruffe, and Gilbert Pipard were put in charge with Millhire, Dogletthire, Summer, fetthire, Denonthire & Comwall: Robert de Mals, Kanulf de Glanuile, and Robert Dikenet were appointed to Poskethire, Kichmondihire, Lancathire, Copeland, Mestmerland, Posthumberland, and Cumberland.

The oth of the inflices.

The king caused these tustices to sweare byon the holie enangelists, that they should keepe his alls les which he first had ordeined at Clarendon, and al 10 ter had renewed here at Porthampton, also caused all his lubicus within the reline of England to keepe and observe the same.

Ger. Dor.

Che prefam= ptuous de= incanor of § archbulhop

of yortie.

Pozeoner at this councell, king Henrie restozed onto Robert earle of Leicester all his lands, both on this live the lea, and beyond, in maner as he held the fame fiftene daics before the warre. To William de Albenie earle of Arundell, he gaue the earledome of Suffer. About midlent, the king with his sonne ffer a convocation of the cleargie was called, but then the legat was let, and the archbishop of Canturburie on his right hand as primat of the realme, the archbilhop of Poske comming in, and discaining to fit on the left, where he might feeme to give prehes minence buto the archbishop of Canturburie (bumanerlie inough indeed) swalft him downe, meaning to thrust himselfe in betwirt the legat, and the archbishop of Canturburie. And where belike the faid archbishop of Canturburie was loth to remove, he fet his buttocks tust in his lap, but he scardie touched the archbishops skirt with his bum, when the bishops and other chapleins with their fernants flept to him. pulled him away, and threw him to the ground, and beginning to lay on him with bats and fills, the arch bishop of Canturburie yelding good for enill, sought to faue him from their hands. Thus was verified in him that fage fentence,

Pub.Mim.

Nunquam periculum sine periculo vincitur. The archbithop of Porke with his rent rochet got bp, 40 and awaie he went to the king with a great complaint against the archbishop of Canturburie: but then opon examination of the matter the truth was knowne, he was well laught at for his labour, and that was all the remedie he got. As he departed to bes cc buffsted fouth of the conuccation house towards the king, they cried out opon him; Go traito; that did dell betrap that holy man Thomas, go get the hence, thy hands yet ffinke of bloud. The affemblie was by cc this meanes dispersed, and the legat fled and got him so out of the waie, as he might with thame enough, which is the common panion and waiting-woman of pride, as one verie well faid,

Pub. Mint. Appeales made.

Citò ignominia fit superbi gloria. After this, followed appealings, the archbiffiop of Booke appealed to Kome, and the legat also for his owne fafegard appealed the archbishop of Canturbus riebnto Rome, which archbishop submitting him felfe and his cause under the popes protection, made a like folemne appeale from the legat to the pope. The 60 legat perceiving that the matter went otherwise than he withed, and fring little remedie to be had at that present, game over his legatifip as it had beine of his owne accord, though greatlie against his will, and prepared himselfe to depart. Peuerthelesse, through mediation of frænos that toke paines betivirt them, they gave over their appeales on either five, and diffembled the displeasures which they had conceived either against other, but yet the convocas tion was diffolued for that time, and the tivo archbis Chopspresented their complaints to the king, who kept his Caster this yeare at Winchester, and about the same time or shortlie after, licenced his sonne Penrie to faile ouer into Normandie, meaning

Moatlie affer to go bnto Compostella in Spaine, to bilit the bodie of faint James the apostle, but being otherwise aduised by his fathers letters, he discontinued his purpole and stated at home.

The same years, the ladie Johan the kings daugh fer was given in marriage onto William king of Sicill. Also the same peare died the lood cheese tuftice of Ireland , Robert earle of Striguill otherwise Thephologiben was William Fitzaldelme ordeined N. Triace, loss cheefe justice in his place, who seized into the R. Houed. kings hands all those fortrelles which the faid earle of Striguill held within the realme of Ireland. The Arithmen also paied to the king a tribute of twelve A tribut mi pence yearelie for enerie house, or else for enerie tedbythe ? yoke of oren which they had of their owne. William vily, earle of Arundell died also this yeare at Waverley, and was buried at Talimondham.

This yeare, when it might have beene thought that R. Houed. all things were forgotten touching the revellious at and the legat came to London, where at Melimin 20 tempts made against king Penvie the father by his fons, and other (as before pe have heard) he caused the wals both of the towne and castell of Leicester to be The wals it raced, and all such castels and places of strength as the towns and had beene kept against him during the time of that castell of ke rebellion, to be likewise overthrowne and made plaine with the ground, as the castels of Hunting ton, Waleton, Browby, Hey, Stutelbirrie og Sterdesbirrie, Malasert, the new castell of Allerton, the caffels of Fremingham and Bunger, with divers o ther both in England and Posmandie. But the castels of Pascie, and Mountsozell he reteined in his owne hands as his of right, being to found by a furie of freholders impanelled there in the countrie; further, he leised into his hands all the other callels of bishops, earles and barons, both in England and Cliana the Pozmandie, appointing keepers in them at his pleas kings baugh fure. This yeare also he married his daughter te transco liano, buto Alfonse king of Tassile.

Mozeoner, Bilbert the sonne of Fergus lozd of Gilbert fin Balloway, who had flaine his brother Athred colen fergus. to king Henrie, came this yeare into England, we der conduct of William king of Scotland, and became king Henrie the fathers man, swearing fealtie to him against all men: and to have his love and far uour gave him a thouland marks of filver, and des livered into his hands his son Duncane as a pledge. It is to be remembred also, that in this yeare, Rio Richard with thard earle of Poictow Conne to king Henrie, fought of Poiston. with certeine Brabanders his enimies betwirt S.

Degrine and Buteuille, where he overcame them. There I have thought good to advertise the reas der, that these men of war, whom we have general: lie in this part of our boke named Brabanders, we find them written in old copies divertite, as Brebazones, Brebanceni, and Brebationes, the which for fo much as I have found them by the learned translated Brabanders, and that the French word some what yoldeth thereto, I have likewise so named them : wherein whether I have erred o; not, I must submit mine opinion to the learned & skilfull search ers of luch points of antiquities. For to confesse in plaine truth mine ignozance, or rather burefolued doubt herein, I can not satisfie my selfe with any thing that I have read, whereby to affure my contecture what to make of them, although verelie it may be, and the likelihood is great, that the Brabans ders in those dates for their trained skill and bluall practife in warlike feats, wan themselves a name, whereby not onelie those that were naturallic boans in Brabant, but fuch also as served amongs them, or else bled the same warlike furniture, order, trade and discipline, which was in vie among them, passed in that age under the name of Brabanders. Dr else I must thinke, that by reason of some od kind of has

C

N.Triuct.

Caftile.

The conne cation diffolned.

feshow to remote his father from the government The rong B. and to take it to himselfe: but one of his sernants beginneth new partles named Adam de Cherehedune being of his secret against his counsell, aduertised king Henrie the father thereof, father. for the which his maifter king Wenric the fonne Cereus in vitium flecti, monitoribus after) put him to great thame and rebuke, cauting him to be Ariped naked, and thisped round about the Arects of the citie of Pointiers, where he then was byon his returns from his brother earle Richard, with whome men to make them : for as I remember, Parchades 10 be had been to aid him against his entimies. Ling R. Houed, Denrie the father perceiving the naughtic mind of his forme, and that he ceased not from his wilfull maliciousnesse, thought to distemble all things, fith he faw no hope of amendment in him : but yet to be provided against his wicked attempts, he furnished all his fortrelles both in England & in Pormandie munitien.

About this time, the lear ofe on fuch a heigth, that manie men were drowned thereby . Also a great fnow fell this yeare, which by reason of the hard frost that chanced therewith, continued long without was fling away, so that fishes both in the sea and fresh water died through Marpenelle and behemencie of that froff, neither could husbandmen till the ground. A loze eclipse of the sunne chanced also the firt ides of Januarie. The monasterie of Westwodo: Leb nos was begun to be founded by Richard de Lucie Lord chafe inflice. The same peare also at Wood Noche the king made his some the load Gestrey with firong garifons of men, and all necessarie

In the yeare 1177. king Henrie held his Chill's Rog. Houed.

1177

mas at Porthampton, with his two sonnes Geffrev and John, his other two sonnes the young king Henrie, and Richard earle of Poidou, were in the parts beyond the feas, as the king in Pormandic, and the earle in Balcoigne, where he belieged the citie of The ettic of Aques, which the vicount of Aques and the earle of Aques or Bigore had fortified against him, but he wan it Augues. within ten daies after his comming thither. Within the like terme also he wan the citie of Baion, which Arnold Bertham had fortified against him, and coming to the ottermost frontiers of that countrie adioining to Spaine, he toke a castell called faint Piero which he destroied, and constrained the Bab ques and Pauarrois to receive anoth, that from thenceforth they should suffer passengers quietlie to come and go through their countrie, and that they fould live in quiet and keepe peace one with an or ther, and so he reformed the frate of that countrie, and caused them to renounce manie enill cuffonces which they before that time had unlawfullie vico. Dozeover, king Henrie, to ausid further flander, Anno Reg. 23. placed for billyop in the fee of Lincolne a baffard fon Geffrep the which he had named Geffrey, after he had kept that kings bale bishopethe in his hands so long till he had almost some made clerelie destroied it. And his some that was now bishop of made bishop to helpe the matter for his part, made 4 Fourthlie, that spirituall men should not be 60 hauceke in walking and spending inviotous mans ner the gods of that church, and in the end for loke his miter, and left the fæ againe in the kings hands to make his best of it.

Furthermoze, the king in times past made a volv to build a new monaverie in fatilfaction of his offenles committed against Thomas the archbishop of Canturburie: therefore he required of the bilhops and other spirituall sathers, to have some place by them assigned, where he might begin that foundation on. But whilest they should have taken adule heres in he secrettie practiced with the cardinals, and with diuerle other bishops, that he might remove the see cular canons out of the colledge at Waltham, and place therein regular canons, to to faue monic in his

Wil.Paruus,

g of anb Lei

ugh: redts

fill?

o carle

$ib.3.cap.3.

they had fortified. parted out of the realme, of whom we find that as he 40

The bevar= ture of the least fourth of the Realme. Liberties ob: churchmen.

granted to the king some liberties against the prints leges which the cleargie pretended to have a right buto: so he obteined of the king certeine grants in favour of them and their order, as thus.

an world in those daies.

I First, that for no offense, crime or transgression any frittuall person should be brought before a tems pozall judge personallie, ercept for hunting, or for some late fee, or that for which some temporall service was due to be veloco, either to the king, or fomco ther that was cheefe load thereof.

ers purchased to themselves the privilege of that name, fo to be called Brabanceni or Brebationes (the ther pe will) as hath chanced to the Languenets and Reiffers in our time, and likewife to the compas nions Arminaes and Escouchers in the dates of our forefathers, and as in all ages likewife it hath fortuned amongst men of warre. Thich if it so chanced to these Brabanceni, I know not then what countries that was a chiefe leader of such souldiers as were knowne by that name (as after ye shall heare) is res

It thould feme also that they were called by other names, as the Routs (in Latine Ruptary) which name thether it came of a French wood, as ye would fay some varulic and headstrong companie, or of the Dutch word Rutters, that lignifieth a river, I cannot fay. But it may fuffice for the course of the hillo red, in so much that against them and others there mas an article conteined among the decrees of the Laterane councell holden at Kome, in the yeare

1 1 7 9, whereby all those were to be denounced ac curfed, which did hire, mainteine or any way nourish

those Brebationes, Aragonois, Panarrois, Balques and Coterelles, which did so much hurt in the chafft;

belide the aboue mentioned videsie against those Byabanders, if we Hall so take them; he also vans quithed Pamerike bicount of Limoges, and Willis am earle of Angolelme, with the vicounts of Tlenstadoze and Cambanais, tho attempted rebellion as gainst him, whome earle Kichard subdued, and twke prisoners, with diverse castels and strong holds which

About the feast of Peter and Paule, the legat des

But to returne where we left to earle Richard, 30

rie to understand that they were a kind of hired foul 20 diers, in those dates highlic estemed, and no lesse feat ported by some authors to be a Pronancois.

2 Secondie, that no archbilhops fee, norbishops te, not any abbaie thould be kept in the kings hands more than one yeare, except opon some endent cause or necessitie constraining.

3 Thirdie, that such as sue any spirituall per: fon, and were of fuch offense connicted, either by cui dence or confession before the instice of the realme in presence of the bishop, should be punished as the temporall law in such cases required.

compelled to fight in lifts for the triall of any matter or cause what socuer.

It mould appeare by Nicholas Triuet, that the archbishop of Canturburie procured the bishops of Winchester, Clie, and Porwich, the prelate high lie at that present in the kings favour, to surther thele grants: namelie, that fuch as fine any praction spirituall person might have the law for it: where be, fore, there was no punishment for a scason vsed as gainst such offendors but onelic ercommunication. Wat now to leave parits, we will passe to other

In this meane time, king Penrie the some remaining in Positionois, began to deutle new plants

N. Triuct,

Pails bif= placed , # ca= nons regular put in their romes.

R.Houed. Quincs of Inclburic.

Philip carle of Flanders.

Tohn de Curcie. The citic of Dun taken.

Boderike R. of Winestro banquithed.

Minismo a carbinali.

Wil.Paruus.

The legat boloeth a councell at Dablin cofers, planting in another mans vineyard. Howbeit, bicause it should not be thought he did this of fuch a couctous meaning, he promifed to give great polletions to that house, which he after but lienvers lie performed, though opon licence obteined at the billiops hancs, he displaced the pearlis, and beought in to their romes the canons as it were by wate

Apelame yeare also he think the nunnes of Amelburie out of their house, bicause of their inconti- 10 neutlining, in abuling their bodies greatlie to their reproch, and bellowed them in other monasteries to be kept in more freightlie. And their house was committed onto the abbelle and couent of Fountes ucred, who fent oner certeine of their number to furnish the house of Amelburic, wherein they were plas ced by the archbillyop of Canturburie, in the prefence of the king and a great number of others.

Inlipearle of flanders by lending ouer ambal fadours to king Denrie, promifed that he would not 20 bestow his two neces, daughters to his brother Harthewearle of Bullongne, without consent of the fame bing : but shortlie after he forgot his promile, married the elder of them to the duke of Za. ringes, the yonger to Henrie duke of Louaine.

John de Cureie loed chafe tuffice of Ireland dif comfitting a power of Irithmen, wan the citie of Dunin Unestre, where the bodies of S. Patrike and S. Colme confessors, and S. Brigit the birgin areburied, for the taking of which citie, Roderthe 20 hing of Alneftre being fore offended, raifed a migh tic hoff, and comming into the field, fought with the lood thefe inflice, and in the end received a toke the ouerthrow at his hands, although the lood cheefe in Mice at that encounter loft no small number of his men. Amongs prisoners that were taken, the bishop of Dun was one, whom pet the lood there inflice released and set at libertie, in respect of a request and fuit made to him by a cardinall the popes legat that was there in Ireland at that time.

This cardinals name was Ainiano, intituled the cardinall of S. Stephan in Pount Celio, he was fent from the pope the yeare before, and comming in to England, though without licence, was pardoned upon knowledging his fault for his entring without the kings leave first obteined, and so permitted to go into Scotland, whither as also into other the north well regions, he was lent as legat, authorised from the pope. Low when he had ended his bulinelle in Scotland, he passed over into Han, and there held 50 his Christmatic with Cuthred king of Pan, and as ter the feath of the Epithanie, failed from thence in to Ireland, and chanced (the fame time that the Engs lishmen invaded that countrie) to be in the citie of Dun, where he was received of the king & bishors of that land with great reucrence.

The invalion then of the Englithmen being lignified to them of the countrie aforehand, they asked counsell of the legat what he thought best to be done in that matter; the streightwates told them, that 60 they ought to fight in defende of their countrie, and at their fetting feeward, he gave them his benediate on in waie of their god speed. But they comming as ve have heard) to encounter with the Englishmen, were put to flight, and beaten backe into the citie, which was herewith also wone by the Englishmen, So that the Romane legat was glad to get him into the church for his more falogard, and like a wife fellow had promoce afore hand for fuch haps if they chanced, having there with him the king of Englands letters directed to the capteins in Ireland in the legats favour, to that by the affiliance and author ritic of the same, he went to Dublin, and there (in the name of the pope and the king of England) held a councell.

But when he began to practife, affer the manner of legats in those daies, somewhat largelie for his owne aduantage, in the durches of that simple rude countrie, the English capteins commanded him either to depart, or else to go forth to the wars with them: wherepon he returned into Scotland, having his bags well fruffed with Irith gold, for the which it famed he greatlie thirfted.

There we have to note the drift of the pope and all populings to be far otherwise than they pretend. For who wileste he will be wilfullie ignorant know eth not, that he and his neuer attempt any thing, but the same beareth the hew and colour of holineste and honeffic. Dereto tend the fendings out of his legats and cardinals to make pacifications, to redeelle dife orders, to appeale tumults, $3 wot not what infinit enormities (for he must have his ore in everie mans bote, his spone in eucrie mans oith, and his fingers in cuerie mans purffe) but the end and scope of all his dwings confifteth in this, namelie, to fet himfelfe aboue all fouereigntie, to purchase and affure to him: felfe an absolute and supereminent surification, to rob chillian kingdomes, to impouerith churches, chapels, and religious places. Our chronicles are full of the le his pranks, and here we have one practs led by a lim of his, who (as you le) berie impudentlic and licenticultie picted byon the church-gods, and connerted the fame to his owne profit and commoditie: which he had if not trembled, yet bluthed to do. confidering that the gods of the church are the treas furie of Christ (or at leastwise ought to be) and that none ought to alienate or change the propertie of fuch goos, as the canon law hath provided. Belides, the weetch ought to have remembered that which even the verie pagans did not forget; namelie,

Haud vllas portabis opes Acherentis ad undas, Nudus ad infernas stulte vehere rates.

But now to the dwings of John de Curcie, and of 40 those Englishmen that were with him, who ord not onclie defend such places as they had wone out of the Frishmens hands against those kings and their powers, but also inlarged dailie more and more their frontiers, and wan the towns of Armad, wherein is the metropolitane læ of all that land) with the whole province thereto belonging.

About the same time came ambassadours buto Manh Pais king Henrie from Alfonse king of Castile and Gar- Polydor. fias king of Pauarre, to advertise him, that in a controversie rifen betwirt the fair two kings tow thing the pollettion of certaine grounds naire buto the confines of their realms, they had chosen him for inoge by compromise, promiting upon their oths to Nand buto fabide his order and decree therein. There fore they required him to end the matter by his au R. Houed thoritie, lith they had wholie put it to his sudgement. Furthermore, either king had fent a most able and valiant knight furnished with horse and armour readic in their princes cause to fight the combat, if bing Denric should happilic commit the trial of their quarrell buto the judgement of battell. Bing Henrie gladic accepted their requell, to that therup Polydor, on calling his councellors together, he confulted with them of the thing, and hearing enerie mans opinio on, at length he gave indgement to with the one, that the other was contented to be agreeable therebuto.

Within a thile after, Philip earle of Flanders came over into England to do his devotions at the tome of Chomas archbilhop of Canturburie, of whome the most part of men then had conceined an opinion of such holinesse, that they reputed him for a faint. The king met him there, and verie frændie enterteined him, and bicaule he was appointed hostlic affer to go over into the holie land to war against

Prophib.3

.An.Reg.23.

. M. ped.

Sarten

facutie de

John the lange fonne created king of Ireland.

Polydor.

blond

P. 19.11.3:

3 Marth Paris

Polyder,

F RHost.

7

ŝ

1. 13

1

1

f

(S)

Trained

R. Houed,

& parlement

Dudfen.

rogect.

Soos enimies, the king gave him five hundred marks in reward, and licenced William Pandenile earle of Offer to go in that fourneis with other logos, linights and men of wavre of fundite nations that mere of his dominions.

The king then returning onto London, toke order for the establishing of things touching the fuertie of the realme, and his owne cleate. And first he appoint ted the cultodie of such castels as were of most impostance by their lituation, buto the keeping of cers 10 teine worthie capteins. To fie William de Stute utle he affigned the custodie of Rockefburgheastell, to fir Roger de Stutenille the caffell of Coenburgh, to fir William Penille the castell of Porham, to fir Ceffrie Penille the castell of Berwike, and to the archbilhop of Porke he belivered the calfell of Scarbezough, and fir Roger Conie she made capteine of the tower of Durham, which he had taken from the bishop, bicause he had the wed himselfe an bussed. fast man in the time of the civill warre, and therfore 20 to have the kings favour againe, he gave to him two thousand marks, with condition that his castels might frand , and that his sonne Benrie de Butley alias Buotcy, might entoy one of the kings mano;

After this, the king went to Drenford, and there held a parlement, at the which he created his sonne John king of Ircland, having a grant and confirmation thereto from pope Alexander. About the same time it rained bloud in the Ale of Wight, by the space of two daies togither, so that linen clothes that hong on the hedges were coloured therewith: which bus vice wonder caused the people, as the manner is, to suspect some entit of the said Johns governe, ment.

places called Wlighton.

Morcover, to this parlement holden at Drenford, all the cheefe rulers and governours of Southwales and Posthivales repaired, and became the king of Englands liege men , swearing fealtie to him a gainst all men . Herebpon he gaue buto Rice ap 40 Oriffin prince of Southwales the land of Perios nith, and to Dauid ap Diven he gaue the lands of Ellesmare. Also at the same time he gave and confirs med buto Hugh Lacie (as before is faid) the land of Spoth in Ireland with the amurtenances, for the fernice of an hundred knights or men of armes, to hold of him and of his some John by a charter which he made thereof. Also he divided there the lands and possessions of Areland with the services to his subicas, as well of England as Ireland, amounting fome to hold by service to find fortie knights or men of armed, and some thirtie, and so south.

Unto two Triff losos he granted the kingdome of Corke for the feruice of fortie knights, and to other there loods he gave the kingdome of Linterike for the feruice of the like number of knights to be held of him this some John, reserving to himselfe to his heires the citie of Limerike with one cantred . To william Kitz William Kitz Adeline his sewer, he gaue the citie of Wieffeld with the appurtenances and fernices: and to Robert de Poer his marshall, he gave the cis 60 Porr, and to Robert de Pour plannaryan, de thigh Lacie, tie of Materford, and to Hugh Lacie, he committed the fase keeping of the citie of Diucline. And these persons, to whome such gifts and assignations were made received other of featite to beare their allegis ance ento him and to his some for those lands and possessions in Freland, in maner and forme as was

> The cardinall Unian having dispatched his bu finelle in Ireland, came backe into England, and by the kings fafe conduct returned agains into Scotland, where in a councell holden at Coenburgh, he suspended the bishop of Whiterne, bicause he did re account of that fulpention, having a defente god mough by the bilhop of Poske, whose suffraganc he was.

After the king had dissolved and broken by his parlement at Drenford, he came to Barleborrough, Philip de and there granted unto Philip de Breause all the Breause. kingdome of Limerike for the service of fortie knights: fo: Hubert and William the brethren of Reignold earle of Cornewall, and John de la Poumeray their nethue, refused the gift thereof, bicause it was not as yet conquered. For the king thereof, furnamed Monoculus, that is, with one cie, who had held that kingdome of the king of England, being latelie flaine, one of his kinsemen got possession of that kingdome, and held it without acknowledging any subjection to king Henrie, noz would obeie his officers, bicause of the lottes and damages which there did practife against the Irish people, without occasio on (as they alleadged) by reason whereof the king of Cooke also rebelled against the king of England and his people, and so that realme was full of trouble.

The same season, queene Pargaret the wife of Polychi. hing Henrie the sonne was delivered of a man child which lived not past thic daies . In that time there Tewes in was also through all England a great multitude of England. Jewes, and bicause they had no place appointed them there to burie those that died, but onelie at London, they were constrained to being all their dead coeples thither from all parts of the realme. To ease them therfore of that inconvenience, they obtained of king Henrie a grant, to have a place affigned them in euerie quarter where they owelled, to burie their dead bodies. The same yeare was the bodie of S. Amthibulus the martyz, who was instructor to faint Albone found, not farre from the towne of S. Albones, and there in the monasterie of that towne buried with great and folemne ceremonies.

In the meane time, king Denrie palled over into Pozmandie, hearing that the old grudge betwirt him & king Lewes began to be renewed upon this occasion, that whereas king Henric had received the French kings daughter Alice, promifed in mariage buto his sonne Richard, to remaine in England with him, till the were able to companie with hir hufband, king Denrie being of a distolute life, and given much to the pleasure of the bodie (a vice which was graffed in the bone and therefore like to flicke fall in the fleth, for as it is faid, Quod noua testa capit inueterata sapit) at leastwife (as the French king suspected) began to fantalie the young lavie, and by luch wanton talke and companie-keping as he bled with hir, he was thought to have brought hir to confent to his fleshlie lust, which was the canse wherefore he would not suffer his sonne to marrie hir, being not of ripe yeares nor viripotent or mariable. Wherefore the French hing imagining (bpon confideration of the other R. Houed, kings former lofe life) what an inconvenience & infamile might redound to him and his, bethought him:

felfe that

Turpe senex miles turpe senilis amor, and therefore deemed jufflie that luch a vile reproch wrought against him in his bloud, was in no wife to be luffered, but rather prenented, relifted & with fod. Herebyon he complained to the pope, who for reexelle thereof, sent one Peter a prest, a cardinall intituled of faint Grisogone as legat from him into France, buth committion to put Posmanoie and all the lands that belonged to king Henrie buder in derdiction, if he would not luffer the mariage to be folemnized without delaie betwirt his fonne Kichard and Alice the French kings daughter. The king ade nertifed hereof, came to a communication with the The kings French king at Pinie, opon the 21. of September, met at yur.e.

Matth.Paris

full to come to that councell: but the bilhop made no

Rebert be í.

-

1,0 13

10

B.j.

G

R.Houed.

1178

A law.

nem . Actum apud Nicenas. The English wherof is thus.

and there offered to canfe the mariage to be folemnis zed out of hand, if the French king would give in marriage with his daughter the citie of Burges, with all the apurtenances as it was accorded, and also buto his some king Henrie the countrie of Teulgefine, that is to fay, all the land betwirt Gifozs and Pullie, as he had like wife cournanted

But bicause the French king refused so to do, king Penrie would not luffer his sonne Kichard to marrie his daughter Alice: howbeit at this enter- 10 vew of the two princes, by the helpe of the cardinall, and other Poble men of both fives, they agreed to be frænds, and that if they could not take order betwirt them, to end all matters touching the controuer, ties depending betwirt them for the lands in Anuer: gne and Berrie, and for the fee of Chateau Raoul; then Mould the matter be put to twelve persons, fix on the one lide, and fir on the other, authoriting them to compound and finish that controversie and all o ther which might rife betwirt them . For the French hing thefe were named, the bilhops of Claremount, Peuers, and Trois; and the barons, erle Theobald, Robert, and Peter de Courtneie, the kings brethes ren. For the king of England were named the bis thops of Pauns, Peregort, and Paunts; with three barons allo, Paurice de Croume, Milliam Paigot and Peter de Pountrabell.

At the same time also, both these kings promised and undertwhe to some their powers togither, and to go into the holic land to aid Outdo king of Jerusa 30 lem, whome the Saracen Saladine king of Aegypt did fore opposite with continuall and most cruell war. This done, the French king returned home, and king Henric came to Mernueil, where he made this ordi nance, that no man should trouble the vallall of tennant, as we may call them, for his lords debt.

After this, king Henrie went into Werrie, and toke Chatean Rour of Raoul, and marching to wards Caffre, the load of that towns came and met daughter of Rafe de Polis latelie befoze deceaffed, whome the king gave unto Baldwine de Rivers. with the honour of Chateau Kour oz Kaoul. Then went he buto Braundemont, where Audebert earle of Parch came but o him, and fold to him the whole countrie of March for the lumine of fifteene thou The purchase sand pounds Anionin, twentie mules, and twentie of the erivome palfreis. The charters of this grant and fale made fli 1 177. Then did the king receive the fealtie and homages of all the barons and knights of the coun-Anno Reg. 24. trie of Parch, after he had latisfied, contented, and paid the monie buto the earle according to the couchants.

> The king this yeare held his Chistmas at Angiers, and meaning thoutlie after to returne into Eng= land, he fent to the French king for letters of protection, which were granted, and fent to him in forme as followeth.

The tenour of the French kings letters of protection.

📆 V dosiicus rex Francorum, omnibus ad quos praentes litera peruenerint salutem. Nouerit vniuersitas vestra quòd nos recipimus in protectione custodia nostra totam terram Henrici regis Anglia charißimi fratru nostri,in cifmarinu partibus fitam, si contigerit eumin Angliam transfretare vel peregrè proficisci. Ita plane, vt quado balliui sui de terra transmarina nos requisserint, bona fide o sine malo ingenio eis constium o auxilium præftabimus, ad einfdem terræ defensionem & protectio-

Lewes king of France, to all those to whom these present letters shall come greeting. Know all ye that we have received into our protection & custodie all the lands of Henrie king of England our deare brother, lieng and being in the parts of this fide the fea, if it chance him to passe ouer into England, or to go any waie foorth from home, so that when the bailiues of his lands on this hither side the sea shall require vs, we shall helpe them and counsell them faithfullie and without male-engine for defense and protection of the same lands. Giuen at Nicens.

Shortlie after king Henrie returned into England from Pozmandie, and at Modfocke made his fonne Beffrey knight. This yeare pope Alcrander fent into all parts legats to fummon the bishops and prelates to a generall councell to be holden at Rome A generall in the beginning of the Lent in the yere next follow moned at moned at ing. Whereabout two legats came into England, Rome. the one named Albert de Suma, who had in commis fion to fummon them of England and Pozmandie: and the other called Petro de Santa Agatha, who was appointed to lummon them of Scotland, Ires land, and the Bles about the same : wherebyon obteining licence to patternough the king of Englands dominions, he was constrained to sweare upon the holic enangelists, that he should not attempt any thing in his legatihip that might be hurtfull to the king or his realme, and that he thould come and visit the king againe as he returned homewards.

This yeare on the fundate before the nativitie of S.John Baptiff, being the 18 of June, after the let. Ger.Dor. ting of the lunne, there appeared a maruellous light in the aire buto certeine persons that beheld the same. For whereas the new mone shone south verie faire with his homes forwards the east, streightwais Afrange the times have fine built fight about the opper home was divided into two, out of the the mone, him on the waie, surrending into his hands the 40 mids of which division a burning brand sprang by, calling from it a farre off coles and sparks, as it had bone of fire. The bodie of the mone in the meane time that was beneath, feemed to wrest and writh in resemblance like to an adder of snake that had beine beaten, and anon after it came to the old state at gaine. This chanced about a dozzen times, and at length from home to home it became blacke.

In September following, the mone being about and given binder the seale of the said earle of Parch, bare date in the moneth of September Anno Chri- 50 the summe happened, for the bodie thereof appeared as eclipse of the it were horned, Choting the horns towards the well connec as the mone doth; being twentie daies old. The relidue of the compatte of it was covered with a blacke roundell, which comming downe by little and little, threw about the borned brightnesse that remained, till both the hornes came to hang downe on either fide to the earthwards; and as the blacke roundell went by little elittle forwards, the hornes at length were turned towards the well, and so the blacknesse 60 palling awaie, the funne received his brightnelle againe. In the meane time, the aire being full of clouds of diverse colours, as red, vellow, græne, and pale, holpe the peoples light with more ease to oils cerne the maner of it.

The king this yeare held his Chillmalle at Wiln's Anno. Reg. 36 cheffer, at which time newes came abroad of a great R. Houed. wonder that had chanced at a place called Drenhale, 1 179 within the loadship of Derlington, in which place a aftrange from nine of the clocke in the morning, till the even tide, and then it fell downe with an hourible noise, so that as such as were thereabout, were put in great feare. That piece of earth with the fall was swallow part of the earth lifted it felfe by on high in appeas Swonder of rance like to a mightie tower, and so it remained the carth.

An.Reg.26. ed up, leaving a great depe pit in the place, as was to be frene many yeares after.

Touching thefe celestiall apparitions, the common boarine of philosophie is, that they be meere nas turall, and therefore of no great admiration. For of ecliples, as well fuch as are proper to the funne, as also those that are peculiar to the mone, the position ts not lo generallie deliuered, as it is constantlie belieuco. Foz the philosophers give this reason of e cliples.

radios Phæbi luna interiecta repellit, Nec sinit in terras claram descendere lucem. Quippe aliud non est quam terra atque aquoris umbra, Quasiforte ferit nocturna corpora luna, Eclipsin facit.

In somuch as observing them to be ordinarie accidents, they are overpated and nothing regarded. Howbeit Lucane maketh a great matter of celips fes, and of other strange sights preceding the blow Die battels betwæne Pompeie and Cefar; intimas 20 ting thereby, that prodigious wonders, and other rare and bnaccustonied accidents are lignifications of some notable event influing, either to some great personage, to the common-swealth, or to the state of the church. And therefore it is a matter worth the marking, to compare effects following with fignes and wonders before going; fince they have a dos drine in them of no finall importance. For not mas nie peares affer, the kings glozie was darkened on earth, nay his pompe and rotall fate toke end; a pre 30 diction whereof might be imposted by the extraosolo narie ecliple of the funne, a beautifull creature, and the ognament of the fkie.

Laurence archbilhop of Dublin, and Catholicus the archbishop of Tuamon, with five or six other Is rith bithops, and diverse both bithops and abbats of Scotland, patted through England towards the ger nerall councell, and withall take their oth, that they Sould not procure any damage to the king or realine of England. There went but onelie foure bishops 4 out of England, to wit, Hugh Putley or Puoley bi thop of Durham, John bilhop of Pozwich, Reige nold bilhop of Bath, and Robert bilhop of Pereford, before abbats: for the English bishops firmelie food in it, that there ought but foure bith. onlie to go forth of England to any generall councell called by the pope. This yeare Kichard de Lucie loed chefe in ffice of England gave over his office, and became a canon in the abbeic of Welliwoo or Lelnos, which he had founded, and built byon his owne ground, en 50 dowing it with great revenewes, and in Julie affer he died there.

King Penrie the father called a parlement at Windloze, at the which was prefent king Henrie the fonne, and a great number of loads, earles and bas rons. At this parlement, order was taken for partition of the realme, so that it was divided into foure parts, certeine fage personages being allotted buto cuerie part to governe the fame, but not by the name made ruler of Poskethire, authorised inflice there, as he that best biderstoo in those daies the ancient laives and customes of the realme. The same yeare, Ceffrey earle of Britaine by his fathers comman dement levied an armic, and palling over into Bats taine, walted the lands of Buidomer de Leons, and confireinco him to submit himselfe onto him.

The 18.day of August, the mone was eclipled, which was fiene of king Penrie and his companie as he The French rode all that night towards Douer there to meet the is commeth a French king, who was comming towards Engmadding to land to visit the tome of archbishop Thomas Bec het, as he had before time bowed. He landed at Douer the 22, day of August. There came ouer with him Henrie duke of Louaine, Philip carle of Flanders, Baldwin earle of Buines, earle William oc Pans beuille, and diverse other earles, loads, barons and knights; whome king Henrie was readie to receive at the water five, and the mozow after brought them with great honoz to Canturburie, where they ivere with due reverence and unspeakeable sop received of archbishop Richard, and diverse other bis shops there assembled together with the couent of Christes-church, and an infinit multitude of Pobles and gentlemen. The French king offered bpon the Ebe French tome of the fait archbilhop Thomas, a rich cup of gold; and gave to the monks there an hundled tuns of wine to be received pearelie of his gift for ever at Politie in France. Further he granted to the fame monks, that what soener was bought in his dominis ous of France to their ble, thould be free from toll, tallage, and pateng any maner of excise for the same. These grants he confirmed with his charter there. of, made & delivered to them by the hands of Hugh Butley fon to the bishop of Duresme that was his chancelloz. King Lewes hauing performed his bow, Polydor. and received manie rich gifts of king Henrie, retur ned home into France, and thostlie after cauting his fonne to be crowned king, religned the government to him (as by some writers appeareth.) About the Matth. Paris. fame time, Cadwallon prince of Wales, being Cadwallon brought before the king to make his answer to dis prince of uerfe acculations exhibited against him, as he returs ned toward his countrie bnoer the kings fafe conduct, was laid for by his enimies, and flaine, to the kings great flarloer, though he were not giltie in the matter. After this, king Benrie the father held his Anno Reg. 26. Christmasse at Potingham, and William king of R. Houed. Scotland with him.

The fame yeare fell discord betwirt the young king Discord be of France, and his mother and vncles, hir brethren, twirt the earle Theobald and earle Stephan, who thinking Frenchik. themselues not well vsed, procured king Henric the bles. forme to forme with them in freenothip, and to go over into England to purchase his fathers assistance in their behalfe against their nemue. Who being come ouer to his father, informed him of the whole mater, and did so much by his earnest suit therin, that before the featt of Cafter, his father went over with him into Comandie, and immediatlie byon their arrivall in those parts, the old French quæne, mother to the yong king Philip, with their brethren the faid earles, and manie other Poble men of France, came buto him, and concluding a league with him, delivered hostages into his hands, and received an oth to follow his counsell and addice in all things.

Herevpon king Penrie allembled a great armie, in purpole after Caffer to inuade the French kings dominions: but before any great exploit was made, he came to an enternew with the new king of France, betwirt Gifozs and Treodfunt, there parts R. Houch lie by gentle words, and partlie by threatnings which king Henrie vied for perfuation, the French king of inffices, albeit that Ranulse de Glanuille was 60 released all his indignation conceived against his mother and bucles, and received them againe into his fauour, coucnanting to allow his mother for ex uerie day towards hir expenses seven pounds of Paris monie, during his father king Lewes his life firme; and after his death, the thould intop all hir dower, except the callels which king Philip might reteine Kill in his hands . Also at this affemblie, king Denrie the father in the presence of the French king, The carle of received homage of ichilip earle of Flanders, and Fianders granted to him for the same a thousand marked of both homage filuer, to be received pearelie out of the checker at to the king London, to that in confideration thereof he thould of England. find five hundred knights or men of armes, to ferue the king of England for the space of 40, baies, then

J.J.,

1180

focuer

Richard de checle inflice of England deceaffeth.

t;¢

35

M. Palin A-

in lib. I.

A parlement at windfore.

Banuife De Sianuille.

Geffren carle of Witaine fon to king Denrie. Suidomer te Leong. The mone bilit the arch bishop 13cc= Bota tome.

C

focuer he should have warning given buto him.

Doccouer, the two kings at this affemblie concluded a league tegither, and whereas certeine lands were in controversie betwirt them, as the fee of That teau, Raoul, and other finall fees, if they could not a gree among themselves concerning the same, either of them was contented to commit the order thereof, and of all other controucrics betwirt them buto fix bilhops, to be chosen indifferentlie betwirt them, the one to chose them, and the other them.

Marth. Paris. Cailbourg Sowne.

In this yeare, oz (as the annales of Aquitaine fay) in the yeare last passed, Richard earle of Poiston subdued the Arong fortrelle of Tailbourg, which was sudged before that time inexpugnable: but earle Lib chard oppressed them that kept it so soze with streight fiege, that first in a desperate mod they issued forth, and affailed his people verie valiantlie, but yet neuerthelesse they were beaten backe, and forced to retire into their fortrelle, which finallie they lurrendied into the hands of earle Richard, who caused the 20 wals thereof to be raced. The like fortune chanced to divers other castels and fortresses that stood in rebellion against him within a moneth space.

Tailbourg belonged buto one Geffrey de Kancin, who of a proud and loffie formach practifing rebellion against duke Kichard, twhe this enterpasse in hand, and when he had atchined the fame to his owne contentation, he patted ouer into England, and was received with great triumph, pompe a magnificence.

was altered and changed, bicause manie naughtie and wicked persons had deuised water to counter: feit the fame to that the alteration thereof was verie necessarie, but yet greenous and chargeable to the pose inhabitants of the realme.

Anno Reg. 27. R.Houed. 1181

Matth, Paris.

W. Paruus. The forme of the kings

ged.

coine chan=

hing Henrie the father, whilest he was at Hauns after Christmasse made this ordinance, that euerie man being worth in gods to the value of an hunozed pounds Anionin, thould keepe one horte able knight or man of armes, as we may rather call them. Also that such as had goods worth in value from 40. pounds to 25. of the same monie, should at the least hanc in his house for his furniture an ha bergeon, a cap of sticle, a speare, and a swood, or bowe and arrowes. Furthermoze he ordeined, that no man might fell or late to gage his armour and weapon, but thould be bound to leave it to his next heire. When the French king and the earle of Flanders were advertised that king Henrie had made this or 50 dinance amongst his subjects, they gave commande ment that their people thould be armed after the like

Matth.Paris.

This yeare after Candlemaste, Laurence archbi thop of Dublin came over to the king into Rozman die, and brought with him the fon of Roderike king of Conagh, to remaine with him as a pledge, for performance of concuants passed between them, as the paiment of tribute and such like. The faid archbishop died there in Posmandic, wherebyon the king fent 60 Geffrey de Paic one of his chapleins, and chapleine also to Alexius the popes legat into Freland, to feize that archbishops see into his hands. He also sent John Lacie concidable of Chester, and Richard de Peake, to have the citie of Dublin in képing, which Dough Lacie had in charge before, and now was oil charged, bicause the king twhe displeasure with him, for that without his licence he had maried a daugh for of the king of Conagh, according to the manner

This peare also, Geffrey the kings baffard some, tho was the close of Lincolne, and had received the profits of that billsprifte by the space of seven years, and had his election confirmed by the pope in the feath of the Epithanie at Parlebildge, in piclence of the king and bishops renounced that preferment, of his owne free will. Within a while after the pove R. Houed. sent a freit commandement buto Richard archbie Mop of Canturburie, either to cause the same Geffrey by the confure of the church to renounce his mi ter, ozelle to take bpon him the ozder of pzeithod. Therefore byon god advice taken in the matter with his father and other of his especiall freends, ind: ging himselfe insufficient for the one, he was contented to part with the other; and therebyon wrote letters buto the faid archbilhop of Canturburie, in forme as followeth.

A letter of Geffrey the kings base sonne elect of Lincolne to Richard archbishop of Canturburie.

Enerabili patri Richardo Dei gratia Cantuari-enfi archiepifcopo apostolica fedus legato, Galfri-dus domini regis Anglia filius or cancellarius falutem or reuerentiam debitam ac deuotam.

Placuit maiestati apostolica vestra iniungere sanctitati, vi me certo tempore vocaretis ad suscipendum ordinem sacerdotis, 👉 pontificalis officij dignitatem. Ego verò confiderans quamplures episcopos maturiores ac prouectiores prudentia atate vix tanta administrationi sufficere, nec sine periculo animarum suarum sui officium pontisicatus ad perfectum explere, veritus sum onus importabile senioribus nithi imponere iuniori : About the same time, the forme of the kings coine 30 faciens have no ex leuitate animi, fed ob reverentiam facramenti. Habito itaque tractatu super eo cum domino rege patre meo dominis fratribus meisque rege & Pictauensico Britannorum comitibus: episcopis etiam Henrico Baiocensi, Frogerio Sagiensi, Reginaldo Batoniensi, Sesiido Cicestrensi, qui presentes aderant, aliter de vita o flatu meo disposui, volens patris mei obsequijs militare ad tempus, & ab episcopalibus abstinere : omne itaque ius electionis inde & Lincolnensem episcopatum spontanee, libere, quiete, co integre, in manu vestra pater samteresigno, tam electionem quam episcopatus absolutionem pofor service in the wars, and complet armour for a 40 sulans à volus, tanquam ametropolitano meo, & ad hoc abapostolica sede specialiter delegato. Bene vale.

> The king for his maintenance, now after he had religned his bishopzike, gave him 500, markes of yearelie rent in England, and as much in Pozmars die, and made him mozeover lozd chancelloz.

This yeare also after Caster, the kings of England and France came to an enternew togither, at a place in the confines of their countries called by foine waiters Vadum Sancti Remigij, on a mondate being the 17.0f April, in which allemblie of those two princes, the knights templers and hospitallers presented to them letters directed from pope Alexander buto all christian princes, advertising them of the The danger danger wherein the holie land food at that present, if of the holie specie remedie were not the somer prontoed. Where, land. fore he exharted them to addresse their helping hand towards the relecte thereof, granting unto all such as would enterpaise to go thither in person (to remaine there boon defense of the countrie against the infidels) great pardon, as to those that did contis nue there the space of two yeares, pardon of penance for all their lins, except theff, extortion, roberie, and blurie; in which cales restitution was to be made, if the partie were able to dwit; if not, then he thould be absolued as well for those things as for other. And those that remained one years in those parties were pardoned of halfe their whole penance due for all their finnes. And to those that went to visit the holie sepulchie, he also granted great pardon, as remission of their finnes, whether they came thither oz peraduenture died by the waie. He also granted his free indulgence buto those that went to warre against the common, the professed and open entinies of our religion in the holie land, as his predecessors the religion in the holie land, as his predecessors the paft; and he received likewife their wives, their chil been, their gods and pollellions broer the protection of S. Deter and the church of Kome.

Ji ho m

An. Reg. 27.

The two kings having heard the popes letters read, and taken god advice thereof, promifed by Gods favour Mostlie to provide convenient aid for reliefe of the holie land, and of the chillians as yet remaining in the fame. This was the end of their 10 communication for that time, and fo they departed, the French king into France, and the king of England into Pormandie.

In the meane time, by the king of Englands appointment, William king of Scotland went ouer into Rozmandie, and by the adulce and god admonition of king Henrie, he granted licence onto two bishops of his realine of Scotland, to wit, Aberdene and faint Andrewes, to returne into Scotland, whom he had latelie before banished, and driven out of his 20 realme. Pozeoner, as king Henrie laie at Hardet readie to faile oner into England, discord fell betwirt the king of France and the erle of Flanders, so that the king of England at defire of the French king returned backe, and came onto Gilozs, where the French king met him, and so did the earle of Fland. ers, betwirt whom boon talke had in the matter des pending in controversie, he made a concord, and then comming downe to Chirburge, he and the king of Scots in his companie passed ouer into Eng. 30 land, landing at Postelmouth the 26.0f Julie.

The king now being returned into England, 02 deined a Catute for armour and weapon to be had as monast his subjects here in this realine, which was thus. Euerie man that held a knights fee thould be bound to have a paire of curaffes, an helmet, with Thield and speare; and everie knight of man of arms Mould have as manie curalles, helmets, fhields and speares as he held knights fées in demaine. Enerie man of the lattie having goos or revenues to the 40 value of firteene marks, should have one paire of curalles, an helmet, a speare, and a thield. And everie free man of the laitie having goos in value worth ten marks, thould have an habergeon, a feele cap, & a speare; and all burgestes, and the whole communaltie of free men should have a wambais, a cap of Ofélcand a Incare.

Further it was ordeined, that everie man thus bound to have armour, thould be Twome to have the same before the feats of S. Hilarie, and to be true bn 50 to king Henrie Fitzempres, in defense of abome and of his realme they thould keepe with them fulf armour and weapon, according to his precept and commandement thereof had and made. And no man being furnished with such armour, should fell, pleage, lend, or other wife alien the fame, neither may his lood by any means take the same from him, either by wate of forfeiture, by diffreste or pleage, nor by any other means: and when any man died, having such armour, he chall leave it to his heire, and if his 60 heire be not of lawfull age to weare it into the field, then he that hath the cultodie of his bodie shall have the armour, and find an able man to weare it for him, till he come to age.

If any burgelle of any good tolune have more armour than he ought to have by this statute, he shall fell it or give it to some man that may weare it in the kings feruice. Po Jew might have armour by this tratute: but those that had anie, were appointed to fell the same to such as were inhabitants within the realme, for no man might fell or transport anie armour over the fea, without the kings licence . Foz the better erecution of which ordinance, it was order ned, that inquests should be taken by sufficient sue ross, what they were that were able to have armour by their abilitie in lands and gods. Alfo the It. would, that none should be swoone to have armour, except he were a free man of birth and bloud.

The fame yeare, the king being at Waltham, al Matt. Paris, figned an aid to the maintenance of the chaiftian fouldiers in the holie land, that is to wit, 42. thousand marks of filner, and five hundled marks of gold. Hugh Bolun other wife called Reuclocke the forme of Kanulfe the fecond of that name carle of Thefter, died this yeare, and was buried at Lieke. He lest be Bugbearle of hind him issue by his wife the countesse Beatrice Chefter. daughter of Richard Lacie load fuffice of England, Ran. Higd a sonne named Kanulse, who succeeded him, being the first erle of Thester, third of that name after the conquest. Besides this Kanulfe he had foure daughters by his faid wife ; to wit, Dand married to Da uid earle of Angus, Huntington and Balloway; Da= bell coupled with William Daubianic earle of A. rundell, Agnes married to William Ferrers earle of Derbie, and Paulle loined with Robert Duincie earle of Lincolne.

The 21. of Pouember, Roger archbiftop of Poske Thearchbifts died, who (when he perceived himselfe in danger of of yorke dedeath by force of that his last sicknesse) delivered crasseth. great lummes of monie onto certaine bilhops and other grave personages to be distributed amongst pore people: but after his death, the king called for the monie, and feized it to his vie, alleadging a fens tence given by the same archbilhop in his life time, that no ecclelialticall person might give any thing by will, except he deutled the same whilest he was in perfect health: yet the bilhop of Durham would not depart with foure hundred marks which he had receiued to diffribute among if the poze, alledging that he dealt the same awaie before the archbishops death, and therefore he that would have it againe, must go gather it by of them to whom he had distributed it. with he himselfe would in no wife do. But the king twhe no small displeasure with this undiscreet and fiver, infomuch that he feized the castell of Durham into his hands, and lought means to disquiet the faid bishop by diverse maner of waies.

The king held his Chilfmatte this yeare at Wincheffer, and afterwards failed over into Pozmandie, The b. paffeil bicause he heard that the king his sonne was gone over into to his brother in law king Philip, and began to prace Mormandie. tile efflones new trouble, which was true inded: but pet at length he came backe, and was reconciled to The B. a his his father and take anoth. that from thereeforth he fonne efficing his father, and toke anoth, that from thenceforth he reconcided. would never fwarue from him, not demand mote for his maintenance but an hundred pounds Anios nur by the date, and ten pounds a day of the fame mo. nie for his wife. His father granted this, and also co. uenanted, that within the tearme of one yeare he would give him the fervices of an hundred knights. Peuerthelesse all this did little amend the matter, for though he fet a new copie of countenance there? bpon, pet he reteined his old perverse purpose in his discontented mind, having learned that

Qui nescit fingere nescit regere. After this, king Henrie the father as a mediator betwirt the king of France, and the earle of Flanders touching controverties betwirt them did so much in the matter, that he fet them at one for that time.

About the same scason, king Henrie the father fent William de Pandeuille earle of Albemarle, Rog. Houed. and other amballadous buto the emperour Frede, rike, to intreat for his sonne in law the duke of Sar- The duke of onie, that he might be againe reffozed into his fauoz, Saponic, which could not be obteined : for he was alreadie condemned to erile, but yet thus much to pleasure the king of England the emperour granted, that fo mas nie as went with him out of their countrie, might refor armour.

baue no ars

Inordinance

turne againe at their pleasure, and that his wife the butches spand the is. of Englands daughter, thould intov hir doluzic, and be at libertie, whether the would remaine boon it, or follow hir hulband into erile, therefore when the date came that he must depart out of his countrie, he fet forward with his wife and chilozen, and a great number of the Pobles of his countrie, and finallie came into Pormandie, where he was right infullie received of his father in law king Penrie.

Shortlie after his comming thither, he gave lis cence to the Poble men that were come thither with him, to return home, and then he himselfe went into Spaine to vilit the bodie of S. James the apostle. his wife being great with thild, remained with hir father in Pormandie, and at Argenton the was des livered of a sonne. This yeare the Weldymen Que Kanulfe Poer thirife of Glocefferthire. King Henrie held his Chillmalle at Caen, with his thic fons, Henriethe king, Kichardearle of Poictow, and Bel 20 frey earle of Britaine. There was also Henrie onke of Saronie, with his wife and their children, befides the archbishops of Canturburie and Du blin, with other bishops earles and barons in great number.

Here would king Henrie the father, that his fon the king thoulo receive homage of his brethren Rie thard carle of Pointow, and Geffrey earle of Bil taine. The earle of Britaine did not faie at the that it was not convenient folong as their father liued, to acknowledge any supersocitie to their bed ther: for as the fathers inheritance was due to the clock some, so he claimed the lands which he held due to him in right of his mother. This deniall fo much offended his brother the king, that afterwards then Richard would have done homage, he would not receive it, wherepon Richard departed from the court in great displicature, t comming into Potdow, be in a readineffe to frand boon his lafegard, if his father or brethren thould come to purfue him. Hing Penrie the sonne followed him, set on by the earles and barons of Poictow, which for the Charpe and crus ell gouernement of earle Kichard, hated him mostal lic. Againe on the other live, the favourable courtes fie, fæmelie personage, and other noble qualities which they fair in the young king, moved them to take part with him against Kichard, and Choetlie af ter their brother Geffrey came with a great armie 50 in aid of his brother the king, in so much that earle Richard not knowing how to thist off the prefent danger, lent to his father for aid, who being berie for riem his mind to fee luch bunaturall dealing among his formes, gathered an armie and fet forward.

De had a little before travelled to fet them at one, in fomuch that there earle Richard belo a cas Well named Clarenale, which after the fathers decraffe ought to remaine buto king Henrie the fon, tpon his complaint thereof made, the father did so 60 much with the earle, that he surrendered itinto his fathers hands. Immediatlie after all the three formes came to Angers, and there sware to be obedient bus to their fathers will, and to ferue him against all men : ther bpon he appointed them a daie to meet at Dirabell, where the barons of Quien thould also be, buto whom king Henrie the sonne had swozne to aid them against earle Kichard. Herewith was earle Geffrey lent buto them to perfuade them to peace Carle Ceffrey and quietneffe, and to come buto Dirabell according to king Henrie the fathers appointment : but in steed of persuading them to peace (contrarie to his oth to offentimes received) he procured them to purfur the warre both against his father and his brother earle Kichard: and no maruell, for

Male farta gratia nunquam benè coalescit. Bing Benrie the sonne remaining with his father, thewed outwardlie that he withed for peace, but his meaning was all contrarie, and fo obtained licence of his father to go buto Limoges, that he might labour to reduce both his brother Deffrey, and the barons of Baien buto quietnelle. But luch diffembling was put in practile by king Henrie, that 10 when the father followed with an armie, and came bnto Limoges, in fied of receiving him with honoz, as it had beine their duties to have done, they that at him, and pearled through his oppermoft armor, so that both he and his sonne Richard were constructed ned to depart. Howbeit afterwards he entered that citie, and comming footh of it agains to talke with his sonnes, those within Limoges efflones revelled, fo that certeine of them within, that the horde where on king Henrie the father rode into the head. And if it had so chanced, that the horse in casting up his head had not received the blow, the arrow had light in the kings breff, to the great danger a perill of his person. Peither did his sonnes the king and his brother Geffrey go about to lie fuch an heinous attempt punished, but rather seemed to like well of it, and to mainteine those most malicious enimies of their souereigne load and father, for they is ined with them a gainst him, although king Henrie the sonne made countenance to be willing to reconcile his brother matter, but the earle of Polatow refuled, alledging 30 and the barons of Guien to his father by waie of fome agreement: but his double dealing was to ma. The difloiais nifest, although indeed he abused his fathers patience of the rong for a while, who was defirous of nothing more than king. to win his formes by forme courteous meanes, and therfore diverse times offered to pardon all offenses committed by his enimies, at the fuit of his some the king, who in dedoffered himfelfe now and then as an intreatour, but that was onelie to win time that his brother with such Brahanders and other souldibegan to fortifie his callels townes, that he might 40 ers as he had with him in aid, before the forces of the barons of Guien, might worke the more milchefe against their father and their brother earle Richard, in ivalling and destroieng their countries that stod Medfall on their lide.

In the meane time Richard the archbishop of Canturburie, and diverse other bishops and abbats both of England and Pormandie affembled togither at Caen, and in the abbeic thurth of S. Stephan pronounced the fentence of ercommunication against all those that oid hinder and impeach their purpose, which was to have peace and concord concluded betwirt the king and his formes, the fame formes onlis out of the faid fentence excepted.

Diverse thittes were made by king Henrie the sonne, and his brother earle Geffrey also to get monie for the paiment of their fouldiers, as spoiling of Chaines, and suchlike. But at length when things framed not to their purpole, and that the harme which they could do against their father was much lesse than they withed, if power had beine antwerable to their wides, king henrie the some through indigna, king henri tion and displeasure (as some write) fell into a gree leit fiche. uous licknelle in a village called Pertell, not farre from Limoges, where his father late at fiege.

At the first he was taken with an extreame fce ner, and offer followed a fore flire. Pow perceining himselse in danger of death, and that the physicians had given him over, be fent to his father (befter late his father than noner) confessing his trespasse committee as gainst him, and required of all fatherlie love to come t fee him once before he died. But for that the father thought not good to commit himselfe into the hands of luch ungratious persons as were about his sonne, be senthisking buto him in token of his blesting.

D)

ŧ٥

ħ

N.

the fendethta

The duchelle of Saxonic belivered of a fonne. Ranulfe 190= er flaine. Anno Reg. 29. 1183

Will, Paruus.

Palydor.

Ger.Dor.

Rog.Houed. war betwirt the bacthaen.

The father feketh to ap= peafe the qua= rell betwirt his fonnes.

fatthfullic,

and as it were a pleage to lignific that he had forate uen him his bunaturall doings against him. The fon receiving it with great humilitie, killed it, and fo ended his life in the presence of the archbishop of Burs ocaur and others, on the day of faint Barnabie the apostle. He vied (as some write) verie penitent and forowfull.

And thereas in his life time he had bowed to bes apen: tance hefore hig beath.

& Brange

fitteus deuo= report of our

make a fourneie into the holie land against Gods entimies, and taken boon him the croffe for that in- 10 tent, he delivered it but ohis familiar frænd Willi ant Parihall to go thither with it in his fread. Pozes over when he perceived present death at hand, he first confessed his sinnes secrettie, and after openly before fundrie bishops and men of religion, and received absolution in most humble wife. After this, he caused his fine clothes to be taken from him, and therewith sind of fuper= a heare cloth to be put boon him, and after tieng a cord about his necke, he faid buto the bishops and other that flood by him; I deliuer my felfe an bnwog 20 withou be true this and granous finner onto you the ministers of God by this coed, belieching our Loed Jelus Cheiff, " which pardoned the thefe confessing his faults on the " crosse, that through your praiers and for his great " mercies lake it may please him to be mercifull bu " tomy foule; therebuto they all answered, Amen. heis trawne Then he said buto them, Draw me out of this bed out of his bed, with this cord, and laie me on that bed Arawed with athes (which he had of purpole prepared) and as he a commanded to they did: and they laid at his feet and a pared to die, he willed his bodie after his decease to " be connected into Pozmandie, and buried at Rouen. And to after he had received the facrament of the box Dis beath. die and bloud of our Lord, he departed this life as a

M.Triuer.

The bodic of the youghing at Rouen, fore is faid, about the 28, peare of his age. Dis bodie after his death was conneted towards Rouen, there to be buried accordinglie as he had willed: but when those that had charge to conucie it finither were come onto the citie of Pauns, the bis 20 thop there and the cleargie would not luffer them to go any further with it, but committed it to buriall in bonourable wife within the church of faint Julian. Mhereof when the citizens of Rouen were advertifed, they were fore offended with that dwing, and Areight waies fent buto them of Hauns, requiring to have the corps delivered, threatening otherwise with manie earnest oths to fetch it from them by force. Therefore king Henrie, to let order in this matter, commanded that the copys of his forme the 50 king thould be delivered but othem of Roven to be buried in their citie, as he himfelfe had willed before his death. And so it was taken by and connected to Kouen, where it was efflones buried in the church of our ladie.

at his head two great square stones. Thus being pre-

Thus ended this young king in his flozishing youth, to whome through his owne full defects long life was infilic denied, fith he delighted to begin his genernement with unlawfull attempts, as an other by wisingfull violence to pull the scepter out of his hand. He is not put in the number of kings, bicause he remained for the more part buder the governance of his father, to that he rather bare the name of hing as appointed to reigne, than that he may be faid to have reigned in deed. So that here by the waie a noi table observation dothoccurre and offer it selse to be noted of bs; namelie, that even princes chiloren, though bome to great excellencie, and in high degree of dignitie, are to confider with themselves, that not withstanding their statelie titles of souereigntie, they have a dutie to discharge unto their parents, which if it be neglected, and that in place thereof office bedience is inbitituted, God himselse (when politike lawes provide not to punith fuch offences) will take the cause in hand, 4 will power bengeance boon such bugratious children. For he will be true of his word both in bleffing and curffing, in bleffing the outifull chilo with long life and happie dates, and in curlling the obstinate and froward with short life and bufor tunate dates, according to the tenure of his law. Af this man had lived in the old Romans time, when a ged persons were so reverenced and honoured (much more parents) he had beene cut off in the prime of his disobedience, and present death had beene infliced by on him as a due and deferued reward; which Iuucnal noteth ercellentlie well in these words, Credebant hoc grande nefas, morte piandum, Si iuuenis vetulo non assurrexerat, of si Barbato cuicung puer licet ipfe videret Plura domi farra, & maioris glandis aceruos, Tam venerabile crat pracedere quattuor annis, Primag par adeò sacra lanugo senecta.

Bing Denric (after his conne the king was thus dead) inforced his power more earnealie than before to winne the citie and castell of Limoges which Limoges renhe had belieged, and at length had them both furrens decotoking dered into his hands, with all other castels and places thenric. of Arength kept by his enimies in those parts, of the which some he furnished with garifons, and some he caused to be lated flat with the ground.

There role about the same time occasion of Arife and variance betwirt king Henrie and the French king, about the enioteng of the countrie lieng byon Gilors, called Heulqueline, on this fide the riner of Meulqueline, Hept, which was given onto king Henrie the fonne, in consideration of the marriage betwirt him and quene Wargaret the French kings litter. For the Frenchking now after the death of his brother in law king Henrie the Conne, required to have the fame refrozed buto the crowne of France : but king Henrie was not willing to part with it. At length The kings of they met betwirt Trie and Gilozs to talke of the England and matter, where they agreed that quene Pargaret francetalke the without of the late deceased king lacurio the for the widow of the late occeased king Henrie the son, Mould receive yearelie during hir life 1750 pounds of Aniouin monie at Paris, of king Benrie the father and his heires; in consideration whereof the Chould release and quit claime all hir right to those lands that were demanded, as Teulquefine and o thers. Shortlic after, Beffreperle of Britaine came to his father, and submitting himselfe, was reconciled to him, and allo to his brother Richard earle of Poictow. Also I find that king Penrie at an enterniew had betwirt him and the French king at their accustomed place of meeting betwirt Trie and Gifors on faint Picholas day, did his homage to the fame French king for the lands which he held of him on that side the sea, which to do till then he had refufed. The fame yeare king Henrie held his Chrismas at the citie of Mauns.

When the king had let the French king and the earle of Flanders at agreement for the controller lie Absolon against his owne naturall father, sæking 60 shat chancevertwirt them about the lands of Aermendois, he patted through the earle of Flanders countrie, and comming to Willand, twke this alio failed over into England, landing at Dover the tenth day of June, with his daughter the dutches of The ducheffe Saronie, who was afterwards belivered of a forme of Saxonie at Wincheffer, and his pulband the duke of Saronie deinered of came allo this pears into England, and that diffullie a fonne. came also this yeare into England, and was totfullie received and honourablie interteined of the thing his father in lam.

And thereas the archbithop of Colen came over into England this yeare to visit the tome of Ajos of Colen. mas late archbishop of Canturburie, the King trauelled to make an agreement betwirt him and the Saroniff duke touching a certeine variance depen-

Immen fat. 13.

Anno Reg. 30

1584

The archbiff.

Hugh Pos nant.

ding betweet them, wherin the king did so much, that the archbithop forgane all iniuries patt, and to they were made freends. Also by the counsell of the same archbishop the king sent Hugh Pouant archdeacon of Lifeur and others, amballadours from him buto pope Lucius, that by his helpe there might be made fome waie to obteine a pardon for the faid buke, and licence for him to returne into his countrie. Those that were fent demeaned themselves so discreetly in doing their mellage, that the emperour comming where the pope then was, that is to say, at Merona in Italie, at the earnest suit of the said pope was contented to release all his cuill will which he bare towards the duke, pardoned him for all things patt, and licenced him now at length to returne home into his countrie, his condemnation of exile being clærlie reuoked.

Death of Poble men.

The duke of Saxonie par=

poned and renotice out of Thegonerne=

There died this yeare fundzie honozable perso nages, as Simon earle of Puntington fon to Simon earle of Porthampton, after whole deceale the 20 hing gaue his earledome buto his brother Dauid, 03(as Radulfus de Diceto faith) bicause the said Si. mon died without illue, the king gave the earledome of Huntington buto William king of Scots sonne to earle Benrie that was sonne to king Dauto. Also the earle of Marwike died this yeare, and Ahomas Hit; Bernard logo chefe inflice of the fogeffs, which rome Alaine de Penill had inivied before him. Pow after the death of this Thomas Fitz Bernard, the reas divided, to cueric quarter he appointed foure inflices, two of the spiritualtie, and two knights of the tempozaltie, belide two generall wardens that were of his owne fernants, to be as furuefers above all other fores Hers of vert and venilon, whole office was to lee that no disorder nor spoile were committed within any grounds of warren contrarie to the affiles of fo reffs. Diverse prelates died this yeare also, as foure bishops to wit. Gerald surnamed la Ducelle bishop of Salisburie, and Bartholomet of Erceffer.

Welfoes thele, diverle abbats, fon the 16. of Febenarie died Richard archbishop of Canturburie in the 1 1. yeare after his first entring into the gouernment of that fee. His bodie was buried at Cantur burie. De was noted to be a man of entil life, and wafed the gods of that thurth inordinatlie. It was reported that before his death there appeared to him a vilion, which lato; Thou half walted the goos of the co church, and I chall rot the out of the earth. Where, 50 bpon he twke fuch a feare, that he vied within eight daics after. Then Baldwin tho before was bishop of Wlosceller increded him, he was the 40. archbis Mop that had ruled the church of Canturburie. The king and bilhops procured his election not without much ado: for the monks pretending a right there to, were loze against it. It is reported of him, that after he was made a white monke, he never eat fleth to his lives end. On a time an old woman met him, and asked him if it were true that he never eat 60 cc anymaner of flesh; It is true said he. It is false cc quoth the, for I had but one cow to find me with, and thy fervants have taken hir from me. Therebuto he answered, that if it so were, the thould have as good a cow restored to hir by Gods grace as hir owne was. The same time also Dargaret the wife of the late decealed king Henrie the son, returned into France to hir mother king Philip, and was after toined in mariage with Belaking of Bungarie. But after long digression to returne againe to our purpose. The king being advertised of the de-Arudion and spoile which the Welshmen dailie did practice against his subjects, both in their persons and substance, astembled a mightic armie, and came with the fame onto Worceffer, meaning to inuade the enimics countries. But Kes ap Griffin fearing his pullance thus bent against him and other the leas bers of the Wielthmen, came by fascconduct buto Worcester, and there submitting himselfe, sware for altie to the king, and became his liegeman, promis fing to bying his sonne and nephues buto him as pleages. But then (according to his promife) he mould have brought them, they refused to go with him, and to the matter refted for a time.

After this, king Penrie held his Chissmalle at Windfore, and the same yeare Heraclius the patriarch of Jerusalem, and Roger matter of the house of Beraclius po S. Johns of Jerusalem came into England, to triarch of Jerusalem. make fuit onto king Penrie for aid against the Saracens that dailie wan from the chistians, townes and holds in the holie land, taking and killing the people most miserablie, as in the description of the holie land may more plainelie appeare, where the dow ings of Saladine the Saracen are touched. The patriarch made earnest request onto the king, proffering him the keies of the citie of Jerusalem, and of the holie sepuldize (with the letters of Lucius the third then pope of Kome) charging him to take opon him the fournie, and to have mind of the oth which before time be had made.

The king deferred his answer for a time, and cal a council of ling a councell of his loads togither at Clerkenwell, Clerkenwell, on the 15. of Appill, asked their adulce in this matking divided his forests into sundrie quarters, and 30 fer: who declared to him, that as they take it, he might not well depart to far out of his realme and o. ther dominions, leaving the same as a prep to his ex nimies. And wheras it was thought by some, that he might appoint one of his sonnes to take bpon him that iournie, pet bicause they were not as then with in the realme, it was judged that in their ablence there was no reason thy it should be so decreed.

Howbeit in the meane time boon licence granted Baldwin by the king, that to manie might go as would, Bald- archbithop of Cheffer, Walran bilhop of Procheffer, Joceline 40 win the archbilhop of Canturburie preached, and er of Canturhosted men to take boon them the croffe to effectual, teth men to lie, that a great number receiving it, fullie purpoled go to warre to go on in that iournie. At length the king gave an egainst the Iwer to the patriard, excusing himselfe in that he Saracens. could go, for he declared that he might not leave his land without keeping, being in danger to remaine as a prey to the robberie and spotle of the French men: but he offered to give large fummes of gold five thou and filter to fuch as would take byon them that bot fandmarks age. With this answer the cardinall was nothing faeth Genu pleased, and therefore said; Wie seeke a man and not monie: euerie duistian region well nære sendeth "an. Higd bs monie, but no countrie fendeth bs a prince; and therfore we require a prince that needth monic, and not monie that needth appince. But the king fill alledged matter for his ercuse, so that the patriarch bevarted from him comfortleffe, and greatlie discontented in his mind: whereof the king having know ledge, and intending somewhat to recomfort him with sweet and pleasant words, followed him to the fea fide. But the moze the king thought to fatilife the patriarch with words, the more inroth and discontene ted he the wed himselse to be; in so much that at the relative said but o him, leither to hast thou reigned glow of the pair riouslie, but hereaster thalt thou be forsaken of him, arch to the thom thou at this time for lakelt. Confider of him, king. and remember what he bathgiven thee, and what thou, hall yelded to him againe, how first thou wast false,, to the king of France; and after finedit archbishop " Becket, and now lattlie thou for lakest the protection ,, of Chiftes faith.

The king was firred with these woods, and faid ,, buto the patriarch, Though all the men of the land, were one bodie, and spake with one mouth, they burst , not

and inter fuch words against me . Po wonder (faid the patriard) for they love thine and not the; that is to far, they love thy temporall gods, and frand in ce feare of the for lotte of promotion, but thy foule they co loue not. And when he had to fato, he offered his head to the hing; fateng, Doby me enen as thou diddeft by archbiffion Becket, for all is one to me, either to ce be flaine here in Europe of a wicked chaiffian, og in c the holie land by a Saracen, for thou art worse than a Saraccu, and thy people follow the prey and spoile 10 and not a man. The king kept his patience, and faid, co I may not go out of my land, for if I should, mine come fonnes would rife and rebell against me . Po maruell (faid the patriarch) for of the divell they came, and to the divell they thall. And thus he deparce ted from the king in great displeasure. Thus have some written; but by others it appeareth that the par mentinanho triarch remained here till the king went over into Domanoie himselfe, in companie of whom the par c triarch went also (as after thall appeare.)

This yeare the last of Warth, king Henrie made his fonne John knight, and Mostlie after fent him ouer into Ircland, of which countrie he had made him king. At his comming into Ireland, he was ho nourablie received of the archbishop of Diveline, and other noble men that had beine fent thither bes forehim. The king allowedhim great abundance of treasure, but he having learned that

Non minor est virtus quam quarere parta tueri, keeping it in his coffers (as one now come into a 30 Arange place, and not knowing what he chuld want) would not depart with it so frelic amongst his foul. diers and men of warre as they loked for : by reason thereof their service was such, that in diverse confliashelost manie of his men, and at length was driven through want of convenient aid, to returne againe into England, having appointed his capteins and fouldiers to remaine in places most exper dient for the defense of that countrie. I But here

In carth quake.

Rathiunge=

lic tather.

R.Houed.

John the Bings lanne made king

ef Trelano.

Ger.Dor.

On the mondaie in the weeke before Caffer, chanced a fore earthquake thorough all the parts of this land, such a one as the like had not beene heard of in England Athens the beginning of the world. For Nones that laic couched fast in the earth, were remov ued out of their places, stone houses were overtheorem, and the great church of Lincolne was rent the pairiorch palle oner in= 10 France.

The kings mellagetohis fonne carle Bichard.

Erle Bichard father.

Rog. Houed. Particular and not geno reil, ianth from the top downwards. The day nert after this terrible wonder, the king 50 The king and and the patriarch with the bishop of Durham and a great fort of other Poble men of this realme, palfed the feas from Douer to Willand, and forode forth towards Pormandie, where immediatlie upon his comming thither he raised a volver, and sent word to his sonne Richard earle of Polaton (which had fartified the townes and castels of Poictou as gainst him, and taken his brother Geffrey puloner) that except he delivered by into his mothers hands to chastise him with an iron rod, and bying him bu der obedience smallie to his ease. Apon this message carle Richard being somewhat better adulled obeied his fathers commandements in all points, rending by into his mothers hands the earloome of Poicou, and comming to his father as an obedient sonne, thewes himselfe readie to serve him at commande ment with a glad and willing mind. Some after this, and about the featenth hours of the day, the funne luffered a generall ecliple, to that no part of it appear red, and ther with followed great thunder with light, ning and fore tempelt, with the violence whereof both mon and beatts were deffroied, and manie how les burned.

Shortlie after this, the kings of England and France met and communed togither for the aiding of them in the holie land, and they promifed inded to fend thither both men and monie: but the patriarch made small account thereof, for he was much decet ued of that which he hoped to have brought to patie, which was, either to have got the king of England, 02 one of his fonnes, or fome other man of great author ritie with him into the holie land : but bicause that would not be, he departed from the court berie fogrowfull and fore displeased, so that it may be thought. that then (and not before his departure out of Eng. land) he spake his mind so plainlie but o the king (as before pæ haue heard.)

Poseouer, about this time king Henrie obteined Anno Reg. 32. of pope Arbane the third, that he might crowne which of his sonnes it should please him king of Treland, in token of which grant and confirmation, the faid pope fent buto him a crowne of peacocks feat 20 thers, after a feat maner wouen in with gold.

This yeare the king held his Challmalle at Danfrount, and shortlie after came to a communication with the French king, at the which he toke a folemne oth that he would beliver the ladie Alice the French kings lister (whome he had as pet in his custodie) buto his some Richard erle of Postou in mariage. For the which mariage to be had and folemnised, the French king granted to deliver but the faid Riv thard the towne of Gifors, with all that which his fas ther king Lewes promifed unto king Penrie the sonne (latelie deceassed) in marriage with quene Pargaret the wife of the same Penrie, receiving an oth thereto, neuer to make anie claime or chalenge to the fame towne and lands.

king Henrie (after he had thus concluded and King Henrie finished his affaires with the French king) returned to England. backe into England in Paie, and then was Hugh Ger.Dor. prior of Witham instituted bishop of Lincolne as Hugh prior of ter that the lethere had beine boid and without any witham made of yearnay read more at large in the historic of 40 lawfull governour almost the space of seaventeene bishop of Linzgeland.

Jeland. peares. This Hugh was reputed a verie godlie and vertuous man . Befoze him Walter Constance was nominated to that lee, but bicause he was made archbishop of Rouen before he was invested in the church of Lincolne, he is not accounted in number of the bishops of Lincolne.

Poseouer king Denrie Gostlie after his returne at this time into England, affembled a great armie, and went with the same to Caerleill, in purpose to have entred Balloway, and there to have chassised Rouland load of that countrie, tho was sonne to The thicd the sonne of Fergus, for the inturies done to his coline germains, namelie to Duncane sonne to Bilbert, who was some to the same Fergus, in spor ling him and the relique (after the decease of the faid Gilbert) of their parts of inheritance, blurping the whole to himselfe. But as the king was now readie to inuade his countrie, Rouland came to him, and bled luch meanes under pretente of latisfaction, that the whole countrie of Poistou, he would furclic come 60 he made his peace with the king, who therebpoir brought backe his armie, and did no more at that

> About the same time came newes to the king, that hugh Lacte Hugh Lacie was flaine in Ireland by an Irith flainc. gentleman that was his confederate (or rather by a labourer, as in the Irith historie you may read) whereof the king was nothing force, bicause the fame Hugh was growne to so high degree of purify fance in that countrie, that he refused to obeie the kings commandement when he fent for him.

It is to benoted, that when king Penrie had conquered the most part of Ireland, and fet the court trie in some gwo order, after his comming from thence, such capteines as he lest there behind him, were inlarge his pollellions in greland.

1186

King Penrie

not foric for the beath of

The beath of Geffrey the kings fonne.

were notible, but fill did what they could to inlarge the confines which were committed to their governance: but among ft them all this Pugh Lacie was the cheefelf, in fomuch that after the death of Kichard Dugh Lacies carle of Strignile, the king made him gouernour of the countrie in place of the faid earle, by reason thereof he lo inlarged his possessions, that within a while he became decadfull, not onelie to the entinies, but alfo to his affociats, as to fuch Engliff capteins as were abloing in Ireland byon gard of the Eng. 10 lift frontiers. For if any of them disobeied his commandement, he would not flicke to chaffife them at his pleature, so that by such meanes he sæmed rather to conquer the countrie to his owne ble, than to the kings. Therein he dealt not so directlie og discreetlie us he might; for,

Homines volunt allici non impelli.

He had also totned himselse in mariage with a daughter of the king of Anletter, not making king Henrie printe to the fame. Wherebpon the king has 20 uing lundzie informations presented to him of such his prefumptuous demeanour, commanded him by his letters to returne home, and come before his prefence, which to do (as before I have faid) he refuted, by reason thereof he confirmed the suspicion which was conceined of him, to rife bpon no vaine contes cures, and therefore the enill that came to him was nothing lamented of king Henrie, who with god cause was highlie offended towards him for the contempts and confiderations aforefaid.

This yeare Beffrey the kings fon tho was earle of Bittaine died at Paris, and was buried in the fame citie, leaving behind him (besides two daughe ters) one onlie some as then in his mothers wombe, of thom the was deliucted in the night of the feath of Gaffer next infuing hir hulbands death: he was named Arthur, and succeeded his father in the earles dome of Britaine. His fathers death was occasio ned (as men indge) by a fall which he caught at a iour. nie for he was fore bruifed therewith, and never had 40 his health, but finallie fell into a flir and fo bieb.

About this leason pope Arbane wrote unto Bald. win archbishop of Canturburie, granting him li cence to build a church at Alkinton, in honour of S. Stechan and Momas Becket now reputed a marty, and that the fourth part of the offerings which came to the bor of Thomas the marty: Chould be alfigned to the vie of the monks, an other fourth part to the buildings of that church, and an other fourth remaining he might referue to himselfe to bestow at his pleasure. But within a while after, at the suit and supplication of the prior and conent of Canturburie (tho liked nothing of the former partition) the pope fent letters of prohibition to the fato archbis thop, that he thould cease from building of the fore mentioned thurth, bicaule the building therof would be prejudiciall to the church of Canturburie.

About the same time also king Henrie gave his colen the ladie Ermengard (who was daughter to 60 Richard Aicount Beaumount) in marriage buto Willam king of Scotland, cauting the archbithop of Canturburie to toine them togither in the bond of matrimonic within the chappell at Woolfocke, where he kept great cheere in honour of that marriage for the space of foure dates togither. And further be gave at the fame time buto the king of Scots the castell of Coenbourgh; and the king of Scots streit, wates gave it buto his wife the forlate Ermingare, as a portion of hir dower, augmented with an bunozed pounds of lands by the years, and 40. knights

The French king required to have the cultodie of the infant Arthur, heire to Geffrey earle of Bie taine: but king Benrie would in no wife grant thereto. Therefore he fent Walter archbilhop of Amballabous Rouen , William be Mandeuille earle of Albe fent to the marle, and Kanulfe de Clandeuille lood cheefe iuftice French hing of England to the French court, to talke with king Philip about that matter, fo that king Philip having heard them, was contented to fale from attemps ting forcetill the feast of S. Pilarie . But in the meane time it chanced, that one fir Richard de Wal Sir milian les a knight of the realme of France went about to be walter, fortifie a caffell in a village that belonged to him called Walles, lituated betwirt Trie & Bilogs. Wherebpon Penrie Mere (constable of Gilozs bnder Wild liam earle of Albemarle) was nothing content therwith, and therefore got a companie togither, & went footh to diffurbe the worke. Apon this occasion the fernants of the fato fir Richard de Walles came forth, and encountred with him in the field, in fomuch that Kafe the sonne of fir Kichard de Walles was flaine, and the relidue that were with him fled, many of them being fore beaten and wounded.

When the French king was informed hereof, he The king of caused all the kings of England his subteas, that Englands could be found within his countries and dominion fabicasare of France to be apprehended, and their gods leized. The flewards, ballifes, cofficers then of king Hen: The french rie, did the like by the French kings subjects that subjects me thanced to be at that present within the king of Englands countries, on that surther side of the sea. But within a little while after, the French king let the English subjects at libertie, and so likewise did the B. of Englands officers releafe the French lubicas.

At this time king Penrie held his Chilimatie at Anno Reg. 33 Gilford, and Mortlie after came one Danuianus a Subdeacon cardinall, and Hugh de Pouant from the Daniania court of Kome, sent as legats from pope Arbane a cardmail into Ireland, that they might crowne earle John the kings sonne king of that land . But king Benrie king Dennie made a delate therein, taking the legats with him patteth ours into Pomandie, wither he failed at the fame time, into Pos and landing at Willand, he went from thence into mandic. Pozmandie, and Moztlie after came to a communi cation with the French king, at a place called Vadum Sancti Remigij, there after much talke they could not agree, by reason the French king demanded things bureasonable, and so they departed with out any thing concluded fauing a truce till after Whitfuntide.

About the same time, the citie of Zerusalem was part to be given to the poze, and the other fourth part 50 taken by Saladine the chefe prince of the Sara, fillen, cens. Wherebpon much conference was had among the chailtian painces for the fuccoring of those chailtians, which as yet held and defended other pieces in the holie land, so that by publishing of the popes buls, manie toke on them the croffe : and amongst other Richard the sonne of king Henrie (without anie licence obteined of his father) received the fame, bow ing to go thither out of hand, and to fight against Gods enimies to the ottermost of his power.

In the meane time the grudge Mill increased betwirt king Henrie and Philip the French king, part . Out of the lie for one cause, and partie for an other, but special annales of lie one thefe occasion was for that earle Richard des France wat ferred the durings of his homage unto king Philip ten by Ab for the dutches of Poicton, which by his fathers appointment he now inivide and held. The French king to preuent his enimics, immediatlie boon the expiring of the truce railed a power, and entring into the dominions belonging to king Henric, walted the countrie till be came onto Chateu Raoul : about which castell cillo he forthwith planted his siege.

When king Henrie was advertised hereof, he raised his power also, and togither with his sonne earle Michael came with all spico to succeur his peo-

Redin frau,

Ger. Dor.

The ladie Ermengard the bicount 25caumonts baughter,ina: ried to Toilli= am king of Dcoto.

Caffell of C: dembourgh.

Ger.Dor.

A truce granted.

ple, and to face his caffell from the hands of his enimics. Pow when he approched nière unto the place, he pitcht downe his tents over against the one side of the French campe, and earle Richard on the other, lo that they were readie to affaile the French king on both fives at once, but before they came to ioine bat, tell, by the mediation of a cardinall (as some write) ni(as other faie) through meanes made by the earle of Flanders, the matter was taken up . For earle Richard through perfualion of the fato earle of Flan- 10 ders came to the Frenchking, and agreed with him, before that his father king Henrie was resolued of any such matter for his part, so that he was now in a maruellous perpleritie, calmost to sæke what was belt to ow, as a man fearing his owne luertie, by reafon of militrust which he had in his sonne Kichard: but pet at the length through humble fuit made by his faid forme unto the French king, a truce was granted by the space of two yeares.

Carle Richard, affer the matter was thus taken 20 by, went into France with the French king, of thom he was so honoured whilest he was there, that they kept one table at dinner and supper in the daie time, and (as was faid) one bed ferued them both to flæpe on in the night.

In the meane time king Henrie hearing of all this, fell into great suspicion whereto this great familiaritie betwirt the French king and his sonne would tend, and doubting the likelieft, fent for him Erle Bichard to returne onto him. But carle Richard perceining 30 guethhis fa- his father to miftruff his loialitie, gaue faire words, ther faire and promised to returne with all convenient speed. Dowbeit he ment an other matter, and lo departing from the French court, came to Chinon, where he got into his hands a great portion of his fathers treat Defeiseth bp- fure that was kept there, against the will of him on his fathers that had the cultodie of it, and taking it thus awaie with him, he began to fortifie his castels and townes within his countrie of Poictou, and clearlie refused to come backe to his father for a time, although at 40 length forfaking the counsell of naughtie men, he turned home buto him, and humblie submitted himselfe, in such wife as to his outie apperteined. And for the more affurance therof, he renewed his fealtie, in receiving an oth boon the holie evangelists. Which done, king Henrie went into Butaine with an armie, and wone the castell of Mountreleis by ficge, which one Penrie de Lions, and one Buinemer his brother had gotten into their hands, after the decease of Gestrey earle of Butaine.

This years the twentie of October, the citie of Chichester was almost wholie consumed to ashes by mildrance of fire. The head thurth with the bishops palace, and the houses of the canons were burnt e uen downe to the ground. After this king Henrie held his Christmaste at Caen, from whence he went to Warflet, and there taking the fea paffed over into returneth into England. The French king hearing by and by of his departure, assembled a great armie, and threatned to destroic the countrie of Poymandie, and other 60 lands on that five the fea, except king Henrie would deliner into his hands the towne of Gilozs, with the appurtenances, or cause his sonne Kichard earle of Poidon to take to wife his litter Alice, according to his promise.

When king Henrie was advertised hereof, he palleth againe turned with all fpeed into Poomandie, that he might monde for timelie resistance, if the French king provide for timelie relitance, if the French king came forward to innade his dominions. About the Peamenemes felfe same time came newes out of the holie land, that Saladine after the winning of Jerusalem, pur, fued his victoric with fuch fucceste, that he had taken from the christians the more part of all other tolons and Arongths within the land. These nowes were no thing pleasant to the christian princes, and namelie the two kings Henrie and Philip læined forowfull for the same, and therefore came to an enterview to gither on the 21. Day of Januarie betwirt Tric and In enterulem Gilors, where the archbithop of Tire was present, between the through whose earnest exhaptation the two kings two kings. were made frænds, and the fame day received the crosse at his hands in purpose to make a tourne ie to. The two gither against those Saracens that had come fuch kings receine injuries to the chaiffian name. And for a difference the croffe. that one nation might be knowne from an other, the Trench French king and his people twke byon them to ware red iveare read croffes, the unity or consumers and white, white croffes; but the earle of Flanders and white, who flee weare read croffes, the king of England and his croffes

Herewith they departed alunder, each one repais mingo grane. ring to their countries to pronide their armies, and make them in a readinelle to let forward by a day towards this necessarie tournie. Ling Henrie comming to Chinon, by adulte of his councell, ordeined Thaid grane that everie one of his subjects should peeld a tenth too to them in part of his revenues and moveable gods for that the holic land, neare towards the sid of them in the holic land, wil. Paruus, yeare towards the aid of them in the holie land (come of that yeares growth ercepted, and also all armour, bootes, bokes, apparell, ornaments of chappels, and pretious fromes, which thould not come in the rate of gods now tared, noz be charged with this paiment.) Mozeover those knights and men of warre that were appointed to go in this fourneie paied nothing, but had that monie also towards their furniture, which were gathered of their tenants and farmers, howbeit burgeffes and others that twke boon them the croffe without licence of their loads, paicd his tenth, fo that none of them went fræ.

There were also god orders denised, both for the God orders advancement of Gods glozie, and the relecte of the and discipling common-wealth, as that no man thould tweare in instituted. any outragious maner, that no man thould plate at cards, dice or tables, and that no maner of person as ter Caffer hould weare any costlie furs oz cloth of scarlet, not that men should be to have their tables ferued with more than two diffes of meat at one mcale, noz fhould have their apparell cut, tagged, o: laced : and further, that none of them thould take any women forth with them in this tourneis, ercept fuch a landrelle, of whome there might not growe as nie fulpicion of wanton life. It was also ordeined, that the monie of fuch as died in this fournie, should go towards the finding and maintenance of their feruants and of poze people, and towards the aid of the chaiffians in the holie land. Poseouer, the pope granted that all those that went forth in this fournie, repenting and confesting their sinnes, should be abfolued and pardoned of the same. The king having The king rea thus taken order for his businesse in the parts on the turneth into further live the fea, came now over into England England. againe, landing at Winchelsey on a saturday the thirtith day of Januarie, and calling a councell togi a councell ther at Saitington, which is eight or nine miles from helben at Porthampton, he there declared that orders he had Gaitington. taken for his fournie into the holie land. Where upon Ger. Dor. the bilhops of Porwich and Lincolne, and a great number of other people take byon them the crosse at the preaching of the archbishop of Canturburie, and the bishop of Rochester.

This done, king Henrie toke order also for the les tileng of the tenth, as well here in England, as he A tenth leuted had done in the parts subject to him on the surfeer five the fea. He also fent Bugh bishop of Durham, and other both spirituall and temporall persons, buto William king of Scots, to gather the tenth like wife within his countrie, but he met them betwirt Wark The king and Brightham, and would not luffer them to enter of Scota into Scotland, but he offered to give but o the king of worda.

The English

Anno Reg. 34. king henric

King Denrie mandic. Polydor.

from the calt parig.

C

а

11

The god meaning of the two kings tisappointed. Polydor.

" where he

thall be fullic

& fufficient=

ite answered.

Horat in art, pset.

England in recompense of the tenths, and for to have againe his castels, the summe of 5000. marks offilmer, which could not be accepted. The French king likewife gathered the tenths in his countrie towards this intended fournic. But by the working of fome wicked spirit (as we may well thinke) which enuted the advancement of the chaffian commons wealth, that god meaning of the two kings was broken and disappointed : for the peace latelie concluded betwirt them continued not long buutolated.

The French writers impute the fault thereof buto Englishmen, and the English writers laie it to French men. The French waiters lay, that earle Riv thard the fon of king Henrie in breach of the league, made warre upon kielmond earle of Tholouze. The English writers reprove the French king as a wicked man, in that he thould of purpole breake the peace and move warre against king Henrie, to with viale him from going to make warre against the bent and inclined. Such is the maner of manie was ters, who more affectionat to the love of their countric than to the truth, ow not observe the law of histories in their writings, but rather inucie one against another in a beatling and reprouing maner.

Tramples bereof are more than by any politic litic may be remembred, and namelie for breuitie fake George Buchavan in the 8. boke of his Sco. tish historic veric reprochfullic speaketh of Richard Grafton (a right reuerend man whiles he liued and 3 of entier name also being dead) charging him with ignorance, and the report of a thamelettelier. Whose cafe, bicause it is not so convenient to be handled in this place as els there, we will remit to the reigne of * Coward the third, in whole time John Baltoll was king of Scots, and clove him (as well as we can) from a Scotiff flander. Another crample also we have, and that most notozious, of Gabriel Prareolus the Jesuit, who having never bane in Eng. eth not to fav that the translation of the English bi ble bath in it a thousand faults. D Angular and insufferable impudencie, when men passe not what they bornit and cast by out of a full goage surfetting with malice and rancour! But what thall we fay,

Omne supernacuum pleno de pectore manat.

Rog.Houed. against carte Richard,

In and (as Roger Houeden and other dowitnes) the forefair earle Reimond, and also Aimer earle of The nobles of Angoleline, Seffrey de Racon, and Beffrey de Lu Denote a rebell lignan, with the most part of all the Pobles of 50 Pointou, made warre against earle Richard, and he held tacke against them all, and in the end overcame them. Amongst other of earle Reimonds part thom Peter Beille, betwie, was one Peter Seille, by ichofe counfell earle Reimond had taken diverse merchants of Poiston that were subjects to earle Richard, 4 done manie other displeasures to him and to his countrie, therefore earle Richard kept this Peter in verie close prison, and would not put him to his ransome: in somuch that earle Reimono toke two of the king 60 of Englands knights, fir Kobert Poer, and fir Ki thard Fraler, as they were returning from Compostella, where they had beene to visit the bodie of S. James, but they were quicklie fet at libertie by the French kings commandement, for the reverence of 5. James those pilgrims they were.

Erle Richard After this, earle Kichard entred with a great ara mie into the lands of earle Reimond, wasted the fame, and toke by fiege a caffell of his fituate nere unto Tholouje, called Poilac: whereof the French king hearing, fent out of hand to the king of England, requiring to know if the damages done by his forme earle Kichard butohim this people in Thos louje, were done by his commandement, for the

which he demanded restitution. Herebuto the king of England answered, that his sonne earle Richard did nothing in that behalfe, either by his knowledge or commandement: but that as he had fignifico to him by the archbishop of Dublin, what socuer he did therin, was done by the counsell of the French king himselfe.

Hewsoever this matter went, certeine it is, that king Philip taking weapon in hand, opon a ludden 10 entred into Berrie, and twke from king Henric Chaffeau Raoull, Bzezancois, Argenton, Bountri Annales be chard, Mountreloz, Mandoline, Leprole, Blanc en France, Berrie, Culan and Polignon. Wherfore king Henrie (tho was at this time in England about to prepare an armie to go therewith into the holie land) then he heard thereof, with all speed possible he sent Rog. Houed Baldwin archbithop of Canturburie, and Hugh bis Chop of Cans Mop of Durham over into France, to appeale the turbune with French kings difpleafure with courteous words and the billions of Saracens, to the which enterpelle he was wholie 20 reasonable persuasions if it might be: but when that Chefter, fach could not be brought to patte, he failed ouer into Por Ger. Dor. mandie himfelfe, with an armie of Englithmen and Wielthmen, landing with the same at Hersue the Ger.Dor, 10. date of Julie, after he had beene fore toffed by a cruell tempest that rose as he was on the sea, to the great danger of his person, & all that were with him.

Pow after his comming to land, he repaired but to Alencon, increasing his power by gathering vp fouldiers and men of warre out of Pozmandie and other his countries on that five the fea. In the meane time his sonne Richard earle of Poidou entred into Berrie with a mightie armie, and the French king belivering Chateau Racull unto the keeping of fir Chatean William de Berres returned into France, fo that earle Kichard spoiled and wasted the lands of those Frenchans earls and barons which toke the French part erces nales:but h dinglie. The French king kept him as yet within Anion name france, and durst not come footh now after the arrivit Chastean uall of king Henrie, but manie enterprifes were at Baoul, and land, not pet understanding the English tong, blush 40 chined by the capteines on both lives. Philip bishop rightic as of Beauuois inuading the frontiers of Pozmandie, Ithinks. burned Blangcuille, belonging to the earle of Augi, and the castell Albemarle (that belonged to Willis am de Mandeuille, whereof he bare the title of earle) and waited the countrie round about. The French king alse came to the towne of Trow, and burned it, and toke 40, men of armes there, but the castell he could not win. On the other part, Richard earle of Poictou toke a ftrong place called Les Koches, be. Sergeants. pond Trow towards Handolme, with 25. men of armes, and 60. peomen. About this time king Henrie fent ambassadours onto the French king, as Walter the archbilhop of Rouen, John bishop of Eureur, and William Par-Chall, to require restitution for the damages done to him and his people. And furthermoze, that if the French king refused to make restitution, then had they in commandement to declare defiance against him. Therebuto the French king answered, that he would not give over to make warre till he had Berrie, and the countrie of Teurin of Teulgefine wholie in his possession. Wherefore king Henrie with a mightie armie on the tuefoaie after the feaff of the decollation of S. John) entred into the realine of France, and burned manie townes and villages, app proching the same day neere to the towns of Paunt, where the French king was thought to be. Powas it chanced, William de Berres and Drogo de Derlo encountred with Richard earle of Poicton and Milliam de Dandeuille earle of Albemarle, to that William de Berres was taken by earle Kichard, but by negligence of them that thould have taken hed to him, he escaped awaie byon his pages hoeste. The morrow after also, carle Richard Departed called in the carle @ holousclands.

The welch=

The two tungs come

toa ircatie.

Ancime cut

Acommenda:

thic to be

Callelliam.

bowne.

from his father towards Berrie, and opon the thurl vaie the Wellichmen burned manie villages, with the castell of Damuille that belonged to Simon Daneth, and toke manie rich preies and boties. Allo William Handenille earle of Albemarle burned a place called faint Clare, that was belonging buto the demaine of the French king.

But for, when the English were fullie bent to profecute the warres (with all extremitie) now in hand, there came messengers onto king Penrie from the 10 French king, requiring him that he would grant a peace to be had betwirt them, with promise that if he would condescend thereinto, that he thould receive by way of restitution all that the French king had now taken from him in Berrie . Herebpon they came to a communication betwirt Trie & Bilozs, and when they could not agree, the French king caus fed a great cline standing betwirt those two places to be cut downe, at which the kings of England and France were accustomed to meet when they treated 20 of matters in controversie betwirt them, fwearing that from thencefouth there thould never be anie more meetings holden at that place.

Afferivary, when the earle of Flanders and the carle of Blois with diucrie other earles and barons of the Realine of France, laid their armoz alide, p20, testing openlie that they would not put on the same againe to make warre against any christian, till they die protestati- spould returne from their fournie which they had of men to ferue him, made lute once againe to king Henric, that they might meet and talke of peace, which was hardlie granted, and so they met on the morrow after faint Faithes daie, or the feauenth of Daober, at Chatellon, where they entreated of a forme of peace, so that the French king hould have restored all that he had taken within the count tries belonging to king Penrie, and likewise Rithard earle of Poictou thould deliver by buto the louse) all that he had taken from him since the breach of the last truce. But when king Henrie would not veliver the castell of Pascie in pleage to the French king, they departed in funder (as before) without any thing concluded. The king of France after this toke the castell of Paluell. Apon the eighteenth day of August the two kings came againe togither about a new treatie of peace thetwokings betwirt Bonfemblance and Sukennie, where the French king offered king Henrie, to refloze to him 50 all that he had taken by his last warres, if his sister Alice might be joined in marriage with Kichard erle of Poicton, now eldest sonne allue to king Henrie, and that all king Penries subjects might do homage and sweare fealtie to the same Kichard. But king Henrie affer the old pronerbe, Ichus piscator sapit, has ning bought his experience with the fæling of imart, bearing in memorie the inturies done to him by his some Henrie, after such his advancement to king, quelt berein. Wherevpon a further milchæfe hame, ned, for his sonne earle Kichard (taking displeasure that his father (hould denie him that honour, which made altogither for his more affurance to succeed him as king) fell from his faid father manifestlie, Erle is ichard and became the French kings man, dwing homage to him also without content of king Henrie, for all those lands that belonged to his said father on that French king. further five the fea. The French king for his homage and featile game him Chateau Raoull and Pfoldun, with all the honour thereto belonging. 9 Some write, that the chafelf cause which moned king Denrie to refuse to some his some earle Kithard and the ladie Alice, daughter buto the French king in marriage fogither, was, for that he was line hed in the combersome chaine of hot burning love with the same ladie, and therefore he sought all the thiffs of excuses & delaies that might be imagined; fo that it appeared he had no mind to part with hir. The truth was (as writers affirme) he had alreadie persuaded hir to satisfic his lust, insomuch that he lis ked hir so well, that he ment to be divorted from his wife quene Clianozand to marrie this young ladie, which if he might bring to palle, and have chiloren by hir, he purposed to disherit those which he had by Clianoz, and to make the other which he thould have by Avelahis legitimat and lawfull heires. Det before Rog. Houed. they departed from this communication, atruce was taken to endure till the feaft of S. Hilarie. And Henrie bishop of Alba a cardinall that was fent from the pope to end this controversic betwirt these tivo mightie princes, accurled Kichard earle of Pois tiou, for that by his meanes the troubles role and were continued betwirt them.

The tolone of Benerley, with the church of faint Benerley John the arthbilhop, was in maner wholie consumed burnt. with fire on the 20. of September . Also the same yeare died William of Sempzingham, the author no first founder of the religious order of Semi hambecesteth. pringham. Pozeouer Bilbert de Dgerstan a knight Gilbert de templer put in trust by king Henric, with others, to Ogerstan. gather the tenths towards the relecte of the holie land, was promed to ble fallhood in the receipt, and fo volved into the holie land, the French king destitute 30 was delivered unto the maister of the temple at London to be punished according to the statutes of his order. Also this pere in the vigill of S. Laurence, there was fiene at Dunffable by diverfe persons a figure of the croffe veric long and large in the aire, with the Chape of a crucific thereon, and Areames of A Arange and blond to their light fæmed to run out of the wounds perance in the of the feet, hands and lides. This strange appearance aire, continued in fight from none till almost night.

Some will deme this a mere fable, and faie it earle of faint Giles (otherwise called earle of Tho, 40 favoureth of groffe superfittion and toolatrie, there, bpon they will conclude that no luch fragments pour dered with papiffrie should be inserted into a chronicle. But (to avoid all suspicion of infisting the fansies of men)note you this, that in the ecclesiasticall bissozie no small number of things no lesse strange and true than this fæmeth vaine and falle, are recorbed ; yea even touching the verte croffe. But confidering that this our age is verienice and deintie in making choice of matter pleating their owne humb? we will not wade to farre in this kind of argus ment, which we know may as some offend as it is ta ken as a thorne may pricke, or a nette ffing when it is touched. Penerthelesse, we would not with that the forme of a thing should be quite condemned for forme scandalous peoples pleasures, whome nothing will please, unless it come out of their owne ofter uat or casket of conceits. King Penrie heldhis Chaiffmas at Saumur in Anno. Reg. 35. Aniou, but manie of his earles and barons were gon lie degree, would not grant the French kings res 60 from him, and toke part with the French king, and with his some Richard carle of Poicou. Pow when the day was come in which the truce expired, the Battains (which hav a charter of covenants of the French king and earle Kichard, that if they concluded any peace with king Henrie, the Britains Could be partakers in the fame) entred into the confines of those countries, which Will continued their due obedience towards king Henrie, spoiling and wasting the fame on each five with barbarous crueltie. At which a legat, time also a legat came from the pope named John de Anagnia, tho affaied both by courteous meanes and also by threats and menacings to reduce the par ties but o peace and concord: infomuch that by his procurement they met this yeare after Cafter nere

Polydor.

his father to

L.j.

bnto Kieri Bernard, fivile within a few daies togis ther, to trie if by talke they might foat to some reals:

nable conditions of agreement.

R. Houed.

The last time of those their maxings was in the Marth. Paris. Chitfuntweke, at ichat time the French king required not onelie to have his lifter Alice delivered buto earle Richard for wife, according to the former coues nants, but also some affurance given buto the same earle Richard, that he should inherit his fathers lands after his occease. Also he required that earle 1 John might take byon him the croite to pate ouer into the holic land also, for otherwise earle Kichard would not go. Howbeit king Henrie would in no wife consent to any of these demands: but yet as some write, he offered thus much buto king Philip, that if he could be so content, his some John should marrie his litter Alice, and intoy with hir all such things as he demanded in preferment of his sonne Richard, anothat in moze large maner than he had requested the same. But king Philip would none 20 Thus how foeuer it was, whilest the one demanbed that which the other thought no reason to grant, they departed without concluding any agreement, so that king Thilip having got by this meanes a good occasion to further his enterprises, with all his whole pullance entred into Maine, where he deffrois edagreat part of that countrie, and approched to the citie of Dauns, where king Henrie as then late, in purpole to befrege it. But king Henrie being ware 30 ned of his comming let the luburbs on fire, bicaule his enimies thould have no fuccour in them. Holube it the flame of the fire was by force of the wind oxinen so directlic into the citie, that what with heat and affault of the entime, the king being without any fore of fouldiers to defend it longer, was confred AT he Sporte of ned to forfake it. Herewith he was to moved, that in departing from the citie, he faid these woods of his forme Richard to himfelfe: Sith thou haft taken world, I will requite thee, for after this date, I shall Mauns, he repaired buto Chinon, the citizens where of being left destitute of aid, pictoed themselves to the French king, who taking a great paide in his dos

ings for that victoric, passed over Loire, and wan the citie of Tows, wherein he placed a garifon, and brought home his armie laden with preies & boties.

Ling Henrie being thus put to the worse, and not perceiving anie readic meane how to recover his lostes, began to despaire in himselfe, and therefore of necessitie thought it best to seeke for peace, but his fuit was in vaine: for the enimie having now the Being thus driven to leave the defaced citie of deprive the of that thing which in me thould most please thee, even mine owne bart.

king Benrie fure tomarde

King Philip

entereth the countrie of Mainc.

Mauns pril: bed to the Frenchking, Wil, Paruus,

Polydor.

The carle of flanders fee= acth to agree the parties. Matth.Paris.

2 peace con= cluoco.

advantage, would not grant to agree byon any reafonable conditions. At the last Philip the earle of Flanders and Will-Burgoine, came to king Henrie to move water of agreement, and to conclude the same betweet him on the one partie, and the French king and earle Riv thard on the other partie. Carle Richard had the Bats taines and them of Poicou confederate with him. binder such conditions, as he might not agree with his father, buleffe they might be compared in the a græment. At length they agræd vpon conditions, not altogither advantageable to the king of England, yet in the end, Chatcau Raoul was restored to king hneric with all that had beine taken from him fince the time that the French king the twke byon them the crosse: on the other part king Henrie did homage to the French king, which in the beginning of this warre he had surrendzed and renounced. De was bound also to paie to the French king 20. Chirtiches thousand markes for the aid which earle Richard had fand to the thousand markes to the all unity each unity of you and well received of him: moreover to religne and acquire the barons the barons onto the French king, all that which either he or his france, in predecessours held or possessed within Aluergue, Ger. Doc. Other articles there were which king Benrie a gred buto loze against his will, as the deliucrie of the lavie Alice of Adela, and fuch other, which (as not o much materiall) we palle ouer.

This peace was concluded not facre from Towes, Rog. Houed in a place appointed convenient for both the kings to at Giford meet in, about the feast of the apostles Peter and faith Gen. Paule. And (as writers record) there chanced great Dor. thunder and lightening at the verie time when the two kings came to enterview and talke togither, fo that the thunderbolt did light betwirt them two: & pet (notwithstanding such thunder & lightening)the Strange aire was cleare and nothing troubled. The two lightning, kings parted a funder through feare thereof for that day, and on the nert day the like chance happened, greatlie to the terrour of them both. Which moved king Henrie the somer to condescend to the agree ment.

Mozeover this is not to be forgotten, that when all matters were quieted and accorded amongst them, Ling Penrie required to have all their names deliuered buto him in writing, which had promifed to take part (and were somed as confederates) with the French king and earle Kichard. This was granted, and when the roll was prefented but o him, he found his sonne John the first person that was named in that register, where with he was so troubled and dis quieted in his mind, that comming to Chinon he felt fuch greefe hereof, that he curfled even the verie date in which he was borne, and as was faid, gave to his formes Gods curlle and his, the which he would no uer release, although he was admonished to do it both of fundrie bithops and other religious and god carle Richard. from me this daie the thing that I most loved in this 40 liemen. Thus faith Houeden.

Howbeit, it is not like that earle Richard at this time had procured his brother John to be confeder rate with him in his revellious dealings, but rather bicause earle Richard had some suspicion, least his father would make John his heire and inccessour in the kingdome, it might be a policie wrought by the French king and earle Richard, to alienate his fathers mind from the faid John.

These enils were estemed to fall buto king so having sped his businesse with god successe, 50 Henrie by the inft judgement of God, for that being admonished diverse waies, as well by divine renelation, as by the wholesome adulte of grave men, as Hugh bishop of Lincolne and others, he would not reforme his licentious ametite of heaping opfinne bpon sinne, but still wallowed therein to his owne destruction. Where bon being brought to such an cro tremitic as ye have heard, he was taken with a grauous sicknesse, which bringing him to otter desperation of recovering of health, he finallie departed this liam archbishop of Reimes, with Hugh duke of 60 life, though more through berie anguish and grafe of his late lotte and troubles suffeined, than by the force of his bodilie difeate (as writers have affire king hemit med.) But how we can be ended his life the repartething firt of Julie in the 61, years of his age, and after he life. had reigned 34. yeares, nine moneths, and two dates, which was in the years after the birth of our faviour 1 189, and of the creation of the world 5 155. His bodie was buried at Founteuerard, which is an abbeie lituate not farre from the towns of the eagle within the dutchie of Alanson.

Immediatlie boon his death, those that were about him, applied their market so busilie in catching and filding awaie things that late readie for them, that the kings corps late naked a long time, till a child co-

e

3

1

An.Reg.35. the furname nered the nether parts of his body with a thost cloke, whereof it and then it seemed that his surname was fulfilled that he had from his childhod, which was Shortman tell, being so called, bicause he was the first that brought thort clokes out of Anion into England . As his some Richard met the corps going towards the burfall, suddenlie there issued bloud out of the dead bodies notheilles, which was taken for a lignification that it abhorred the presence of so wicked a son, which in his life time had so persecuted the father. His 10 death was fignified by a maruellous frrange wonder, for a few dates before he died, all the fifthes in a certeine mere or pole in Pormandie, leapt forth on land in the night featon, and fought togither with such a noise, that a great multitude of men came running thiffer to behold the wonder, and could not find on fish alive in the mære.

De had iffue by his wife quene Clianoz (as may appeare by that which alreadie is rehearled) foure

two other that died young, as some authors have recoaded: also thee daughters, Maud, married buto

Henrie the duke of Saronic; Cliano; the wife of Alfonse the eight of that name king of Castile, and Joane given in marriage buto William king of Sicill . He had also two bastard sonnes by a concu-bine, the one named William, & the other Beffrey.

He was of booie flethic and ffrong, and could abide periepatientlie the displesures both of cold and heat, he had a large head, a broad breatt, a broken boice, and was furthermore verie spare of diet, thefelie bicause he would not be to fat; and therefore when he was at quiet without any trouble of warres, he would exercise himselse in hunting or travelling a broad. He was of a good flature and veric well for med, of a comelic countenance, partlie red heared, with grate eies, of wit quicke, and of a perfect god memorie, so that he would long remember those advertitie than in time of prosperitie, except at the time of his death, when being destitute in maner of all histrands, he theined himfelfe almost in despaire. he was liberall towards all men, offentimes gt ning rewards to his fouldiers over and belides their

The iffue of thenrie the fecond. ing founes.

4 itrange maner of fight betwirt filhes.

Dig banghterg.

Digtale fons. The constitu= tion of his Dis Cature.

his qualities things which he had either read, heard, or fome. He ong of mind.

Radulphus de

Dozeover, of nature he was pitifull towards the poze, as it well appeared by diverse his charitable deds; as for example. When in the yeare 1 176. there was a great dearth a fearlitie of bread in the parts of Anious Paine, he fed everic daie with lufficient luftenance ten thouland persons, from the begining of Appill, till the time that new come was inned: and what provision soever was late op in garners, cellers and Mozehoules, for the kings necessarie bles, he caw feo the fame to be imploied towards the relecte of religious houses, and page people. He take of his subteas but fildome times any great tributes. He was berie expert in feats of warre, and right fortunate therein. He praised his capteins and men of warre 60 large thionicle, page 77. in an English septenarie. when they were dead, and lamented their losse more than he thewed to love them then they were alive. And this did he of policie, that they might under stand that they should be honoured after death, and therefore feare it the leffe. De was somulat learned. and also knowne to be wife.

Ralulphun de Direso,

His care to have justice dulie ministred in his realme was erceding great, infomuch that finding how the thirifes were rather inclined to lake their owne gaine, than to deale opzightlie with his subicus, he appointed other officers to have a regard to their dwings, as if they had beine controllers, that they knowing how there were such appointed to have a found overlight in their dealings, might be the more circumfred in their duties. He order ned also punishments for hunters in forcests and grounds of warren, either by fining them, or by imprisonment.

Mozeover, he ozdeined that murtherers should fuffer death by hanging: and so for other transgress fours he appointed other kinds of punishments, as some to be condemned to exile, and other to losse of lims, to: according to the qualitie of the offense committed. And to have the lawes dulie erecuted, and instice opzightlie ministred on all hands, he was so carefull that he tried all orders of men, in placing them in romes of luftice. And lafflie, truffing to find among the cleargie such as would not be cos rupted with bribes, nor for respect of feare or frænd, thip decline from right judgement, he chose footh the bishops of Minchester, Elie, and Porwich to be Bishops cho principall inflices of the reline, so as they might end fen principall and determine all matters, ercept in certeine cases tultices.

referred to the hearing of the prince himfelfe. fonnes, Denrie, Richard, Beffrey, and John, belides 20

His vices were thefe, as they are remembled. In time of adverte fortune no man could thew himfelfe moze courteous, gentle, mæke, and promiting moze largelie than he would. But when fortune once bes gan to fmile, no man was more tharpe, hard to deale with, nor more redie to breake his promile and faith. He was also partlie noted of conctonsnesse: for although he was liberall towards fouldiers and frangers, yet was he firefa inough towards his owne people, and namelie towards his fonnes, which caus sed them to estrange themselves and their god wils from him. De was not lo zealous toward the erecu tion of right and equitie as to the furtherance of his owne privat commoditie.

De was out of measure given to fleshie luft, and Disincontis fatilitieng of his inordinate concupilcence. Fornot nencic. contented with the vie of his wife, he kept manie concubines, but namelie he delited most in the companie of a pleasant damsell, whom he called the Rose was front of fromach, and more confrant in time of 40 of the world the common people named hir Rofamund) for hir passing beautie, propernelle of person, and pleasant wit, with other amiable qualities, bes ing verelie a rare and perelette pece in those dates. Rolamundlis He made for hir an house at Modstocke in Orford- concubine. thire, like a labyzinth, with fuch turnings and wind. bings in a out as a knot in a garden called a maze, that no creature might find her noz come to hir, er cept he were instructed by the king, or such as were fecret with him in that matter. But the common rereport of the people is, that the quiene in the end found hir out by a filken thread, which the king had drawne after him out of hir chamber with his fot, and dealt with hir in such tharpe and cruell wife, that the lived not long after. She was buried in the nunrie of Goodfow belide Orford, with these verses ops on hir tome: Hic iacet in tumulo, Rosamundi non Rosa munda, Non redolet sed olet, qua redolere solet.

The meaning whereof may be found in Graftons

Long time after the ocath of this damfell, in the Ran, Higd, fato abbeie was the wed a cofer, that form times was hirs of the length of two fot, in the which appeared giants fighting, fartling of beaffs, swimming of fi: thes, and flieng of foules, so livelie, that a man might wonder at the fine devile thereof,

Moreover king Benrie was noted not to be so favourable to the liberties & fredoms of the church as he might have beene. For befides the perfecuting of the foresatd Thomas archbishop of Canturburie, he would not luffer the legats fent from the pope, to enter within the bounds of his dominion, till they had swozne that they should do nothing presudiciall to the customs of his kingdome, neither by preserie

The vices of

gainst it.c

Balc.

bing orders, nor any other maner of act or meanes. Oraneoligese fre was thought to be negligent in aiding the chie a lingthe tran common-wealth in the holie land. For though Chufrans as he had appointed twice of theice to go thither in personne it. fon, yet being letted by light occasions, he Raied at home and fent small relecte thither, though he was carnefilic called upon for the lame. His effimation was fuch amongst forren princes, that Thilip king of France being newlie entred into the gouernement of that realme after his fathers decease, com, 10 mitted himselfe and his kingdome to the disposition and order of king Henric, as if he had beine regent of his realme, and governour of his person.

There lived in the dates of this king Henrie the fccond, diuerle honourable perfonages and capteins of great fame, for their approved valiancie and exper rience in warlike enterpites , as Robert earle of Leiceffer, hugh Bigot earle of Porthfolke, Reige nolo earle of Conewall, Robert Ferreis earle of Darbie, Aichard Lacie, Roger Howbiay, Rafe de 20 Fulgiers, Dumfrey Bohun concitable of England, Kanulfe Clandenille, William Tlefey, & Bernard de Ballioll. Also there flourished in his time here in this land, men of fingular learning in arts and sciens ces, as Micholas Breakespeare, Serlo surnamed Crammaticus, William Khenalentis, Adam de Cuetham, Thomas of Punmouth, Avelbertus Le. uita, Ocrualius Cicoffrentis, Doo Cantianus, Calred Khieuellensis, Johannes Sarisburiensis, Cles mens Lanthonienlis, Walter Daniell, Robert 30 Knought die Camtus, Robert Folioth, William Ramley, Senatus Brauonus, Robert the Scribe, Doo Diremuth, Hugh of Reading, Richard of Do uer, William of Deterburough, Cicercientis, Bar. tholometr Icanus, and Gilbert de Sempzingham, with others.

And here to make an end with this high and mightie prince Benrie the fecond , I haue thought god to make you partaker of an epitath, which we find in Matthew Paris and others witten of him as 40 followeth.

Epitaphium in Henricum secundum regemmortuum & hic sepultum.

R Ex Henricus eram, mihi plurima regna fubegi, Multiplicíq modo dúxq, coméfg, fui, Cui satis ad votum non essent omnia terræ Climata, terra modo sufficit octo pedum. Qui legis hac, pensa discrimina mortis ,& indè Humana specula conditionis habe.

Quod potes instanter operare bonum, quia mundus Transit, or incautes mors inopina rapit.

Aliud.

I vmuli regis superscriptio breuis exornat, I sufficit but tumulus, cui non suffecerat orbis, Res breuis est ampla, cui fuit ampla breuis.

An epitaph vpon king Henrie the fecond dead and heere intomed.

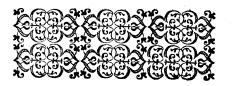

F late king Henrie was my name, which conquerd manie a land, And diuerie dukedoms did possesse, and earledoms held in hand. And yet while all the earth could scarfe my greedie mind suffice, Eight foot within the ground now ferues, wherein my carcase lies. Now thou that readest this, note well my force with force of death, And let that ferue to shew the state of all that yeeldeth breath. Do god then here, foreslowe no time, cast off all worldlie cares, For brittle world full sone doth faile, and death dooth strike ynwares.

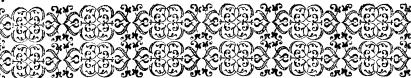

An other.

SMall epitaph now ferues, to decke this toome of statelie king: And he who whilome thought whole earth could scarse his mind content, In little roome hath roome at large, that serues now life is spent.

There may be thought that the reigne of the Aoxi mans and French men over the realme of England toke end, a hundred twentie two yeares after the comming in of the Conquerour; for those that reige ned after this Penrie the fecond, we may rightlie efteme to be Englishmen, bicaufe they were borne in England, and bled the English twng, customes, and maners, according to the nature and qualitic of 50 the countrie.

Thus farre the succession and regiment of the Frenchmen ouer this Iland; namelie, Stephan of Bullongne and Henrie the second.

Richard the first, second sonne to Henrie the second.

Anno Reg. 1.

Wil. Paruus.

Matt.Paris.

Stephan de Gurnham to pulon.

Matth. Paris.

Mabell banah ter to the earle of Glocefter married to

M. Houed,

Matt. Paris.

Thehings mother fer at libertie.

Me Ichard the first of that name, and second sonne of Penrie the second, began his reigne Bouer England the firt day of Julie, in the yere of our Lord 1189, in the featien and thire streth yeare of the emperour Frederike the first, in the co leuenth pere of the reigne of Philip the second king of France, and king William furnamed the Lion 10 berfe of Virgil, as pet living in the government of Scotland.

This Richard, immediatlie affer the folemnities of his fathers funerals were ended, made half to Kos uen, where he was infullie received, and proclamed duke of Pozmandie, receiving the inucliure accoss ding to the custome, on the twentish day of Julie. Then Audieng to fet all things in god order on that five the fea, he made fearth where his fathers treasure was preferued, and therebpon attached Stephan de may call him) of Anion, and committing him to prifon, compelled him to make deliverie of all such fummes of monie as he had hid and laid by in cers teme castels by the commandement of the late king his father.

Whilest he was thus occupied, his brother John came to him, to whom he totfullie gave the welcome, and before all other things which his father had bequeathed buto him by his testament in England, amounting to the value of foure thouland pounds of 30 pearelievent, with the earledome of Postaigne, he procured a marriage for him (being now a widower) for his further advancement with the ladie Isabell, daughter to Robert earle of Glocester, which earle had appointed the faid John to be his heire as before John & kings is mentioned, although Baldwine the archbishop of Canturburie forbad the martage, bicaufe they were Sheisnamed cosens in the third degree of consanguinitie. To those Hauslig, Robert earle of Leicester also he restozed all his four as his father had differited, he restored like wife to their former rights and possessions, howbeit those had for saken his father, and taken part with him against his faid father, he seemed not so much to millike, that he removed them otterlie from his presence, and contrariwise preferred such as had continued faithfull buto his father in time of the troubles.

> At length, king Richard remembring himfelfs of from the bed of hir husband for the space of firtiene yeares, and was as yet deteined in pailon in England, wrote his letters but othe rulers of the realine, commanding them to let hir agains at libertie, and withall amointed hir by his letters patents, to take bpon hir the whole government of the kingdome in his absence. The quiene being thus delivered, and having now the chefe authoritie & rule in hir hands, rode in progresse about the realme, to see the estate thereof; and as the passed from place to place, the thewed gladfome countenance to the people theres focuer the came, doing also that the could to pleas fure them, that the might thereby win their god willes to hir, and to hir sonne : but speciallie remembying by hir late experience and talk thereof, what an irksome a most greenous thing impusonment was, the caused the gailes to be opened, and forthwith set no small number of prisoners at libertie by the way as the patted through the countries, according to the Non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco.

In the meane time, king Richard concluding a league with Ihilip king of France, received all those places againe which were taken from his father by the fame Willy, togither with his wife Adela, whom bpon suspicion that the had beene dishonested in hic person before, without anic sufficient profe thereof had, he forloke, a fent hir home with hir downie, and otherwise with great and princelie gifts, most bouns Turnham, who was fenefchall or gonernour (as we 20 tifullie inriched, having alreadie concluded a marris age with the ladie Berengaria, daughter to Barlias king of Pauarre, tho was fent into Sicili bnto hir fifter Joane, that he might marrie hir there, as he passed that waie towards the holie land.

Whilest these things passed thus in these parties, the christians in the holic land dailie fent hither for aid, wherebyon the two kings of France and Eng- The 2, kings land twite counsell togither, and determined with all of England & convenient speed to some their powers, & with thips France deterprepared for that purpose to faile into Syria. Has mine to go ins uing thus concluded, they went about to prepare land, themselues of necessarie prouision for so long a tour at South nie. Pow then king Kichard had let in oeder his af hampton the faires in Posmandie and France, he came ouer in- 21 of August to England, landing at Postelmouth the 13. of August fasth Ger. Dor. auff. With him also came his brother John, buto Rog. Houed. whom he assigned the castels of Marlebutge, Lute: Match, Paris, garefhall, Peake, Bollefour, the honoz of Walling ford, Tikehill and Cie, with the earledoms of Mov lands thich had beine taken from him, and luch per 40 taigne, Dorlet, Sumerlet, Potingham, Derbie, Denonthire, and Cornewall, with the earledome of Lancaffer, intituling him earle of the fame, whereby he was so exalted in state and degrae, that he seemed in manner of a tetrarch, having as it were a fourth part of the realme in governance: but yet the king held fome of the castels (in those counties and honors thus given to his brother) in his owne hands. Porce ouer, buto William Parthall he gave in marriage the daughter of Richard earle of Chepftow, togither his mother quiene Chanoz, who had beene separated 50 with the earledome which hir father possesses; and to Bilbert Fitz Roger the sonne of Nainfrey he gave the daughter of William de Lancaster. After he ivas lanved (as before pe have heard) he halted to Windelter, where his mother quene Cliano, with the most part of the English nobilitie had laine a god space to attend his comming, and there on the ex nen of the assumption of our lavie, the king was by them received with great toy and triumph.

I Dere is to be noted, that whilest the quiene and lozos laic in Minchester waiting for the kings arriv

e

1

nall, Ceffrey Riodic the bishop of Elic departed this life. We is named by Gernafius Dorobernenfis the proud bishop of Clie: but he might rather have named him the rich bilhop, for he left in his cofers no finall quantitie of treasure, of the which thee thow fand and two hundred marks came to the kings part towards the charges of his coronation. Po marnell though Gernatius spake somewhat in his dispraife, for (as he himfelfe confesseth) he was no frend but an enumic to monks.

But to let this passe, some after the kings comming into England, he was informed that the Welfhmen had broken into the English marthes, and destroiced certeine townes; to represse whose prefumptuous attempts he made towards them, but was yet fraied for that time, a renoked by his mother. At Salisburie be found his fathers treasure, highlie refolling, for that the fumme was far greater than he thought it would have promed, for belides the pretions fromes, apparell, and teivels, it was reported he 20 had there the fum of nine hundled thousand pounds in readic coine. With this good hap king Richard not a little advanced, came to London on the first of September, where he had appointed provision to be made for his coronation, and to calling a councell of The fecond of the Pobles of the realine, he received the crowne with all one and accustomed folemnitie, at the hands fauth Ger. Dor. of 13alowin the archbishop of Canturburie, the third date of September.

turburie, Roan, Trier, and Dublin, which were prefent, with all the other bishops, abbats and cleargie, awarelled in ridy copes, and having the croffe, holie water and censures carried afore them, came to fetch him buto the doze of his prinic chamber, and there receiving him, they led him but o the church at Theff-

The order of Ins cojonatio. Matth.Paris.

September

Dis fathers treafure.

R.Hoped Gau.Vinlat.

Pog. Houed.

minifer, till he came before the high altar with a los lemne procession. In the mivole of the bishops and cleargie went foure barons, bearing candlefficks with tapers, after whom came Deffrey de Lucie bear 40 ring the cap of maintenance, and John Warthall nert to him, bearing a great and massive paire of fours of gold: then followed William Darfhall earle of Striguill alids Pembroke, who bare the rofall scepter, in the top wherof was let a crosse of gold: and William de Patrike earle of Salisburie going nert him, bare the warder of rod, having on the top thereof a done. Then came there other earles, Daulo brother to the king of Scots, the earle of Bunting ton, John the kings brother earle of Wortaigne, and 50

Robert earle of Leicelfer, ech of them bearing a fword byright in his hand with the scabberds richlie trimmed and adopted with gold. The earle of Portaigne went in the midf betwirt the other two. After them followed fir earles and barons, bearing a checker table, byon the which was let the kings feochens of armes, and then followed William Bandeuill earle of Albemarle, bear ring a crowne of gold a great heigth before the king. who followed the fame, having Dugh bilhop of Dur- 60 ham on the right hand, and Reignold bilhop of 13ath on the left, oner whom a canapie was borne: and in this order he came into the durch at Westminster, where before the high altar in the presence of the cleargie a the people, lateng his hand byon the holie enangelists and the relikes of certeine faines, he take a folenme oth, that he should observe peace, honour, and renerence to almightie Cod, to his durch, and to the ministers of the same all the daies of his life. Also that he should exercise byzight instice to the people committed to his charge, and that he thould abrogate and difamult all cuill lawes and wrongfull encomes, if anie were to be found within the precina of his realme, and mainteine those that were god and laudable.

This done, he put off all his garments from the middle bywards, his thirt ercepted, which was open on the Coulders, that he might be annointed. The archbishop of Canturburie annointed him then in the places, to wit, on the head, on the shoulders, and on the right arme, with praiers in such case accustomed. After this, he covered his head with a linnen cloth hallowed, and let his cap aloft thereon; and then 10 then he had put on his rotall garments and oppers most robe, the archbishop twke but o him the sword wherewith he should beat downe the enimies of the thurth; which done, two earles put his thores byen his feet, and having his mantell put on him, the arch bishop forbad him on the behalfe of almightic God. not to presume to take bpon him this dignitie, cra cept he faithfullie meant to performe those things which he had there swozne to performe. Therebuto the king made answer, that by Gods grace he would performe them. Then the king take the crowne befive the altar, and delivered it to the archbiffor, which he fet bpon the kings head, delinering to him the scepter to hold in his right hand, and the rod roiall in his lest hand, thus being crowned he was brought backe by the bishops and barons, with the cross and candelificks, and the fwords palling forth before him unto his feat. Then the bishop that sang the malle came to the offertozie, the two bishops that brought him to the church, led him to the altar, and At his coronation, first the archbishops of Can- 30 brought him backe againe.

Finallie then malle was done, and all things ended in order as was requilit, he was brought with folemme procession into his chamber, where he put off his heavierich apparell, and put on a crowne and other garments more light and easie, and so went to dinner, whereat wanted no ffore of meats & drinks, which were ferued out in most princelie and bours tifull wife.

Upon this daie of king Richards coronation, the Wil Partur Icwes that dwelt in London and in other parts of the realme, being there affembled, had but forte han, as it chanced. For they meaning to honour the fame coronation with their presence, and to present to the Temis king some honorable gift, whereby they might declare meant topic themselves glad for his advancement, and procure sent him with his freenothip towards them, for the confirming of archgill. their priveleges a liberties, according to the grants and charters made to them by the former kings: he of a scalous mind to Chilles religion, abhorring Matt. Paris their nation (and doubting some sozerie by them to be practifed) commanded that they thould not come within the durch when he thould receive the crowne, nor within the palace whilest he was at dinner.

But at dinner time, among other that preffed in at the palace gate, dinerle of the Jewes were about to thank in, till one of them was Ariken by a chaillie A Jew Ari an, who alledging the kings commandement, kept ken. them backe from comming within the palace. Which some of the varulie people perceiving, and supposing it had beine done by the kings comman dement, twic lightlie occasion thereof, and falling The people bpon the Jewes with francs, bats and frones, beat fail boon the them and chaled them home to their houles and lodge beat thank ings. Derewith role a rumo: through the citie, that the king had commanded the Lewes to be descried, and therebpon came running togither, to affault them in their houses, which when they could not east lie breake up nor enter, by reason the same were ffrongly builded, they let fire on them, to that divers houses were consumed, not onelie of the Jewes , but allo of their neighbours, to hideous was the rage of arefet on at the fire. Here we see that

Regis ad exemplum totus componitur orlis. The king being advertised of this riotous attempt to beath

Reg. Houed.

The king his orb.

An. Regni, 1.
of the outragious people, feut forme of his councely of the outragious people, feut forme of his councely of the outragious people, feut forme of his councely out the outragions of the outragions lours, as Kanulfe be Glanuille load iuffice, and other officers to appeale the tumult : but their authoritie was nothing regarded, nor their perfualions any uhit renerenced, but their thretnings rather brought themselves in banger of life among the rube fort of those that were about to spoile, rob, and sacke the houses and Chops of the Jewes : to the better accomplishment of which their volawfull act, the light that the fire of those houses which burned, gaue after it 1 was once night, did minister no small helpe and oc Jewes burnt casion of furtherance. The Jewes that were in those boules which were let on fire, were either finologed and burned to death within, or else at their comming fouth most cruellie received byon the points of speares, billes, swoods and gleanes of their aduer, faries that watched for them verie viligentlie.

Ahis outrage of the furious and dilogoered people continued from the middest of the one day, till two of the clocke on the other; the commons all that 20 ubile never ceasing their furie against that nation, but Will killing them as they met with any of them, in most hourible, rath and unreasonable maner. At length, rather wearied with their cruell dwings, than fatilified with spoile, or movied with respect of reason or reverence of their prince, they withdrew themfelues from their riotous enterprise, after they had crecuted manic bulatofull and horrible enormities. Dis great riot well deserved soze and grænous pur in respect of the great number of the transgressors, and for that the most part of men for the hatred genes rallie conceived against the obstinate frowardnesse of the Jewes, liked the doings hereof well inough, interpreting it to be a good token, that the toifull date of the kings advancement to the crowne fould be volefull buto the Jewes, in bringing them to such flaughter and deffruction. Finallie, after that the tw mult was ceased, the king commanded that no they were restored to peace, after they had susteined infinit damage.

The occasion of this tragedie and bloudie tw mult (redounding to the Jewes great veration and pitifull diffreste, but to the satisfieng of the peoples furious and unbifoled pronesse to crueltie) sprang principallie from the king, tho if he had not lo light lic estamed of the Jewes when they repaired buto him with their prefent, in figne of submission and hope of obtaining their lute then purpoled to be exhly 50 bited; this hurlie burlie had not infued. For it was a violent crample & a mightie motive to the people to maligne the Jewes; as also a hart-greefe to them in respect of their releation, when the prince gave them fodiscourteous a repulse. Here therefore is to be obferued, that the people is the princes ape, as one berie well faith. For loke whereto he is inclined, note wherein he delighteth; the same is the practile of the people: in confideration thereof the mightie ones of the world have speciall cause to have an eie to 60 their course of life, & to let caneats before their actions, that the people may in them fee none but god fignes of commendable vertuous imitation. For regis imago vulgus, or ad mores accedere principus optat. Qualis enim rex est talis quoque subditus ill; .. Este solet populus, studysque tenetur ystem suli

Shortlic after to wit, the 15. day of September, a councell was holden at Dipewell, there the bilhops and abbats being affembled, there were in prefence of the king and of the archbishop of Canturburie es leded certeine bishops and abbats to such places as then were vacant: and among to other, William de Longchampe the kings chancello; was elected to the fwof Clie, Geffrey the lings baffard bother buto Wil. Paruus. the archbishopithe of Popke, tho was the 32. in number that had gouerned the fame, Oeffrey de Lus cie to Minchester, one Hubert Malter to Salifuu rie, and Richard archocacon of Clie, and the kings treasurer to the see of London. The abbries that were provided of abbats were thefe, Glaffenburie, Shirbone, Perfore and Feuersham. In like maner, John the elect of Whitherne was confecrated bis Hop of that les, by the hands of the archbillop of Du confecrated. blin. Also in this councell the king ordeined Bugh Rog Houed. bishop of Durham, and Milliam Pandenille earle of Albemarle, los chefe inflices of England, having deposed Kanulfe de Clannille from that rome.

Pozeover, the king being thus effablished in the estate of the kingdome, did not forget his cournie which he had promifed into the holie land, but with all viligence made his provition, and namelie he lought to gather monie to furnify his charges, and fo theres bpon leuied a tar, engaged, fold, and let to farme his lands, tols, customs, and other his renewes, with certeine counties and offices, fo that he made an er Matt. Par. ceeding fumme of monie. He also found, that Ranulfe de Glanuille lord chefe inflice, and other of the head maniferates had not behaved themselves by rightlie in the administration of their offices; so that he both deposed the said lord cheefe instice as is aforefaid, and almost all the shiristes and their deputies within the realme of England, putting them to gree nishment, but yet it passed over without correction, 30 uous fines for their offenses and transgressions, and fo by that meanes be got not mail deale of monie.

Here note by the wate, how William Paruus as Wil. Paruus. firmeth, that where this Kanulse Glanuille, being a man of high wisedome and stept into age, faw that manie things were done by the new king, not to adnisedlic, noz with such forelight as they ought to be, fought of his owne accord to be discharged of his office, that he might the better prepare himselfe to go in that fournie to the holie land, as by taking byon man should hart or harme any of the Jewes, and so 40 him the crosse he had vowed in the dates of king Henrie, and so he solemnelie renounced his office, which other (nothing to worthie of it) vid afterwards

> Mozeover, the king biderstanding that Hugh Putley or Puoley bilhop of Durham, being a veric aged man, had much monte, he fold to him the mas nour of Seggestield or Sadberge, with the wapentake belonging to the fame, and also found meanes to perfuade him to bur his owne province, which he did, giving to the king an inessimable summe of monie, and was thereupon created an earle by the king for the same: wherespon he was intituled both bis Durham. thop and earle of Durham, thereat the king would garderge. iest afterwards and saic; What a cunning craftely The billiop of man am I, that have made a new earle of an old Durham made an earle, bilhop :

Furthermore, the same billion gave to the hing a thousand markes to be made these instice of Engi land, and that he might tarrie at home, and not go into the holie land. And bicause he would not be repromed of any person, he obteined of the apostolike fie (which faileth no man that is furtharged with indite of red mettall, and would be cased) a licence for a fumme of monie to be dispensed with for that four nie. The king thus being carnellie bent to make The citizens commoditie of those things, for the which he might of London get any monic at all, the citizens of London prefens prefent monic get any monic at an insertizenson Abonous parent fothe king. teb buto him a great fumme towards the furnit Polydor. thing fouth of his enterpite. Therebpon to acquite Liberies their courtelle, he granted them large printleges, and granted to ordeined that the citie Chould be ruled by two trad London. officers, which they thould chale among I theinfelies remoueable from yeare to yeare by the name of bailiffes. The names of the two first bailiffes cholen Ewobailiffes by force of that ordinance, were Penrie Cornebill, and Richard Fitz Remer.

The bishop of

Pal, in fue fig.

The citie before those vales ever fince the comming in of William Conquerour, and a good while before his time, was governed by certeine officers of ru-Post Grenes. lers named Post Greues (which word is derined of two Saron words, as Port and Greue. By Port is meant a towne, and by Greue a gardian or ruler, as tho thould fate, A kæper og ruler of a towne.) Thefe rulers with the lawes a customes then vied within 10 Hakinton now called S. Stephans. this citie, were registred in a boke called (as some haue fato Dome foaie, but through negligence affer these lawes and customes were changed and altered, the boke was loft, so that the remembrance of such rulers as were before the daies of this Richard the first, are not to be had. These bailiffes ever entred at Aichaelmalle, and so continued fouth their yeare.

Thus began the citic first to receive the forme and state of a common-wealth, and to be divided into felowships, which they call crafts or corporations. Such 2 also are admitted to the fellowships of these compa-Apprentifes. nies, as have truelie ferued as apprentifes a certeine number of yeares, as feven at the least, buder which time of fernice expired, there is none made free, noz suffered to intop the liberties of that citie, saving fuch as are borne fræ, that is to faic, of fræmen with in the citie, of whome at this time, it is not much materiall to make any further report. The citie thus confifting of the faid craftes or occupations, choleth out of the same a senat or companie of grave coun 30 cellours, whom they name Albermen (E) changed into (A) according to the old Saron pronuntiation. It is also divided into 26, tribes or wards, of the which cucrie one hath his feuerall Alderman, oz ouer for, the have both authoritic fufficient, and large primleges to mainteine the god government of their postions withall. Dut of the number of thefe, there is another officer pearelie chosen and appointed, called the Paicz, tho ruleth all the reft.

But now to returne onto the further dwings of 40 king Richard before his departure out of England towards his fournie into the land of Waleffine, commonlie called Polie land, it is faid, he made fuch fale of things apporteining to him, as well in right of the crowne, as otherwise, that it seemed to diucrse he made his reckoning neuer to returne againe, in fo much that force of his councellours told him plaine lie, that he did not well in making things awaie fo frælie, to the diffionozing of his maiestie, and prejudice of his successour; buto whom he answered, that 50 in time of need it was no cuill policie for a man to helpe himselfe with his owne, and further soined co hereto these words, that if London at that time of cc néed would be bought, he would surelie sell it, if he might met with a convenient merchant that were able to give him monic inough for it. Another way he had also to gather riches, and that was this. He had a licence of pope Junocent the third, to dispense with such as pleased him within his realme, for their voives made to go into the holic 60 land, although they had taken on them the croffe for that purpose, namelic such as he should amoint to remaine behind him for the defense of his countrie: and of these also he toke abundantlie, and diverse o ther he compelled to fine, namelie, to the end that he might get their monie likewise, that hereby he obteined no finall fumme toward the furniture of his fournie. But both pope a prince forgat in the meane ithile, that Boni pastoris est condere pecus non excoriare.

This yeare also in the moneth of Pouember, as Matthew Paris faith, Johannes de Anagnia a carde nall and legat from the pope arrived here in England, comming on land at Doner, and bicause the bing was as then in the north parts, the same cardis nall was prohibited on the behalfe of the kings mo ther quæne Elianoz, to patte any further without the kings commandement. And so he stated there thirtiene dates at the charges of the archbishop of Canturburie, till the king came to those parties, by whose wiscome a direction was taken for the quieting of the controverse betwirt the archbishop, and the monkes of Canturburie, for the chamel church of

In the fame moneth of Poucmber, by the kings R. Houed appointment, Gestrey the elect of Porke, who was the kings brother, with other barons and lords of Porkethire, received William king of Scotland at william king the water of Tweed, and from thence with all due of Scots, reverence and honour they brought him buto Canreverence and honour they brought the acouncell of the acouncell of the accouncell of the accouncell in led at Cape loeds of his realme both spirituall and temporall, in turbure, the which enerie of them take an off to be true to the Polydor, king, and to continue in due obedience under him Auoth, and his lawes, which othallo the king of Scots recei. Math. Pair, ned, being there present, and likewise king Kichards beetheen earle John and Geffrey the archbishop of Docke.

The king of Scots therefore having received this Matth. Paris oth, and thinking the time to serve his purpose for re- Polydon deming of those castels, which were delivered to king Penrie as gages for his ransome, paid now buto king Kichard ten thousand markes, and had re-Activation of the fame, that is of Berwike, Rorburgh, Mactivation made to the Sterling, and Evenburgh, But William Parsus fale Ros Socia, eth, that Coenburgh was restozed to him in the Wil Parus, daies of king Henric, by reason of his wife which he twhe in the parties beyond the feas: and herewith agreeth the Scotish chronicle. Ling Kichard also asfigned to queene Clianoz his mother, the accusto med dower, with manie loodhips and honours be fide, as an augmentation thereof. About which time Rog. Houed, died William de Panocuille earle of Albemark at Rouen, and Dugh de Putley the nephue of the bishop of Durham died at Aclet, and was buried at Durham. Also Formalis archbishop of Trier died N. Triuer. at Posthampton, and was there buried in the church of S.Andrews.

In the meane time, king Kichard Mill desirous to furnish himselfe with monie, devised pet another thist, and feigued that he had lost his seale; wherefore he commanded a new to be made, which being done, he caused it to be proclaimed and published in cuerie countrie, that those to whome he had granted any thing by his deed or charter, meaning to intoy the Matth.Patin fame in suertie, should not thinke it much to come and have it confirmed by his new feale, leaft afterward the other being lost, their lawfull titles might be called into question. Wherebyon manie that could not come to him whilest he was in England, were glad to follow him, and faile oner into 1202 mandic, and there to fine at his pleasure for the new feale, to the end that their writings might be confir med thereby, and made so much the more sure to them and their successours. For the same businesse also Remigius the prior of S. Albons, and manie other went over to their great colls, charges, and trauell, affer he was transported into France.

I find mozeover about the same time, that the kings brother earle John erhibited a fore complaint against the Romane legat and other bishops for that the archbillyop of Canturburie, affer the appeale made buto the apostolike sea, had put his lands buber interdiction for his mariage made with the earle of Glocelfers daughter: which when the legat heard, he forthwith confirmed the appeale, and released the earles lands of the aforefaid interdiction. The fame time also, the tenth part of all the moucable gods through

Framen.

wards.

The Maiot.

In. Richard Cetteth things on fale. Ran.Higd. Wil.Paruus.

An. Reg. 2.

mozongh the realing of England was lented to the aid of the warres in the holie land . And this collection on, palling under the name of an almes, was extenned upon the goos as well of the spirituall men as temporall. After all this, Is. Richard deficous to fet order in the government of his realme, appointed Dugh bis

thop of Durham to have the rule of the north parts

Lingh biffiop governeth the north parts. Marth Paris.

william Log= champe bulhop of Elic.

as thefe inflice from Humber northwards toward Scotland, delinering buto him also the heeping of it Winchester castell : the residue of the kingdome (with the custodie of the towie) he assigned to the gonernance of William Longthampe bithop of Clie. thome he had made thefe inffice of that part, and chancellour of the realme, a man of great viligence and knowledge in the administration of things, but perie factious and defirous of rule, honour and riches farre about all measure. And with these two he tob ned in commission Dugh Bardulfe, William Bars Mall carle of Gepffow, og rather Denbanke, Gef 20 frey fit; Peter, t William Brewer, men of great honour, wifedome, and difcretion.

On the fift day of December, he departed from sed over onto Calice, where he found Philipearle of Planders readie to receive him, who attended byon him till he came into Pormandie, where the king held his Christmas at Burun, and immediatlie he

S. Kemige, where they concluded peace togither, to be kept betwirt them & their countries on ech part:

Furthermore, about the purification of our ladie, Eliano: the queene mother, and the ladie Alice fifter to the French king , Baldwine archbishop of Tanturburie. John bishop of Pozwich, Pugh bishop of

Durham, Geffrey bilhop of Minchelter, Reignold thop of Salisburie, and Hugh bishop of Cheffer, with

Beffrey the elect of Porke and John earle of Por taigne the kings two brethren, by commandement of the king patted over into Pozmandie, to commen should ordeine or rather confirme the lushop of Clie his chancellour to be loso cheefe tuffice oner all Engo land, and the bishop of Durham to be losd fusice

Some write, that now at this prefent, the kind with him before his letting forward.

their oths and feales in the feath of faint Hilarie.

R.Houed. ting Bichard Canturburie, and went to Douer, there to take was palleth ouer in ter, and so on the elementh day of December he pale to Pomandie for over into Calice, there he found Politicarle of Vadum janels Remigy. twitt y kings the which was put in writing, and confirmed with of England and france.

Il Houed

Contention betwirt two bilhops.

M.Palan fin

from Erent northwards. But when love they were 3 thus advanced to fuch dignities, howhever they came by them directlico; indirectlic, free it is , that immediatlie therebyou, Artie and discording artie betweet them: for waying proud and infolent, they distained echother, contending which of them thousa beare most rule and authoritie, informat that what so ever fæmed god to the some; the other milliked, as in cales there parteners in authoritie and equall, it of tenhameneth . The like hereof is noted before be in diverse kings reigned. For the nature of ambith on is to delight in fingularitie, to admit no peere to gine place to no superior, to acknowledge no equal. Dereta alludeth the poet bevie neatlie, and evenible fieth it in the old Romans, the sever of inhole actions odles indilieramontifications. Romaliede er abam sacto post renga piedore : 1000 : 147 2 Plebeinsquories fuffrag in Dendiantir ; 11 11 27 11 11 Cerdonimg animos precious foruilibus at g 2 200 1. 14 Turpibus obsequis cupialatha muneribista 25 Pt proprys rebus car went publica omifica . 30 is continued at this day, as by the boos circulating may be gathered, and opinaritie obscured, both here

कर हुए, में मिड रणकां बुद्ध काए। हैंद्र र and elsewhere;

Perg formi mellium multis comitantilus irent; Inflati vi vento folles ac fronte superba, coc.

Pozeouer, at the fame time he caused his two bres then, earle John, and Octtrey the clear archbilhop of Porke to take an othnot to returne into England during the terme of their yeares nert infuing, with out his confent and licence first had. This he did fores fæing lihat might happen, proulding as it were as gainst such practices as his brethren might happilie attempt againft him. But pet his mother quene @ lianoz procured him to renoke that occre immediats lie, least it might sæme to the world, that hir sonnes Mould fland in feare one of another. And fo the earle of Mortaigne was licenced to returne into Eng. Carle John land at his pleasure, swearing an oth at his depars licenced to reture to obcie the kings beheaft, and truelie to ferue turne into him, according to the dutie of a god and lotall lub, England. icit. The bishop of Elie lood chancellour and chase inflice of England was also fent backe hither into this realme, to let forward things behouefull for the kings fournie.

Inlike maner the king fent to Rome to obteine that the late bilhop of Elie might be constituted the The bilhop popes legat through both the provinces of Cantur of Chereburie and Porke, and likelvife through Males and Ireland. Which was some granted by the bulles of pope Clement the third, bearing date the g. of June. For the which office the bilhops gave him 1500. marks, to the great offence of the king, as he thewed afferward to cardinall Danufan that came to bilit came to an enterview with the French king at Oue 30 him when he arrived in the riner of Tiber, being by on his journele towards Deffina, as after may appeare. But in the meane time, calling togither the loads and pieces of those his dominions on that side the lea, to wit, Pozmandie, Bzitaine, Aniou, Politon, Polydor. and Onien, he consulted with them what number of foldiors and how manie thips it thould be connent ent for him to take with him and furnith into Alla: and herewith he did command them also to obeie bishop of Bath, William Bishop of Clie, Buberthis 40 Robert earle of Lelcester, whom e he appointed to remaine amongst them as his lieutenant or viceges rent of those parts during histolence.

4 But here to leave king Richard in confultate on for matters appertening to his fournie, and the to brieflie what happened (by the waie) to the Jewes, which as then dwelt heere in England, after that king Kithard was palled oner into Posmandie : pe W. Paruus have heard how after the riot against them at Lone von, when the king was crowned, he toke older that they should remaine in peace onder his profes ction, and commanded that no person spould in anie wife molest them. But nowaster that he was gone ouer, and that the fouldiers (which prepared thems felues to follow him) began to affemble in routs, the heads of the common people began to war wild, and faine would they have had foure occasion of railing a beanc to the new tumult against the Jewes, whome (for these but Jewes, mercifull blurie practiced to the bidwing of manie an honest man) they most readle hated, withing twens the archbuthops of Canturbucic and Porks 60 most earnealist their expulsion but of Cingland Derbyon by realiniof a riot committed latelie against then, ar the towne of Linin possolle, where mamis of them were lating, other people in other parts of the realiste, taking occasion hereat, as if the phao beene called op by the found of a vell or trumpet, a sole against theat in those routed there they had any habitations famorobbed and bet them after adile videred and most riotous maker.

> As at Stamford (on the faire day in Lent) at Line John Textorcolne, and at Popke, much in citie after a number of them had beine beffeged certoine dates within a toine of the hings (whither they fled for fuccour) one five hundred of their learned gonernours caused source hundred of fauth Houseden their companie to consent to have their theore ent and Textor.

one at an others hands, he himself culting his wines theot first whose name was Anna, then his chilozens, one after another, and last of all sue himselfe, onlie rather than he would fall into the hands of the this Mians, that had thus long belieged them. The red perceining what their great Kabbi had done, fet fire upon all their good and substance, which they had got ten into the tower with them, and so consuming the fame, would have burnt also the residue of their fellowes which would not agree to the Rabbies counfell, in the cruell murthering of themselves, if they had not taken a ffrong turret hard by within that tower, and defended themselves both from the fire and crueltie of their brethren, who had made awaie themselves in such manner as I have sato : and that to the number of foure hundred, or (as some write) fine hundicd at the leaft.

On the mosow, those that were faucd, called out to the people, and not onelie thewed how and after what fort their fellowes were dispatched, but also of, 20 fered to be baptised, and forsake their Judaisme, if they might have their lives faucd from the imminent + present danger itherein they saw themselves to be weapped, through the furie of the people. To be thost, this thing was granted, and they came footh, howbeit they were no somer entred into the prease. but they were all flaine, and not one man of them preferued.

After this also, the people ran to the cathediall durch, and broke into those places where their bonds 30 and obligations laie, by the which they had diverse of the kings lubicas bound buto them in most buconfcionable fort, and for fuch detestable blurie as (if the authors that write thereof were not of credit) would hardlie be beloued. All which enivences or bonds they folemnelie burned in the middest of the church. After which, ech went his waie, the fouldiers to the king, and the commons to their houses, and so was the citie quieted. This happened at Borke on on the 15.0f that moneth, those that inhabited in the towne of S. Comunosburie in Suffolke, were set bpon, and manic of them flaine. The residue that el caped, through the procurement of the abbat then named Samson, were expelled, so that they never had anie dwellings there fince that time.

Thus were the Jewes bumercifullie dealt with in all places in maner through this realme, the first be ginning whereof chanced at London (as before pe have heard) and the next at Lin, of which I thinke it 50 god to note some part of the maner therof, although bræflie, and so to returne to my purpose. The occasion therefore of the fumult at Lin chanced by this meanes: it fortuned that one of the Jeives there was become a chillian, where with those of his nation were so moved, that they determined to kill bim where locuer they might find him. And herebpon they let byon him one date as he came by, through the Arests: he to escape their hands fled to the next church; but his countriemen were so desirous to ex: 60 ecute their malicious purpole, that they folioined him Will, and inforced themselnes to breake into the thurch byon him. Herewith the notic being railed by the christians that fought to faue the converted Jew. a number of mariners being forreners, that were arrived there with their beliels out of fundic parts. and diverse also of the townshinen came to the refeur, and fetting byon the Jewes, caused them to flee into their boules.

The townshiren were not verie earnest in pursu ing of them, bicanfe of the kings proclamation and ordinance before time made in favour of the Temes: but the mariners followed them to their houses, and dinerse of them, robbed and sacked their gods, and finallie fet their divellings on fire; and to burnt them bpaltogither. These mariners being inriched with the spoile of the Jewes gods, and fearing to be called to accompt for their bulawfull act by the kings of ficers, got them forthwith to thipbord, and hotting by failes, departed with their thips to the fea, and fo escaped the danger of that which might have beine or therwise laid to their charge. The townelmen being called to an accompt excused themselves by the mariners, burdening them with all the fault. But although they of Lin were thus excused, pet they of Porke escaped not so casilie. For the king being abuertised of such outrage, done contrarie to the order of his lawes and expresse commandement, wrote o uer to the bilhop of Clie his chancellour, charging him to take cruell punishment of the offendors.

The bithop with an armie went to Poske, but the there authors of the riot hearing of his comming, fled into Scotland: pet the bilhop at his comming to the citie-caused earnest inquirie to be made of the whole matter. The citizens excused themselves, toffer red to prove that they were not of counsel with them that had committed the riot, neither had they aided noz comforted them therein in anie maner of wife. And in deed the most part of them that were the offendors, were of the countries and fownes niere to the citie, with such as were crossed into the holie land, and now gone over to the king, so that verie few or none of the substantial men of the citie were found to have toined with them . Powbeit this would not excuse the citizens, but that they were put The citizens to their fine by the front bilion, enerte of them pateing of yothe put his portion according to his power and abilitie in to their fine his power and abilitie in for flaught Substance, the common fort of the pore people being ter of the pardoned, and not called into judgement, fith the Jewes, ringleaders were fled and gone out of the waie: and thus much by wate of digression touching the Zews.

Pow to returne onto the king, who in this meane time was verie bufie to provide all things necessas Palmelundaie are, being the 17.0f Parch: and op- 40 rie to let forward on his fournie; his thips which lais in the mouth of the river of Saine, being readie to put off, he twke order in manie points concerning the state of the common-wealth on that side, and thefelie he called to mind, that it thould be a thing necessarie for him, to name the should succeed him in the kingdome of England, if his chance should not be to returne againe from follong and danges rous a fournie. De therefore named (as fonce fuppole) Matt. Well his nephue Arthur, the sonne of his brother Gettreb buke of Britaine, to be his successour in the kingdome, a young man of a likelie profe and princelie towardnesse, but not ordeined by God to succeed o ner this kingdome. About the same time the bithop of Glie, lood thancellour and cheefe justice of England, toke up to the kings ble, of enerie citie in England two palfres and two imprer hordes, for everie abbeic one palfrie and one fumpter hooffe; a everie manour tothin the realme found also one palfrie and one sumpter horse, Moreover, the law bithop of Elie belivered the gonernament of Poskethire to his brother Divert de Longchampe: and all those knights of the faid thire, the which would not come to make antiver to the law oponiummons given them, he commanded to be apprehended and by and by cast in prison. Also when the histop of Durham was returned from the king and comic orier into England to go unto his charge, at his meeting with the losd chancellour at Clie (notwithstanding that he showed him his letters patents of the grant made to him to be inflice from Trent northward) the fait lood chancellour tahing his fournie to Southfinell with him, there detel The burken ned him as pringer, fift he han made furnament. Durban to ned him as priloner, till he had made furrender to fremed die him of the castell of Windlog, & further had beliues berm-

'n

The flanab= ter made of the Tewes e: Lin.

william de

The kings

nauie is fet forth.

Baion.

Sabling,02

Dabuille.

Polydor.

Bleierg of Panifhment

Chili.

red to him his fonnes, Henrie de Putley, and Gil bert de la Ley, as pledges that he thould keepe the peace against the king and all his subjects, untill the faid prince thould returne from the holie land. And fo he was ochwered for that time, though Chortlie after. and whilest he remained at Poweden, there came to him Ofbert de Longchampe the lord chancellors brother, and William de Stutenille, the ichich caused the falo bishop to find sufficient suertie that he should not thence depart without the kings licence, or the 10 lood chancelloss, so long as the king should be abfental Derebpon the billiop of Durham fent know leage to the king how and in what fort he had beine handled by the chancelloz.

In the meane time the king was gone into Galcoigne, where he belieged a castell that belonged to one William de Chili, and toke both the callell and the owner, whome he caused to be hanged for the spoiles and robberies which he had committed byon pilgrims that paffed by those parts toward Compo 20 Kella, to visit the bodie of faint James. After this the king came backe buto Chinon in Aniou, and there toke order for the fetting forth of his nauic by fea, ouer which he amointed cheefe governours Gerard archbithop of Aur, Bernard bithop of Baieur, Kobert de Sablius, Kichard de Camuille, and Willip am de Hozz de Alerun, commanding all those that thould passe forth with his said naute, to be obedient buto these persons as his deputies and lieutes nants. Herewith they were appointed to provide 30 viduals to ferue all those that hould go by sea for the space of 60. daies.

The king also made the same time certeine oze dinances to be observed among the scafaring men which tended to this effect:

I Hirst, that if any man chanced to flea an other on the Chipbozo, he Chould be bound to the dead bodie and to throwne into the lea.

2 Secondie, if he killed him on land, he thould pet be bound to him as before, and so buried quicke 40 togither.

Brailers.

Thirdlie, if any man thould be convicted by lawfull witnesse, that he drew any sveapon to strike any other, or chanced by Ariking at any man to draw bloud of him that was smitten, he should lose

Fourthlie, if he gave but a blowe with his fift without bloudshedding, he should be plunged them fenerall times over head and eares in the water.

for everie time to miluling himfelfe, forfeit an ounce of filuer.

6 Sixtlie, that if any man were taken with theft orpickerie, and thereof convided, he should have his head polled, and hot pitch powied upon his pate, and bpon that, the feathers of some pillow or cuspion haken aloft, that he might thereby be knowne for a there, and at the next arrivall of the thirs to any land, be put forth of the companie to læke his aduens

These were the Catutes which this famous prince did enact at the first for his nauie, which sithens that time have been verie much inlarged. About the same time John Bilhop of Whiterne in Scotland, fuffras gane to the church of Porke, ordeined Geffrey arch bilhop of Porke, preest. At the same season also the ex lection of the fame Geffrey was confirmed by pope Clement, who among other things that he wrote to the chapiter of Posks on his behalfs, in the end he " addeth these words: The dow therefore admonth you ce all, and by the apolfolicall builes command you, that co pou erhibit both reverence and honour buto him as unto your prelat, that thereby you may ameare com" mendable both befoze God and man. Given at La teran in the nones of Harch and third years of our gouernment.

Whilest these things were in dwing, there came into France legats from the faid Clement, to move the two kings to make all the speed pelible towards their iourneis, bicause of the great vanger wherein things fod in Paleffine, requiring prefent helpe. Herebpon king Kichard (his men and promision being readic) commanded that his thips thould let for ward, a to coast about by the streids of Giberalter: Polydor. re to come buto Parleilles, there he appointed to king kichard ameet them, and so with a chosen companie of men he his journese. also set fouth thitherwards by land, and comming Rog. Houed. to Towas, received the scrip and state as a pilgrime thould, at the hands of the archbishop there.

After this, both the kings of England and France met at Wiseley in the octanes of the nativitie of S. John Baptist, and when they had remained there two dates they palled footh to the citie of Lion; where Anno Reg. 2. the two kings departed in funder, and each one kept his fournie, the one toward Guenes, where his name was appointed to come to him, and the other to Mars feilles, there to met with his flet, according to his appointment. But the English thips being let and The English stated by the way by contrarie winds and rigozous fleet stated by tempeles, which toffed them to and fro upon the coaffs contrarie of Spaine, could not come in any convenient time winds. on Spanic, como nos como un superior spanic, como marfeilles, so that king Richard thinking long Ewentie gala to farrie for them, sperceining they could not keepe lies stwelve their appointed time, he hired thips from all places other vellels thereabouts, and embarking himfelfe and his men in faith Houed. the fame, opon faint Laurence euen, failed footh to. Apon the feas wards Sicile, there he was appointed to meet with uenth day of Reine Mallin

Here is to be noted, that king Kichard made not all that iourneie from Parseilles to Pellina by sca, Rog. Houed. but fundrie times comming on land, hired horffes, and rode forth alongst the coast, appointing with his thips and gallies where to meet him, and sometimes he rested certeine dates togisher in one place or other as at Portocipin, at Paples, and at Salerne, from whence there departed from him Baldwine archbis thop of Canturburie, Hubert bishop of Salisburie, and the load Kanulfe de Blanuille, the which taking bpon them to go before, with prosperous wind and weather in thost space landed at Acon, which was then belieged as you shall heare hereafter.

king Philip.

At Kome the king came not, but being within the Areame of the river of Tiber, there came to him a 5 Fillie, if any man reviled another, he thould 50 cardinall named Daaufanus, bishop of Hostia, to thome he spake manie reproduct words of the co- King Richard netoulnelle vled in the court of Kome (a vice repus blameth the ted the common nurtle of all mischefes, as one ver coart of Rome rie well noteth, Vbi auaritia est habitant ferme omnia ibidem Flagitia, impietas, periuria, furta, rapina, Fraudes at q doli, insidia q or proditiones, Iurgia o infanda cades, oc.)

Bicaule they had received feaven hundred marks ture, without all hope of returns onto his fellowes. 60 for the confecration of the bishop of Hauns, and 1500, marks for the confirming of the bishep of Elie the popes legat. And againe no small summe of monie they had received of the archbifton of Burdes aursuhen upon an accusation brought against him by the cleargie of his province he should have beine deposed. In the meane time whiles king Richard thus palled forward towards Pellina, the navie that was appointed to coast about Spaine and to met him at Parfeilles was tolled (as before is faid) with wind and tempetis, and a part thereof, that is to wit, ten thips driven here and there on the coasis of Spaine, of which number nine arrived at Lisbone and the tenth being a thip of London arrived at the citie of Sylva, which was then the ottermost citie of foz couctouf= nelle.

Spaine,

Cheft and picherie,

Remilerg.

Wil. Parnus.

C.

cn

CU

Spaine, that was inhabited with chaillians.

The Saraceus at that time made warres against the king of Portingale, so that the Portingales stod in nad of aid, in so much that they of Sylua did not onelic intreat the Englishmen to state with them for a time, but also got grant of them to breake their thip, with the timber whereof they might the better fortific their towne, promiting that their king thould recompense them with an other as god as theirs, and also further satisfic them for their service, during the time of their above there in defense of that citie. Likewisc of those that arrived at Lisbone there went to the number of fine hundred but faint Francs, there the king of Postingale then was, loking to be affaulted by his enimies: but by the counterfet death of the great B. of the Saracens named 130iac Almiramunoli (who feared these new succours, and doubted the fequele of his dwings, to the end he might depart with honour, he fained himfelfe ocad) the king of Portingale was for that time prefentlic delinered out of danger.

IR obert De abumlic.

The king of Dogungale.

li king of the Baraceno.

Bichard de

Camuille.

Berebpon he returned to Lisbone, where he found the score and thee other thips of king Richards nas nie there newlie arrived, ouer the which were thefe capteins Robert de Sabuuille, and Richard de Camuille: which at their comming to land could not to gonerne their people, but that some naughtiefels lowes amongst them fell to breaking and robbing of orchards: some also entring into the citie, behaued themselves verie disorderlie. But yet by the comming of the king, their lewonesse was traied, so that he semed not to seke revenge of the pilgrims, but rather with courteous meanes to bitole their on lawfull attempts: wherebuto the diligence of the English capteins not a little prevailed for a while, but pet for all that could be done on both fides, within the daies after, a new tumult was raised betwirt the English pilgrims and the townshinen, and di uerfe hurt and killed on either part.

2 mutinie beclifhmenand the town men Englishmen commisted to puson.

The English

togither.

Whereboon the king caused the gates of the cti twirethe On- tie to be thut, and all those that were come from the thips into the citie to eat and drinke (being in numb ber about seauen hundred) were apprehended and committed to ward: and before they could be releafed, fir Robert Sabunille and fir Kichard Camuille were glad to agrae with the king, so as all former offenses being remitted, and things taken by either part restored, the Englishmen promised to observe the peace against the king of Portingale and his people; and he likewise couchanted for him and his subieds, that they hould keepe the peace against all pilgrims that went fouth in this botage, and ble them like his freends, and thus the quarell ceased.

Sone affer, the English nauie departed from Lisbone, and came buto the mouth of the river of Taie, betweene Caperico and Belem, where the same daie on faint James œue the lood William de Fozzoulerun arrived also with thee and thirtie other thins, and so then they were in all about an hundled and fir failes berie well furnified and manned, and so from thence taking their course towards Parsels 60 les, finallie they arrived there in the octanes of the affumption of our ladie; and flateng there an eight vaics (till they had repaired fuch things about their thips as were needfull) they let forward againe, and came to Pellina in Sicile in the feast of the exaltation on of the croffe. On the funday following also came the French king thither, having lost no finall part of his nauic by tempests of weather.

Chep arrive at Soellina.

King Kichard as then remained at Saleru, and hearing that his name was gone towards Deffina. he departed thence on the thirt centh day of Septems ber, and halfed forth towards Dellina, palling by Helphi and Cocenza, and to at length comming to Faro de Pellina, he palled the fame, and on the 23. In Bulan day of September arrived at Dellina with great arriving mode of trumpets and other instruments, to the Michigan wonder of the French king and others that beheld his great pullance and rotall behautour now at his comming. The same time he went onto the French kings lodging, to commen with him of their built nelle : and immediatlie the French king twhe the fea, in purpofe to have paffed forward on his tournie but by contrarie wind he was fraied and kept backe within the hauen, wherevoon both the kings desermined to winter there, and in the meane time to mo uide themselves of all things necessarie for their ion nie, against the beginning of the next spring. On the 30 of September he received his litter the quiene of Sicile the widow of William late king of that Ile, whome he placed in a Arong fortresse, which he take the same day, and left therein a convenient garison of men of armes and demilances for the lafegard of the place and of his faid lifter.

Wut now for the better binderstanding of the cause of such quarelling as fell out betwirt the Eng. lithmen and the Sicilians, vie thail boverstand that a little before the arrivall of the kings of England and France in those parts, king William of Sicile was departed this life, leaving no iffue behind him. Wither upon the loads of the Fle elected one Tancred to their king, a bastard sonne of Roger sometime king of that land, and grandfather to this last deceafed king William. This Tancred though he receis ned king Richard berie courteouslie: yet he greatlie trusted him not, bicause he demanded the downie of his fifter quene Joane, wife to the late king Wil liam to be restored, thereas he had not readie mos nie to discharge it. Furthermore to depart with the citie of Pount Achaired faint Angelo, with all the countrie therbuto belong, gold. ing, which was indeed affigued to hir for hir dologie, he thought in no wife profitable : but king Richard bid not onelie require that citie and countie with a bemands in chaire of gold, according to the cultome of that king, the downed dome in right of his litter, as due to hir by way of his litter with hir dowrie, but also he required to his owne vie a ta, to k, william ble of gold conteining twelve fot in length, and one fort and an halfe in breadth, & tivo treffels of gold to beare by the same table, with 24. silver cups, and as manie offices of filter, with a tent of filke of fuch largenesse that two hundred knights might fit at meat within it: also fortie thousand measures of theat, with as manie of barlie, and as manie of wine, befide one hundred armed gallies, with all furniture and vittels lufficient to ferue the gallie-men in the fame for the terms of two yearss. These things he demanded as due to him being heire to his father king Henrie, accordinglie as was denifed by king Milliam in his last will and testament, which demands fæmed intollerable to the faid Tancred: fo that if he could have Chiffed the matter, he was loth to have heard thereof.

Mozeoucr, bicause pope Clement in right of the thurth pretended a title to the realme of Sicile, now that king William was dead without heires, he doubted of some practile that might be made against him betwirt king Richard and the pope. Therebpon he thought to provide against all attempts that might be made, fortifieng his townes a castels with firing garifons, and take counfell with the citizens of Dellina, by that meanes he might soneit dispatch his countrie of that present danger, and procure B.Richard to get him forward on his fournie.

Whilest these things were in hand, there was mi nistred to the English men occasion of displeasure; for as it offentimes chanceth (where an armie is)certeine of the burulic fouldiers within Pelling vico

D DC

gl F

themselues somewhat riotouslie, where boon the citizens offended therewith, got them to armour, and maled all the fouldters out of the citie. King Ki thard who late in campe without the walles neere to the citie, was so highlie displeased herewith, that he caused his men to arme themselues, and to prepare laboers and other necessarie things to assault the ci tic: but by the mediation of the French king & curs teous excuse of king Lancred (alledging the fault to rest onelie in a fort of rude citizens, whom he promifed to punish) the matter was taken by, and stated for a time, till at length it was perceived, that the Sicilians subtilie went about to feed king Richard with faire words, till he thould be readie to fet for maros on his fournie, and to thould the matter patte without further punishment.

Ocception king Kichard, not minding to be fo mocked at their hands, approched one date to the wals and gates with his armie in god araie of bat. tell to give the affault, which was done so earnefflie, 20 and so well mainteined, that finallie the citie was entred by force, and manie of the citizens flaine, but the flaughter had beene much greater, if king Richard had not commanded his men to spare the swood, mov ned with the lamentable notic of poze people crieng to him for mercie and grace. The Englishmen has ning got possession of the citie pight by the banners with the armes of the king of England round about the wals, where with the French king was fore dif pleased, and required that the same might be taken 30 bowne, and his fet bp: but the king of England would not so agrie. Denerthelesse to pacific the French kings mod, he delivered the citie of Dellina into the cultodie of the knights Templers and Holpitalers, till he might be fatisfied of such things as he bemanded of king Tancred.

After this on the 8. daic of Daober, the two kings of England and France, before a great number of earles, barons, and others, both of the cleargie and temporaltic, twke their folemne othes, that the one 40 Hould defend the other, and also either others armie in this tournie, both comming and going, without fraud or deceipt : and the like of was received by the earles and barons on both parties. Then the tivo kings by adule and consent of both their are mies deviled thele ordinances.

1 That all pilgrims which chanced to die in this fournie might dispose at their pleasure all their armour, hordes, and apparell, and halfe of those things home into their countries, and the other halfe Mould be at the discretion of Walter archbishop of Rouen, Manser bishop of Langres, of the maister of the temple, and of the mailler of the Polpitall, of Lough duke of Burgoigne, of Rafe de Coucie, of Drogo de Parlow, of Kobert Sabuill, Andzew de Chauen nie, and of Gilbert Walcoile, which thould implote the fame towards the support of the wars in the holie land against the infidels as they thought most er-

Place fogbid:

2 That no man should place at ance game within the armie for monie, except knights and chapleins, the which should not lose in one date and night about 20 Millings, they to forfeit an 100 Millings fo off as they left about that summe: the persons afficiend. med to have the fame to be distributed as afore is faid. The two kings might place, and command their fernants in their prefence like wife to plaie, fo that they exceeded not the fumme of 20 thillings. And als fothe fervants of archbilhops, bilhops, earles and barons, by their maitters commandement might play, not exceeding that summe: but if anie servants oz mariners, or other of like degree, were found to play without licence, the fernants thould be whiped naked thee dates round about the campe, except they ransomed forth themselves, at the pleasure of the persons aboue named: and the mariners should be plunged over head and eares in the fea thee mosnings togither, after the vie of feamen, except they redæmed that punishment, at the discretion likewise of the faid persons: and those of other like meane degresbeing neither knights not chapleins thould be punished as scruants.

3 That if anie pilgrime borrowed anie thing of an Borrowing. other whilest he was on his tournie, he should be bound to paie it: but if he borrowed it before his fetting forth, he was not bound to answer it till his re-

4 That if anie mariner og feruant, retoined in Souldiers og wages with anie man in this fournie, departed from mariners de= his matter without licence, no other person might re-cetue him, and if he did, he should be punished at the discretion of the forenamed persons.

That no vitteler 02 other should buy any bread Tittelers. to fell againe, nozany meale within the compate of the campe, except the same were brought by a stranger, neither might they buy any paast or other thing to fell againe in the campe, or within a league of it.

6 That if anie man bought come wherof to make bread, it was appointed how much he thould gaine in one measure beside the bran.

7 That other occupiers, which bled buieng and felling of wares, thould gaine one penie in 10 pence, neither thould anie man refuse anie of the kings coine, ercept it were broken within the circle.

8 That no man thould buy ante fleth to fell it as gaine, except a living beath, which he thould kill with

o That no man Gould make bread to fell, but after the rate of penie loancs. Wherin the penie En glish was appointed to go for foure pence Antonine. All these ordinances with other were decreed and or deined to be observed and kept by the counsell, confent, and agreement of the kings of England, France, and Sicile.

But to returne now to the diffention betwirt the Polydor. Englishmen and them of Pellina: ye shall binder frand that the tumult being once ceaffed, and diverse of the chefe offendors in the late commotion put to death, king Tancred Chorthie after came thiffer, and fought to audio all suspicion out of king Richards head, that he might conceine of him for being in a nie wife culpable in that which his fubiens of Delliwhich they had with them, to that they tent nothing 50 na had attempted against him, and therefore having recovered monte of his frænds, he restored buto king Richard the downie of his lifter quene Joane, and further offered buto him to joine in new allie ance with him, offering his daughter in mariage onto Arthur duke of Britaine, the kings nephie, with a great fumme of monie for hir downie, if it fo Mould please him.

Bing Richard accepted the offer, and to inined in peace and affinitie with the king of Sicile, receiving 60 of him twentie thouland ounces of gold for the fame mariage to be had, and an honogable downie affige ned fouth of the lands that belonged to the faid Are thur for the faid ladie to into during hir life, in case the furnitued hir hulband. And if it to chanced, that by the death of either of them the mariage could not take place, then should king Kichard restore the same twentie thousand ounces of gold againe. But before these twentie thousand ounces of gold thus given by king Tancred for the mariage of his daughter, he gave other twentie thouland ounces to king Kidjard for an acquitance and quite claime of all manner of duties, rights, and demands, which either he or his fi-Her might pretend, either by reason of anie bequest, Downie, or anie other manner of waie.

99.f.

Bere

hings of En= gland and Dadinanceg

is. Richard affalteth and entreth the lemne oth.

fe

The temes of Derbor-

Carchillence

....

Here is to be motor, that before this sometation of prair was had, king bledand provided for his store defende, in case that being I ancred and his people touch have attempted force against him, in formuly that he feetified cortome places, and built a frong called ainst topon the top of an init fall by Polica, bindy called be called Paregration. Also there as the admiral of Suche called Margaret, and one Joy desir del Posse, sucu of great audiopsi e budet king and riches, which they had either in gold or filmer, king Richard ferzod byom their houses, their gallies, and policious, to that he make hundelte as frong as he could, to relift all attempts that might be mente against Jumby Jis continues. 15st note to pro-

The business bring that agreated befined them, great before deserte to artic betreut being Kidput and king Thelip, the tras much offended took king Richard, for that he had thus blod biolence against 20 from of Dollar, and compoled bing Lances to agra both him for munic, to the great offense ara break of the laters of Derborrough, fith the Socieand being liberalist anded and formilled the dealerans armic both billels and necellarie penations. The Frenchmen also had much count thereat, that Courter after born a famili occasion they picked a querel against the Cognitioners, and from better fell to firebes on both fibes, to that there had beene Distribution are mandy part a finnighter communitied, of the time kings 50 dress of all gas beds so the season from help to appeals the francise beginn.

Wet this buline Se through it was quietler as then taken by and flauch, yet beed it forh nifeleafore bethat he princes and their people, that it incure to the great hart and himberance of their good process dengs in their tabak enterprise to that the occasion of a full and perfect todayse reliber hipper out of their handes, as you that he are hereafter.

An other also of the charlest course of greater he franche two kings was, for that king thehand in 4 familiar talks confessed butte berg phine, that he dominica de Long el Comeres doughter, arte clariche firefahr his faher Abels : which graves being liping and a little, change by market our market for a time, and could allowed other causes of his picaline, increased to defame king hichery to the head, as one that fought has come con familing these whom he ought emper to have being but For ingenous.

White the Curich and French arrans thus to 50 ineradal he bater has a Sude, enterina ding the termines attracted, to the hondermore of hay technic purpose, in the making of his prominus traductio his increa, he put caudio regims to be framed, his things to be needed called, tigged and reposed of fuch hours as they had received both in the long bridge which they had made, and also by currenc becomes the bight training the time of their being there, had in disorte places grainne and cally dress strongs to the great danger of these to leste, and other decane. Doublem at the Come firms in business of mixigs in his giving in his posses wes, reducating the courself his region to the facility we inch inche dent contra profita mailiony myrche in fea. and commany alant to land, found pass all has gods ha mà clear ir bandilir. Fariarman de decred. कार्य होते काई काई प्रकृत के किया विकास के किया के किया me procedures produce at agree, spot comp book the minimum to be next been to be a found have the from pude-just of his bad account forms and described. drucker our faier, dans chands du dans hans chart COME TO BE HAVE BELLEVILLE.

the objection many by hope become maid by his charice general at Spellant an Comp mend Danber and lecond grant of his tragme. Also boon a godin repentance inhereforth at his picale for mercuful God to truck his hart, he called all those prelates touriber touch fourt then both birm at Mark in me ir dapid of Regulat de Pole, there bering in perfence of them all failing between boom his bases confiden he confession the sidner life which he had in inductors lost before that time lea, and humble receives remance intermed him by the farm biffings, and to be Cancers, her eat of Perios but all drie frankes 10 came ancio man, featury Cod, and deligible to haraffer his labors.

Ambromechang of the great from of which Jandpun, he fort for him own wite Calabris, the Tiber Jos cause to spelling, and bring after funtric quelines that. by king histome, he made incorder had and here there in : as in Honeden and other legions if may appear which his brackenists I paste outre. About the family time he gave batchis nother Dike, the forme of his filer Pant, functions inchest of Superic Six cour fire of Darke. Hot although from these consenses to receipe him as their last, and to be homage to him, pet other extends him, alichging that they inculous transmice their features true to the bing, tell they much for him against, a table both him face to face. Wherebon he king changing his purpole, gave incie he lad Ohethe country of Ponton in Best of the fall countries of Piche, as after that appear.

The then kings of England and France held their Collect his year at Define, and fall the bong of Consists this great burning in bullioning his treature firster assumpt troughts are offer men of Barbor. bearte, to that it was thought he spressmore in a map not have naived his propositions over front in a tabate peace. In the moneth of Federates he foot his gallies is Papies, there to energy his mother and his built that hould be, to but the labor Heron-Swir durchter to the bring of Promeer and Philip carle of Flanders that come with them. You his mater queur Chance and the labor 15-rengania been to Briefler in Penglis, where they more honotable trumps of Pargard Ling Carculus abmeral. Department for content of Financial community to playles, and finding there the gallies of bing 180 had brestablish he Come, and he came to Dection, at the field following the bing of Constant in all things, till the french king having come diences, editors from about, and then he have absorber on his land. The first dair of Pund du dair of Enge and desputing from Policies, to go to the circle of Cohas, here to common with bury Lincols, who came dicher to man her.

har king Bahard innarkad, that he French k. Exhal king had individud king Canarad to int open the militarious being of England modes according their first one of some Copis mainn : and fir fir many colu accomplishment. the consideration and the same trade and an experiment for found give the admiratory. Burg Cancerd december alle to hing the hart loss in trees as the French hing pad appears to him concerning the source. Colore the a he man I deline pain for the same Our dis frommer conservance, has de dies so see the little part part part and part parties was to gut him our of his companie.

The French best percentage, expused to better from the construct there is induce morning; where phus pari propus nomui course his branc pr chance his in such count incoming the country of he can't of Figures: and raises the other bested for possible, he for promé of the though, Chesses him the Committees which king Cancilla had bedauserd incihim. On from any was out a little ababas here and bod out well what to fast, one what sp con committee du metre vous de plance. Su pet al kength in fair : word man I present the being it ...

Etr impe :

b

Circumsta d

Due

M)el

wart

Crysland

Matth 150,1 53.ga Rog. I

England (which to have some quarell which e may refuse to marrie with my litter. For these are but forged matters, and no truth resteth in them.

When the king of England bnderfood this maner of answer, he replied in this wife; That as for the French hings fifter , he might not marrie , for as much as he was able to produce god witnesse to prome that his father had lien with hir and got a child of hir. And as for his printe proceeding and practile his owne hand and his feale, the partie himfelfe being present who received them, the medenger also be ing not far off that carried them betweene both the parties.

When the French king was throughlie informed of the first point, through counsell of the earle of flanders and others, he pacified himselfe, and was contented to release the king of England of his faith given by oth for the contract made with his litter A. lice: in confideration of which releasement and des 20 liverance, the king of England covenanted to give pearelie to the French king two thouland marks of farling coine for the terme of fine yeares togither: and at his returne home, it was agreed, that he thuld also deliver buto the French king his litter the sato ladic Alice, with the towne of Gifors, and all other things which the French king had granted to him with his faid lifter. On the other part, the French king granted, that the dutchie of Britaine Hould americane to the dominion of the dutchie of Por 30 mandie. so as the duke of Britaine should be accompa ted the liege man of the duke of Pomandie, and that the duke of Pormandie Chould answer the French king for both the outchies, as well of Bate taine as Pozmandie. These agræments were ratio fied and confirmed with folemne oths received, and charters given boder their hands and feales, byon the 30. of Parch.

About this time the French king i now that the feason of the yeare was come) set forward toward 40 the holie land, leaving king Richard behind him in Sicile: and the two and twentith day afterhis let. ting forth from Pellina, he arrived at the liege of Acres of Acon. The same day also that the French king departed from Pellina, quæne Clianoz the mother of king Kichard arrived there, bringing with hir the ladie Berengaria the daughter of Sanctius the king of Pauarre, and the fourth day after quene Anane Cie Elianoz toke leave of hir fonne king Richard, and departed homeward towards England, taking hir 50 fournie by Kome about the butinette of Beffrey the elect of Pozke, as to intreat the pope that he would confirme and confecrate him archbillop, or to authorife some other to do it in his name. The ladie Berengaria remained behind with the kings lifter Joane quiene of Sicile.

After this in the moneth of Aprill, on the wednes day in the passion weeke, king Richard (after he had finished and made an end of all conclusions with king Tancred) did also set forward with his lister 60 Joane, who take with hir the ladie Berengaria daughter to the king of Pauarre, affianced to him long before, as aboue is partlie mentioned . Dis navie confisce in thirtene mightie great thips with triple failes, an hundred carikes or rather hulkes, and fiftic gallies. He was no loner abroad in the maine lea, but a great tempell arole, there with his whole name was fore toffed and turmoiled up and downe the leas, and at length driven on the coast of Cypies, where læking to take harbour, & to come on land, the Coppiots would not fuffer him, but their ed countenance to drive him backe, and to relift his landing. Also thereas fix of his thips were so definen by force of tempest from the residue, that thie of them perifyed, and thee being cast upon the shoare of Eppres before the kings arrivall there, the fouldiers and other people in the same were compelled to come on land for fauing their lives, where other wife they flod in danger of drowning, the people of the The affailing them in right cruell fort, flue diverte, and toke the relidue pailoners, and to deteined them for a certeine lealon.

King Kichard then bonder Canding this injurie to with Cancred , he nieded no further tellimonie than 10 him done by the Cypziots , perceiuing they would relist his landing, prepared himselse and his people to enter boon them by force. The king of Typies J fakius oz Turfach (thome Houeden nameth cmpe. rour of Cypies) had affembled the most part of all the power of men that he might make (though few of them were armed, 02 had any great skill in feats of warre) and caused them to set boods, logs of woo, benches, formes, and great cheffs afore them, as a defense, and as it were in feed of a wall, that by succour thereof they might the better keepe off their onti mie from landing.

But 18. Kichard to incouraged his men by his prefence, & hartened them with fuch comfortable words as he ottered onto them, that rowing to the Moare with their galies and finall botes, having the archers afore them, they easilie got to land, drove their enis a chase their mies backe, and to farre purfued them (being but enimics. formen, weatherbeaten, wearie, and weat) as conuenientlie they might, for the thortnes of time. Ling Kichard having thus got fot on land, approched the towne of Limezun, which he with his fouldiers en. tred, and finding it emptie of people (which were fled awaie) but full of riches and great plentie of vicus als, as come, wine, oile, and flety, he feised there-

The same day also the kings sisters and the ladie Berengaria with the relidue of the kings navie entred the haven of Limezun. In the meane time the king of Cypies (having escaped from the battell) got togither his men which were fled and difversed sundrie wates, and incamped within fir miles of king Richard, threatning that the next day he would eff Cones give battell: which when king Kichard under fod, he caused his people to be armed the next mozi ning long before day, and so comming by guides but to the place there the Cypriots with their king were with a comilodged, suddenlie they affailed them yer they had as fado banguis nie warning of his marching towards them, by reas theth the Cy fon thereof they were flaine like beafts in great prioto a chanumbers. Holwbeit, their king and a few other escar of their compe, ped and fled away naked, having no time to put on lohn Textor. their apparell, his treasure, horte, armour and sans bard were taken, which ffandard king Kichard ffraitwaies determined to send buto faint Comunds Ibzine and fo did.

Having thus vanquilled his adversaries, he came The R. of Jebacke to Limezun: and the third day after, Eule rufalem and king of Jerusalem and his brother Geffrey de Lu, other noble sonne named also Raimond earle of Tripoli, with Richard. other noble men, arrived at Limezun aforefaid, to vilit king Richard, and to offer him their fernices, and to became his men, in twearing feattie to him a gainst all other persons what soeuer.

The same day the king of Typzes perceining himfelfe bnable to relift the great pullance of king Kie chards armie, lent amballadours, and offered to king Richard the fumme of twentie thousand marks of Theoffers of gold, in recompense of the monie which his menthat the king of were drowned had about them, and allo to restore those to libertie which he had taken puloners, and to make delinerie to their hands of all their gods, Hur, thermore, he offered to go with him into the holic land personallic, and to serve him with an hundred bnights.

Che Englifb:

men do fealtie

1...4914 11 777 glane.

Cppies.

Matth.Paris. 110. ships and

The french king fetteth

twith from wards the holicland.

anog returneth by

Mellina to=

The lung of Cppics firb= mitteth himknights, 400 light horstemen, and 500 well armed fortmen. a also to beliver to king Richard his daugh ter and heire in hostage, and to acknowledge him his fourreigne lose, by flucaring to him fealtie for his hungdome, as for that which he should confesse to hold king Richard accepted these offers, and so the king of Cypies came in and fware fealtie to king Richard, in presence of the king of Jerusalem, the upon his oth then received, not to depart till all things concuanted on his part were performed. Then king Richard affigued tents for him and his to lodge in, and appointed certeine knights and other men of warre to have the custodie of him. But the fame day after dinner bpon repentance of that libich he had done, he decented his keepers and fale as waie, sending knowledge backe to the king that he would not frand to the concnants, which were concladed upon betwirt them.

Ling Richard famed to like the matter well fo nough, and for thinith belivered a part of his armie buto the king of Jerusalem and to the prince of Ans tioth, appointing them to purfue the king of Typies by land, whilest he with one part of his gallies and Robert de Eurneham with the other might search about the coast by fea, to prohibit his passage by water. In eneric place where they came, fuch thips and gallies as they found they feized into their hands, and no refictance was made against them, by reason 30 the people fled to the wods and mountains, leaving the cities, townes and castels boid in all fieds, where the king of the faid fir Robert de Turneham with their veffels began to appere. When they had taken their pleasure thus along it the coasts, they returned againe buto Limezun. The king of Zerusalem and the other that went forth by land, tipen they could not speed of their purpose, returned also, in which meane time a great number of Copylots came in, and submitting themselves to king Richard, were 46 received as his lubicas.

Enthe 12. daie of Maie, the lavie Berengaria daughter to the king of Panarre was maried according to a piecontract buto king Richard at Limesun aforefato in the Ale of Cypres, one of the kings thaplins executing the order of the marriage. The fame date also the was crowned by the billiop of Eureur, the archbilhops of Apamea and Aur, with the bilhop of Baion ministring buto him. After the folemnitic of this marriage and coronation ended, 50 king Richard fet forward with his armic into the countrie of Cypies, and first wan by surrender) the citic of Dicholia, and affer the firong castell of The rin, within the which was the daughter of the king of Copies, which ladie humblic valoed hir felfe buto 13. Richard, who counting it report to be extreame with such as submit themselves, and speciallie the female fer, according to the old fateng, Parcere Subscribe nobilis fit inclosus

From thence palling ferward, these callels were delimered into his hands, Baffes and Buffenent, Den, Amur, Candace, and afterwards all the other cas field and cities, townes and places of fireigh with in that 31c one after an other. Finallie, hearing that the king of Cypies was inclosed in an abbeie called Cap S. Andrew he marched thicherwards: but when the king of Copies heard of his apport, he came forthand inbutter bimfelfe thelie into his hands. The hing first agreemed him to the keeping of his chamberlaine Rafe Fitz Ceffrey and after fent him buto the citic of Tripoti, there to be kept in close pais fon. The when he heard he thenle be committed to fetters made of filuer, and to he was. But to proceed. After the king had let the countrie prince of Antioch, and other barons, and promifed 10 of Typics in god ffaie, he delinered the keeping thereof buto Richard de Camuille and Robert de Be arring thereof unto Riggero or Cammus and toward in the there onthe Eurneham. This down, byon the bednerdate in the fatureactu Whitenmake he twhe the sca againe, and passed of whitenmak ner to the citie of Acres, which as then was belieged being thele by the christian armie, as pe may read in the descripe turbaic also tion of the holie land, one lie giving you to boder the feat of frand, that luch was the valiancie of king Aichard S. Same thewed in manfull confreining of the citie, that his bic. praife was greatlie bruted both amongst the christie Galfridus Vinlant, laic in irons, he thould thoulie enothis life. Where buto king Richard then he heard of it, answered:

He faith well, and therefore bicause he is a noble, man, and our mind is not to have him dead, but ones ,, lie to be kept fafe from flarting anic more awaic, ,, and dwing new hurt, let him be chained in gives and ,,

20 ans and also the Saracens.

Dowbeit the secret enunitie betwirt him and the French king efflones remued by occasion of such discord as chanced betweet Guido king of Jerusas lem, and Conrade the marques of Tire, fo that par ties were taken, and thereas both the Difans and Geneuois did offer their fernice bnto king Kichard, pet bicause the Seneuois were consederat with the French king, who toke part with the marques, he refuled them, and received the Pilans, loining him- Dilens and felfe with king Outdo to lumort him against his o Geneuos, nimies.

Pereis to be rememberd, that before king Rie thard arrived at the liege, he incountred on the lea a mightie great thip called a Drommond, which one Mart Paris, Saphaldine the brother of Salavine a prince of the Nic. Triner Saracens had fent, to refresh them with vittels. Saphaldun, This thip king Kichard caused færcelie to be affailed with his gallies, and at length bowged hir with all the vittels and providen within the same as wild fire, barels of fire ferpents, armour and weapons of fundric forts, belides all the mariners and men of warre, ercept fuch as were taken to mercie and faned aline, being about 200' in the ubole, ithereas there were about the faint thip 500 men of warre, Manth Paris as foine write, though other have but 800.

But now to other accidents that chanced this pere. On Diofummer aue there was fuch an ecliple In ecliple d of the funne, the mone being the fame time 27 daies the funne. elo, that for the space of the houres for so long it lafled such darknesse come over the face of the earth, that even in the date time (for this ecliple began as bout nine of the clocke in the morning the flars ap house of the peared planishe in the element.

An the farme moneth of Aime, Richard de Came Manh. Pass bille, uhome the king had left (as ye have beard) go ucrijour in Oppies, chanced to fall fiche, and cont Bichard to ming without licruce to the fiche of Acres, there die Cantaliane co. Affer whole verifithe Cresista and those talled Cristones and Crimans received from the English had pitie of hir cale, and sent hir to his wife the new 60 obedience, and those to them a hirif, one that twas a querre, willing that the might be honorablic view. monke of the familie of Isafikis their former king: but Robert or Durincham, who after the beceaffe of Richard Camuille remained fold governour of the Ile, gatheteo a poliver of men rogither, and gining vattell to the new king (whom Houeden namen it ile formperour) vanquilled him with his complices, tokehim prioner, and hanged him on a paire of galower. The fame moneth also bied Kafe Fils Geffrey, who had the other king flac in cultodie and then king Lichard belivered him to the linights of the hospitall, who sent him to the cassell of Bargant, there fafelic to be kept as prifoner to the vie of the king of Chaland.

Poly will we returne but the affaires of Enge

date fath

Bobert De Curneham.

E noland ma= rieth the ladie Berengaria. Dir is crow= ned quane.

The king of

Caffels beli= uered to the king of England,

Ebe king o! Crusts again fabmitteth bunfelfe to the king of England. Rafe Fuz Gelfrey.

Polydor.

The Lord chancello; called the popeslegat in

The Catelie post of the lord chancel= Ran, Higd.

connocati= Monks of Couentrie bifplaced. Polydor. Ran, Higd. Wil. Paruus. The occasion. Ran Higd.

Wil.Paruus

Ran-Higd. Polydor.

Wincheller.

Che lord chancelloze meaning to John lowe.

Palin suo cap.

land and make time inention of the duings there. Da thall binderifand, that after king Auchard was fet forward on his tournie, William Longthampe loso charicellour and bithop of Clie, appointed (as pe have heard gouernour of the realme, began to crers cife his authoritie to the bitermolt, taking boon him the state of a prince, rather man of a subject. He have of late (as before perfaile heard) procured fuch fauor at the hands of pope Clement, that he was instituted fo that pretemoing a rule both ouer the clergie and tempozalticiand by reason that he had both the author ritie of pope and king to his hands, he bled the fame to his most advantage, as well in causes ecclesiasti call as tempozall, whereby he wrought manie owrel from both against them of the clergie and temporal tie. De mainteined such a portand countenance in his doings, that he would ride with a thousand horse fes, by meanes wherof then he came to lie at abbeis and other places (bringing with him fuch a traine) he 20 was verie burdenous buto them, speciallie when he late at their houses any space of time.

This man called a convocation at Welfminffer, therein at the fuit of High Pouant bishop of The fer, it was decreed, that the monks of Coventrie thould be displaced, and secular canons brought into that house to suplie their romes. Which was done by the authoritie of the faid lood chancellour, being bribed by the foresaid billyop of Chester (as some watters have recorded) for displeasure which he bare to 30 the monks, by reason of a frace which they had made bpon the said bishop in their church at Couentrie. and drawne bloud of him before the altar there, as he alledged.

But some have written, that the bishop of Cheffer procured a licence of the pope, to alter the fate of that durch in fort above mentioned, which is most likelic, surmiting against the monks, that they were most manifest and flubborne disturbers of that peace thurthmen: and yet he himselfe sowed the frise and diffention amongst them, and namelie betweene the prior and his couent. Moreoner, the faid lord chancollour deprined such rulers of their administrativ ons and governements, as the king had amointed to beare any high authoritie within the realme, pretending not onelie the kings commandement. but also alleadging a reason which moved him so to do, as thus, that he might thereby take awaie The L.chan all occasions of grudges from the people, which 50 sellors reason. otherwise might thinke, and would not fricke to faie, that they were oppessed by the rule of manie The billy of kings in freed of one king. He did also deputue Hugh The bullion of the billiop of Durham of all his honour and dignitie, and put the bishop of Winchester to great trouble. Poseoner, boubting least the Pobles of the realme would rife against him, and put him out of his place; he fought to keepe them lowe, and spoiled them of their monie and substance. Likewise pretending a colour of doubt, leaft earle John the kings brother 60 should attempt any thing against his brother the king now in his absence, he sought also to keepe hint binder. To be biæfe, he plated in all points the right part of a typant, and the wed himselfe such a one in all respects as mainteined his title,

Non disceptando aut subtilibus argumentis Vincere, sed ferro mauult sua iura tueri, Fontifices nunc bella innant, sunt catera nuga, Nec præcepta patrum nec Christi dogmata curant, Iactant sé dominos rerum 🖝 sibi cuncta licere.

At length the king received advertisement from his mother quanc Clianor of his demeanor, and that there was great likeliehoo of some commotion to infue, if spécoie remedie were not in time prouis

ded. Whereboon being then in Sicile, he fent Wal walter the ter the archbishop of Kouen into England with archbishop of kouen fent commission, to toine irradministration of the king- into England dome with his chancellog the faid bishop of Elic. But the archbilhop comming into England was to flenderlie interteined of the chancellour, and in effect lo litte vegatoed, that not with framing his commission and infructions brought from the king, he could not be is little rea be permitted to beard any rule. But the chancellour lord chancel by him legat of the apostolike for here in England, 10 deteining the faine tholie in Dis hands, ordered all log. things at his pleature, without making the archbilly, M Mouen, or any other of counfell with him, ercept fuch as it pleater him to armit for the ferning of his owne turne, ... a had a

The certainlie believed (as manie other of digt hing Kichard would never returns with life into England againe, which caused him to attempt so manie bulawfull enterprifes, and therefore he got into his hands all the castels and fortrestes belonging to the crowne, and furnished them with garifons of fouldiers, as he thought necessarie, depaining such capteins of their romes as he fulpeace not to favour his proceedings.

Due Berard de Camuille had bought of the king the keeping of the castell of Lincolne, but o shom al so the Chiriffe wike of the Chire was committed for a time, but the lost chancellour, perceiving that he bare more god will buto earle John the kings brother than to him (which John he most suspected) he twhe from him the thiriffewike, 4 demanded also to have the callell of Lincolne delivered into his hands, which Gerard refused to deliner, and perceiving that the chancellor would practife to have it by force, he fled buto earle John, requiring him of competent aid and foccour.

The chancellos on the other part, perceining what hatred dincree of the Pobles bare him, thought god to provide for his owne suertie the best that he could. and therefore fent for a power of men from beyond and quietnesse which ought to remaine amongst 40 the sea: but bicause he thought it two long to state till they arrived, he came to Lincolne with such power as he could make, and belieged the callell. Orle John The logo the kings brother advertised hereof, raised such num chancellog bers of men as he might make of his frænds, fers beliegeth the uants and tenants, and with small a do wan the car cattell of Lins fiels of Potingham and Lickhill within two dates Coine. space. Dis done, he sent to the load chancellour, com winnerth the manding him either to breake up his fiege, or elle to castels of Poprepare for battell. The chancellour confidering with tingham and himselfe that there was small trust to be put in dis Cichhill. uerle of those loads that were with him, bearing god will to earle John, and but hollow harts towards him, railed his fiege and departed with diffenour.

Pot long after, one of his homes was broken off The chanby the death of pope Clement, whereby his power cellogranteth legantine ceased: wherewith being somewhat about dishonor. thed, he came to a communication with carle John, She logo and byon certeine conditions made peace with him. chancellor and Shoutlic after the fouldiers which he had fent for, are carle John are rived in England, and then he began to go from the agræment made with earle John, affirming that he would either drive the fame earle out of England, or else thould earle John do the like to him : for it was The chancele not of sufficient largenesse to hold thom both. How log breakers beit shortlie after, a peace was efflones concluded the agrament. betwirt them with condition, that if it chanced king Chancelloz and Richard to bepart this life before his returne into carle John England, not leaving any iffue of his bodie begot make another ten, that then the chancellour renouncing the oods agrament. nance made by king Kichard (tho had instituted his nephue Arthur duke of Britaine to be his heire and fuccessour) should consent to admit earle John for king of England, contrarie to the faid ordinance.

But in the meane time it was agreed, that earle Wiy. Ichn

Ichn thould velicer by the eattels of Potingham and Tickhill, Potingham to the hands of William Parthall, and Cickhill to the hands of William Telendenall, they to keepe the same but o the vicand behofe of king Kichard, that opon his returne he might do with them as thould please him: provided that it it to chanced, that he thouse die before he cools returne from his voiage, or that the chancellour went from the agreement now taken, then immediattie thould the forelate callels of Potingham and I Tickhill be refresed onto earle John.

Moreover, the other cattels of such honours as were assigned to early John by the king his brothery were committed buto the custodie of certeine pers fons of great trust and localtie as the cassell of Wilal lingford to the archbishop of Kouen, the castell of Bistow to the bishop of Lincolne, the castell of the Deake to the bishop of Couentrie, the castell of Bolcfofres buto Richard de Peake (oz if he refuled, then Mould the bishop of Couentrie have it in kees 20 ping the castell of Cie was committed to Watter Fitz Kobert, the castell of Herford to Roger Bis got, and to Richard Reuell the caffell of Erceffer and Launtion. These persons to whom these castels were thus committed to be kept, received also an oth, that they thould faithfullic keeps them to the kings behose, and if he chanced to die, before he Gould returne, then the same thould be delinered unto earle Johns hands. Also there were the castels that perteined to the crowne, delivered likewife in trust, as 30 the castell of Mindles buto the earle of Arundell, the castell of Winchester buto Silvert de Lacie, and the castell of Posthampton buto Simon de

It was also agreed, that bishops, abbats, carles, and barons, valualors, and freholders thould not be differed of their lands, gods or cattels, otherwise than by order of the inffices or officers of the king, fo that they should be judged in the kings courts accou ding to the lawfull cultomes and ordinances of the 49 realme: and likewife that earle John should cause the fame orders to be observed through all his lands. Donided that if any man attempted to do other= wife byon suportor maintenance of earle John, he thould fland to be reformed by the archbithop of Ko uen if he chanced then to be in England, and by the kings inffices, and by those that had swoons to ob ferue this peace: and also carle John himselfe at their request thould see such reformation to be had.

Posecuer, it was agreed that all those cassels that 50 had bin built or begun to be builded fince the kings passage over towards his fournie, should be razed, and no new made or fortified till his returne, except in manours perteining to the kings demaine, if need required, or by his speciall commandement, either by letters, or fufficient messengerrs. Ebat the Chiriffewike of Lincoine, which the losd chancellour hav affigned unto William de Stutenille thould be reflosed to Gerard de Camuille, who had a daic ap pointed him to appere in the kings court, to heare 60 what might be laid against him: and if such matter could be promed, for the which he ought to lose the faid thiriffeivite and the cattell of Lincolne, then he thould depart from them by the indgement of the court,or elfe not. Peither fould earle John mainteine him against the sudgement of that court, no; Chould receive any outlawes, or fuch as were notorionlic knewer for enimies to the king, and fo named, nor thould fuffer them to be received within the precinct of his liberties.

To hold, mainteine and observe this peace, the faid earle and chancellour fluare in the hand of the archbishop of Kouen with senen barons on either part. On the part of earle John these were the names of them that received the at the Stephan Ris dell his chargedlour, Milliam della More; Ro bert de la Pare, Philip de Larechellers William de Baheimes, Bildert Enflude Millianede Don tacute. On the chancellours pant, the earles of A nuncell and Salisburia, emical oger Wigat, and the encle of Clarb, with Walten Fitz Mobert, William de Breud and Roger Fitzeliafisten Abele thilles inereconcluded in this forty the authoritie and cornmandement of the king pet in all things falsed and referred: but to that if before his returns he though fignifichis pleasure to the contrave con the program: ces above mentioned, them found the callele of Potingham and Dickhill be restored buto carle John, notwithstanding what somer the king should come mand touching the fame: Thus was the peace con Anno Reg. cluded efflones betwirt earle John and the chans Matth Well agailgout ag a mileagh

In this meane while, Welliepthe cleatarehbilhop Geffrey the of Pocke, after long luit and manie delaies contri- of yorke ucd, speciallie by the charcellour, obteined his pall, Rog Hound, being confecrated by the archiftop of Towns, by vertue of his buls obteined from pope Celestine. The chancellour advertised herof, and understanding that he meant to come thoutlie into England to be installed, was in a great chase, bicause that buring the time of the vacation, he had vied the revenues of that le at his pleasure, and therefore now to forgo them he was nothing contented. Herebyon he Matth.Paris, ivote his letters buto Patthew de Clere thiriffe of Bent in this forme.

Polydor.

The lord chancellours letters to the shiriffe of Kent.

Racipimus tibi quod si Eboracen electus ad a-liguemportum in ballina tua applicuerit, aut liquem portum in balliua tua applicuerit, aut aliquis nunciorum eius, eum retineri facius, do-nec mandatum nostrum indèreceperis. Et simi-liter pracipimus, quod omnes literas papa aut maoni alicuius viri qua illic venerint, facias retineri. Ele Englith there of is thus.

We command you that if the elect of Yorke shall arriue at any port or hauen within your bailiwicke, or any messenger of his, that you cause them to be arested and kept, till you have commandement from vs therein. And we command you likewise, to stay, attach, and keepe all letters that come from the pope, or any other great man.

Likewife, thereas Baldwine archbithop of Can Polydor. furburie, having taken his tournic into the holie The Death of land, and arriving there before the king, thanced to the architer bepart this life at Lynns, the last years, byon the feast rie. vaic of S. Comund, the chancellour found meanes Io. Textor. to keepe that see also vacant, that he might receive the profits thereof, during the bacation, and find meanes to be prepared to it in the end. But as touch ing the lie of Poske, although he had (as before is faid) made his hand of the revenues belonging to the same from time to time at his pleasure, pet now as fer that he heard how Geffrey had received the pall, he made hauscke, walting a spoiling all that would yxlo him anie monie, without respect of right or wrong. Moreoner, he caused the havens to be watch ed, with commandement ginen to the townes on the sea coast, that they should not suffer the archbishop Seffrey to take land. At length pet he arrived at Theare H Douer, where he was by the foresaid Patthew de fliop arrived Clere first flaied, and after taken out of the abbeie mitted to by the chancellours commandement, and commits ward ted to pulon within the castell, where a Soble man Caffeig beit= nered in truft of certeins perfons.

An. Reg. 3.
that had maried the chancelloss lifter was capteine.
those of whose imprisonment was anon

bruted thorough the realnie, therewith the Nobles fretted, and the commons curled: finallie all men detested such tyrannie in the chancellour. But name lie the kings brother earle John fromes at the mat. ter, and with all speed assembled an armie out of those places where he bare rule, increasing the number with a power of Welthmen. There came to him the bishop of Winchester, with manie earles and , barons, also the bishop of Bath and Chester, which latelie before had beene chefe faudurers of the chanrellour in all his doings: but now that the world was changed, they thewed themselves the most ears nest entinies he had, as well in words as deds.

In an affemblie of all the buthops of England, all those were ercommunicate in solemne wife, with candels light, and other such ceremonies, which had cither ginen commandement, or were present as partakers, to pull out of the church the archbifhop of 20 Poske, or his people by violence, and had imprisoned them in maner (as before pe have heard:) but this was after the archbilhop was let at libertie, as thuld appeare by Matthew Paris, for the chancellour repens ting himselfe (though now to late) of his cruell deab ling against the archbishop of Pooke, wherewith he had kindled such a bemid against him, commanded the faid archbiffop (namelie at the instant sute of the bilhop of London, or rather at the commandement of earle John, as Houeden saith) to be set at libertie. Wut the displeasure once kindled in the hearts of the Pobles, could not so easilie be quenched with his des linerie, as it was spécilie set on fire by his impissonment, so that they being now in armour, purposed to abate the price of the chancellour, and to beliver the commen-wealth of fuch an viglie typant. And to be gin, they fummoned and affigned him a peremptoxie day to appeare at Reading, to make answer buto The chancel= fuch inturies as he had done against the archbishop motoappeare of Booke, and the bilhop of Durham, fithens the de- 40 parture of his soucreigne losd the king.

At which day there came to Reading earle John, and the archbilhop of Rouen, with manie other bis thops, earles, and barons, abiding there all that day, to lie if the chancellour would appeare or no; but he came not: wherevoon they prepared to march footh towards London, and therewithall fet forward in like maner. De on the other fide being a man of a great courage, had gathered an armie of such Arans gersand other his frænds as he could make, and 50 therewith went fouth, and encamped nere to Wlind, for there to abide his adverfaries, and to give them battell, if they came forward and would abide it. But then they approched, and he perceived also how diverse of his freends thanke from him, and went tohis entinies, he durft not attempt the hazard of a The chancels field, but fled backe to London, and there withdrew into the tower, with all his host, bicause he durst not commit himselfe to the doubtfull fellowship of the citisens. Through his great pride and fatelie port 60 which he mainteined, as partlie ye have heard, he had procured to himselfe no small hatred amongst all degrees of men, and namelie such as by the kings appointment ought to have beene parteners with blin in government of the realme love repined at his prefumptuous proceedings, for that he distained (as it famed) to vie their adule, or to foine them with him in the administration of things, so that now in time of his trouble he will not in whome he might put his trust.

After he was thus retired into the tower of London, earle John the archbishop of Rouen, and the other bishops, earles, and barons associated togither against him, followed him at the heles, entered the citie, and belieged the tower on echilde. On the morrow after, being the fourth day after the octaves of faint Wichaell, they came togither into Paules churchpard, where they publikelie occlared the inturi a reclaration ous wrongs done and practiced by the chancellour; made against namelie against the archbishop of Poske, and the bis the losd chan-Mon of Durham. Those also that had beine appointed cellour. as affociats with him, accused him, in that he had taken byon him to rule and governe all things affer his owne will, not bouchfafing to have their adule or councell in fuch fort as had beene convenient.

The archilhop of Roven and William Parchall earle of Wembroke themed there before all the pear ple the kings letters which he had fent from Deffina, The tenor of amointing that they should be associate with him in this leter shall government of the kingdome; and that without the hereafter counsell and adusce of them and others assigned there appeare. to, he thould not incode with the rule of the land, and that if he should do any thing to the hinderance of the common-wealth, or feeke to incode with the affaires of the realme, without their god adulle, that then he thould be depoted. Heerebpon it famed good to earle John, and to all the bishops, earles and bas rons of the realme, and to the citizens of London there affembled, that the faid chancellour spould be depoted, and to they proceeded, and depoted him indad appointing the archbilhop of Konen in his place, tho would not take byon him to do anie thing tow thing the rule of the land, without confent of his als fociats affigued to him, and the barons of the ele thecker.

The same day, earle John, and the archbishop of Kouen, and other of the kings inflices, granted to the citizens of London the privilege of their communaltic; and the faid earle and arthbifhop, and in maner all the bilyops, erls and barons of the realme Aware to mainteine the fato privilege firme and flas ble, so long as should please their sourcigne loso. And the citizens of London sware to be true, and to do their faithfull service onto king Kichard and his heirs, and if he chanced to die without iffne, then to receive earle John the brother of king Richard for their king and fourreigne lood, and therebyon fware fealtie to him against all men, saving that which they owed but his brother king Richard.

The chancellour perceiving the multitude to be fuch which he had with him in the tower, as the place was not able to hold them any long time, after he had remained within it one night, he came footh with to earle John, and to the other that were thus entred the citie, and now readie to befrege him, of whome he got licence for them that were inclosed within the tower, to depart without damage, and there with des linered by the tower buto the hands of the archbithop of Rouen, with the castell of Windlog, and cere up the tower. teine other castels, which he held within the realme, but not all: notwithstanding be covenanted to make delinerie of the relidue, which pet remained in the hands of them whome he had appointed to the keeping of the fame. And for affurance of that covenant to be performed before he departed the realme, he delinered his brethren, and one that was his chamberleine, to remaine with the loads as hostages.

This done, he halted to Canturburie, where he promifed to receive the croffe of a pilgrime to go into the holie land, and to render up the croffe of his legatihip, which he had vourped a yeare and a halfe after the death of pope Clement, to the prejudice of the church of Kome, and to the detriment and great hinderance of the English durch. For there was not any church within the realme, which had not beine put the legate to fine and ranfome by that croffe, not any ecclefia croffe. Micall person went fræ, but the point of the crows ans peared in him and his purfe. From Cantin burie he

The citizens

(of he chancels lour paideth

Che print of to London.

R.Houed.

C

the is bemanico.

Carle John not é bilhops frænd.

Ouid.lib.1. de rem.am.

Matth, Paris,

got him to Douer to his brother in law, and finallie leking means to pale ouer into France, and doub-The bishop of ting to be discourred, he apparelled himselfe in wo mans raiment, 1 got a web of cloth on his arme, as though he had bone some honsewiselie woman of the countrie: but by the butowardie folding and bucumning handling of his cloth (or rather by a lewo fisherman that twice him for an harlot) he was suspected and searched so narrowlie, that by his priv nie incinders he was proued to be a man, and at 10 length knowne, attached, and committed to pulon, after he had beene reprodullie handled by them that found him, and by the wines of the towne, in luch vnsæmelie apparell.

Carle John would have had him punished, and put to some open reprofe for his passed tyrannicall dwings; but the bishops, and other of the barons, for reverence of his ower, procured his deliverance, with licence to passe over into pormanoie where he was borne. Thus was the bithop of Clicaman full 20 of pride and couctoulnelle ouerthroivne with thaine, and received for his hie climing a reprochfull dolvne fall: for none are more fubica to ruine and rebuke, than such as be alost and supereminent over others, as the poet noteth well, faieng:

Summa petit liuor, perflant altissima venti, Summa petunt dextra fulminamissa Ioun.

In time he was deposed from his office of being chancellour, and not without warrant, for in verie deed, king Kichard having received advertisements ac from the loads and peeres of the realine, of the chancollours prefumptuous and hautic demeanour, with mionas offered to diverle persons, wrote to them a gaine as followeth.

A letter of king Richard directed to the States of the land for the deposing of the bishop of Elie from his office of lord chancellour.

Ichardking of England Sendeth greeting to William Marshall, to Gilbert Fitz Peter, and Henrie Berdulfe, and to William Brewer, peeres . If it fo chance that our chancellour hath not faithfullie handled the affaires and businesse of our realme (committed vnto him) by the aduite and counsell of you, and others to whom we have also assigned of you, and others to whom we have also assigned the charge of government of the same realme: 50 the charge of government of gov we command you, that according to your disposition in all things to be doone concerning the go-uernement thereof, you order and dispose as well for eschetes, as all other things, &c.

By force of this committion, the lords were the bolder to proces against him as ye have heard. The bishop of Pow after his comming into the parties beyond the complate the seas, he ceased not but letters and more an the leas, he ceased not with letters and messengers to present his complaint to the pope of Rome, and to 60 king Richard of the inturies received at the hands of carle John and his complices. Herebyon pope Cer lestine wrote in deed to all the archbishops and bis thops that were within the realme of England, in behalfe of the faid bishop of Clie, declaring, that for fo much as the king of England was gone into the holie land to warre against the entinies of our faith, leaving his kingdome under the protection of the as possolike fe, he could not but have speciall regard to for that the flate, rights and honour thereof were preferued from all danger of decate.

Dote how the pope defen= beth his chapling.

neth of his wiongs re=

Che popes

letters bnto

the archbis

fliong of England.

TTherefore, understanding that there had beene certeine attempts made by John erle of Portaigne and others, both against the hing and the bishop of Clie, that was not onelie legat of the apostolike fer. but also governour of the land appointed by the king. which attempt founded greatlie to the reproch of the thurth of Rome, and danger of damage to infue to king Richard, if remedie were not the Coner found : therefore he commanded them by the vertue of their obedience, to ercomunicat the earle of Mortaigne, or any other that was knowne to have law any bio lent hands byon the faid bishop of Elie, or acteined him as captine or inforced him to any oth, or elfe hab changed the state of rule in the kingdome of Engi land to other forme, than king Richard had order ned at his fetting forward towards the holie land: and that not onelie all the councellours, authors, at bers and complices of those that had committed such outrage, but also their lands should stand interdicted, so that no vinine service should be vice within the precinct of the fame, except penance and christning of infants. This to remaine till the fato bifhop a kingdome were reflozed into the former estate: and that the parties ercommunicated should present theme felues with letters from the bishops but o the apostor like fee to be absolued, ac.

Herebpon also the bishop of Glie himselfe twicte buto the bilhop of Lincolne and other, touching this matter: but the bishops did neither any thing in ac. complifyment of the effect of the popes letters, noz at his owne suplication. And therefore percetuing small helpe to come that waie, he fought to obteine the favour and freendthip of earle John, and of his mother quene Clianoz. In the meane time, the lords, barons and prelates of the realme, after they had deprived him of all authoritie, and banished him out of the land, ordeined the archbithop of Rouen in The archoi favour of the kings commission, to have the chefe thop of Roun rule and administration of things touching all the chafe gours affaires of the common-wealth; but yet fo as earle fluid. John had the dwings in manie points, so that he might fæme in manner an affociat with him, there 40 of fprang much inconvenience. For this John being a man(as he is noted by some writers) of an ambitiv ous nature, was suspected to aspire unto the kingdome: in found that he had joined with the French king, after the same king was returned forth of the holie land, against his brother king Richard, if his mother quene Clianoz had not persuaded him to the contrarie. Whilest these things were a boing, on the twelsth R. Houed. (being approched neere to the stege of the christians others agree with a puillant armie, in hope to have raised their with Hound since then he perceived it laie not in his power to as Gerardis worke any feat to the succour of his people within ting Albert the citic, and that then success to a Gerardise Mercator, the citic, and that then success to a Gerardise Mercator, the citic, and that then success to a Gerardise Mercator, the citic, and that then success to a Gerardise Mercator, the citic and the cit the citie, and that they were so constrained that they cus a month must næds yæld, he holpe to make their compositiv on, and promifed to performe certeine covenants on their behalfe. Herebpon, the Saracens within As cres couenanted not onclie to deliner the citie buto the chillians with five hundred prisoners of christis ans which they hav within the fame, but also to procure that the holic crosse should be to them delivered, with a thousand other chaistian passoners, such as the theillian princes thould appoint out of those numbers which Saladine had in his custodie, and further, to give them two hundred thousand Befans . And till thele covenants were performed, it was agreed, that the Saracens, which were at that present less within the citie, thould remaine as pleages, under condition on, that if the same conenants were not performed within fortic daies, then thould they stand at the mercie of the christian princes as touching life and lim.

These things thus concluded, and the citie period The cities by into the childian mens hands, the French king Teres.

The French a. returneth home.

Baladine

causeth the foners to be beheaded.

ppon ennie and malice conceined against king Ris thard (although he pretended licknelle for ercule) beparted homewards, fetting from Acres the last day of Julie. Pow then, after the departure of king This liv, when the day approched, in the which the Saracens should performe the conenants; or else stand to the indgement of life and death at the pleasure of the chailtian princes: it was perceived that the coue, nants would not be fullfilled according to the agreement. For Saladine, as it well appeared, ment not To to performe that which for the lafegard of his men he had bindertaken, and did but dallie with the chaffe ans to prolong the time: wherebyon fentence was ginen forth, that for befault in fuch behalfe, the Saracens remaining as pledges thould lose their

Saladine having knowledge thereof, fent wood to king Richard and to the chole chillian armie, that if his people that were in the chaffian mens hands heads of all those christians which he had in captivitie to be cut off allo. Potwithstanding which answer, on the fourteenth day of August king Richard issued forth of the citie, palling the bitermost ditches, and incamped himfelfe nære the armie of Saladine, who the same vaic fent rich presents buto king Kie thard, requiring of him a longer day for performance of the covenants, but that would not be granted. Wherefore opon the faid dentall, Saladine caus sed all those christian prisoners which he had in his 30 hands to be beheaded on the eighteenth day of Aus quit, on which day king Richard advanced fouth to: wards the lodgings of the Saracens, and fkirmifhed with them berie hotlie, so that manie were wound ded and flaine on both parts: and amongst other one of king Kichards companions at all exercises nas med Weter Dignot loft his life there. Furthermoze, although king Richard knew that Saladine had put the christian puloners to death in such wife as you have heard, pet would not be prevent his terme ap 40 pointed for the execution of the Baracens that were in his cultodie, but abiding but o the twentith day of August, he then caused those Saracens which fell to his lot, at the time of the furrender of Acres, being in number about 2600.to be brought forth of the ci tie, and niere to the walles in the fight of Saladine and all his host they had their heads dropped off. The duke of Burgoigne caused execution to be done within the citie byon those which fell to the French kings thare, the number of the which role to two 50 thouland and foure hundred, or thereabouts: for the whole number was reckoned to be about five thou fand that thus loft their lines through the inconftancie of their prince: pet dinerse of the principall had their lives faued. The Saracens themselves also spake much cuill of Saladine for this matter bicause that refuting to performe the articles of covenants, he had eccasioned the enimie to slea those that had so Valiantlie served in desense of the citie, to the otterthat knowne verfe,

But now to leave foren matters, and to returne home into England: we find, that on the fecond of December, the monks of Canturburic dole to their archbishop Reignold bishop of Wath, who within fif teene daies after his election, departed this life, and lieth buried at Wath. Allothis yeare, 02 (as Ger. Dor. faith) in the yeare following, the bithop of Durham fought meanes to withdraw his subjection from the archbishop of Posks, for which attempt the archbis thop of Pocke, upon trust of the popes grant, did not and the bithop excommunicate the faid bithop, notivillitanding that he appealed to the popes conditionic than four rall times, putting his ofone matter and his churthes to be examined and tried by the pope, where upon he obcied not the ercommunication; and liquid eng the cause buto Rome, obteined such favour, that the pope and his cardinals reverled the fentence, and indged the excommunication to be of none effect. And further they decreed, that if the archbillyop of Borke had broken the altars and chalices, as information was given, in which the biffop of Durham had celebrated after his appeale made to the court of Kome, that then thould the faid bithop of Durham be acquited from owing any subjection to the said archbishop for so long as they two should live to

True it is, that the archbiftop had not onelie broken the altars and chalices which the billion had wer in ded for the celebration of matte, but also held his owne brother John earle of Portaigne for erconts municate, bicause he had eat and dronke in compaloft their heads, he would not faile but cause the 20 nic of the said bishop, and would not communicate with him, till he came to receive absolution, and to: make fatisfaction for his fault. In the end the bishops of Lincolne and Rochester with the abbat of Deterburrow, were appointed by the pope to have the hearing of this matter, as indges authorifed by his buls, tho fat therebpon at Porthampton, bpon S. Calirt his day, where after they had heard both parties ar. gue what they could in either of their cases, they gave a longer day, to wit, butill the featt of the natiuitie of faint John Baptill nert after, to fee if by as nie god nicans there might some agreement have beene had betwirt them, or (if that could not be) that then the popes leters hould frand in force as before. the helpes of either part fauco, as though no velate had beene bled . And to this, both parties were agree able, speciallie at the motion of the bishop of Lin-

> This yeare also, Roger de Lacie conchable of Roger Lacie Cheffer twhe Man de Lec and Peter de Bouencoat, conchadie and boon despite hanged them, for that being put in trust amongst other with the keeping of the castels of Potingham and Tickhill, which he had received into his cultodie of the bishop of Clie anondam lord chancellour, they have confented to the treasen of Mobert de Crokeston, & Endo de Dunitte, abich delinered the fame callels buto John earle of Mortaigne. The same earle of Poctaigne was highlie offended for the death of those two persons, and therefore was fred the lands of the faid Roger which lay within the compate of his turifolation. And again

But now touching the departure of the French hing from Acres, diverte occations are remembred by writers of the emulation and fecret wite which he thould beare towards king Andjard, and belide other alreadie touched, one was for enterteining and relies ning the earle of Champaigne in futh bounsifull wife in his necessite; that he was readie to forfake the French kings ferince, and cleave to king Richard. But how locuer it came to palle, partie through enmost icopardic of their lines. And here is verified 60 vie (as hath beine shotight) conceived at the great deeds of king Richard, whose mightie power and baliantifelle he could not well abide, and partite for o ther respects built minuting, he toke the sea with theie gallies of the Beneviois, and returned into Italie, and lo home into France, bailing promised first buto king Richard at his departure out of the holic land, and after to pope Celeffine at Koine, that he would not attempt any hurtfull enterpale against the Englifh doininfons, till king Lichard Chould be refurned forth of the holie land. But this promise was not kept, for after that he was returned into France, The cuillocas the first fought to procure the foresaid erle John thing the a breat Richards brother, to rebell against him, promiting the French him not onelie aid to reduce all his brothers dominio hing.

Strife be: twirt y arch=

R. Houed.

Ger.Dor.

ling a breach ensintohishands, but allo to give his lifter Adela in marriage, whom king Richard boon fulpicion of buchaft lining , had forfaken , as before pe haue heard. But then earle John was distuaded by his mother, from accepting this offer (which otherwise as it is faid he would willinglie have received) king Thilip Will reteined a malicious rancoz in his bart, and in renenge of old displeasures, would have at tempted the warre against the subjects of king Richard, if his loads would have toined with him : but 10 they confidering that flander would redound hereby both to him and them for the inturie done to the chaiffian common-welth, in making warre against him that was occupied in defense of the faith again & the common enimies of chillendome, would not give their consent thereto, and so the matter rested, till king Richard was taken priloner in Almaigne, and then what followed, it thall after appeare. In the meane while, the chaffian armie atchiued

Will Paruus. the chaiftians.

Envious oil= some worthte enterprises in the holie land, though 20 not manie, by reason of such envious discord as reigned amongst the cheefe gouernours. It chanced yet on the ceue of the Patinitie of our ladie nert after the departure of king Philip, as king Richard marthed fouth towards Japh ancientlie called Jopa, that the Solvan Salavine taking advantage of the place, did fet opon the rereward of the christians: but his Saracens (after they had fought right fierce lie from none till sunne setting) were so beaten backe at length, and repelled with such loss and disad 30 nantage, that in 40. yeares before they had not lw ffeined at one time greater damage. Amongst other of the chistians saine at that encounter, was one James Dauenes, a man of high prowelle and bali-

Rog.Houed.

数. Bichard

micomfiteth the Saracens

Japh.

Pozeover, king Kichard wan diverle townes and caffels out of the enimies hands, as Alcalon, Das rus, and diverse other, and some he fortified, as Alcalon aforefato, and Port Japh, otherwife called Jowa. racens and driffians, wherein king Kichard and his people bare themselues so mansullie, that the victo rie for the most part continuallic rested on their side. At one time allo, hearing of a great connece of bit. tels, munitions, and other things which came from Babylon towards Jerusalem to furnish Saladine and his armie (which conveis they call caravannes) king Richard with a competent power of men met them on the waie, and distressed those that were attendant opon the lafegard of that carriage, being in 50 number about two thousand horstemen, besides a great multitude of fortmen, and therewith toke the carriages with foure thousand and fir hundred car mels and deomedaries, belides an innumerable fort of mules, affes, and other beaffs of burthen.

That to speake of all the worthic exploits atchined by king Richard and his valiant capteins there in the holie land against the inflocis, it would require a long treatile, and therefore here we passe them ouer. This is to be noted, that among it other 60 noz and other his freends to the contrarie. of whom we find honozable mention made by waiters for their high valiancie the wed in those exploits. thefe are named as thefe, Kobert earle of Leiceffer, Hubert billiop of Salisburie, with the earles of S. Paule and Decur, belide diverle other, as Hugh de Bourney, William de Borrez, Walcline de Ferrers,Roger de Awnie, James de Auenes,the bilhop of Beauuois, William de Barres, William de Tarland, Drogo de Merlo, Robert de Pealle, Hens rie Fitz Dicholas, Robert de Pelvburg, Kafe de S. Marie, Arnold de Bois, Henrie de Pailoc, Talille am & Saule de Banil, Andrew de Chanignie, Denrie De Graie, Peter de Pratellis, Stephan de Turne ham, Baldwin Carron, Clarenbald be Wount Chablon, Manter de Lifte, Richard de Deques and Theo Dozike Philip, Ferrike de Alenne, Bilbert Balcmaine Alexander d' Artie, Stephan de Longchamp, Seguin de Barret, Koger de Glanuille, Raimond Fitz Prince, Bartholomew de Dortimer, Gerard Furniuall, Kafe de Malleon, Roger de Sacie, Wil liam de Pole, Bugh de Beuill, Benrie Toutch ogif De pute pe will) Teutonicus the kings flandarobearer, with de Stagno, dinerse others, as well Englishmen, Frenchmen, Pozmans, Poidouins, Anionines, Britans, Gal coignes, as other nations, of whome partite mention is alreadie made before in this boke, and partlie foz bzæfenelle dinerle are omitted.

But now to returne, fure it is, that king Richard meant to have recovered the citie of Jerusalem, and all the holie land out of the Saracens hands, by the affifiance of almightie God : if the doubt which he had of his brother the earle of Portaigns practs fes, the French kings dwings, which were brought to him with a græuous report, had not reuoked him bome. For diverte mellengers were fent dailie into Galf. Vinlif the holie land, to advertise him of such dangers as inere like to infue, if by his specie returne the same were not prenented. And first after Caffer, there came to him the prior of Hereford with letters from the bilbop of Elie, conteining a loze information a gainst his brother earle John, for having expelled those whom he had appointed rulers over the realme of England, and altered the fate of things there contrarie to the ordinances by him deutled afore his letting forward opon his tournie (as before pe haue partlie heard.) Upon receipt of which letters, he meant immediatlie at the first to have returned, and to have left behind him a convenient power of men, to wit, thee hunded knights of men of armes, and two thouland cholen fortmen, to abide byon the defense of the holie land, with other chillians at his colls and charges. But pet at length he was persuaded to tarrie, speci-There were fundie encounters also betwirt the Sa- 40 allie till things were fet in some better state, which then were out of order by the death of the marques Chemarques of Pontferrato, lozd of Tire, whom two traitozous rate murma Saracens of the kind which they name Allaffini had by the 3file murthered. After those death Benrie earle of Cham, and paigne nemue to king Richard married his wife, and was made king of Jerufalem, Butdo refigning to him his title, onto thome as it were in reconv pense king Richard gave the Ile of Cypres: ab though some write, that the knights Templers had bought it of him before. Thus king Kichard remais ning still in the holie land, shoutlie after Whitsuntide, there came an other mellenger to him, one John de Alanzon a clearke, bringing worte newes out of England than the prior of Hereford had brought before, which in effect conteined, that his brother earle Garle John John was alied as a confederat with the French purpose which king, and meant through his fetting on, to feize into feize won his polletion the thole realme of England, notivith the kingland

> Herebpon king Kichard was fullie persuaded to returne home, but pet through the admonition of certeine persons, and namelie of one William de william de Pointers, a chapleine of his, he effiones altered his pointers to purpole, and fo remained there, till at length through Richards enuie and malice fill increating among the chiffi chapteint. ans, he perceived how no good purpole could go for ward, fince that which fæmed good to fome, was mile liked of other; and speciallie our writers put great blame in the French men, who either boon bisvains or other displeasure would not be persuaded to follow their adule, which were knowne best to bnoer stand the state of things in those parties. And here opon, when the armie was advanced to Betenoble, standing the persuasion of his mother queene Chia their abission

The names of fuch noble men as were famous for their baliant dwings in this botage.

a place not past foure leagues distant from Jerusa lem, bicause their mind might not be fulfilled for the belieging of Ferusalem, which they had intended to take in hand (whereas the relique would rather that they Hulo have gone to beliege Babylon in Aegypt, and that byon fundaic great respects) the Frenchmen raised their field, and returned agains to Acres in great despite, putting the rest of the armicalso(so much as in them laie) in danger of otter ruine and biffreffe.

Then king Kichard and the other chiffian capteinsperceining how the matter inclined, and gis uing ouer all hope of any more god fucceffe, followco them. So that after they were thus returned to Acres, king Richard Will doubting least his long abfence from home might put him in danger of moze losse here, than he saw hope of present gaine to be had there, in such divertitie of humours and privile malice which reigned among them, he determined returne thither againe after he had fetled things at home in such sure stay as was expedient for the sucre tie of his owne estate and quietnesse of his people. Herebpon being readie to enter into his thips at Acres for as some have, being on his fournie homes wards in Troics The was advertised that the Souldane Saladine had taken the towne of Japh, flaine a great number of the chailtians within it, and beficged the relidue within the callell, the which (confirei) in the dates there came no fuccour.

Ring Richard being hereof advertised, and turning greef into valiancie, with all speed failed backe onto Jah, and landing there with his people, caused his enimies to forfake the towne: but anon affembling themselves against ogither, they turned once more to beliege it, where bon he illued forth into the fields, and fought with them fundzie daies togither. till finallie they were content to forfake their enterconflicts the valiant courage of king Kichato, and the worthic manhoo of his fouldiers right well avpeared: for he brought not with him at that time but to Japh about 80 men of armes, and foure hundled other fouldiers with croffebowes, and pet with that small handfull of men, and some ato of them that he found there in the castell, he did not onelic bid battell to the enimies, which were number to 62 thouland, but also put them to the worste, and caused them to flæbacke, to their great thanne and confusion.

Cephag. a. Richard

& Richard

Rad. Niger.

refeneth 13021

Thus Japh being delivered out of the enimics hands, king Kichard fell ficke at a cassell called Ce thas, and to remained there certeine daies, till he had recoucred his health. In which means time the Soldane Saladine fæming to lament his eafe; fent buto him certeine of his councelloss to common with him of peace, declaring that although he well biderstood that king Richard ment choestie to returne into his countrie, and that after his departure out of the east parts, he could with small admirecours 60 all that the christians yet held within the holic land, he would neverthelesse in respect of king Richards high promes, and noble valiancie, grant a peace for a certeine time, so that not onelie Ascalon, but also all other luch townes and places as the chaffians had fortifica or wone lince the conquest of Acres thould be raced, as fourhing their walles, bulworks, gates, and other fortifications.

King Richard (though he perceived that this of fer of peace tended unto this point cheefelte, that Sa ladine would thereby admitilate what foeuer the their Man armichad done in the holic land fince his # the French kings arrivall, so that by the saio peace be thould gaine moze than by the cope of his fivozd) did fomewhat state at this offer and demand, as a thing greatlicoishonourable to the chistians, to lose by treatie of peace so much of rather more than they got by force of warres (a meere token of faint and feeble courage) yet confidering that in fuch necessitie both of his departure from thence, and also of lacke of other fuccoes to relift the pullance of the enimies. after his comming awaie, he judged it best to take the offer at the crimies hands in auciding of some o greater euill. Herebpon therefore was a peace concluded to endure for the yeares, the moneths, thee Apeace conweeks, thee daies, and thee houres, to begin at Cas cluded befer nert infuing. And among other articles, it was twirt the covenanted, that the chaillians thould have fre paf. Chaillians fage to come and go onto the citie of Jerufalem, to visit the holie sepulchie there, which was granted; so that among it a great number of chilfians that prefentlie opon this conclusion went thither, Hubert bi hubert bishop hop of Salifburie was one, who had continued as of Salifburie. fullic to depart homewards, with no lette purpole to 20 bout the king during the time of all his journie till this time.

King Kichard having thus concluded with Salar dine, twke the sca, and comming agains into Typies, fent his wife quæne Berengaria with his fiffer & Richard Foane (late quene of Sicile) into England by the taketh his toune foar but to bime 1600 and 1 long feas, but he himselfe not minding to lie long wards. on the leas, determined to take his course into Gres cia, and so by land to passe homewards with all speed posible. Powbeit per he coulo atteine his purpose, ned through feare) had compounded to yeld, if with: 30 his chance was to be driven by tempest into the coast of Istria, not farre from Aquilia, there he stoo in some boubt of his life. For if he had bene knowne and taken, they would furelie have killed him, bis caule of the lander that went of him, as guiltie of the E. Richard landered for the margueffe of Courterate landered for beath of Conrade the marquelle of Bontferrato, the death of tho inded was flaine by two of the Affallini in the fmarques of citie of Tyzus, whilest king Kichard was in the holie Montterrate.

land (as before pæ haue heard.)

De therefore having here made thipwracke, and pule, and to depart thence for altogither. In these 40 doubting to fall into the hands of any person in those parts that bare goo will but o the marquelle (again & whome he had indeed theived himselfe not frændlic in a quarrell betwirt the faid marqueffe and Buido the king of Jerusalem) made the best thist he could to get away, yet knowledge being had of him, and ferch made affer him by one Deinard of Bozegein, he loft W. Paruus. eight of his fernants, and fo came to a towne within Gre of Gozze the bishoppike of Saltzburge called Frisake, where Saltzburge. he was efflones in danger to have bene taken as 50 gaine by one Frederike de faint Some, tho not withstanding toke six of his men, but yet he him selfe with the other of his companie made this to get away. Finallie comming to Utenna in Aufrich, M. Richard and there causing his servants to provide meat for commeth to him, more fumptuous and fine that was thought requilit for lo meane a person as he counterfeited then to beare out in countenance, it was ifreightwaies suspected that he was some other maner of man than Polydor he partended, and in fine, those that marked moze diligenthie the maner of him, perceived what he was, and gave knowledge to the duke of Austrich named Leopolo, being then in the citie of Tienna, what they had fiene. His page that had the Dutch twng going about the towne to change gold, and buy vittels, bee wated him, having by chance the kings gloves bri der his girdle : wherethen comming to be eramined for feare of tortures confessed the truth.

The duke Areightwaies caused the house where he was looged , to be let about with armed men , and Ra. Miger, fent other into the house to appeliend him. He being warie that he was descried, got him to his weapon: but they adulling him to be contented, and alledging the dukes commandement, he boldlie answered, that lith he mult be taken, he being a king, would palo

Saraceng.

t. Richard fubmittsth himfelfe to the bulle of Multrich.

N Triuet.

Polychron.

The cause of the difpleafure betwirt the buke of Auarich & king Richard.

Ger.Dor.

" himselfe to none of the companie but to the duke " alone, anotherefore if it would pleafe him to come, " he would yold himselfe into his hands. The duke hearing of this, spédille came unto him, whom he morting, delivered by his fword, and committed him buto his cultodie. The duke reloiling of such a preie, brought him buto his palace, and with gentle words enterteined him, though he meant no great goo to, wards him, as well inough appeared in that he committed him to the keeping of certeine gentlemen, which without much courteffe loked freightlie is nough to him for flarting awaie, in somuch that they kept him in cold irons (as some authours do wite.) De was taken after the maner aforesaid in December byon S. Momas due, in the yeare of our Lord 1192, and in the fourth years of his reigns.

The duke of Austrich olight the king no good will, bicause he had cast downe his ensignes pitcht up in a turret at Acres, which he had wome at the verie time when that citie was delinered by the Saracens: for while they were in tretie on the one five, the duke on the other, not knowing anie thing thereof, gave the affault buto that part of the towne which was appointed buto him to beliege. And so being entred the towne, and perceining that by treatie it was to be delivered, he retired into the turret which he had first wone and entred, and there let by his Candard and enlignes, which king Kichard (as the Dutch writers assirme) comming thither, threw downe and trode under his fæt.

But Geruafius Dorobornensis veclareth this mat. 30 ter somewhat otherwise, as thus. After that the said citie of Acres was rendzed into the chaiffian mens hands (faith be) diverse loads twike their lodgings as they thought god, and hanged fouth their enlignes. And as it chanced, the duke of Austrich placing himfelfe in one of the fairest palaces of all the citie, put forth his enligne, whereof king Richard being warie, came thither with a companie of hardie fouldiers about him, and threw downe the dukes enligne, fo displacing him out of that so pleasant and beautifull a lodging. For this cause, and also surmixing that king Richard Hould be guiltie of the death of the marques, Conrade the duke of Auttrich thewed luch discourtesse towards him. But concerning the mutther of the marques, the chefe governour of those Saracens called Allallini cleared king Kichard by a letter written and directed unto the duke of Austrich in manner as followeth.

A letter directed to the duke of Austrich, wherein king Richard is cleared of the death of the marquesse of Mountserrat, whereof he was vehementlie suspected.

Vpoldo duci Austria, Vetus de Mon-te falutem Cùmplurimi reges & principes vltra mare Richardum regem Anglia & dominum de morte mar-chisi inculpent, iuro per dominum qui regnation 60 aternum, & per legem quam tenemus, quod in eius mortem nullam culpam habuit. Est siquidem caufamortis ipfius marchifi talis. Vnus ex fratri-bus nostris in vnam nauem de Satalei, ad partes nostras veniebat, & tempestas illum forte ad Tyrum appulit, & marchisus fecit illum capere & occidere, & magnam pecuniam eius rapuit. Nos verò marchisonuncios nostros misimus, mandantes vi pecuniam fratris nestri nobis redderet, & de morte fratris nostri nobiscum se concordaret, & noluit.

Nec non & nuncios nostros spreuit, & mortem fratris nostri super Reginaldum dominum de Sidonis posuit, & nos tantum fecimus per amicos nostros, quod in veritate scimus, quòd ille fecit illum occidere & pecuniam rapere. Et iterum alium nuncium nostrum nomine Edrisum misimus ad eum, quem in mare mergere voluit, sed amicinostri illum à Tyro festinanter fecerunt recedere, qui ad nos peruenit, & ista nobis nunciauit. Nos quoque ex illa hora marchisum desideraumus occidere. Tuncque duos fratres misimus ad Tyrum, qui eum apert è & fer è coram omni populo Tyri oc-

Hacergò fuit caufa mortis marchifi, & benè dicimus vobis in veritate, quòd dominus Richardus rex Anglia in hac marchifi morte nullam culpam habuit. Et qui propter hoc domino regi Anglia malum fecerunt, îniust è fecerunt, & sine cau-Ja. Sciatis pro certo, quòd nullum hominem huius 20 mundi pro mercede aliqua vel pecunia occidimus, nisi priùs nobis malum fecerit. Et sciatis quòd has literas fecimus in domo nostra ad castellum nostrum Messiat in dimidio Septembri, anno ab Alexandro 1505.

The same in English.

Etus de Monte to Lupold duke of Austrich sendeth greeting. Where manie kings and princes beyond the feas blame Richard king of England of the marques his death, I sweare by the lord that reigneth euerlastinglie, and by the law which we hold, that he was not in fault for his death. For the verie cause of the marques his death was fuch as followeth. One of our brethren in a ship of Satalie came towards our parties, and chanced by tempest to be driven vnto Tyre, and the marques caused him to be taken and flaine, and tooke a great portion of monie that he had in the ship with him. Whervponwesent our messengers to the marques, commanding him to restore vnto vs the monie of our brother, and to compound with vs for our faid brothers death, and he would not.

Moreoner, he also contemned our messengers, & laid the fault of our brothers death vp-50 on Reginald lord of Sidon, and we did fo much through our freends, that we got full vnder-Itanding that the marques himselfe caused him to be flaine, and tooke his monie. And therefore we fent vnto him againe an other messenger named Edrisus, whome he would haue drowned in the sea, but our freends made such shift, that they procured him to depart with speed from Tyre, who returned to vs, and signified these things to vs for certeine. And from that houre euer after we had a defire to flea the marques: and so then we sent two of our brethren vinto Tyre, who openlie, & in a manner in presence of all the people of Tyre slue him.

This therefore was the verie cause of the death of the marques; & we fay to you in good footh, that the lord Richard king of England, in this death of the marques was nothing culpable: and they that have doone anie displeafure vnto the king of England for this cause, they have doone it wrongfullie, and without anie iust occasion. Know ye for certeine, that we doo not vie to kill anie man of this world for a1193

Che king is belittereb to the emperoz.

An. Reg. 4. Richard to vs some harme afore time. And know ve that we have made these letters in our house at our castell of Messuat, in the midst of September, in the yeare from Alexander the great, 1505.

> Thus we fee how king Richard was cleared of that crime concerning the marques his death by the tenour of this letter. And verelie it is most like that 10 hing Richard would have beine loth to have confi municated his purpose unto such a wicked kind of pagans as the Affallini were, if he had pretended and such matter, but rather would have sought his renenge by some other meanes. Pow therefore to our purpole. The newes of the taking of king Kichard was anon banted and blowne ouer all Germanie, where, boon the emperour Henrie the firt, the sonne of Free verike the first, sent in all hast buto the duke, persua 2 ding him to deliver the king into his hands, being as ble to lufteine and abide the malice of all them that would be offended with the taking and deteining of him priloner, as the pope and others. The emperour well binderstoothe wealth and riches of England, and therefore hoped to make some god purchase by ranforming the king, if he might get him out of the bukes hands . The duke perceiving also the emperours meaning, durft not well denie his request, and therefore he delinered the king unto them that 3 were fent from the emperour, who covenanted to gine but othe faid duke the fumme of 6000, pounds of Cullen weight for the having of the fato king. The emperour thus receiving the king at the hands of the buke of Austrich, commanded that he should be committed to close pallon, and would not do fo much as once speake with him . This he did, to cause the king bpon an indignation and wearinesse of that maner of life, to make speed in offering some large welk how conctoninelle infected the hearts of the mightic, and what occasion the emperour and duke dio take, to inrich themselves by the meanes of the king, whome they forced not to impourtiff, so their owne grædie worme were served. But this hath bene a discase not so generall as ancient, according from b pope.

Ozillib.Faff 1. Rog.Hougd

Ctentogata

Pogmandie

Mierbicted

Pix ego Saturno quenquam regnante videbam, Cuius non animo dulcia lucra forent.

to his words that faid,

Here is to be remembred by the waie, that about 50 some order. the fame time, or somewhat before, in the peare of our Lord 1 1 9 2. the pape fent two legats (namelie, Daamian bishop of Hollia, and Jozdane de Folla noua) into Sommentie, to reconcile the bishop of Clie and the archbishop of Rouen : but comming bate Oilois, they were flated from entring any further into the countrie, where boon they did interdict the whole duchie of Promandie, togither with William Fitz Radulfe lozd Celvard of that countrie, bimediatlie herebpon, quene Clianoz, and the archbi Hop of Rouen fent unto those legats Hugh bishop of Durham, requiring them to release that sentence of interdiction so pronounced against the steward and countrie of Posmandie in the kings absence, but they would not except they might be received in: to Normandie: howbeit, the pope being fent buto, released it, and caused the legats to release it also, and yet they entred not into Commandie at all.

This yeare, whilest the seneschall of Gascoigne the state of the state of the looks and barons of Gale state of the looks and barons of king hards and befroic the lands of king laic ficke, the earle of Pieregost, and the vicount of coigne, began to walke and destroic the lands of king Aichard. And though the fenelchall manie times by mellengers required a peace, or at the least some truce, pet could be not have any grant thereof: where fore byon his recoucrie of health he inuaved the lands of the laid earle, twhe the castels and fortrestes The fenct and some of them he fortified, and kept to the kings chalof Galble, and some of them he raced downe to the ground. congnerous ne He also invaded the vicounts countrie, and subdued geth inimic. it to the kings governement. Shortlie after came the brother of the king of Pauarre, with eight hundred knights or men of armes to the fenelchals aid, and fo they two togither entring into the lands of the earle brother. of Tholoufe, twke diverse castels and fortrestes with in the fame, of the which some they fortified, and some they raced, and rode even to the gates of Tholonie, and lodged in maner bnoer the walles of the citie.

A little before Thristmas also, dinerse of those that had beene in the holie land with king Richard came home into England, not knowing but that king Ris thard had beene at home before them, and being alked where they thought he was become, they could fay no moze but that they had frene the thip wherein he first went aboud, arriving at Brendise in Duglia. At length, when newes came that he was taken and Caled as pilloner, the archbilhop of Rouen and other the rulers of the realme of England, fent the abbat of Boreley and the abbat of Roberts-bridge with all speed into Almaine to speake with him, and to buder Roberto: stand his state, and what his pleasure was in all budge. things. Who comming to Germanic, passed through the count into Baterland, where at a place called Drefer they found the king as then on his journie towards the emperour, to whom (as ve haucheard) the duke of Austrich did send him. The said abbats attended him to the emperours court, and remained there with him till the emperour and he were accorded, in manner as after Hall be thewed: and then after Caffer they returned with the newes into England.

Thon report hereof order was taken for manie Ger. Dor. malle of monie for his libertic & deliverance. Thus 40 things, but thefelie for the flate : in which dealings, for formuch as those which had the rule of the land frod in great doubt of things (for the inconfrant nature of earle John was of them much fulpeaced) first they caused a new oth of allegiance to be made to king Kichard, and received of the people. They fortified alfolich townes and castels as were of importance, both with repairing the walles and other defenses about the fame, and furnishing them with men, munition and vittels. Thus was the land brought into

In the meane while, the French king being aduer. The French tiled that king Richard was deteined as pilloner, tech. John reioisco not a little thereat, and with all speed by se to burge as cret mellages did fend for his brother earle John, gains his tho was readie to come at his call. And being come, buther. be exhalted him not to lufter to convenient an occas sion to passe, but to take the government of the realme of England now into his hands, promiting him all such aid as he could of him reasonablie recause he was the man that had so stated them . Im 60 quire: with other like talke will tending to the pronocation of the earle to for fake his allegiance onto his brother. And to fay the truth, earle John was case lie persuaded so to do, and therefore byon his imme-Diat returne into England, affembled an armie, and with the fame (and fuch frangers as he brought with him) began to prove maifferies, first winning the caffels of Mindloze, Mallingford, Potingham, and diverse other, and softifieng the same to his owne vie and defense.

The barons of the land, indaing fuch bulefull doings not to be ante longer luftered, first belieged the castell of Windlose, and after preparing to levie a greater force, did put them within in such feare, that they yelved by the fame, ficking to escape by

The king of

The abbats of Boxlep and king counfel

Cherarte of Pittigort ?

12.i.

Ger.Hor.

The archbi-

Dugh Bar-

william de Statemile.

WE.Paruds,

Bouen be

Louceiter,

Polydor.

Che carte of fieged.

bolfe.

thop of yorke.

flight, some into one place, and some into an other, the tibich pet being appehended were put to worthie erccution. But this was not done without continus ance of time, without great trouble tharges to the realine: for there as there was a practife betwirt the French king and earle John, that a great power of Arangers, mamelie flemings Mould have come into the realme (for whose transporting a great number ber of thips were brought togither at Califfand) yet ted their purpole. For their mellengers being taken which were fent hither into England, the treason was renealed, and by the quene mothers appoints ment (who cheefelic then' ruled the land) a great companie of knights, men of armes, and commons of the countrie, watched the fea coaffs over against Flanders, to keepe the enimies from landing. They began thus to watch in the passion weke, and fo continued till a certeine time affer Gaffer. Howbeit onelie the affifiance of the TTlelfymen and of manie other his frænds in England, but also of the Scots, howbeit, the king of Scots would not meddle. He therefore with such Welelihmen and other as he had brought over, and such Englishmen as he could get to take his part, began such attempts (as before ye have heard to the disquieting of the whole realme, and great displeasure of the king.

Adoreover befive that power of the barons which laid flege to Telindfor caffell, there were soblemen 30 also in other parts of the realine that were readie to relift him. And amongst other, Ceffrey the archbie thop of Postic, with Hugh Bardolfe one of the kings inflices, and William de Stuteuille, affem: bled an armic, and comming to Doncaffer, fortified the towne: but when the archbishop would have gone forward to beliege the castell of Tickhill, which earle John had in polletton, the other two his allociats would not consent to go with him, bicause they were fernants, and reteined with earle John. Here: 40 with the archbillion being fore offended, departed from them, calling them traitoes to their king, and enimies to the realme.

About the same time did the French king enter into Domandic with an armic, & comming to the towns of Cifois, belieged it, the which one Cilbert De Clascoll or Quascoill capteine thereof (to his high reproch perfoed by bito bim, with an other caffell alfo called Delle, which he had likewise in kieping. After this, the French king entring into the countrie 50 of Cleurine o: Cleulquestine, wan diners towns and fortrelles in the lame, and palling forward, toke tal de Rueil, and Deulburge, and finallie comming bes fore the citie of Rouen he laid siege thereto: but the earle of Leicelfer being gotten into the citie before the French kings comming thither, so incouraged the citisens, that they fourlie flanding to their Defense caused the French king to bis great dishonour to raise his field having lost there more than he wan. and the countrie from destruction, the rulers of the fame procured a truce for a great fumme of monie, raich they consumated to give, delivering up foure notable caffels by wate of engagement, till the famme agraed byon should be to him contented and

In the means time, earle John as head of all the confpiratours, perceining bimfelfe not able to atthine his purpose as then, not to restif the loids and varens of the realme, being op in armour against bun, and now growen to greater flomach, bicaufe they buderified by the bishop of Salisburie latelie arrined, of the kings welfare, and hope of defines rance; and furthermore, confidering that he was disamointed both of Scots and Flemings as he had well hoped thould have come to his aid : he take a truce with the loads of the kings lide, by the earnest frauell of the bithop of Salifburie, till the featt of Dichaelmas All laincts, to as the callels of Windlove, Wallings lauth Ger. ford, and the Peake, thould remaine in the hands of Dorob. his mother gnæne Clianoz; but the castels of Potingham and Lickhill remained fill in his owne possession, the which with such other castels as he the high promocnee and gooneffe of God difamoin 10 held within the land, he furnithed with garrifons of hisowne men and frænds, and then went againe ouer into France to the French king, to purchase some new aid at his hands according to his promise.

Here will we leave earle John conferring with Wil. Parvus the French king, and returne to the king of Enga land. Apon Palniclundaie affer that he was delive red (or rather betrated) into the emperours hands, he was brought before the princes and loods of the eme Cheemetpire, in whose presence the emperour charged him rour chargeth earle John came fecretlie oner, in hope to have not 20 with diverte bulawfull dwings: and namelie picked bing kubm a quarell at him for the wrongs and hurts done to with imming a duarell at him for the wrongs and hurts done to the the Sicilians in time of his fotourning in their 3le, Sicilians, as he went towards the holie land. For albeit the faid emperour had nothing as then to do in the countrie, yet for somuch as he had latelie recourred the Ale of Sicile out of king Tancreds hands, and was now intituled king thereof by the pope, in right of his wife Constance, the daughter of Roger king of Sicile, and to by reason therof seemed to be greenousic offended with him for his dwings about the reconce ring of the monie from Tancred, which neverther leffe was jufflie due buto his lifter for hir dowrie, as in the procedle afore I have alreadie declared . King Richard notivity standing these vaine and other fit's W. Parus, uolous objections laid to his charge, made his and Match Well. fuears alwaics so pithilic and directive to all that The kings could be laid against him, and ercused himselfe in e miledomein uerie point so throughlie, that the emperour much answere, maruelled at his high wisedome and prudence, and not onelie greatlie commended him for the fame, but from thenceforth vied him more courteoullie. and luffered that his frænds might have accesse to him more fredie than before they could be permitted.

The Pope also being advertised of the taking of Polydor, king Kichard, was much offended, that anie chaifti an prince, having taken boon him the defense of the challian faith against the infidels should be so psed in his returns from to goolie an enterpate: and therefore sent both to the duke of Austrich, and to the emperour, requiring them to fet him at libertie . But the emperour declared plainlie that he would be ans fwered for fuch fummes of monie as king Richard had taken out of Sicile before he would release him

o; let him at libertie.

Then king Richard perceived that no excuses ivould ferue, though never to inff, but that he must The bishood needs paie to his conetons boff fome great fumme of Salifburi monic for his hard interteinment, he fent the bilhop fent into Em of Salisburie into England, to take order with the gland. Per to face other townes and caffels from faking, 60 barons of the realme to provide for the paiment of his ransome, which bishop as ye have heard after the peace concluded with Saladine, went unto Jerusa: lem to visit the holie sepulchie, and now comming into Sicile, as he returned homeivards, had know: ledge there how king Richard was taken puloner in Antirich, and remained in the emperours hands: there upon he turned that wais forth, and comming to him, was now fent into England with commission on as 3 baue faid to leave monie for the bings ranforce. De landed here the twentith day of Aprill, by whose comming the land was the somer brought in quiet : for the agrament which earle John toke (as before pie baue heard) was chafelie procured by his Gen. Den meanes fo; till his comming, the coffell of sclind.

C

Por Houed. The bishop of to the king.

Ehe emperor agreeth with hing Michard tothis ran-N. Trinet, Mut. Paris.

R Houed. Lands affig= ned to king Richard.

Polydor.

Rog. Houed. Daber taken for leuteng monie to paie the kings ranfome.

The hard ficers in the fore was not wone, the flege being but flackelie followed by the archbishop of Rouen, who had diverse of his friends within it, and therefore was not verie carnell against them.

Toyen the bithop of Salisburie was departed to. Ene commeth wards England, the bifhop of Clie came to the king and tranciled to carnefilie betwirt the emperour and him, that finallie the emperour (partlie through his fuit, t partite for that he had beine verie much called upon by the pope and other for his deliucrie) toke or , ver with him for the redeming of his libertie and avpointed that summe he thould pay for his ransome, which (as some write) was two hundred thousand markes: other faie that it was but 140 thousand marks of the poile of Tullen weight. But William Paruus, who lived in those dates, affirmeth it was one hundred thousand pounds, and Roger Houeden saith an hundled thousand marks of Cullen poile, to be paid presentlie at the kings first comming into Eng. land, and fiftic thouland marks afterwards, that is 20 to fap, thirtie thousand to the emperour, and twentie thousand to the duke of Austrich, as it were in recompense of the insurie done to him in the holie land; there king Richard ouerthiew his enlignes; and for the same to deliver sufficient sucrtics.

Mozeoner, we find in Roger Houeden that the em. peronramonal other the articles of this agreement thus concluded betwirt him and king Kichard, gave and granted, and by his letters patents confirmed butohim these lands hereafter mentioned, that is to faie: Bzonance with the citie of Alenne, and Clien. nois, the citie of Parleils, Parbon, Arles and Lion byon the Ithone, with the countrie op to the Alps, and all those possessions which belonged to the empire in Burgoine, with the homages of the king of Aragon and of the earle of S. Giles : therein is to be noted, that with the percina of the premilles thus granted to king Kichard fine archbishops læs, and thirtie the bithops les are included. Howbeit the truth is, that the emperour neuer had pollettion of these 4 countries cities, and towns himfelfe, neither would the inhabitants receive any person so by him appointed to their load and governour, wherefore the king made small account of that his so large grant . But after he once understoo the certeintie of the summe that he should pair for his ransome (which businesse he most attended) he sent one with letters by and by and in great half into England to his treasurers, requiring them with all convenient speed to proutde monie, and to fend it to him by a day, that he might 50 be let at libertie with speed.

These letters being come to the quene mother, and other that had charge in governance of the realme, twhe order that all maner of persons as well spiritu all as temporall, thoulo give the fourth part of their whole renemnes to them for that yeare accrewing, and as much more of their moucable goos, and that of eucric knights fie there Mould be leuted the fum of twentie thillings. Also that the religious houses of the orders of the Cifeaur and Sempringham Mould 60 give all their wols for that yeare towards the kings Pow those that had commission to levie this monic, being poiloned with conetoulnelle, and incenfed with a greedie desire (than the which as the poet saith,

-nulla est hac maior Erinnys, Hanc memorant A cheronte (atam, per tristia Ditis Regna truces agitare faces, &c.) bled much freightneffe in eracing it, not onelie letheng it to the bittermost value and extent of mens lands, gods, and possessions, but after their owne wiles and pleasures: so that buder colour of the kings commission, and letters to them directed, there fæmed not a tribute of subsidie to be raised, but by fome publike proclamation all the good and fub-Cance of the people to be appointed as a prey to the kings officers, whereby it came to palle, that not onelie private mens gods, but also the chalices, selve els, and beliels belonging to the church were tur icwels. ned into monie, and a farre greater fumme made than was at the first commanded, a great part of the ouerplus being converted to the vie of those, through whole hands the receipt patted. There was no print lege not freedome allowed to exempt any person of place for being contributorie towards the paiment of this monie. The order of Cifeaur that were never tharged with any paiment before, were now afferfed more depelie than the reft.

The bilhop of Porwich lamenting the iniucious The bilhop of dealings of the pettie officers, and pittieng the peo. Pozwich. ple of the thurth, collected halfe the value of all the chalices within his diocette himfelfe, and to make by the other halfe of the whole fumme, he spared not togine a great postion of his owne treasure. The about of bat of S. Albons acquitted all those churches with faint Albons. in the compatte of his furification, by the gift of an hundred marks. But the bilhop of Cheffer had berie The bilhop of ill lucke with his collections; for having gathered a Cheffer. great fumme of monie to the kings ble, he was spoiled thereof in one night, as he lodged neere buto Canturburie, being boon his fournie towards the king. And bicause Batthew de Clere that laie in Batthew de the castell of Douer was knowne to aid those that Clare. robbed the faid bithop, the archbithop of Canturburic pronounced him accurated. About this time, and on the morrow after the nas tiuitie of faint John Baptist, the bishop of Clie lozd & Houed chancellour arrived in England, not thelving him of Gie. felfe in any statelie post (for he toke opon him neis ther the dignitie of chancellour noz legat, noz yet of tuffice) but onelie as a fimple bifhop and inclienger fent from the king. The quene mother, the archbillion of Rouen, and such other as had government of the land, hearing of his comming, met him at faint Als bons, where he thewed to them the emperours letters, conteining the agræment made betwirt him and king Richard, and withall appointed certeine lozds & barons to go with him at his returne backe to the king, as Gilbert bithop of Rochetter, Sifrid bilhop of Chichester Bennet abbat of Peterbozow, Richard earle of Clare, Roger Bigot earle of Poze folke, Deffrey de Saie, and dinerfe other. It was also ordeined at this same time, that the monte gas thered towards the paiment of the kings ransome Mould remaine in cultodie of Hubert bilhop of Salisburie, Richard bishop of London, William earle of Arundell, Hameline earle of Warren, and of the Daioz of London, bnder the feales of the quene mother and of the archbishop of Rouen.

ABut fee the hap of things, whilest ech one was thus Anno Reg. 5. occupied about the aforefaid monie; it chanced that Wil. Parius, king Richard was at the point to have beine veliue. red into the hands of his deadlie adversarie the French king, as hereafter you thall heare, noting by the waie the dangerous estate of princes, the manifold diffreffes thereinto by finister fate (as well as the inferior erascall rout of common daudges) thep be dituen. For what greater calamitie, what gree uouler hartach, what more milerable cafualtie could have happened buto a bondman, than to be delivered to and fro from the hand of one enimie to another to be bought and fold for monie, to frand to the courter fice of forren foes, of a king to become a captive? therbuto the poet ofd right well allude, when he faid,

> Sapius ventu agitatur ingens Pinus, 🗢 celf a graniore cafu Decidunt turres, feriunt q fummos Fulminamontes.

Hor lib cor. 1. adr.19.

Wil.Paruus.

Mop of Can-

Dubert arch:

turburie,lord

cheefe juftice.

turburic.

The emperour byon displeasure conceiued against the bishop of Liege, which latelie had atteined to that benefice contrarie to the emperours pleasure, tho The billyop of willyed the fame rather to an other person, hired certeine naughtie fellowes to go into France, where the bilhop remained for feare of the emperours mas lice, and there to find meanes traitozoullie to flea him, which they accordinglie oid, by reason whereof the duke of Lousigne that was brother to the bi Mop, and other of his kinfmen, bpon knowledge had 10 thereof, meant to have made the emperour warre, in revenge of that murther: infomuch that the emper rour to have the French kings aid against them, was minded to have delivered B. Richard butohim.

Howbeit after that the matter was taken bp, and a concord made betwirt the emperour and his nobles, he changed his purpose also touching the des livering over of king Richard, who perceiving that till his ransome were paid (which would amount to the fumme of an hundred & fiftie thousand marks)he 20 fould not get libertie: and putting great confidence in the derteritie and diligence of Hubert bishop of Salifburie (thome he fent as pe have heard into England to deale for the levieng of the same) he thought god to advance the same bishop to the metropolitane le of Canturburie, which had beene bacant ever fithence the occease of archbishop Bald wine, that died (as ye have heard) in the holie land.

Dereupon writing to the bishops of the realme. and to the monks of Canturburie, he required them 30 to proceed to the election of an archbilhop for that lee, and withall commended buto them the forefaid bus bert, as a man most sufficient and meet for that Hubert bishop rame. He wrote likewise to the queme to further of Salifburic that matter, and calilie hereby obteined his defire. cleated archbi-For thortlie after, the same Hubert was elected by the bilhops and monks, which allembled togither for that purpole. He was the 41 archbishop that gouers ned that le: for although Reginold billion of Bath was elected before him, yet vicause he vied yer he 40 was installed, he is not put in the number.

The king being now put in goo hope of his spice die deliverance, sent into England, willing his mother quene Clianoz, the archbishop of Konen and o there, to come over buto him into Almaine, and in the meane time he ordeined Hubert the archbilhop of Canturburie to remaine at home as lood thefe instice. After this, the emperour with the advice of the princes of the empire, alligned a day to king Riv chard, in which he thould be delinered out of captinis 50 tie, which was the mondate next after the twentith day of Christmasse. Therebpon king Kichard wrote buto Hubert archbishop of Canturburie in forme as followeth.

The tenour of king Richards letters to the said archbishop.

Ichardus Dei gratiarex Anglie,& 60 dux Normania & Aquitania, & comes Andigauia, venerabili patri nostro in Christo,& amico charissimo Huberto cadem gratia Cantuariensi archiepiscopo salu-tem & sincer e dilectionis plenitudinem . Quoniam certiores sumus, quod liberationem nostram plurimum desideratis, & quòd liberatio nostra ad-modum vos letificat, scripto volumus quod latitia nostræparticipes sitis. Inde est quòd dilectioni vestræ dignum duximus significare, dominum imperatorem certum diem liberationis nostra nobis præfixisse, in die lune proxima post vicesimum diemnatiuitatis Domini, & die dominica proxima sequenti coronabimur de regno prouincia, quod nobis dedit. Vnde mittimus in Angliam literas domini imperatoris super hijs patentes, vobis & cateris amicis nostris beneuclis. Vos autem interimpro omni posse vestro quos scitis nos diligere, consolari velitis, & quos scitis promotionem nostram desiderare. Testemeipso apud Spiram 22. die Septembris.

The emperour allo lignified by his letters to the loads of England his resolute determination in this matter, as followeth.

The tenour of the emperours letters to the States of England touching king Richard, and the day of his deliuerance,&c.

Enricus Dei gratia Romanorum imperator,& semper Augustus, dilectis suu archiep.episcopis,comitibus, baroni-bus,militibus, & vniuersis alys sideli-bus Richardi illustris regis Anglorum gratiam suam & omne bonum. Vniuersitati vestra duximus intimandum, quòd dilecto amico nostro Richardo illustri regi Anglorum domino vestro certum diem liberationis sua statuimus, à secunda feria post diem natiuitatis domini in tres septimanas apud Spiram siue apud Berenatiam, & inde in septem dies posuimus ei diem coronationis sua de regno Prouincia, quod ei promisimus : & hoc certum habeatis, & indubitatum, nostri siquidem propositi est,& voluntatis, præfatum dominum vestrum specialem promouere sicut amicum nostrum, & magnificentiùs honorare . Datum apud Theallu-Sam vigilia beati Thoma Apostoli.

Before this king Richard had fent the bilhop of Elie into France onto his brother earle John, who prevailed to much with him, that he returned into Pozmandie, and there sware fealtie buto his brother king Richard, and so was contented to fortake the French king. But whereas king Kichard commanbed that all such castels and honours as he had given to him afore time, thould now be restored to him as gaine, as well those in England, as the other on the further side the sea: such as had the same cassels in keeping would not obeie the kings commandement The kings herein, refuling to make restitution of those places, command according to the tenour & purport of the kings writ, ment not buto the said earle of Portaigne, by reason of which obeicd. refulall, he returned againe to the French king, and Aucke to him. Herebyon the French king gave bus to him the callels of Dzeincourt, and Arques, the which ought to have beene delivered buto the archbi thop of Reimes as in pledge, who had travelled as a meane betwirt the French king to whom he was uncle, and the king of England to whom he was cow fine, procuring a meeting for agreement to be had be twirt them at a certeine place betwirt Haucolour and Tulle in the borders of Lorraine. But not with flanding all that he could do, matters were so farre out of frame, and such mistrust was entred into the 2012 minds of the parties, that no conclusion held. So that all the hope which king Richard had, was by pair ment of his ransome to redeeme his libertic, and then to thiff with things as he might. And to finallie then the monie was once readic, or rather a fuffict ent pozition thereof, the same was connected oner into Germanie, and paiment made to the emperour of the more part of the kings ransome, and sufficient pleages left with him for the rest, as the archbishop of Roven, the bishop of Bath [Baldwin Wac] and and falute the king.

1194

An. Reg. 5.

R. Houed. ting Ri= chard relea=

Perepponking Richard, after he had bæne pilo ner one yeare, fir wækes, and the daics, was fet at libertie on Candlemalle day (as most writers agree) febout of caps and then with long and halfie fournies, not keeping the high waies, he halfed fouth towards England. It is reported that if he had lingred by the way, he had bone efflones appehended. For the emperour bei 10 ing incensed against him by ambassadoes that came from the French king, immediatlie after he was fet forward, began to repent himfelfe in that he had ful fered him to some to depart from him, and herebpon fent men after him with all speed to bring him backe if they could by any meanes overtake him, meaning as then to have kept him in perpetuall prison.

R.Houed. The offers of kept ftill in pulon.

Some wite that those ambassadours fent from the French king, with other from earle John, came to the emperoz before king Kichard was delivered, 20 and crie John offering in the French kings name fiftie thousand to have the k. marks of filuer, and in the name of earle John thire tie thouland, byon condition that H. Richard might remaine still in captinitie untill the feast of S. Wi thaell nert infuing; oz elfe if it might fo pleafe him, he should receive a thousand pounds of silver for everie moneth, whilest king Kichard thould be deteined in his prison, or otherwise fiftie thousand marks of fil ner more than the first offer, at one entire paiment, if he would deliver him into their hands, or at the 30 leastwife to kepe him puloner by the terme of one mole veare.

The emperour hearing of such large offers, and pet hoping for more, contrarie to his promile and let ters patents therefore granted, propoged the day in which king Richard Chould have beene fet at libertie, till Candlemalle after, at which day he was brought from Haguenaw onto Spiers, where the emperour had called a councell to intreat further of the matter touching his redemption . Here the emperour 40 thewed the letters which he had received from the French king and earle John buto king Kichard, who bpon light and peruling of the same, was maruel, loullie amazed, and began to despaire of all speedie de-liuerance.

Indeed the emperour lought delaies boon a couctous delire of the monie offered by the French king and earle John, but yet such princes and great lords as had bindertaken for the emperour, that the coues nants and articles on his part agreed opon in the act 50 cord palled betwirthim and king Lichard, thould be in ech behalfe performed [that is to faie , the archble Hops of Ments, Tullen, and Saltzburge, the bishops of Mozmes, Spiers, and Liege, the dukes of Suaben, Austrich, & Louain, the Paligraue of the Khine, and others came to the emperour, and reproving him for his couctous mind, in that he deferred the reforing of king Kichard to his libertie, contrarie to the composition, did so much prevaile, that the emper pet behind (as before ve have heard) released king Michard out of captivitie on the fecond or (as Roger Houeden faith) the fourth day of Februarie, being a dismall day and an infortunate (as they note them in kalendars.) And where the king would have left Robert de Pouant the bilhop of Couentries brother for a pleage among if the other, he refused to be one of the number, alledging that he was fernant to earle John Ling Richard greenouflie offended herewith, commanded that he should be apprehended, and committed to prison, 4 so he was. This Robert was one of those that came with the letters from the French hing and earle John to the emperour, about the Cair eng of king Richards delinerance.

Furthermore, king Kichard the same day in which he was restored to libertie, summoned by his letters Hugh Pouant bilhop of Conentrie, to appeare in his court, to answer such things as were to be obiceted against him, both before spirituall judges in that he was a bilyop, and also before temporall in that he had holden and exercised a temporall office. On the berie same day also the emperour and the princes of the empire, fent letters under their hands and feales to the French king, and to John erle of Mortaigne, commanding them immediatlie bpon light of the fame letters, to reffore buto king Richard all those castels, cities, townes, lands, and other things, which they had taken from him during the time of his remaining in captivitie, and if they refused thus to do, then they gave them to understand by the same letters, that they would aid king Kichard to reconer that by force, which had beene wrongfullie taken from him. Pozeouer king Kichard gave and by his deed confirmed buto lundrie princes of the empire for their Territe pentle homage and fealtie, certeine pearelie pensions, as ous ginen by the king to to the archbilhop of Wents and Cullen, to the bilhop certaine prins of Liege, to the dukes of Austrich and Lousine, to ces of the cm the marquelle of Pountferrat, to the buke of Des pire. glenburge, to the duke of Suaben the emperozs bzo, Memburge. ther, to the earle of Bins, to the earle of Polland, and to the some of the earle of Penault, of all the which, and other mo, he received homage, or rather had their promife by oth to aid him against the Arench king, which French king, now that he fawe no hope noz likelihood remaining to being the emperour to the bent of his bowe for the deteining of 18. Richard Kill in captuitie, railed a power foothwith, & entring in Wil. Parties. to Pozmandie (the truce notwith flanding) twhe the Wil. French towne of Eureur, with diverle other fortrelles there bing invadeth abouts, and after he had done mischese inough, as it Mozmandes. were wearied with cuill dwing, he granted efflones to frand to the truce, and fo returned home.

Finallie after king Richard had dispatched his bulinelle with the emperour, and the princes of Almaigne, he fet forward on his tornie towards Enge land, and having the emperours passeport, came to Cullen, where he was folfullic received of the archi bithop, the which archbithop attended on him till he came to Antwerpe, where king Kichard twhe the water in a gallic that belonged to Alane de Trenche mere, but in the night he went into a thip of Rie, bes R. Houed. ing a verie faire vessell, and so late about in hir all the night, and in the morning returned to the gallie, and to failed about the coast, till he came to the haven of Swin in Flanders, and there Caleng five daies, on the firt day he let forth againe, and at length in Belanded the god safetie landed at Sandwich the twelfe date of 20. of Agarch Parch, and the morrow after came to Canturburie, being lundais there he was received with procession, as Ger. Dor. faith. From thence he went to Rocheffer, and on the Diccio watts. wednesday being the sixteenth of Parch, he came onto London, where he was received with greation rour receiving pleages for the paiment of the monie 60 and gladneffe of the people, gluing heartie thanks to almightie GDD for his fafe returne and des liuerance. It is recorded by writers, that when such lords of Almaine as came over with him, faw the great riches which the Londoners thewed in that trium: phant receiving of their sourceigne lood and king, they maruelled greatlie thereat, infomuch that one of them faid buto him; Surelie oh king, your people ,, are wife and fubtile, which do nothing doubt to thew, the beautifull thine of their riches now that they ,, have received you home, whereas before they formed ,, to bemaile their næd and pouertie, thilest you res,, mained in captiuitie. For verelie if the emperous,, had binderstood that the riches of the realine had bin " fuch.

Pig,

as R. Houeden and Rafe de

Mobert be Pourne.

Che princes that han hn=

Dertaken foz

concuents.

ce such neister would be have borne persuaded that ce England could haue bene made bare of wealth, nei ther yet should you so lightlie have escaped his hands without the paiment of a moze huge and intollerace ble ransome.

The same yeare that king Richard was taken (as before is mentioned) by the duke of Austrich, one night in the moneth of Januarie about the first watch of the fame night, the northwest side of the elehad burned, without any clouds or other darknesse to cover it, so that the stars thined through that red, nelle, and might be verie well discerned. Dinerse bright strakes appeared to flash opwards now and then, dividing the reducte, thorough the which the ffars femed to be of a bright fanguine colour . In Februarie nert inluing, one night after midnight the like wonder was fiene, and shortlie after newes came that the king was taken in Almaigne.

fore the breake of the date, the like thing appeared as gaine with leffe feare and wonder to the people (than before being now better accustomed to the like sight againe. And now the same daie and selse houre that the king arrived at Sandwich, being the second houre of that daie, whilest the sunne shone verie bright and cleare, there appeared a most brightsome and bnaccultomed clearnelle, not farre diffant from the finne, as it were to the length and breadth of a withell like to the rainbow, which Arange fight when manie beheld, there were that prognofficated the king alreavie to be arrived.

Rog.Houed. Dinerle fieges held at one time.

A.Michaelo

mount.

In this meane while the bilhop of Durham with a great armic belieged the callell of Tickhill; and earle Danid brother to the king of Scots, with Kanulfe earle of Chester, and earle Ferrers, besteged the castell of Potingham, whilest at the same present the archbishop of Canturburie with a great power daies was rendeed into his hands, the lives and lims of them within faued. Also the castell of Lancaster was delivered to him, the which the same archbishops brother had in keeping under earle John, and like wife the abbeie of S. Withaels mount in Countvall, the which abbeie Penrie de la Pomerey chaling out the monks, had fortified against the king, and heas ring newes of the kings returne home, died (as it was thought) for mere grefe and feare. These three places were surrendered to the archbishop before the 50 kings returne, but Dickhill & Potingham helo out.

King Richard being returned into England, and understanding both how the French king made warre against him in Pommandie, and that the state of England was not a little disquieted, by the pras ctile of his brother earle John and his complices, speciallie by reason that diverse castels were defended by such as he had placed in them, he thought god with all freed to cut off luch occasions as might breed The king go = a further milithefe. Therebpon he first went to Po 60 made against him and his countries, and subgement ethto Morning tingham, and within thice daies after his comming thither (which was on the daie of the Annunciation neth the callel. of our ladie)he confircinco them that kept the caffell there in his brothers name, to yold themselues simplie bnto his mercie, after they had abidden diverse affaults, by the which even the first daie the otter gates were burnt, and certeine defenses deffroied, which they had made before the same.

The cheefe of them that were within this castell to defend it were thefe, William de Uendeuall conestable there, Roger de Pountbegun, Kafe Pur dac, Philip de Mozceter and Ranulfe de Mozceter brothren. The morow after the furrender was made, the king went to Cliptione, and rode into the forces of Shirewood, where he had never beene before, the The land biew whereof pleased him greatlie. The castell of Shirms Tickhill was likewise at the same time yeelded buto the bilhop of Durham, who received it to the kings ble, and them that kept it as priloners, without anie composition, but standing simplie to the it. mercie. For although those that had these castels in keeping, were sufficientlie provided of all necessarie things for defense, get the suoden comming of the hina mentapeared of such a ruddie colour as though it 10 (thom they thought verelie would never have returned) put them in such feare, that they will not what to make of the matter, and fo (as men amazed) The callells they peelded without anie further exception. The bi- Cichhillia thop of Durham bringing those prisoners with him bed. thich had vecloed by this callell of Tickhill, came to Rog Hound the king the 27 date of Parch, the verie date before that Potingham castell was given over.

Mozeover, this is to be remembred, that during the flege of Potingham, contention arose betwirt Strife be On the second date of Poucmber also a little bes 20 the two archbishops of Canturburie and Poske, as bishops for bout the carriage of their croffes . For Hubert arche rieng of the thop of Canturburie comming thither, had his crosse crosses. borne before him; the archbiftop of Dorke (having no crosse there at all) was verie fore offended, that anie other should go with crosse borne before him in his biocesse, and therfore complained hereof to the king. But the archbishop of Canturburie mainteined that he had not done anie thing but that which was law full for him to do, and therebpon made his appeale mans personage, having a red thining brightnesse 30 to Rome, that the pope might have the hearing and judging of that controversie betwirt them. In the meane time, after the king had got the ca-

fels of Potingham and Lickhill into his hands (as ye have heard) he called a parlement at Poting ham, where the queene mother fat on the right hand of him and the archbilhops of Canturburie & Pocke on the left, with other bishops, earles and barons accooling to their places. On the first date of their fel Officership fion was Berard de Camuille discharged of the of tharged belieged Parleburgh callell, the which within a few 40 fice which he had borne of Chirifte of Lincolne, and dispossessed both of the castell & countie. And so like wife was Hugh Bardolfe of the castell and countie of Porke, and of the castell of Scarbourgh, and of the cultodie and keeping of the countrie of West Lieutenant merland, the which offices being now in the kings thips for an hands, he let them on fale to him that would give fale. most. Hereof it came to passe, that where the lood chancellour offered to give fifteene hundred markes before hand, for the counties of Dorke, Lincolne and Porthampton, and an hundred markes of increase of rent for enerie of the same counties. Beffrey arche Theanth bishop of Poske offered to the king these thousand shop of Total markes aforehand, onelie for the countre of Porke, and an hundred markes pearelie of increase, and so had the same committed to his regiment.

Mozeover in this parlement, the king demanded indgement against his brother John, and Hugh po The bill uant the bilhop of Couentrie and Chester, for such of Chester traitozous and most distoiall attempts as they had was given that both the fair earle and bishop should have summons given them peremptopilie to appeare, and if within fortie dates after, they came not to answer such plaints as might be law against them, then thould earle John forfeit all that he had within the realme, and the biffiop thould frand to the sudgement of the bishops, in that he was a bishop, and to the tempozall loods in that he had beine the kings fbiriffe.

In this parlement allo, in the kalends of Appill, the king procured a subsidie to be granted to him, a subsidie to wit, two thillings of enerte plough land through England, which maner of sublidie by an old name is called Teemen toll, or Theyme toll. De also conv manded

3

加金

C) So

Rog.Houed.

The archbimon of Forlic accuied.

Gerard de Camunile charged wiri felonie and treafon,

The king of &cots com: meth to far recking of Endand.

I parlement.

A grant made when he came to England.

manded that enerie man thould make for him the third part of knights feruice, accordinglie as euerie for might beare, to furnith him forth into Porman Die De demanded of the monks Ciffeaur, all their molles for the same yeare. But bicause that sæmed an oner gravous burthen buto them, they fined with him, as after thall appeare. The fourth day of this varlement, by the kings permission manie greeyous complaints were exhibited against the archbishop of which he had practiced : but he passed so little thereof. that he made no answer but o their billes.

Dozeover through the procurement of the lord chancellour, Gerard de Camuille was arreigned for receining theues, and robbers, which had robbed cers teine merchants of their gods, that were going to the faire of Stamfort; also they appealed him of treas fon for refuting to stand to his triall by order of the kings lawes at commandement of the kings tuffices, bearing himfelfe to be earle Johns man, and ais 20 means be appehended. ding the fame earle against the king. But all these acculations he flatlie benied, and so his adversaries put in pleages to follow their fuit, and he put in the like to defend himfelfe by one of his freholders.

The same date king Kichard received the king of Scots at Clipftone, comming now to visit him, and to reivice with him for his fafe returne home after fo long a tournie, and so manie passed perils. After thep had spent the time a certeine space in soy and mirth, the fourth of Appill at their being togither at Mal. 3 ton, the king of Scots required of king Richard to have restored to him the counties of Porthumbers land, Tumberland and Westmerland, with the countic of Lancaster also, the which in right of his prede, cessors belonged to him (as he alledged.)

King Richard assembling a parlement of the Pobles of his realme at Porthampton, about fire time daies after that the Scotish king had made this request, gave him answer that by no means he might as then fatilite his petition: for if he thould fo 40 do, his aducrfaries in France would report that he did it for feare, and not for any lone or hartie frendthip. But yet king Kichard in the prefence of his totheking of mother greene Clianoz, and the loods spirituall Scots what and temporall of his realizations for the and temporall of his realme togither at that present affembled, granted and by his deed confirmed buto the faid king of Scots, and to his heires for ever; that whensoever he or any of them should come by summons of the king of England buto his court, the bithop of Durham, and the thiriffe of Posthum: 50 berland thould receive him at the water of Twed, and fafe conduct him but othe water of Thefe, and there thould the archbithop of Pocke, and the thiriffe of Poste be readie to receive him of them, and from thence give their attendance byon him buto the borders of the nert thire.

It was also granted to the said king, that he should be attended from thire to thire by prelats and this riffes, till he came to the kings court, also from the time that the king of Scotland Could enter this 60 realme of England, he thould have dailie out of the kings purile for his liverie an hundred thillings, and after he came to the court, he should have in allows ance dailie for his liverie, folong as he there remais ned, thirtie thillings and twelve manchet waltels, twelve manchet simuels, foure gallons of the best wine, and eight gallons of houthold wine, two pound of pemer, foure pound of cumin, two from of war, or elle foure links, and fortie great and long col. pons of fuch cambels as are ferued before the king, and foure and twentie colpons of other candels that ferme for the houthold. And when he thould returne into his countrie againe, then should he be conucied with the bishops and thiriffes from countie to countie, till he come to the water of Twed, having an hundred Chillings a day of liverie, ec: as is before amointed. The charter of this grant was beliucred unto William king of Scots in the towne of Pop thampton in Caffer weeke, by the hands of Milliam billion of Clie losd chancellour, in the yeare of our loed 1 194, and in the fift years of king Kichard his complaints were exhibited againft the archbishop of Atter this, on the threnth day of Aprill, king the Poske, for extortion and other buttest because the dard having the said king of Scots in his companie holden at came to Winchester, where he called a councell, and winchester. there in open affemblie he highlie commended all those of the Pobilitie, that in his absence had shewed themselves faithfull, and relisted his brother, and such other his complices, which had as difficiall persons rebelled against him . Here he also proclaimed his faid brother, and all those that toke his part, traitours to the crowne, and take order for the punishment of them, that (being of their faction) could by any Furthermoze, to put awaie as it were the reprofe of his captinitie and impallement) by the reutning of his noblenette, which he had in high cuimation, –pretio nam dignior omni est Nobilitas, hæc non emitur nec venditur auro)

he caused himselfe to be estsones crowned by the archbishop Hubert, on the 18 of Appill, at Winthefter, and to the wood himfelfe as a neto crowned crowned a king (in hope of good luccelle and better lucke to fol new. low) in the presence of the said king of Scots, who bare one of the thee fwords before him, going in the R. Houed. middle betwirt two earles, that is to faie, Pamelin The bing of earle of Warren going on his right hand, and Kas Scots beanulfe earle of Cheffer on his left. The canapie bover free five 200 before the which he went was borne op also by source earles, the king of Poeffolke, Lillewight, Salisburie, and Ferrers. The England. bishop of Clie loed chancellour went on the right hand of the king, and the bithop of London on the left. At dinner also the citizens of London serued him in the butterie by reason of two hundred marks The citizens thich they had given the king that they might fo do, of London, notwithstanding the claime and challenge made by the citizens of Winchester, the which served him in the kitchin.

The archiffhop of Porke was commanded that he should not be present at the coronation, least some tumult might arise about the having of his crosse borne afore him, to the displeasure of the archbishop of Canturburie, who food in it, that no prelat with in his province ought to have any crosse borne before him, himfelfe ercepted.

After this, he called a parlement, by vertue where Aparlement of he renoked backe and refumed into his hands all called. patents, annuities, fées, and other grants (before his volage into the holic land) by him made, 02 other wife granted of altenated. And bicaufe it thuld not fæme that he vico a miere violent extortion herein, he treas ted with everie one of them in most courteous wife, bearing them in hand, that he knew well they ment not to let fouth their monie to him vpon viurie, but would be contented with such reasonable gaine and profit, as had beene raised to their ble in time of his absence of those things which they held of him by ale fignation in way of lone, so that now the faine might be restored to him againe, sith he ment not to sell them, but to let them footh as it were to farme for the time, as all men might well understand, considering that he could not mainteine the post of a king with: out receipt of those profits which he had so let forth, With these gentle woods therefore mired with some decadfull allegations, he brought them all into fuch perpleritie, that not one of them durft withstand his The bold conrequest, not alledge that he had wrong done to him, tage of the to except Hugh the bithop of Lincolne, who flicked not college

The king

k. Richards

The monks

pactifes.

Culteaux.

to fair, that the king in this bemand did them and the The bushop of rest open iniurie. The bishop of Durham lost his his carloone, earledoine, and was confireined to content himfelfe with his old bithoppite, and to leave the dignitie of an earle, or at the least wife the possessions which he had bought of the king before his letting forward into the holie land.

Thus the king recovered those things for the which he had received great fummes of monie, without making any recompense, where the most part of the 1 occupiers had not received fearfelie a third part of the principall which they had laid forth. For no fuffi clencie of grant, patent, or other writing to any of them before made, did any thing quaile them. Poreouer, where he had borrowed a great summe of monie of the merchants of the staple, he wought a feat with the monks of the Cifeaux order to discharge that debt. He told these monks that being constreis ned with vigent necessitie, he had bosowed that modence of their god beneuolence, and therefore he required them to extend their liberalitie so farre to foard him, as to deliner to much woll in value, as Chould discharge that bebt. To be Chort, the monks being onercome with the kings words, threatning kindnelle bpon them, fulfilled his requelt. Dozeover not fatisfied herewith, he levied a talke throughout the realme, eracting of everie hide of land two thil lings, according to the grant made to him at Potingham: and the same was generallie gathered, as 3

Rog. Houed: The king of ⇔cots ma= keth fuit for Mozthuni= berland.

ivell of the spiritual mens lands as of the tempozall. The king of Scots under Canding that the bilhop of Durham had given over and religned the earlebome of Posthumberland into the hings hands, thought god once againe to affaie if he might compalle his delire, and herewith he began his former fuit afresh, offering to king Richard fisteens thou fand markes of filter for the whole earledome of Porthumberland with the appurtenances, as his father earle Henric did hold the fame before. The king 40 taking counsell in the matter, agreed that he chould have it for that monie, excepting the castels: but the king of Scots would have cattels and all, or elfe he would not bargaine.

Finallie, after he had lundzie times moued this fuit for the having of the lands but o which he preters ded a title, and could get nothing of king Richard but faire words, putting him as it were in hope to obteine that he required at his next returne out of France, byon the 22 daie of Aprill being fridaie, 50 he twice leaue of the bing, and returned towards his countrie, not verie foifull, in that he could not obteine his luit. Ling Kichard in this meane while caus fed all those philoners that were taken in the castels of Potingham, Tickhill, Warleburgh, Lancaffer, and S. Wichaels mount, which were of any wealth to be put in pilon, that they might fine for their raisfoms. The relidue he luffered to depart opon fuers ties, that were bound for them in an hundreth marks a prece, to be forth comming when they thould 60 This chanced about 37 dates after his flicing in the

Now the king (after he had gathered a great postion of monie, and orderned diverse things for the behose of the common-wealth, thereby to satisfie the harts of the people) prepared himselfe to faile into Pormandie. But first he reconciled the archbishop of Poske, and the bishop of Clie losd chancellour, afwell for the apprehention a imprisoning of the arch bishop at Doner, as for the dishonourable expulsion of the chancellour out of England, in such wife that the chancellour thould byon reasonable summons given to him by the archbishop, sweare with the hands of an hundled preeffs with him, that he neither commanded not willed that the archithop thould be appehended. The confronersie betwirt the two archbitheps about the bearing of their croffes, the king would not meddle withall, for (as he faid) that perfeined to the pope. Det the archbishop of Cantur burie complained to king Richard of the iniuric done to him at that present by the archbishop of Porke, presuming within his province to have his croffe borne before him . At length when the kings provision was once readic for his votage into Por mandie, he came to Douer, and hearing that the French king had belieged the towne of Mernuell, and that the same was in danger to be taken, he toke the fea togither with his mother quene Clia, The king noz on the ninth date of Pate, and transporting ouer transported into Posmandie, arrived at Harflet with an hun- ouer into died great thips fraught with men, hostles and ar France. mour.

The Frenchking hearing of king Kichards arris uall, and that he was comming with a great power nie of the merchants beyond the fea, boon confis 20 to the fuccour of them within Aernueil, and was alreadie incamped nere to the towne of the Cagle, The french he plucked op his tents in the night before Whitfun hing railed date, and leauting the fiege, departed from thence, his legitim and take a certeine small fortresse by the space as he marched, wherein he left a few fouldiers to keepe it to his ofe. King Richard herewith entring into the French dominions, sent these bands of souldiers to wards Male de Ruell, and went himselfe buto Lo thes, and belieging that callell wan it within a thort time. The Pormans also recovered the citie of Eurreum out of the French mens hands, but those that were fent unto Ruell, and had besieged the castell there an eight daies without anie gaine, hearing that the French king was comming towards them, departed thence, a came backe to the kings campe, therebpon the French king comming to Kuell ras ced it to the ground, bicause his enimic Mould not at anie time in winning it neatle there to the further damage of the countrie.

About the same time, Kobert carle of Lesceller is Rog. Houed, fuing footh of Rouen in hope to worke some feat to the damage of the Frenchmen, as he rode somewhat briaduisedite in the lands of Bugh Bourney , fell Che earle d within danger of his enimies, who twhe him palo Lucitum ner, and a few other that were in his companie. The ken pullous, French king after this came with his armie into the coalls of Couraine, and marched nære Clandoline, and there incamped, whereof king Kichard being aduertifed, diew nière to Clandofine, meaning to al faile the French king in his campe, tho having knowledge thereof dislodged with his armie earlie in the morning, and fled awate (to his great diffonour)in all haff possible. The king of England with his people following in chafe of the French men flue manie, and toke a great number of puloners, a mongst whom was the French kings cheefe treasur rer. Also the Englishmen toke mante wagons and fumpters laden with croffebowes, armour, plate, ap-

Galliafugisti bis, or hoc fub rege Philippo, Nec sunt sub modio facta pudenda tuo. Vernolium sumit testem suga prima secunda Vindocinum,noctem prima, secunda diem. Noctefugam primam rapuisti mane secundam, Prima metus vitio, viq secunda fuit.

these verses written:

parell, and the furniture of the French kings chapell.

night from Uernweil, of which two flights of the French king (in maner as pe have heard) we find

France, twice thou fledft, while Philip reignd, the world dooth know thy shame, For Vernueil witnesse beares ofth'one, next Vandosme knowes the same.

Rog. Houed.

Mainprife.

The first by night, the next by day, thy heart and force doo showe, That first through feare, and next by force, was wrought thine ouerthrowe.

deffrep be Bancon. The carle of Engoicline. The king of Mauary bio: ther.

Anno Reg. 6.

Engoleline

Polydor.

Polydor.

Great exac= tiong,

The colour pretended in leuteng of mo=

Rog. Houed. ric of fundzie matters.

In this meane while certaine rebels in Buten. as the lord Geffrey de Kancin or Kancon, and the earle of Engolefine with their complices, byon confivence of the French kings allitance, fore disquie: Pauarre, and brother to Berengaria the queene of England, entring into Buien with an armie, wafled the lands of both those rebels, till he was called home by reason of his fathers death which chanced a bout the same time . Shortlie after Beffrey Kancin died, and king Richard comming into his countrie, wan the Arong castell of Tailleburge by furrender, thich apperteined to the same Geffrey with others. anothen going against the other rebels, he wan the citie of Engoleime from him by force of affault. All 2 which time the French king firred not, by reason that there was some communication in hand for a truce to be taken betwirt him and king Kichard. which by mediation of certeine bishops was shortlie after concluded, to endure for twelve moneths. The bishop of Elie was thefe commissioner for the king of England, and this truce was accorded about Lammas, and served to little purpose, except to give libertie to either prince to breath a little, and in the meane time to provide themselves of men, muniti- 30 on,thips a monie, that immediatlie after the terme was expired, they might with greater force returne to the field againe, for they had not onelie a like des fire to follow the warres, but also bled a like meane and practife to leuie monie.

For thereas they had alreadie made the temporal tie bare with often paiments, and calling them footh to serve personallie in the warres, they thought best now to fetch a fleece from the spiritualtie and church men, considering also that they had beene by reason 4 of their immunitie moze gentlie dealt with, and not appointed to ferue themselucs in any maner of wife. To colour this exaction which they know would be euill taken of manie, they bauted absoad, that they les nied this monie byon purpole, to lend it into the holie land, towards the paiment of the christian foulds ers, which remained there upon the defense of those townes, which yet the Saracens had not conquered. Ling Richard therfore comming to Towes in Tow raine, required a great fumme of monie of the clear, 5 gie in those parts, and the like request he made through out all those his dominions, on that further side of the sea. King Philip for his part demanded likewise intollerable fithes and duties of all the thurchmen in his territories, and those that had the gathering of that monie ferued their owne turne, in dealing most streightlie with sillie pzeests, making them to paie what they thought goo, though some time beyond the bounds of equitie and reason.

In September, the fulfices (tinerants made their 60 circuits thorough eucrie thire and countie of this realme, causing inquisitions to be taken by substans tiall turies of ples of the crowne both old and new, of recognilances, of elcheats, of wards, of mariages, of all maner of offendors against the lawes and or dinances of the relme, and of all other transgressors, falliffers, and murtherers of Jewes; of the pledges, gods, lands, debts, and writings of Jewes that were flaine, and of other circumstances touching that matter. Likewise of the accompts of Hiriffes, as to bnderstand what had beine given towards the kings ransome, how much had beene received, and what remained behind to receive. Also of the lands that be longed to erle John, and what gods he had, and what he held in demaine, in wards, elcheats, and in giffs, and for what cause they were given . Furthermore, of his fautoes and partakers, which had made fines with the king, and which not, with manie other artis Alarers. cles touching the fame earle. Also of vourers, and of their gods being feized, of wines fold contrarie to the affile, of falle measures, and of such as having received the croffe to go into the holie land, died before they let forward. Also of grand allies that were of ted the countrie. Howbeit, the some of the king of 10 an hundred thillings land of bider, and of defaults, and of diverle other things, the turats were charged to inquire, and present the fame.

The fulfices also were appointed to cause the manours, farmes and lands which the king held in demaine, or by wards and elcheats, to be furueted by a substantiall jurie, and to take order for the converting of them to such vie, as the king might be answer red of the gaines riling by the same at the farmers Jewes. hands. Also, the Jewes were amointed to inroll all their debts, pledges, lands, houses, rents and possess, ons . Pozeouer , inquition was taken of inffices, thiriffes, bailiffes, conestables, foresters and other Justices, the officers belonging to the king, to binder fand in what riffes and o maner they had behaued themselnes in taking and ther officers. feizing of things into their hands, and of all such gwds, giffs and promifes had and received by occasion of leature made of the lands of earle John and his fautors, and who received the fame, and what delaie Hubert arch was granted by commandement of Hubert archbit bishop of Canthop of Canturburie, then lost cheefe iuffice.

In this meane time, whilest these inquisitions were chase indice. thus taken in England , king Richard comming Officers bis footh of Poiston into Anion, caused all the bailiffes ucuto fine for and officers of that countrie, and also of Paine, to their offices. fine with him for their offices. After this, when he Cheking of came bowne into Pozmanoie, he fæmed in thew to fender with be offended with his chancellour the billion of Clie, cellor. about concluding of the truce with the French king (where as pe have heard he was chefe commission ner) milliking greatlie all that was done therein, and therefore he toke the feale from him, and caused a new feale to be made, commanding to be proclate med thorough all his dominions, that what soener had beene fealed with the old feale, fould frand in no force, both for that his chancellor had wrought more undiscreetlie than was convenient; and againe, bis cause the same seale was lost, when Roger Palus Catulus his vicechancellour was drowned, who perithed among other by thip wacke, nere to the Ile of Typies, before the king arrived there, being as then on his fournie into the holie land. Therefore all men had commandement to come to this new feale, that they might have their charters and writings confirmed.

Furthermose, whilest the truce yet lasted, king Richard failed over into England, where he caused Marth. Paris. turneis to be exercised in diverse places , for the bet. The bing retertraining bpof fouldiers in feats of warre, that turneth into they might growe moze fkilfull and perfect in the Begranteth fame, when they thoulo come to the triall of their the English forces, whereby he raised no small summes of monie men iconce for granting license to his subjects so to tournie. E, to tournie. ucrie earle that would tournie, paid to him for his lie cence twentie marks, euerie baron ten marks, and euerie knight having lands, did give foure marks, Rog. Houed. and those that had no lanos two marks, to the great finespaid damnifieng of the people; having learned the com, forlicence to mon leffon, and receiued the opdinarie rule follow nements. ed of all, and neglected of none; namelie, opus est nummis vel morte relictis. Vel sorte inuentis, vel quanis arte paratie, Quippe inopem malamulta pati contingit vliq, Nec sine divitys fas cuiquam ducere vitam Fælicem, oc.

turburie lozd

A new feate.

exercife tura

Mal. Pal.in Sus cap.

The charter of this grant was delivered by the king onto William carle of Salifburie, to have the having thereof: but Hubert Walter the archbishop of Canturburie, and lood cheefe wiffce, made his boo ther Theobalo Walter collecto: of the monie, for the feraping and raking togither thereof, in huge fums, he put the former thiffs of extortion and exaction in pradife.

The tenour of the charter concerning the turnements before

🛐 Ichard by the grace of God king of England, duke of Normandie and Aquitaine, and came of the reuerend father in Christ, Hubert archbishop of Canturburie, and primat we have granted turnaments to be kept in England in fine steeds, to wit, betwixt Sarisburie and Wilton, betwixt Warwike and Kenelworth, betwixt Stanford and Warmeford, betwixt Brackeley and Nixburgh, betwixt Blie & Tickhill, fo that the peace of our land be not broken, nor yet our iustices authoritie diminished, nor any damage doone to our forrests. Provided that what earle foeuer will turney there, shall give to vs twentie markes, a baron ten marks, a knight that hath lands foure marks and he that hath no lands shall give two marks.

Moreouer, no stranger shall be admitted to turney there, wherevpon we command you, that at the daie of the turnieng, ye have there two clarkes, and two of our knights to receive the oth of the earles and barons, which shall satisfie vs of the said summes of monie, before the turnieng begin, & that they suffer none to 40 turney, till (before) they have made paiment, and have caused to be entred how much & of whom they have received and ye shall take ten marks for this charter to our vse, whereof the earle of Salisburie, and the earle of Clare, and the earle of Warren are pledges. Witnesse my selfe, at Ville Leuesche, the two and twentith of August,

IIIbogs

Furthermore, ordinances were made and fet forth for the fafe keeping of the peace, so that such as would turney, neither by the way in comming 02 going, 02 whilest the turnieng lasted, should violentlie take as ny thing to scrue their necessarie vies, without pass eng therefore to the owner according to the worth, no: should do insurie to any man in any manner of wife. But now to the other doings of king Rie thard, who made no long above in England at this time, but thostlie returned into Posmandie, bicause 60 he heard that king Philip had an armie readie leufed. (Therefore meaning to buckle with him opon occalion offered, he made the more half, and being landed there, approched but the borders of the French dominions, incamping himselfe with his armie in the field, to wait for the time that the truce should be expired, least the enimic should in any exploit prevent him. In like manner king Philip having with him earle John king Richards brother, kept his fouldiers and men of warre in a readines with him, to worke any feat that Mould be thought expedient allone as the truce should end.

Milest both these kings were thus bent to powie 1195 - sut their malice, and to case their ffomachs with dint of swood, there came me Clengers from the pope, which will be exporting him but o peace and quietnesse, but his er- from the training hortation little availed. For they regarding it little or nothing, immediatlie as the truce was expired, got them abroad into the field, thing Bichard been towards Foldone, a towne lituat in the confines of Foldon Berrie, whither it was reported that the French king meant to come: and there faid for him a whole day togither. But the French king hearing that king Richard was there to loke for him, thought it best not to come there at all. Wherfore king Richard went the nert date buto a called Bulon, and twhe it boon his first approch. Then went he to a towne called Pouencourt, and perceiving the fame to be firong and well manned, toke not in hand to affaile it till the third date affer his comming this ther, at what time he so inclosed the same round as bout with diligent watch and ward, that a cat could not have escaped out of the place, neither by date no: Pouchcom of all England, sendeth greeting. Know ye that 20 night, but that the thould have beene espied. They Richard, within being put in feare herewith, pecloed by the Albemaile towns the date next following, in which means time belieged, Mart. West.

the French king belieged Albemarle.

Herebpon king Kichard, having left a garrison of fouldiers in Pouencourt, came to raile the ente mie from his flege, & fetting opon the Frenchmen, there began a charpe fight : but the Englichmen being wearie with travell of their passed fournie, and having rathlie entred into the battell, were not able to induce the Frenchmens violence, so that (not without great losse) they were constrained to retire with swift flight, 02 (to sate the truth) to run awaie a maine pase. The French king having thus thated his enimies, returned to affault Albemarie, wone the castell by force, and the towne by composition, permitting the garrison there to depart with all their armour. This done, he ruinated the callell flat to the ground. Robert earle of Leicester offered to Rog. Houed the French king a thousand marks sterling for his The earle of Leicesters ransome, and to quite claime to him and his hetres offerfor his for ever all the right which he had to the eastell of ransome. Palcie, with the amurtenances, and to get a confirmation thereof for him both of the pope, and of the king of England : but for that the warre Will laffed, the French king twke a respite in answering this offer, neverthelesse afferwards in the years next in fuing, he toke it, and so the earle was let at libertie.

Pot long after this forelate repulle, the king of England having refreshed his fouldiers with some 50 rest after their great travell, went to William, and Million wo giving affault to the towne wan it at the first bount, and rated. and made it plaine with the earth. Then was a motion made for peace betwirt the tivo kings, being smoot mow wearied with long wars: whereof when earle John was advertised, who (as it thould seeme by some waiters) having farried with the French king till this present, began now to doubt least if any agrés ment were made, he might hamilte be betrated of the French king by covenants that thould passe betwirt them: he determined therefore with himfelfe to commit his whole fafetie to his naturall brother, and to no man elfe, perceining that the French king made not lo great accompt of him after the loffe of his castels in England, as he had done before Herebpon comming to his brother king Kichard he belought him to pardon his offenle, and though he 32 had not dealt botherlie towards him, yet that he >> would brotherlie forgine him his rebellious trefpatte, ,, adding furthermoze, that whereas he had not heretofore beene thankefull for his manifold benefits which " he had received at his hands, yet he was now most ,, force therefore, and was willing to make amends: interest in the acknowledged the safegard of his life " to rest in him, for the which he was bound to give him >>

paldeth to h Polydor,

2 motion fo

I thinke he came not ouce at all into En= gland at this time, but ras ther fent his mind buto the archbtthop.

Carle John returneth to the king his pardoned.

In. Reg. 6. Richar thanks, if he would grant thereto. The king moued with his woods, made this answer (as it is faid) that he varooned him indeed, but pet withed that he might forget fuch inturies as he had received at his hands, which he doubted least he should not easilie do. Here with erle John being pet put in good hope of forgiucs neste, sware to be true ever after onto him, and that he would endenour himfelfe to make amends for his mildeds past, and so was Wortlie after restored buto his former degræ, hondur and estimation in all respects.

Wil Paruus. R. Houed. Matth Paris.

Rog.Houcd.

But by fome witers it thould appeare, that earle John, immediatlic opon conclusion of the first truce. came from the French king, and submitted himselfe to his brother, and by mediation of the queene their mother was pardoned, received againe into favour, and ferued einer after against the French king berie dutifullie, sæking by new atchived enterpises brought about (to the contentation of his brother) to make a recompense for his former milbemeanor, reputing it meere madnelle to make means to further milchæfe; foz

-Stultum est hostem iritare potentem, Atá malum maius tumidis sibi quærere verbis.

R.Houed.

Rog.Houed.

Wil Paruus.

Matth. Paris.

Polychron.

But at what time foeuer he returned thus to his biother, this yeare (as Roger Houeden faith) he was re-Mozed to the earledoms of Poztaigne in Pozmani vie, and Gloceffer in England, with the honour of Cie(the castels onelic ercepted) and in recompense of the relique of the earledoms which he had before intoted, togither with certeine other lands, his bao- 3 ther king Kichard gaue butohim a yeerelie pension amounting to the fumme of eight thouland pound of Aniouin monie. I pow here to faie a while at mate ters chancing here about home, I will speake some what of the dwings of Leopold duke of Austrich, who as one nothing moved with the pestilence and famine that oppelled his countrie in this fealon, but rather having his hart hardened, began to threaten the English hostages that they shuld lose their lives, if king Richard kept not the covenants which he had bndertaken to performe by a day amointed. Where= bpon Baldwin Betun one of the holfages was fent by common agræment of the relique buto king Kb chard, to fignifie to him their effate . King Kichard willing to beliver them out of further banger, fent with the same Baldwin his coten, the litter of Arthur duke of Britaine, and the daughter of the emi perour of Typies, to be conveied unto the faid duke of Austrich, the one, namelie the litter of Arthur to be foined in marriage with the dulies sonne, and the other to continue in the dukes hands to bestow at his pleasure.

Baldwin de 25ctun.

Doke Leo:

pold catcheth

anich aid

and bictip of the hurt.

But in the meane time, on faint Stephans day, duke Leopold chanced to have a fall belide his horffe, anoharthis leg in such wife, that all the surgions in the countrie could not helpe him, therebpon in ertreame anguith he ended his life. And whereas bes fore his death he required to be absolved of the sentence of ercommunication pronounced against him by the pope (for appehending of king Kichard in 60 his returning from his fournic made into the holie land)he was answered by the cleargie, that except he would receive an oth to stand to the sudgement of the church for the infurie done to king Richard, and that unlesse other of the Pobilitie would receive the like oth with him if he chanced to die (whereby he might not fulfill that which the church herein Chould decree) that yet they thould fee the same personned, he might not other wife be absolued.

Wherefore he take the oth, and the Pobles of his countrie with him, and therewithall released the English pleages, remitted the monie that yet remain ned behind of his portion aforefait, and immediatlie therewith died . After his decease, bleaufe certeine pieres of the countrie withfrod the performance of the premilles, his bodie laie eight dates longer aboue ground than otherwise it should have done, for till such time as all the pledges were perfectie released, it might not be buried. Also Balowin de Betun approching neere to the confines of Austrich; when he heard that the duke was dead, returned with the two ladies onto his louereigne lood king Richard. Alnis (as ye have heard) for feate of the centures of the thurth were the pleages restated, and the residue of the monie behind released.

All this was both pleasant and profitable for king Kichards foules helth (as may be thought) bicand he take occasion theraf to amend his owne former life. by cansidering how much he might be reprehended for his fundrie faults committed both against God and man. A maruellous matter to heare, how much fro that time forward he reformed his former trade of lining into a better forme corber. Poreover, the emperour gave to the Cisteau monks 3000 marks white monks of filuer, parcell of king Kichards ransome, to make filuer censers in everie thurth throughout where they had any houses: but the abbats of the same oper rea fused the gift, being a postion of so insongfull and ongodlie a gaine. At which thing, when it came to the knowledge of K. Richard, he greatlie marnelled at the first, but after commended the abbats in their dwings, and charlie for thewing that they were voto of the acculiomed greedinette of having, which most men supposed them to be much infected withall.

Ling Richard this yeare pardoned Hugh Pouant Rog Houed. bishop of Couentric of all his wrath and displeasure Hugh Pouat conceined toward him, and restored to him his by bishop of Co-Choppike for five thouland marks of filver. But Ros ventrie reftor bert pouant the same bishops brother died in the red to his see. hings palon at Douer. Also whereas the archbishop The archbish of Borke had offended king Richard, he pardoned of yorke, him, and received him againe into favour, with the kille of peace. Wherebpon the archbishop wared to proud, that bling the king reproductive, he lost his archbishopzike, the rule of Pozkeshire which he had in government as thiritte, the favour of his fones reigne, and (which was the greatest loss of all) the love of God. Fo2

Nemo superbus amat superos, nec amatur ab illis, Vult humiles Deus ac mites, habitát q libenter Mansuetos animos procul ambitione remotos, Inflatos verò ac ventosos deprimit idem, Nec patitur secum puro consistere olympo.

Mozeoner, through the kings requelt, pope Cele-Aine this yeare made the archbiftop of Canturbus Bope Cele-ric legat of all England by his bulg pirestol to him. rie legat of all England by his buls directed to him, Thearchbilly. bearing date at his palace in Rome called Lateran of Canturbus the lift centh kalends of Appill, in the fourth peare of rie is made & his papalic. Furthermoze, the pope worte to the popes legat. English cleargie, giving them to biderifand that he had created the faid archbishop of Canturburie his legat, commanding them so to accept him: by vertue of which letters, the archbithop Hubert being now both archbishop of Canturburic, legat of the ticofperion. apostolike lee, and lost chefe tustice of England, appointed to hold a councell at Dozhe, and therefore gave knowledge by the abbat of Binham in Posts folke, and one maisser Gerusse, buto the canons of Porke, and to the archbilhops officials of his purpos fed intention.

The faid canons and officials well confidering of the popes letters, which were delivered onto them by the mellengers, lignified for answer, that they would gladlie receive him as legat of the apostolike fe, but not as archbishop of Canturburie, noz as their pair mat. Herewith he came to Poste opon faint Bar nables date being fundate, and was received with

M.Pal. in Suo Sag.

A trinitic of offices in bni= proceffion.

A ipnod hol: ben at yoghe.

procession. On the morrow after he held a court of ples of the crowne, of affiles, and luch other matters touching the king. On the next day being Tuel day, he entred into the monasterie of faint Paries in Booke, and depoted the abbat. bicaufe of his infire mitte of booie, at the request of the monks, but the abbat appealed to the popes confisiozie. Then he asfembled the cleargie in the church of Baint Deter in Pothe, and there held a fynod for reformation of ners in the cleargies, so that diverse decrees were made, the which for breefenelle incomit to fpeake of in particular ... This years also, the fact archbillyop hatbert vaules allimen throughout the realme of Augland to receive an oth of observing the kings meate, and to lineare that they thould not be robbers. notabbettoes of robbets, not in any wife confenting onto them, but Gould do what in them might lie to apprehend all furth offendors, and to discover them to the kings officers to be apprehended, and to purfue 20 them boon hew and crie to the ottermost of their powers, and those that withose with emselves from fuch pursuit, thouse be appehenoed as partakers with the offendors.

The emperor bing.

Anno Reg. 7.

About this time the emperour fent to king Rie fenorth to the chard, requiring him in no wife to conclude any peace with the French king, but rather to inuade his dominions, promiting to aid him all that he might. But king Kichard, to bonderstand further of the em-Sie is sent to bishop of Clic buto him in ambassage . In the the emperous, meane time the warre was Mill continued betweet him and the French, by the which they were commonlie put to the worle, and king Richard inuading their boders, did much hurt in wasting the count tries on each fide. The French king was at one time fo narrowlie chased, that as he would have passed a bridge that laie over the water of Saine, he was in danger of deciming by the fall of the same bider him, but yet at the length he escaped, and got to the 40 further side.

The 2 kings

After this, the two kings came to a communication togither, in the which a motion was made, that talke togither. Lewes the French king his some and heire should have the fifter of Arthur duke of Butaine in marriage, and that king Kichard in confideration thereof thould surrender buto them and to their heires the townes of Gilois.) Bademont, with the countrie of Tenlquetine of Teurine le Mormant, Ternon, 36 nerie and Palcie; and further thould give buto them 50 tiventic thousand marks of filter. On the other five it was moved, that the French king Chould refigue unto king Aichard all that he could demand in the countie of Engenichne, and Mould reffore buto him the counties of Albemarle and Augie, with the cas fell of Arkes, and all other caffels which he had taken in Posmanoie, or in any partie during these last warres. But there was a respit taken for the full concluding and affuring of these conditions, till the derifand the emperours pleasure, without whose confent he might not conclude any thing concerning that matter, bicause he had sent such wood buto him by the losd chancellour, who at this time was atters dant in his court.

In the meane time, the emperour being advertifed of the whole matter, and of the articles afore mentioned, gave knowledge to king Richard by the bis thop of Elie at his returning backe, that this forme of peace nothing liked him, but rather made direce lie to his discontentment: the which least he might freme to face without fufficient ground of reason, he alledged, that it thould found to king Kichards of Monour, if he furrenoied and gaue up anie thing that he had not in possession. And to encourage The company him to recover those things which had beene taken distinated by from him, the emperous pardoned him of the featien, hing from tiene thouland marks of filter, which pet remained graing to the behind musto him for the king's ranfome. Dolufoes ner the matter paffedythe thou kings met not in the oddness fall laints, according to the appointment. although they were come, and approched berie neire to the place where they hauld have communed togis things amille in the xourch, and amendment of many 10 there but thiough the villimulation of the French men, they departed, without feeing one arrother, and immediatlie began the warrens fiercelie as at anie time before. 3.14g2 719q/

The French king twice the towns of Diep, which The warren king kicharo hao latelie repared, and burned it, with begun afreb the thips that harbozed arthehauen: after this comming to Flotoun, he wan the towne and belieged the callell. But king Richard advertised thereof, came with quicke speed (making of thee dates tournic but The half one) and entred into the cattell of Aloloun to defend Sohich bing the same against his adversaries : and southwith Richard man there relozted such numbers of men buto him, when they heard how he was believed, that the French king doubting how to retire from thence in safetie, made fuit first to have licence to depart, and affer when that would not be granted, he required at the leastwife to talke with the king of England about fome agræment.

Thereunto king Kichard condescended, and so The 2 kings The bishop of perous mindhereur, sent ouer his chancellour the 30 comming together, they concluded boon a truce to again take indure from that daie, being faturdaie nert after the togither of feaft of faint Picholas, buto the feaft of faint Pila peace, rie nert insuing and then to meet againe nere onto Louiers with their councels, that they might grow by some reasonable way tinto a finall peace and concozd. And according to this article, thortlie after the fame featt of S. Hilarie, they met at Louters, where finallie they were accorded to conclude a peace on The conditi these conditions, that the French king should release one of peat to the king of England Holdun, with the countrie twirthtim about, won by him lith the beginning of these wars; kings. likewise, all the right which he had in Berrie, An. Mauh. Pais nergine, and Gascoigne, and the countie of Albemarle . On the other part, the king of England Marth, Well Mould refigne Gilozs, and certeine other places, and namelie Aeurine or Aeulquefine buto the king of France.

Herebpon were sucrties also bound for perfor- Marth Well mance, and the forfeiture of fifteene thouland marks Matth. Paris alligned to be paid by the partie that first brake the peace. Shortlie after, the French king repenting him felse of the agræment, began to make a warre as new, so that king Richard seized into his hands all the gods and possessions which belonged to the abbats of the order of the great monasteric of Clunie, and of faint Denife & la Charitie, which had become sucrtic for the French king in the summe of 1500 marks aforclaid. This yeare died Milliam de Rozz Specaried earle of Albemarle, in whose place succeeded Bald- Albemarke octaues of All faints, that king Kichard might bn. 60 wine de Betun by the kings giff, and married the pareethale counteste of Albermarle.

There was a motion also made for a marriage bes Otho come fluirt the load Ditho, sonne to Henric duke of Saro, the dake of nie, king Kichards nechue by his litter, and the ladie Saxons. Margaret, daughter to the king of Scots, so as they thould have infoied the countries of Lothian, Pozthumberland, and the countie of Caerleill with the castels. For the conclusion of which marriage, the Lawres. archbishop of Canturburie was sent about Christe mas to commune with the king of Scots : but bicause the Scotish quiene was then conceived of child, hir husband (in hope that God would send him a sonne) resuled to stand buto the aboue mentioned covenants.

w M:

The abbat of en fent uis e England.

Festidulent. caling in Of= Cars.

At this time king Richard fent the abbat of Caen (tro was also the elect of Durham) into England. to take an accompts of those that had the receipts of the kings monie: for this abbat had informed the king, that his receivers and officers here in the realme dealt notiustlie in making their accompts, but both acceived the king, and oppeded his people, in crading more than was due, and concealing that which they ought to stano accomptable for. The king fumoling his words to be true, or at least likelie to to 1 be, and that in reforming fuch untruth in his officers, it should be both profitable to him, and well liked of the people, sent this abbat over with commission, to be as it were his generall auditour.

Howbeit, Hubert archbishop of Canturburie. which was governour of the realme in causes both tempozall and spirituall (by reason he had the kings authoritie as his vicegerent, therefore sufficientlie countenanced, also the popes as his legat authoris fed) did somewhat stomach the matter, in that it 20 thould be thought he did luffer luch abuses in the kings officers, and not reforme them. But he held him content and faid little, fith the abbat the wed him the kings commission to do that which he went as bont, although he brought it not to patte. For where as he came over in lent, and gave out commande ments, that all fuch as had any thing to do in receipt of the kings monte, should ameare before him af ter Caffer, he farried not to fæ Caffer himfelfe, but was called into another world by the froke of death, 30 feafon. there to render accompts for his owne acts here in this life committed.

At the fame time there was another person in London called William with the long beard (alias Fit; Olbert) which had likewise informed the king of certeine great oppedions and excedive outrages vied by rich men against the poze (namelie the wor thipfull of the citie, the Paioz and Albermen) who in their hollings, when any tallage was to be gather fon, to ease themselves, where opon the said William being a feditious person, and of a bulle nature, ceas fed not to make complaints. Pow bicaufe the king gaue eare unto him at the first, he twke a bolonesse thereof, a drawing buto him great routs of the pos rer fort of people, would take byon him to defend the causes of those that found themselves growed with the heavie poke of richmen and gentlemen. He was somewhat learned, and verie eloquent: he had also a on betwirt the high estates and the low, than to anie other god purpole. He accused also his owne brother of treason, who in his youth had kept him to schoole, &

bene verie god and beneficiall brother onto him, bicause now he would not Hill mainteine him with monie to beare out his riotfous post. Poseouer, he veclared to the king, that by extortion and betberie of certeine men of great wealth, he loft manie forfeits

verie god wit, but he applied it rather to fet diffentis 50

Fabian. Wil.Paraus. Matt.Paris. Ran.Higd. william fitz Dibert.

The foule dif= order in the citizens of London.

tude of fitz

The bunatu= Dibert.

and eldheats.

Panie gentlemen of honour fore hated him for 60 his presumptuous attempts to the hindering of their purpoles: but he had luch comfort of the king, that he little palled for their malice, but kept on his intent, till the king being advertised of the affemblies which he made, commanded him to ceaste from fuch dwings, that the people might fall agains to their letences and occupations, which they had for the more part left off, at the indigation of this William who he ware with the long beard, so named of the long heare of his long berd, his beard, which he nourished of purpose to sæine the more grave and manlike, and also as it were in despite of them thich counterfeited the Pozmans (that were for the most part thauen) and bicause he would resemble the ancient blage of the English nation. The kings commandement in tellraint of the peoples relost onto him, was well kept a while, but it was not long per they began to follow him againe as they had done before.

Then he take upon him to make unto them certeine collations of fermons, taking for his theme, Haurietu aquas in gaudio de fontibus saluatoris, that is to his cration fate: De thall draw in gladnette waters out of the to the people. founteins of your faufour . And hereto he added, 3 ,, o am(faid he) the fautour of poze men; ye be the poze, and have affaced the hard hands and heavie burdens >> of the rich: now draw pe therefore the healthfull was ters of binderstanding out of my wels and springs, ,, and that with joy. For the time of your visitation is come: I shall part waters from waters, by waters >> I binderstand the people, and Ishall part the people 22 thich are good and make, from the people that are wicked and proud, and I thall diffeuer the good and euill, euen as light is divided from darkenesse.

By these and such persuations and means as he to Ger. Dor. fed, he had gotten two and fiftie thousand persons, readic to have taken his part, as appeared after by a roll of their names found in his keeping, belides diverse instruments of iron to breake op houses, and other things feruing to fuch like purpoles. So that he brought the commoners into a great liking of him: but the rich and wealthie citizens food in much feare, so that they kept their houses, in armes, in boubt to be robbed and murthed by him in the night

The archbishop of Canturburie (buto whome the rule of the realme chéfelie belonged) being advertifed hereof, fent for the greatest number of the citte tens, and bling them with gentle woods, persuaded them to deliver pledges, the better to allure him, that no such thing thould chance, which was suspected of mante, though he was loth to conceive any fuch opt nion of them. They being ouercome with his cour teous words, gaue buto him pledges.

red, burdened the poze further than was thought reas 40 After this, when the forefaid William ceased not to make congregations of the people, at length the Deis called archbithop fent a commandement but o him, that he before the such bithop of archbithop of hould ameare before him and other of the councell, Canturburie at a certeine prefired date, to answer to such things lord cheefe inas might be late to his charge. To be thort, he did to thice or prefis at the time appointed, but with fuch a rout of the come realme, mon people about him, that the archbilhop durif not pronounce against him, but licenced him to depart for that time, gluing him loft and gentle words. Howbeit, certeine persons were then appointed by the faid archbilhopand other of the councell to watch him fometime, when he thould have no great compa-

nie about him, and then to apprehend him. Amongst those that were thus commanded to at tach him, were two burgettes of the citie, who hav uing espied a convenient time for the execution of their purpole, let opon him to have taken him, but he getting an ar, befended himselfe manfullie: and in relifting fine one of them, and after that fled into the church of S. Parie Bow, keeping the lame not be fleth into as a place of fanctuarie, but as a fortrette: in formuch the church of that by the helpe of such as resorted buto him, he de Sow. fended it against his adversaries, till with fire and linoke they constrained him to come forth, and all those that were there with him; amongst them also his concuwas his concubine, who never left him for any daily bine.

ger that might betide him. The people regarding the danger of their please ges, came not out to ald him, as it was much doub ted they would have some. Therefore being thus at tached, he was brought forth, and comming out of the church, the conne of that burgette whome he had flaine (as you have beard) Arake him verie foze into the bellie with a knife, in revenge of his fathers

dent of the

தி.Marie

13

De is cre: cuteb.

Wil.Paruus. Marth Paris.

of Canturbus of william new faint.

of Doiatou.

John Bon=

chet his bout .

deaff. After this, he was had to his arraignment before the archbilhop, litting within the towe, and being condemned, was from thence drawne with hord fes to the place of execution called the Elmes, and there hanged on a gibet, with nine of his adherents, which had desended the church against the kings power: and pet for all this, the gruoge ceased not, but the common people raised a great flander bpon the archbiffop, both for cauling him to be taken out Thearthbilly, of the church, where he claimed privilege of fandu 10 arie, and also for putting him to death, who was innoof, for & death cent (as they alledged) and not giltie of those crimes that were late against him: the fought onelie the des Fuz Dibert. fense of poze people against ertoztioners, and such as were wrong dwers.

This rumoz role fo fast, that at length (by bouting abroad, that certeine miracles should be wrought by Anold whore a chaine, therein he was bound in time of his time prisonment) he was taken for a faint. The place also where he fuffered, was visited by women, and other 20 superstitious folks, as a plot of great holinese, till at length the archbiffion caused it to be watched, to the end that no such folithnesse should be bled there. In fine, the opinion which the people had thus fondlie conceined of his vertue and innocencie, was by life tle and little removed out of their heads, when his ads were more certeinlie published: as the sleaing of a man with his owne hands, and the bling of his concubine within Bowe durch, during the time of his being there. Also the archbithop accurled appetl, 30 which had first brought up the false report and fained fable of the miracle wrought by the chaine, whereby the occasion of idolatrie was first given , and might rafilie have beine continued, if the archbithop had not beene the wifer man, and by fuch means repreffed the rumour. So that we are to note by this crample the force of counterfeit holinelle and feigned harme: lesnesse in hypocrits, qui pelle sub agni Vipereum celant virus morés gluporum, Et stolidos fieta virtutis imagine fallunt.

But now to returne onto the dwings of king Me thard in France. De have heard how a peace was concluded (as some have witten) but the same continned not long : for the French king fæming to repent himselfe of that he had done (as is aforesato) brake the peace, and railing a power, belieged Alber marle, at length wan it, and raced it downe to the ground, then king Richard gaue ontohim thee thou and yeomen, or demilances (as I may call them) that were taken in that fortrette. After this, the French king wan Pouencourt, and earle John twhe the cafell of Gamages.

About the fame time also king Richard game buto The criedoine his nethue Otho the earledome of Poicton. Which I have thought goo to note out of Roger Houselen, to remone the boubt of John Bouchet, who in the third part of his annales of Aquitaine, marnelleth at an old panchart of record which he had feene by 60 the tenour thereof it ameared, that this Otho mitte tuled himselfe duke of Aquitaine and earle of Poice ton, being in his callell of Pointerculbonin nere to Politiers, in the years a thouland, one bund self, ntinetienine, in presence of Geffrey de Lusigner, and others, and granted buto a certeine person the office of cutting the monic in the mint of that townic, 28 by the fame panchart it further appeareth.

The fight thereof brought the fair Bouchet fite a great perpletitie, confidering that no distilled which he had either fenc, or heard of, made mention of any Otho that thulo be duke of Aguitaine, or erle of Potaton, either before that time, or affer. Where againe it was euibent to him, that quiene Elianor the mother of king Richard, as then living, named hir selfe butchesse of Aquitaine, and countesse of Polaou; alikewise king Kichard intituled himselfe duke of Aquitaine, and earle of Poidou, euer after he had fianced the earle of Barcelons daughter, as by diverse records both of the mother and the sonne he had fæne perfect notice. At length pet he gelleth (and that trulie) that it Mould be this Dtho, to whom the mother and sonne had assigned the dutchie of A quitaine and countie of Poicton, for the mainter nance of his estate, he holding the same till the yeare 1199, in the which he was made emperour by hing Richards good helpe, as after thall be thewed moze at large.

About this time also as the counteste of Biffaire, Banushert the mother of buke Arthur came into Posmandic to tookehis with haue spoken with king Richard, Kanulch earle of the dutchesse. Chester hir husband meeting hir at Pountourson, of Butane twhe hir as prisoner, and that hir op within his car prisoner. ffell at S. James de Beumeron : and then bir fonne Arthur could not find means to deliver hir out of captivitie, he toined with the king of France, and made great hanocke in the lands of his bucle king Kichard, where boon the king gathered a mightie are mie, and inuading Britaine with great force, crucllie walked and destroied the countrie.

Here is also to be noted, that in this fenenth yeare A dearth, of king Richard, a great dearth chanced through this realme of England, and in the coaffs about the faine. Che beath of Also about the same time died William earle of Sa. the carle of lifburie, the fonne of earle Patrike, thole daughter Salifburi, and heire king Richard gaue in marriage, togither with the earlevoine of Salisburie, onto his bale bas ther, furnamed Long Cipée.

It thanced mozeoner about the fame time, that R. Houed. earle John the kings brother, with certeine capt Matth. Paris tems of fuch hired fouldtors as some call Brabanceni;others, the Routs; and the French billogies name them Cofferedux, 02 Corerels, went abroad to at-40 thine some enterprise against the bishop of Beaunois, and other Frenchmen, which had done much burt to king Richards subjects in those parties. The there leavers of those Routs of Costereaux, thich went fouth with earle John, and ferned bider him at that time, were two Pronancois, Parchades & Lu Marchades pescaro. These riving south into the countrie about Lupescaro. Beaunois, made hauocke in robbing and spoiling all afore them.

Anon as Philip the bithop of Beauuois, a man tand marks of filuer for the ransome of his knights 50 more given to the campe than to the church, had knowledge hereof,thinking them to be a miet preie for him, with fir William De Perlow and his fonne, and a great number of other ballant men of warre, came footh into the fields, and encountring with the entour tenth foothie. But pet iff the end Beaucoust the billyop, the archoeardy, and all the cheefe capteins ken pulous. were taken: the relivue flaine and chaled. After this, earle John and the forefait capterns palled forth, and wan the towne of Millie, and fo returned.

Carle John and Marchaors presented the two prelats with great trining buto it. Richard earlie in the morning, living pet in his bed, as those that were knowne to be his great enimies, fairing to him in French; Kife Richard, rife, we have gotten the great chantour of Beautidis, and a good quier man (as we take it) to answer thin in the same note, and " here we beliner them onto poll to ble at pour biferes >> tion. The hing feing them, indien, and was berte glad for the taking of this biffop, for that he habeiter found him his great adurfarie : and therefore being thus taken fighting in the field with armour on his backe, thought he might be bolo in tempozail wife to chaffine bing! fith be (not regarbling his calling) prac tifed to motest him with temporall weapons: where boon he committed him to close prison all armed as

P of

A

C

It chanced some after, that two of his charlins came unto the king to Rouen, where this biffor was octeined, besæthing the king of licence to attend byon their maisser now in captivitie: buto whome (as it is of some reported) the king made this and co fiver; I am content to make you ludges in the cause betwirt me and your mailler, as for the cuils which come, let the fame be forgotten. This istrue, that 3 ce being taken as I returned from my fournic made into the holie land, and delivered into the emperours hands, was in respect of my kinglie state, vied accorce ding therebuto verie frændlie and honourablie, till wour maister comming thither (for what purpose he himfelse best knoweth) had long conference with the emperour. After which, I for my part in the next companing taffed the fruit of their overnights talke, c being then loven with as manie irons as a god affe 20 might not verie easilie have borne. Judge you there " fore, what maner of imprisonment your mailler des ce ferued at my hands, that procured fuch eafe for me at the emperours hands.

The two chaplins had their mouths stoped with these two to thus by the king offered, and so departed their wates. The bilhop being Will deteined in pris fon procured fuit to be made to the pope for his deliverance: but the pope, being truelie informed of the matter, and wiselie confidering that the king had 30 not taken the bilhop preaching, but fighting, and kept him prisoner rather as a rough enimie, than as a peaceable prelat, would not be earnest with the king for his deliverance, but rather reproved the bis thop, in that he had preferred fecular warfare before the spirituall, and had taken byon him the vie of a speare in steed of a crosser, an helmet in steed of a miter, an herbergeon in feed of a white rochet, a target for a froale, and an fron fluord in lieu of the spirituall fluoid: and therefore he refused to ble any comman 40 dement to king Richard for the letting of him at liv bertie. But yet he promised to do what he could by waie of intreating, that he might be released.

It is reported by some writers, that the pope at first, not understanding the truth of the whole cire cumstance, should send to king Kichard, commanding him by force of the canons of the church to deliucr his sons the bishop and archdeacon out of their captivitie. To whom the king sent their armour with ce this mellage written in Latine, Videan tunica fily tui 50 ce fit an non, that is, So whether thefe are the garments of thy fonnes og not: alluding to the fateng of those that carried Josephs coate to Jacob. Which when the " pope saw, he said: Paie by S. Peter, it is neither the cc apparell of my sonnes, noz yet of my brethren: but c rather they are the vestures of the children of Wars: and to he left them ftill to be ranfomed at the kings se pleasure. The bishop thus seeing no hope to be delincred without some agræment had betwirt the two kings, became now through trkesomnesse of his 60 bonds, an earnest mediatour for peace, whereas before he had beene an extreme firrer by of war. Such a scholemaister is imprisonment, a plucker downe of loftic courages. But to proceed.

About the same time the archbishop of Rouen put all the countrie of Posmandie under sentence of interdiction, bicause king Richard had begun to fortifie a cauell at Lille Dandelie, bpon a pece of ground with the archbishop claimed to apperteine but o his fix. The matter was brought before the pope, who perceiving the intent of king Richard was not o therwise grounded byon any couctous purpose to defraud the church of hir right, but onelie to build a fortresse in such place as was most expedient for defense of the countrie about, to preserve it from inua, fion of the enimies; he counselled the archbishop not to Cand against the king in it, but to erchange with him for some other lands: which was done, and the interdiction by the pope released. The bishop of Clie logo chancellour, being fent about this bufineffe towards Kome, departed this life by the way at Gire departed Pointiers, in Januarie.

But the bishops of Durham & Listenr that were he hath either done, either ellegone about to down 10 fent with him, passed forward, and comming to Kome, informed the pope of the matter, who take order with the bilhops (as before is mentioned.) The king gave to the church in Roven in recompense, his milles which he had in Rouen, so that the said church should paie the almes of old time amointed to be given for the same. He gave to the said thurch like: wife the towne of Diepe, and the towne of Buffels, so that the church thould like wife paic the almes af figned footh of the same, being the summe of 372 pounds of Anionine monie: also the manour of Los uers, and the forrest of Alermound with the dere and the amurtenances. But now to other dwings.

About the same time, or not long before, thereas there had beene long contention betwirt the kings of England, and the earles of S. Biles for the earles Rog. Houed. bome of Tholoule, hing Richard by way of aliance The king and fell now at an amount ment with the earle Mannay the carle of fell now at an appointment with the earle Kaimond Tholouse as that held those lands: for thereas the counteste Con- grad. stance wife to the faid Kaimond earle of Tholouse and aunt to king Philip was now departed this life, king Kichard concluded a mariage between the faid earle and his lister Joane quiene of Sicile, some time wife to William king of Sicile, so that being thus foined in aliance with the faid earle of Tho. Matt. Paris. louse on the one lide, he procured a league and will flanders as Baldwine earle of Flanders on the other, but o lied with k. louse on the one side, he procured a league also with The carle of whome he gave five thousand markes in reward, Richard, bpon condition, that he should covenant not to grow to any agreement with the French king without his confent. Likewife Reginold the earle of Bolongne, Iacob. Meir. that was some to the earle of Chasteau Partine, ali Les annales ed himselfe with them against the French king, and de France. to did Baldwine earle of Buines with diverfe other.

Thus king Kichard by such aliance having his part greatlie Arengthened, prepared himselfe to the warre moze earnesslie than befoze, and toke ozder with the earle of Flanders, that they thould invade the French dominions in two scuerall quarters both at one time, as the earle by Flanders, the himfelfe by Pormandie, according to the amointment betwirt them deutled. The earle preparing anarmie, Iacob. Meir. first wan the towne of Dowaie, and then besieged Wil. Parus. faint Omers, and wan it after five weekes fiege: ther boon they of Aire pælded to him; thoullie after by the earle of he entred into Artois, & belieged the citie of Arras. Flanders.

At the same time king Richard marching towards Gilors, wan in his wate the castell of Corfelles, toc Aroied it; that done, he came to Gilozs, and believed the towne, walking all the countrie round about him Gifors bewhere he came. The French king being thus trous leged. bled with the invalion of his entinies in two fenerall places at one present time, sent certeine bands of his fouldiors towards Arras to keepe the earle of Flans ders plaie, whilest he himselse went against hing His thard: and comming buto Biloss, found it Areialie belieged of the same king, so that he will not well how to enter the towne. But yet at length faining to give battell to king Kichard (who boon defire to receive it, came abroad into the field) the French king rushed forth with all his whole force to make The french towards the towne, a fo got into it, though not with king entreth out great laffe and namen of his nonle out great loffe and damage of his people.

Bing Richard not meaning to breake up his flege from before the towne, not with Aanding the French D.u.

this life.

Genef,37.

Anno Reg. 8.

Pomandie interdicted by rchbilliop of Rouen,

fr. Richard raifeth his fiege.

king had entred it; Claied a certeine time of purpose to win it, knowing the gaine to be the greater, and his name more famous, if he might atchine his pur pole, now that his adversarie was within it . But when he faw it would not be, he raised his siege, and departed towards Cleremont, spoiling all the couns trie by his forrais as he went, so that he wan great pillage, therewith his fouldiers were loden and made berierich.

Dugh de Chaumount taken puloner

It chanced, that in a fkirmish Hugh de Chau- 10 mount was taken puloner, one that was of the French kings privile councell, and king Kichard appointed him to the keeping of Robert Ros, who charged one of his fernants named William de Spinie with the cultodic of him. But the faid Bugh corrupting his keeper the forefaid William with rewards, (whereof it is faid,

Ould in 3. Ars am 10.16.

-acceptißima femper Munera sunt, author que pretiosa facit) put to his fine foz an escape.

escaped out of the castell of Bonneville, where he 20 Robert Rosse was within ward, to the great displeasure of king Richard, tho caused Robert Ros to paie for a fine, the fumme of twelve hundred marks, which the prifener thould have paied for his ransome: and further, commanded William de Spinie to be hanged for his dilloiall dealing. Ling Philip, after that the king of England was remoued from Oilois (as before pe haue heard) al

fembled a great hoff, and with banner displaced, en-

Pelvburge to Beaumont le Rogier, and that done, returned into France, licencing his men to returne onto their homes. About the same time, be fent onto king Richard, requiring him to appoint five champi-which might fight in lifts, for triall of all matters in controversie betwirt them, so to avoid the spending of more gilrlesse blond. Bring Richard accepted the offer, with condition, that either king might be of the on the French part; & B. Richard one of the flue by on the English part. But this condition would not be granted. Herevpon, when thostlie after it was fignified to king Richard, that thips vied to come out of England to faint Talerie with viduals, which were fold and connected awate buto the French la.

and other his enimies, he rode to faint Maleries, and fet the towne on fire, and fuch thips of England as he found there he also burnt, and hanged the mariners which were found in the same thips amongst his

About the fame time he got the favour of them of by the necke, dividing the graine and other victuals 50

tred into Mormandie, and walled the countrie from 30

Matth.Paris.

Nic.Treuet. The French ons, and he would appoint other fine for his part, kings requelt fog a combat.

B. Richards anlwer.

1197

Matth. Paris.

Ships burnt, and mariners hanged.

owne fouldiois.

Les annales de France.

Anno Reg. 9.

R.Houed.

Chainpaigne and of the Bittons, and Milliam Crespine also was constrained to deliver buto him the castell of Auge, but the French king recovered it by fiege, whilest king Richard entring into Alucr. gne wan dinerfe castels there, to the number of ten out of king Philips hands. In the meane time the Frenchking for his part, and training the fame king within freits, so that he was almost inclosed on ech fide, he conffreined him to agree to luch composition as pleased the same earle to appoint, but afterwards the French king refused to stand to the couchants of that agreement, and so the warre continued betwirt them as before.

At length king Richard and the French king concluded opon an abstinence of warre to indure from One yeare 4 4 the feaft of S. Hilarie for one thole yere, purpoling monethe lath in the meane time to make a finall peace and agræ ment. In which feafon Baldwine earle of Flanders came into England to do his denotions with the theine where Thomas the archbishop laie buried at Canturburie. The same yeare also somewhat before Griffin hing this time, Rife ap Oriain king of Wales departed of wales to this time, this ap within many or white participy participy this life, after whose death there fell discood between participations life, his formes for the fuccession, till the archbishop bu bert went to the marthes of that countrie and made an agræment betwirt them. Pot long after, Roger the brother of Robert carle of Leiceffer, elected bis thop of faint Andrews in Scotland, received the or der of priesthood, and was confecrated bishop by the hands of the bishop of Aberdine.

This yeare it was ordeined that measures of all weights and manner of graine should confeine one quantitie measures, throughout the realme, that is to fair, one resonable horstclode, and that the measures of wine and ale with all maner of liquoes thould be of one tuff quantie according to the divertitie of the liquoz : also that weights should be of like rate throughout the reline, and that cloth thould conteine two yards in breadth within the lists, of perfect godnesse throughout, as well in the middelf as by the fides, and that one manner of pard thould be bled through the reline. It was also ordeined that no merchants within the realme should hang any red or blacke clothes before their windowes, not fet by any pentiles of other thing thereby to darken the light from those that come to buy their cloth, so as they might be deceived in those fing thereof.

Also it was enaced that there should be foure or fir substantial honest men chosen in everie towne, and likewise in thires, with the head officers of cities and bosoughes, which had a cosposation, to fee that the affiles aforefaid were truelie kept, and that if any were found to be offending in the premiffes, to cause their bodies to be attached and committed to pailon, and their gods to be feized to the kings ble: and if those that were chosen to have regard thereto, were tried to be negligent, so that by others, and not by them any offendors chanced to be consided before the inflices, then should the regarders be put to their number, that is, the French king one of the five by 40 fines, for the negligent loking to their offices.

King Richard held his Chilimalle this yeare at Roan, and Hubert the archbilhop of Canturburte les gat of the apostolike fee, named lood thefe insice of England, was about the same time in the marthes of Wales at Hereford, and there received into his hands the castels of Hereford, Bridgenorth and Lud low, remoning those that had the same in keeping, and amointing others in their romes. Afterwards Monksple comming by Countrie he placed the marks accommend comming by Couentrie , he placed the monks a thechurchof gaine in the cathedrall church of that citie, by com: Concurre, mandement of pope Telestine, and chased out the fe cular canons, which the bithop Hugh Pouant had brought into the fame church when he remoued the mmnka.

In the Christmasse weeke also there came messen- Messengus gers to Rouen from the archbilhops of Cullen and from the flats Pentz, and from other flates of the empire, which des of Germanic. clared buto king Richard , that all the princes of Germanie were appointed to affemble at Cullen, earle of Flanders made fore warre against the 60 the two & twentith of Februarie, about the chosing of a new emperour, in place of the late deceaffed Henrie: and therefore they commanded him by force of the oth and league in which he was bound to the emperour and empire, that all ercuse of dentall oz occasions to the contrarie ceasing and set apart, he Chould make his repaire buto Cullen at the aforefaid day, to helpe them in choling of lome worthie perlonage that might and was able to have the empire. Bing Richard boubting to put himselfe in banger, bicause he had not discharged all the debts due for his ransome, flaied at home, but pet he sent diverse noble men thither, and did fo much in favour of his nethue Ditho, that by the helpe of the foresaid two archbishops of Cullen and Pents, the same Otho

D

ď

An

was elected emperour. But of this matter more thall be faid hercater. Dozeover, about the fame time king Richard te quired by the archbifhop of Canturburie his chefe et men of mand of to the

The manks o. Chaftes church fend to the pope,

of their arch=

hilliop.

hing,

ruffice, an aid of 300 knights to be found by his fub. ices of England, to remaine with him in his feruice for one whole years, or elfe that they would give him fo much monic, as might ferue to reteine that num ber after the rate of the Chillings a date of English monic for eneric knight. Thereas all other were , Eine billiop of Contented to be contributors herein, onelie Dugh bishop of Lincolne refused, and spake fore against the archbithop that moved the matter. But how to ener that request twke place, king Kichard (as we find levied this yeare a subsidie of five thillings of e nerie hide of land within the realme, two committios ners, that is to fay, one of the spiritualtie, & a knight of the temporaltie, being appointed as commidio-ners in eneric thire, with the affiffance of the this an hundred acres of land to the hide of land, accorhing to the cufforce.

The same yeare also the monks of the house of the holic Trinitie, otherwise called Chaistes church in Canturburie, exhibited their complaint buto pope Innocent, that their archbishop Hubert (contrarie to his order and dignitic) exercised the office of high fulfice, and fate in indgement of bloud, being fo ins cumbico in tempozall matters, that he could not have time to discharge his office touching spirituall causes: wherebyon the pope sent buto king Kichard, The pope fen: admonishing him not to suffer the faid archbishop to be any longer troubled with temporall affaires, but to disharge him thereof, and not to admit any spirit tuall person from thencesouth buto any temporall administration.

He further prohibited by vertue of their obedience, all manner of prelats and men of the church, that they should not presume rashlie to take byon them and maner of fecular function of office. Wher 40 bean the archbishop was discharged of his office of these inflice, and Geffrey Fitz Peter lucceded in gonernement of the realme in his fleed. Gernafius Dorobernensis saith, that the archbishop resigned that office of his owne accord, and that not till after his returns from the marshes of Wales, where he had overtheolone the Welfhmen, and flaine five thousand of them. Thich vidoric other ascribe buto Ceffrey Kit; Peter, which Geffrey (as the faid Dorobernensis saith) succeeded the archbishop in the of 50 fice of load chafe inflice, but not untill August, in the tend yeare of the kings reigne. In this yeare, immediatlie byon the expiring of And Reg. 10. the fruce thich was taken till harueff might be ended, the warre betwirt the two kings of England & France began extones to be purfued with like carneuncile as before: wherebon manie encounters chanced between the parties, with taking of townes and fortreffes, as commonlie in such cases it happe noth. Twife the French king was put to the worlde, 60 once in September betwirt Gamages and Mernon, where he was bettern to faur himselfe by flight, lwling twentie linights, and thicklose feruitors or promen, which were taken, befores those that were flaine: and againe, in the fame moneth on Wichael maile euen betwirt Curfeilles and Gifozs, at that time he came to fuccour Curfeilles, bringing with him 400 knights, besides feruitors, and a great mulfitude of commons. But the castell was wone before he could approch it.

king Richard being advertised of his comming, hasted fouth to meet him, and gluing the onlet by on him, forced him to flee buto Gilors, where at he entring of the bridge there was such prease, that the bridge brake, so that amongst other, she king himfelfe with his hoofe and all fell into the river of Geth, King Johns and with much ado was relaced, and got out of the simout drow= water, no small number of right hardie and valiant gentlemen being taken at the same time, which put themselves socioard to state the Englishmen, till the hing was recoursed out of that present danger. To Seven score conclude, there were taken to the number of an tarth RHoued. hundred knights, and two hundred barded horacs, besides seruitors on horstebacke, and formen with Matth, Paris. croffebowes. Amongst other puloners these are na. R. Houed. med, Patthew de Dontmojancie, Bales de Posts, Jollen de Brap, and manie other also innumerable. King Kichard having got this vidorie, wrote letters thereof buto the archbishops, bishops, abbats earles and barons of his realme, that they might praise God for his god successe.

A notable example to all princes that have the conquest over their enimies, to referre the hamie riffe, and others, to fee the fame affelled rated affer 20 getting thereof to God, and togice praife buto him tho giveth victorie buto whom it pleafeth him. Which the Plalmograph faw veric well, and therefore aferibed all the iffue of his prosperous affaires to God, as may well be noted by his woods, fateng expresselie,

– ab illo

Munior, hic instar turris or arcis erat,

Dura manus in bella meas qui format & armat, Ad fera qui digitos instruit arma meos.

Pow will we flate the proceedings of the king of 30 France at this time, and make no further relation thereof for a wille, till we have touched other things that happened in England at the fame feafon. And first pe thall understand, that Hugh Bardolfe, koger Arundell, and Geffrey Hachet, to whom as inffices, the counties of Lincolne, Potingham, Poske, Derbie, Porthumberland, Meffmerland, Cumbers land, and Lancatter were appointed for circuits, belo not onclie plas of affiles, and of the crowne, but als to take inquilitions of elcheats, and forfaitures of Inquilitions all maner of transgressions, and of donations of be- taken, nefices, of marriages of widowes and maids, and other such like things as apperteined to the hing, thereby any advantages grew to his vie, the which for fediculinelle we palle ouer. These things were freightlie loked unto, not without the disquieting of manie.

Herewith came an other trouble in the necke of this former, to ofuerle persons within the realme, through inquiries taken by the inflices of the form reffs: for Pugh Peuill, Pugh Waley, and Heruife us Devill, appointed inflices itinerants in that case, were commanded by the king to call before thent archbishops, bishops, earles, barons, knights, and fresholders, with the recue, and foure of the fubitantiall men of euerie towne or village, to heare and offoresis. take knowledge of the kings commandement, touching the ordinances of forrests, the which were verie Araight in fundzie points, so that whereas before those that offended in killing of the kings dere were punished by the purse, now they should lose their cies and genitals, as the lawe was in the daies of king Henrie his granofather: and those that offended in cutting downe wods or bulkes, or in digging and deluing by of turues and clods, or by any other mas ner of wate made walke and deliruation in wods 63 graffe, or spoile of vention, within the precinct of the forces, contrarie to order, they thould be put to their fines.

He gaue commandementallo, that it thould be lawfull to the forreffers to take and put buder arreff, Preffs to be as well preffs and those of the clearpie, as temporall ding in form men, being found offenders in forrest grounds and relis. chales. Panie other ordinances were decréed foils ching the preferuation of forcests, and the kings pre-

Eob. Hes.in Tfal.144.

Debinances

Ger.Dor.

The church

The none car

mandeth the meth to be

rogative, advantages and profits rifing and grow ing by the fame, as well for fauing of his woods and walts, as in pannage and agiliements, greatlie to the restraint of them that might vsurpe or incroch opon the grounds within the compatte of his for

Pe have heard before, how the monks of Cantur burie did fend to exhibit a complaint to the pope, for that their archbishop twke boon him to deale in evercife of matters belonging to a tempozall man, and 10 not to fuch a one as had rule oner the spiritualtie: but this was not the cause that diograme them so much, as that he went forward with the erection of that thurch at Lameth, which his predecessor archbishop Baldwine had first begun at Haketon, now called S. Stemans (as before pe have heard) and after was definen through the importunate fuit of the monks to leave off, and race that which he had there begun, to obeie the popes pleasure : and after lato a new foundation at Lameth.

The monks of Canturburie therefore still feat ring least that thurth should greatlie presudice such rights and liberties, as they pretended, namlie in the election of their archbilhop, would never rest, but Aill complained and followed their fuit in most obsis nate maner in the court of Rome, as well in the daics of the faid Baldwine, as now against Hubert, (when he toke in hand to continue the worke according to the purpole of his predecessour the faid Bald. wine, which was to have instituted a colledge there, 30 and to have placed fecular canons in the fame) and fuch was the earnest travell of the monks herein, that in the end now after the decease of pope Tele. ffine, they found such fauour at the hands of pope Innocent his luccellog, that the fame Innocent of church of Las rected his letters of comandement to the archichop. and other bithops of this land, to destroic and race the same foundation, as a piece of worke derogatorie to the feof Canturburie, and verie presudiciall to the estate of holie church.

The archbishop at the first trusted to be borne out by the king (who was highlie offended with the monks for their prefumptuous dealing) and therfore refused to obeie the popes commandement. The king in deed fromached the matter so highlie, that he sent letters buto the monks by no worke messengers than by Geffrey Fit; Peter, and Hugh Fit; Bardolle his inflices, fignifieng to them not onelic his high displeasure for their presumptuous proceedings in their fuit without his confent, but also command 50 ing them to furceasse, and not to proceed further in the matter by vertue of any such the popes letters, which they had purchased contrarie to the honour and dignitic of his crowne and realme. Pozeouer, he wrote to the bishops, commanding them to appeale; and to the archbilhop, forbidding him in any wife to breake downe the church which he had so builded at Lameth.

The prefant= tuous flouts nelle of the monks.

The thiriffe of Kent also was commanded to feize into his hands all the tenements and possessions that 60 belonged to the monks (a frie of fatan, and as one faith verie well of them and the like leven of lews nelle, > fentina malorum, A onorum sub pelle lupi, mercede colentes Non pietate Deum, (~.)

tho neuerthelesse were so frout in that quares, that they would not prolong one date of the time appoint ted by the pope for the racing of that durch. Hereby, on the king for his part and the bishops in their ofone behalfes wrote to the pope. Likewise the abbats of Boreley, Fourd, Stratford, Roberts-bridge, Stanleic, and Baling Warke, wrote the matter to him: and againe the pope and the cardinals wrote to the king, to the archbishops, and bishops: and so letters patted to and fro, till at length the pope fent a Nuncio of purpole, to lignific his full determination, as in the next yeare it shall be shewed at full.

About the same time Geffrey Fitz Peter, lood wellhim cheefe fultice of England, railed a power of men, and banquilled these fusitive of England, ratted a power of mensario summand went into Wales to succour the tenants of Willis Ger. Dor. st. cribeth this am de Braule, which were belieged of the king, or ravitable but because the hose statements. ther prince of that countrie, named Diven, the bao. Inbertart ther of Cadwalaine, in Bauds caffell : but the load of Canturb ther of Cadwalaine, in spanos cauen; out the 1020 the and fath there for the continue to the relikue of them within, there fore gaue battell to the aduerfaries , and vanquithing flameabout them, flue them thouland of them, and feauen hundled 500 of the of those that were taken palloners and wounded. enumes. And all the while the warres continued in France. Mauds calls the lotte for the most part still redounded to the Frenchmen. Carle John burnt Peloburg, and toke eightæne knights of such as were sent to the refkue.

The earle of Leiceller with a fmall companie came The carted before the castell of Pascie, which (although the Leiceller, Frenchmen held it) did pet of right belong buto the faid earle. The fonldious within iffued fourth, and bea ing twifrong for the earle, caused him to flee, for o therwise he had beine taken. But returning on the morrow after with more companie about him, and lateng ambuthes for the entime, he approched the faid cassell, and trained the Frenchmen forth till he had them within his danger, and then cauting his men to breake out opon them toke an eighteene anights, and a great multitude of other people . Also Barchas Barchana des with his rout of Brabanders did the French men much hurt, in robbing and spoiling the cours trics.

About this leason the archbilhop of Canturburie went over into Pozmandie to speake with king Kis thard, and af the French kings request he passed into France, to common with him of peace, which the French king offered to conclude, in restoring all the townes and castels which he had taken (Bilozs ones lie ercepted) and touching the possession and title there of, he was contented to put the matter in compremile, to the order and award of fir barons in Pop mandie to be named by him; and of fir barons in France which king Richard thould name. But king Richard would not thus agree, except the earle of Flanders and others which had forfaken the French king to take his part, might be compassed in the fame peace. At length pet in Pouember, there was truce taken betwirt the two kings till the feath of S. Wilarie nert infuing.

In the meane time pope Innocent the third, but derifanding in what present danger things stod in the holie land, and on the other lide, confidering what A truce taking a weakening it was botto chiffendome, to have betwitt the the two kings thus to have two kings. thefe two kings thus to warre with mortall hatred one against the other: he thought it stood him boon to travell betwirt them, to being them buto some peace and agræment. Hærebpon he dispatched one Peter the cardinall of Capua into France, as legat from the fee of Rome, buto the two forefaid kings, to instruct them in what present danger the State of the chailtians in Alia presentlie flood, so that without the aid of them and of other driffian princes, it could not be holpen, but næds it muft come to otter ruine, and the Saracens per long to be possessed of the thole. Therefore both in respect hereof, and also for the anothing of the further wilfull fptilling of chaffit an bloud in such civill and bigodie war, be be lought them to state their hands, and to toine in some frendlie band of concord, thereby they might with mutuall confent bestow their service in that necessarie and most godlie warre, wherein by overcomming the enimies of Thailf, they might loke for worthie

f40 (

E

th

I to Fin ניםוט Wes

- Hourds

chaped for fine peares.

Contention

A truce con-

Richard the first.

reward at hishands, which is the frægiver of all

The cardinal comming into France, and dwing his mellage in most earnest wife, was prefent at the 1 1 9 9 enterview appointed betwirt the two kings in the featt of S. Hilarie, but yet could not be bring his purpole to full effect : onelie he procured them to take truce for the terme of five yeares, further he could not get them to agree. ¶ The fault by authors is a:

> king Richard being first euill bled, and put to hinde rance, determined either to vanquith, or never to giue place.

This forbearance from warre was concluded and taken in the peace 1199 after the incarnation, and tenth of king Kichards reigne. But immediatlie after, there arose matter of new displeasure betwirt thefetivo kings to kepe their minds in bee with fe cret grunges, though by reason of the truce they out wardie absteined from declaring it by force of 20 armes. It chanced that in the election of a new emabout the chos perour, the electors could not agree, one part of them thoting Othoduke of Saronie, nephue to king Ki charoby his lifter Daud, and another part of them naming Willip ouke of Tulcaine, and brother to the last emperour Penrie.

thing Michard (as reason was) did procure what fanour he could to the furtherance of his nerbue Dtho: and king Philip on the contrarie part, did what he tho was admitted by the pope to end the frife: but pet the gradge remained in the harts of the two kings; Willip anding himfelfe much græued in that he had milled his purpole, and Richard being as little pleased, for that he had wone his so hardie, and with so much ado. And thus matters passed for that

R.Houed. The popes letters to the thurch of Lameth,

In the beginning of the next, the popes Nuncio came with letters, not onlie to the archbiffop and bis thous of England, but also to the king himselfe, fig. 40 nificing the popes resolute decree touching the church and colledge of Lameth to be broken downe and sup prefice. Therewoon the king and archbiffop though for against their willes) when they faw no wate longer to thiff off the matter, picloed to the popes pleas fure: and so the archbishop sent his letters to La meth, where the 21 date of Januarie they were read, and the 27 date of the same moneth was the church call downs, s the canons which were alreadie there placed, had commandement to depart from thence 50 without further belaie. Thus the monks in despite of the king and archbishop had their willes, but yet their beration ceased not, for the king and archbithop bearing them no small entil will, for that they had so obteined their purpose contrarie to their minosand intents, moleffed them diverse wates, al though the manks still opon complaint to the pope, were berie much releved, and found great frend thip both with him and likewife with his court. of the popes kitchen have in all ages, fince their first quickening beine troublesome and mutinous, saw tic and infolent, proud and malapert. But Prohipsedor! hos tolerare potest ecclesia porcos, Cum sint lasciui nimium, nimiumą, superbi, Duntax at ventri, veneri somnog vacantes?

In this meane time, king Kichard being now at rest from troubles of warre, Andied busilie to pronide monie, meaning to make a new votage into the holie land. Therefore finding himselfe bare of fundallings treasure, by reason the French warres had emptico his cofers, he fet a great tar opon his fubicats, and by that meanes, having recovered a great summe, he builded that notable ffrong cassell in Popmandie, bpon the banke of the river of Saine, named Cha. Challeau Gateau Baliard: which when it was finished, he fell a liard built. testing thereat and said; Behold, is not this a faire " daughter of one yeares growth. The foile where this " castell was builded, belonged to the archbishop of Rouen, for which there followed great Arife betwirt the king and the archbishop, till the pope take by the matter (as befoze pe haue heard.)

After this, he betermined to chaffile certeine perfcribed afwell to king Richard, as to king Philip: for 10 fons in Poictou, which during the warres betwirt him and the French king, had aided the Frenchmen against him: wherebyon with an armie he passed forth towards them, but by the waie he was informed, that one Wisdomer a vicount in the countrie Images of an of Buttaine, had found great treasure: and there comperour and forepretending a right thereto by vertue of his preschildren all of rogative, he fent for the vicount, who finelling out fine gold. the matter, and supposing the king would not be in the annales different in parting the treasure, fled into Limosin, where although the people were tributaries to the king of England, yet they take part with the French king.

There is a towne in that countrie called Chalus Chalus Ches Chemerell, into which the faid vicount retired for tterell. fafegard of himfelfe, and then gave the townshinen a great postion of treasure, to the end they thould defendhim and his quarell for the rest. King Kichard fill following him, as one that could not audio his fatall ordinance, hafted into the confines of Limo could in favour of the foresaid Philip. At length D: 30 sin, fullic determining either to win the towne by force, if the inhabitants should make resistance, or at least wife, to get into his hands the preie, which he fo carnefflie pursued. At his first appoch he game mas niefierce affaults to the towne, but they within has & Richard uing throughlie prouided aforehand for to defend a beliegeth fiege, to relifted his attempts, that within thee daics Chalus, after his comming, he ceased to assaile the tolunc, meaning to bindermine the walles, which otherwise he perceiued would berie hardlie be gotten, confide, ring the Coutnelle of them within, and withall, the naturall Arength and Atuation of the place it selfe.

Herebpon therefore on the 26 of Warth, whiles he(togither with capteine Warchades) went about bnaduifedlie to view the towne (the better to confi der the place which waie he might conneie the course of his mine) they came to farre within danger, that the king was friken in the left arme, or (as some Deis Soone write) in the shoulder, where it joined to the necke, with a quarell inucnomed (as is to be supposed by the fequele.) Being thus wounded, he gat to his horffe, and rode home agains to his lodging, where he caus fen the wound to be fearthed and bound by, and as a man nothing difmaid therewith, continued his fiege with such force and allurance, that within 12 daies after the milhap, the towne was velded buto him. although verie little treasure (to make any great ac compt of) was at that time found therein.

In this meane featon, the king had committed the cure of his wound to one of Parchades his fur-I So that it may be observed that these dishelouts 60 gions, who taking in hand to plucke out the quarell. drew forth onelie the that at the first, and left the iron fill within, and afterwards going about most bulkilfullie to get fouth the head of the laid quarell, he bled such incisions, and so mangled the kings arme, per he could cut it, that he himfelf despaired of The king telall helpe and longer life, affirming flattle to fuch as paired of life. And about him, that he could not long continue by reason of his butcherlie handling. To be thost, fee ling himselfe to war weaker and weaker, preparing his mind to death, which he perceived now to be at h mo, he ordeined his testament, or rather reformed Deordeineth and added fundrie things but the fame which he bes his tellement, fore had made, at the time of his going fouth towards the holie land.

the pope.

P. Houed.

".farth Paris.

Antohis brother John her Agned the crowne of England, and all other his lands and dominions, caw fing the Pobles there present to sweare fealtie buto him. Dis monie, his icivels, and all other his gods moneable he willed to be dinided into these parts, of the which Dtho the emperor his listers sonne to have one his housbold fernants an other part, and the third to be distributed to the page. Finallie, remembring himfelfe also of the place of his buriall, he commanded that his bodie thould be interred at 10 Fonteuerard at his fathers feet, but he willed his heart to be conucied buto Rouen, and there burico, in testimonie of the lone which he had ever borne but to that citic for the feedfall faith and tried localtie at all times found in the citizens there. Dis bowels he ordeined to be buried in Polaiers, as in a place naturalite buthankefull and not worthic to reteine any of the more honorable parts of his bodie.

Rog. Houed.

ample of foz=

giving an enumie.

Matth, Paris,

Hopeoner he caused the arcubalistar that wounded him, to be leught out, whose name was Bare 20 theam de Surden, or Peter Balil (for fo he named himfelfe as some write) who being brought before the king he demanded therein he had to much offended him, that he should so lie in wait to slea him, rather than Parchades, who was then in his companie, and attendant on his person. The other answered bold er lie againe, lateng; 3 purpoled to kill thee, bicaule thou .. flucti my father, and two of my brethren heretofore, " and wouldest also now have saine me, if I had hap " ned to fall into thy hands . Therefore I intended to 30 creuenge their deaths, not earing in the meane time .. what became of my felfe, so that I might in anie " wife obtains my will of the, who in such fort hast be-A notable ex refeme of my freends . The king hearkening buto his woods, and pondering his talke by god admice ment, frælie pardoned him, and withall commanded that he should be set at libertie, and thereto have an hundred Chillings given him in his purfic, and so to beletge. Pozeover, he gave frait charge that no his death hereafter. Thus the penitent prince not onclie forgane, but also rewarded his adversarie. Holoboit after his decease, Parchades getting him into his hames, first caused the skin to be striped of his boote, and after hanged him on a gibet.

Departed this

Gal. Vinfaf.

ted iges life, on the tucldate before Palmelundate, King Kichard being the ninth of Appill, and the riday after he was hurt, in the yeare after the birth of our Sauloz 1199. 50 in the 44 years of his age, and after he had reigned nine yeares, nine moneths, and od daies: he left no Dis fature & tilue behind him. De was tall of fature, and well thape of bodie. proportioned, faire and comelie of face, fo as in his countenance appeared much favour and gravitie, of haire bright aborne, as it were betwirt red and vellow, with long armes, and nimble in all his foints, his thighes and legs were of due proportion, and ans

At length king Richard by force of ficknesse (in creation with auguith of his incurable wound) depar-

Dis dispositi-

Awcrable to the other parts of his bodie. As he was comelie of personage, so was he of sto, 60 mad more couragious and fierce, fo that not with out cause, he obteined the surname of Cueur de lion, that is to fate, The lions hart. Dozeouer, he was courteens to his fouldiors, and towards his frends and Evangers that reforted but o him verieliberall. but to his crimies hard and not to be intreated, delirous of battell, an enimie to rest and quietnesse, verie elequent of speech and wife, but readie to enter into icopardies, and that without feare or forecast in time of greatelf perils.

The bices

These were his vertuous qualities, but his vices (if his vertues, his age, and the wars which he mainhing Richard, feined were throughlie weied) were either none at all, or else few in number, and not berie notorious. De was noted of the common people to be partlie fubicat unto prive, which furelie for the most part for loweth frontneffest mind; of incontinencie, to the which his youth might hamilie be comewhat bent: and of conetoninelle, into the which infamie molt cavitcing and fuch princes as commonlie follow the warres do offentimes fall, when of necessitie they are divinen to eraa monie, as well of frænds as env mics, to mainteine the infinit charges of their wars.

Percof it came, that on a time whiles he folourned in France about his warres, which he held against La Philip, there came onto him a French prest whose name was Julco, who required the k. in any wife to put from him thee abhominable daughters which he fulco a make had, and to bestow them in marriage, least God pus nithed him for them. Thou lieft hypocrite faid the king) to thy verie face, for all the world knoweth that I have not one daughter. I lie not (said the packs) for thou half three daughters, one of them is called prive, the second conetonsnesse, and the third lecherie., Walth that the king called to him his loads a barons, and faid to them; This hypocrite here bath required me to marrie awaie my the daughters, with (as >> he faith) I cheriff, nouriff, foffer and mainteine, that ,, is to fay, pride, couetoulneffe, and lecherie. And now that I have found out necessarie & fit husbands for " them, I will do it with effect, and læke no moze de >> laies. I therefore bequeath my pride to the high mine ded templers and hospitallers, which are as proud as Lucifer himlelfe. Dy couetoulnelle I giue onto the " white monks, other wife called of the Cifeaux order, >> for they couet the divell and all. My lecherie I commit to the prelats of the church, who have most pleafure and felicitie therein.

There lined in the dates of this king Kichard, men Waldwines of worthic fame amongst those of the cleargie, Wald Hubert archi wine archbishop of Canturburie, and Pubert who bishops of fucceeded him in that lee, also Bugh bithop of Line Canturbuig colne, a man for his worthinesse of life highlie to be man thould hurt him , or take any reuenge for this 40 commended. Porcouer, William bithop of Clie, who though other wife he was to be dispraised for his ambition and pompous hautineffe, yet the king bled his feruice for a time greatlie to his profit and aduancement of the publike affaires. Also of learned men we find diverse in these daies that flourished here in this land, as Baldwine of Deuonthire that came to be bishop of Wozcester in this kings time, and after his occease, he was advanced to the go ucrnment of the archbishops see of Canturburie, he wrote diverle treatifes, namelie of matters perteining to divinitie. Daniell Posley well seene in the Iohn Bale, Pathematicals, John de Heram, and Richard de Herham two notable historicians, Builielmus Stephanides a monke of Canturburie, who wrote much in the praise of archbilhop Becket. Belive these, we find one Richard, that was an abbat of the order Premonitratentis, Richard Diuilientis, Dicholas Walkington, Robert de Bello Foco, an excellent hilosopher, ac. The Bale in his third Centuric.

In martiall renotome there flouished in this kings daies diverse noble capteins, as Robert earle of Leicester, Kanulse de Fulgiers, two of the Bardulphes, Hugh and Denrie, their Williams, War thall, Brunell, and Pandeuill, with two Roberts, Rosand Sabeuile. Furthermore, I find that in the daies of this king Richard, a great derth reigned in A great or ! England, and also in France, for the space of thee or foure yeares during the wars betweene him & king Philip, to that after his returne out of Germanie, and from impilonment, a quarter of theat was fold at 18 Millings eight pence, no small price in those daies, if you confider the alay of monie then currant.

Also immediatlic after, that is to say, in the yeare of our Lord, a thouland, one hundred, nintie fir, which

An. Regni, 1. King was about the senenth pere of the sato kings reigne, there followed a maruellous fore beath, which dailie confumed fuch numbers of people, that scarle there 3 great mor- might be found any to keepe and loke to those that talitic of peo- were ficke, or to burie them that died. Which fickenelle was a pelfilentiall feuer of tharpe burning a que. The accustomed manner of burfall was also neglected: fo that in manie places they made great pits, and threw their dead bodies into the fame, one upon an other. For the multitude of them that died 1 was such, that they could not have time to make for eucriconea fewerall grave. This mortalitie continued for the space of five or fix months, and at length ceased in the cold featon of winter.

Zwolunnes.

In the octaves of Pentecost before this great death, in the first hours of the day, there appeared two funnes, the true funne a another, as it were a counterfeit funne: but so apparentlie, that hard it was to the common people, to discerne the one from the o ther. The skilfull also were compelled by instruments to distinguish the one from the other: in taking their altitudes and places, thereby in the end they found the new apparition, as it were, to wait byon the play net, and to continued by the space of certeine houres. At length when the beholders (of whom Wil. Paruus that recorded things in that age was one) had well wearied their eies in diligent marking the maner of this Arange appearance, the counterfeit funne var nished awaie.

This strange wonder was taken for a signific cation of that which followed, that is to fay, of war, famine and pestilence : 02 to fay the truth, it betoke ned rather the continuance of two of those mildiefs. For warre and famine had fore afflicted the people before that time, and as yet ceaffed not: but as for the pestilence, it began some after the strange sight. thereof insued such effect, as I have alreadic rebearfed.

Thus farre king Richard.

Iohn the yongest sonne of Henrie the second.

Anno Reg. 1.

Rog. Houed

Marth. Paris.

Chinon.

Robert De

Sawmer. Rog.Houed

Thomas de

Furneg,

Curneham,

Dhn the youngest son of Penrie the Second was proclaimed king of England, beginning bis reigne the firt date of Apaill, in the yeare of our Load 1199, the first of Phi lip emperour of Rome, and the 20 of Philip king of France, la. William 20 as yet living in governement over the Scots. This man, so some as his brother Kichard was occeased, fent Pubert archbishop of Canturburie, and William Parchall carle of Striguill (otherwise called Thepltow) into England, both to proclaime him king, and also to sie his peace kept, togither with Beffrey Fitz Weter load thefe fulfice, and diverse of ther barons of the realme, whilest he himselfe went to Chinon where his brothers treasure late, which was forthwith delivered unto him by Robert de 3 Turneham: and therewithall the castell of Chinon and Salvmer and diverse other places, which were in the cultodie of the foresato Robert. But Ahomas de Furnes nechue to the faid Robert de Aurneham delinered the citie and castell of Angiers unto Arthur duke of Britaine. For by generall consent of the nobles and pieres of the countries of Aniou, Paine, and Touraine, Arthur was received as the liege and sourreigne load of the same countries. Forenen at this present, and so some as it was 40 knowne that king Richard was deceased, diverse civ ties and townes on that fide of the sea belonging to the faid Richard whilest he liucd, fell at ods among themselues, some of them inocuouring to preferre king John, other labouring rather to be under the aouernance of Arthur buke of Bitaine, confides ring that he fæmed by most right to be their cheefe lood, forfomuch as he was sonne to Geffrey elder brother to John. And thus began the broile in those quarters, whereof in processe of time insuco great inconvenience, and finallie the death of the faid Ar= thur, as thall be the weo hereafter.

Pow willest king John was thus occupied in recovering his brothers treasure, and traveling with his subiects to reduce them to his obedience, quene Elianozhis mother by the helpe of Hubert archbis Hop of Canturburie and other of the noble men and barons of the land, travelled as diligentlie to procure the English people to receive their oth of alles giance to be true to king John. Foz the faid archbithop and William Parthall earle of Striguill, being fent ouer into England (as before pou haue heard) to proclaime him king, and to keepe the land in Matth. Paris. quiet, assembled the estates of the realme at Pop asembled at thampton, there Geffrey Fitz Peter lood chefe in Morthamps fice was present with other of the Pobles, afore ton. whom those losos whose fivelities were earst suspeared, willinglie twice their oths of obedience to the new king, and were affured by the same loads on his behalfe, that they thould find him a liberall, a noble and a righteous prince, and fuch a one as would fee that everie man should into his owne, and such as were knowne to be notozious transgressors, should be fure to receive their condigne punishment.

They fent Cultace de Aelcie also bnto Willi: Cultace Mes am king of Scotland, to lignifie to him, that king frie fent into John bpon his arrivall in England, would fatiffic Scotiand. him of all such right as he pretended to have within the English dominions. And thus was king John accompted and proclaimed king of England by the Strife #= mongst the English fub= uas on the other live of the lea.

bncle John.

mitted the rest to passon.

After this, king John entring into Aniou, held his Cafter at Beaufort (which feast fell that yeare the 18 day of Appill) and from thence he went streight bnto Kouen, where on the fundate nert after Cafter being S. Parks day, he was girded with the fluord of the dutchie of Pozmandie in the high church there by the hands of Walter archbishop of Kouen. And so being inuested duke of Pozmandie, recesued the k. Johnime oth according to the custome, that he should defend sted duke of the church, and mainteine the liberties thereof, sé Mormandic, fulfice ministred, god lawes put in erecution, and naughtie lawes and orders abolithed. In the meane time his mother queene Clianoz, togither with cap teine Marchades entred into Anion, and walted the fame, bicause they of that countrie had received Ar thur for their fouereigne lord and governour. And as ballabors should palle through England, they would 30 mongs other townes and fortresses, they take the citie of Angiers, fine manic of the citizens, and committed the refit to wifer.

Angiers to

> This enterprife being thus luckilie atchined, the relidue of the people in those parties were put in such feare, that of their owne accord they turned to their wonted obedience, fæming as though they would continue still therein. The French king all this while conceining an other exploit in his head, more commodious buto him than as yet to attempt warre against the Englishmen opon so light an oc calion, diffembled the matter for a time, as though he would know nothing of all that was done, till the king should be otherwise occupied in England about his cozonation. In the meane featon king John having fet some stay in his businesse on the further side of the sea, he left his mother Mill in Buien, to defend that countrie against the enimies, and taking the fea, came of uer himselse into England, landing at Shozham, the methouers 25 day of Paie. On the nert day, being Alcention to England, ecue, he came to London there to receive the crowne. On the mozow after being Alcention daie, when the Pobilitie and commons were assembled, and the king brought into the church of S. Peter at West minster there to receive his diademe; Hubert the archbishop of Canturburic being cheefe in authoritie and honour, both for his age and calling, spake these words or the like in substance before the whole af-

Hubert the archbishop of Canturburies oration to the lords spirituall and temporall in the presence of the king, coc.

femblie, as followeth.

Of honozable lozds of the sviritualtie, and most grave and politike pares and barons of the tempozaltie, you are come hither

this day to choose you a king, and such a one as (if need thould require) may be able of himfelfe to take fuch a charge bpon him, and (having bindertaken the same) readie to execute that which he chall thinke to be expedient to defend him from all his enimies, and fouthwith furnithed the holds in Britaine with French fouldi ers. Duene Clianoz being aduertifed hereof, fod Duene G in doubt by and by of hir countrie of Guien, and anox palicip therefore with all possible speed passed over the sea, mandic, and came to hir fonne John into Pozmandie, and Chostlie after they went footh togither into the countrie of Paine, and there twke both the citie and cas stell of Danns, theolving downe the walk and tur. The citic of bicause I would not be tedious and irksome to the 10 rets theref, with all the fortifications and from the manner to fes in and about the fame, and kept the citizens as prisoners, bicause they had asped Arthur against his Math. Pain R. Houed generall confent of all the loves and barons of the fame. The names of the thefe of those peres that were sworne (as you have heard) are as followeth. Danid earle of Huntington brother buto William king of Scots, Kicharo earle of Clare, Kanulfe earle of Chester, William earle of Tutberie of ras ther Darbie, Walran earle of Warwike, Roger Lacie constable of Chester, and William de Dows braie, with diverse other, whose names I here omit, Pow the king of Scotland being informed by the loso Bustace Tescie (who had maried his daugh) ter) that there was some hope to be had on his part, for the recoverie of fuch feigniories as he and his pre-Decellours fomtime held in England, did further difpatch fundzie ambassadours with full purpose to fend them ouer into Posmandie buto king John, there to require restitution of the countries of Poze thumberland and Cumberland, with their awurtes 20 nances, and he promifed also by his letters, that if the fame might be granted onto him, in as ample manner as they had beine in times past to his ancestors, he would gladlie do his homage to king John, as to the true tlawfull king of England for the same, and furthermoze væld to him his faithfull scruice a= gainst all men, so often as he should be required ther; buto. Howbeit when the archbilhop of Canturburie and the rest of the councell, understood that these am not fuffer them so to do, but specilie sent Danio earle of Huntington into Scotland unto the king his brother, requiring him earnefflie that he would not fend any amballadours over as yet, but rather tarie, and take patience a while, till the king should come over into England: which (as they faid) he purposed to do verie Mostlie.

- 1

King John also having understanding of his purpose, sent over the said lood Enstace againe buto him with the like request, who in such wise persuaded him, 40 that he was contented to abide a time, in hope of the better successe in his late attempted suit. And all this was done cheffie by the working of the kings mos ther, whom the nobilitie much honoured and lonco. For the being bent to prefer hir fonne John, left no stone unturned to establish him in the throne, comvaring oftentimes the difference of government betwene a king that is a man, and a king that is but a child. For as John was 32 yeares old, so Arthur duke of Britains was but a babe to speake of . In 50 the end, winning all the nobilitie wholie buto hir will, and fixing the coast to be cleare on enerie five, without any doubt of tempestuous weather likelie to artie, the fignified the whole matter onto H. John, tho forthwith framed all his indevours to the ac-complithment of his butinette.

Surelie quance Clianoz the kings mother was noss enuic as fore against hir nephue Arthur, rather moued theres gainst Arthur, to by enuic conceiued against his mother, than opon any tult occasion given in the behalfe of the child, for 60 that the faw if he were king, how his mother Constance would lake to beare most rule within the realme of England, till hir fonne thould come to law full age, to governe of himselfe. So hard it is to bring women to agree in one mind, their natures commonlie being to contrarie, their woods to variable, and their deds so undiscreet. And therfore it was inell faid of one (alluding to their disposition and qualities.

Prop.lib.2.

Quene Elia=

Constance

252itaine.

butcheffe of

-nulla diu fæmina pondus håbet)

Tehen this doing of the quiene was fignified by to the faid Constance, the doubting the sucrtic of hir fonne, committed him to the trust of the French king, who receiving him into his tuition, promifed erpedient for the profit of his lubiects: we haue therefore one present hære among bs, byon whome harts and good willes of high and low, rich and poze, do generallie depend : aman I doubt not, but that for his owne part will applie his whole indenour, andie, and thought buto that onelie end, which he chall perceive to be most profitable for the commonwealth, as knowing himselfe to be borne not to serve his owne turne, but for to profit his countrie, and to swhe for the generall benefit of by that are his lubiens.

And albeit I am fure that you do well know, how all these qualities are most abundantlie planted in the person of John duke of Poimandie (a person of high prows esse and no lesse paudence, for the which yee ought to indge him right worthie of the 20 gonernement) yet being in doubt least the common fame thould carrie you awate, oz least you should turne your minds to the fauour of an other, as in respect of some bets terright, by title of a moze lawfull descent of inheritance pretended by others than he hath to thew, I require you to give eare butomy words: who bearing the state of two manner of persons, ought to be profis 30 table to my countrie, not onelie by example and exhortation, but also by localtie and god counsell, which hitherto I have ever fludied to performe, and wherein (Bod willing) I meane to perfift, folong as I thall continue in this mortall and transitorie

Therefore whereas at this present we tie matter, which beeing once done, can as by his profession he ought, and as one asseth the not be bnowne. I commend but o you this John, even with all my berie heart, and indge that you ought to accept him for your king, who in all things which he hall ordeine, purpole, or take in hand, thall not faile to answer your opinions with his well dwing, and so satisfie your good expectations alreadie conceived of him with his viligent providence, that all the whole realme thall not onelie like of and allow your doing herin, but also with high commendation extoll the same to the berie llars. These things do I promise buto you, and so farforth as in me may lie, I dare take boon me all chances and perils that may proceed thereof.

When the archbilhop had ended his speach, diverse 60 held their peace, and manie with great zeale faluted king John, thom the same date the said archbillion crowned at Meliminster, after the maner then vied with great folemnitie, and no leffe rejoising of all such as were present. At the same time also he recesued the homages of the losos and barons of the realme, and promifed with all fred to have confide ration of things that americaned as well to religion as to the due crecution of laws, thereby everie man might come to inivie that which was his owne, by right and due course of justice. The find that there lucre present at this folemnitie and coronation of king John, which was celebrated on the Accention day the 27 of Paie, archbishops and bishops to the number of scauentiene, as Hubert archbishop of Canturburie, John archbishop of Dubline, also the archbishop of Raguse, William bishop of London, Gilbert bishop of Rochester , John bishop of Pozwich, Dugh bishop of Lincolne, Eustace bishop of Clie, Goofrey biffop of Minchester, Henrie biffop of Exeter, Sefride bilhop of Chicheffer, Goofrey bis thop of Couentrie, Sauarie bilhop of Bath, Herbert bilhop of Salifburie, Philip bithop of Dureline, Ko ger bilhop of faint Andzew in Scotland, and Benrie bilhop of Landaffe in Wales. The bilhop of Durel, Matth. Paris. me found himselfe somewhat growed in the matter, Additions to making objections, that the cozonation ought not to be celebrated without the prefence of Geffrey artible

Gop of Porke: but it prenailed not.

Wesides these bishops, there were of the tempozall loods and earles, Robert of Leicelter, Richard of Clare, William of Tutburie, Hamlin of Warren, William of Salisburie, William of Chepstow of therwise called Strignille, Walran of Warwike, Roger Bigot, William of Arundell, and Ranulfe of Cheffer, with manie other barons, loeds, knights, and no small multitudes of gentlemen and other common people. The same date of his coconation als Rog. Houed. fo, he invested William Harthall with the swood of willia Warthe carledome of Striguille, and Geffrey Fitz Pethrough the Avord of the earled ome of Eller, for al Scinguile. though they were called earles, and exercised the ad- peter created ministration of their earledoms; yet were they not earle of Escr. till that date girded with the fwood of those earles doms, and so that day they served at the table with their Awards girded buto them.

An like maner, hubert the archbishop of Cantur, Che archb. of burie was made lord chancellour of England; who Canturburie as he bettered some words bradustedic, that thetwo made lord how he inwardlic resolved at the kings favour to-spancelour. ward him in the gift of this office, and fo glozied in the honour whereto he was preferred (which he would neuer have done, if he had weied of worldlie pompe

-dicmihi,nunquid Corporibus profunt ? certe nil ; die animisue ? Tantundem,co-c.)

the lood Hugh Bardolfe faid buto him, yet not lo loft The fairing lie in his eare, but that some ouer-heard it; Do lozd, of the lozd to speake and not offend you, suerlie if you would well confider the dignitie and honozof your calling, " you would not willinglie peels to lufter this yoke of " bondage to be late topon your thouloers, for we have " oftentimes heard of a chancellour made an archbi " thop, but neuer an archbishop made a chancellour Ambassadors till now . The cozonation being thus ended, it was from the bing not long yer there came amballadors from the Sco. of Scotz tish king, namelie William the prior of Pay, Wilb liam the prior of faint Colmes Ins , and one Willi am Hay, the which on the behalfe of the faid Scotiff king required restitution of Posthumberland and Cumberland, with the awurtenances, promiting that if the same were restozed to him, he would serve the king of England with all his power against all men then alive; otherwife, that is, if he could not have those countries, which of right to him amertels ned by law, as he pretended, he would do the best he could to recover them by force.

King John made answer herebuto, that if his colen the king of Scots would come onto him, he Mould be affered to receive at his hands all that was reason, as well in those bemands, as in all other things. He also sent to him the bishop of Duresme, to require him to come onto Potingham, where he would met with him. Howbeit, king William refus fed to come himselfe as then, but sent the bishop of faint Andrew, and Pugh Palebille to follow his

Matth, Paris.

Polydor.

Rog.Houed

fint, with promise to abilitine from any forceable inuation of England, by the space of fortie dates, so that he might within that terme have some resolute answer from king John, icherebnto he might stand either on the one lide or the other.

Chipe Thighest Himseh Cormandia.

Thilest these things were adoing in England, Thisp is of France taking leused an armie, brake into Normandie, and toke the citie of Eureur, the towns of Arques, and diverse other places from the English. Ind passing from thence into Paine, he 1 recourred that countrie latelie before through feare altenated. In an other part, an arme of Bitains with great oiligence wan the townes of Goiney, Buteuant and Genfolm, and following the vidorie, take the citie of Angiers, which king John had won from duke Arthur, in the last yeare passed. These things being fignified to king John, he thought to make promition for the recoverie of his lottes there, inith all speed possible. And therebyon perceining that the Scotish king meant not to mæt with him at 2 Notingham whither he was come, and where he kept the feast of Whitsunfide, he determined to passe the leas oner into Dormandie: but firft he toke order for the government and defense of the realme in his ablence.

L. William te Stattuille.

Cherebpen he delinered the charge of the cours ties of Porthumberland and Cumberland, buto the loed Walltam de Statenille, with all the castels, and other the appurtenances, which the losd Hugh Bardolfe before helo, and had in keeping. De also delive ; Organ de Las red buto Roger de Lacie conestable of Chester, the cie conectable callell of Pomfret, having first the sonne and heire of the fame Larie delivered buto him as an hostage for his localtie and faithfull obedience. This done he halled onto the sea lide, and sailed over into Pos mandie, landing first at Diep, and from thence went to Rouen, whither he came byon the fundaie before Midlummer day, which was the 26 of June as W.

a! Chelter. King John gellerh auer into Kopo

3 truce for fiftic dates.

The earle of ರ್.anbcrs. The league renewed be = twirt Enga Flanders.

Rog.Houed. Cha carte of Bamare,

France inter= bicted. 201mandie interbicted.

Dog Houed:

Harifon bath noted. there referted buto him a great number of fouldiers both horffemen and fortmen, hoping to be interteis ned, but by reason of ambassadours riving to and fro betwirt the two kings, they came to a communication, and twhe truce for fiftie daies. The earle of Flanders being certified thereof, was force in his hart, and loth that the French king Chould come to a no accord with the king of England, and therefore to turns the mind of king John from the purpose of newed the league betwirt England & Flanders, to be the better able to defend themselves from the French power: and withall determined fullie, that immediatlie upon the expiring of this last truce they would make the French king warre, to revenge their late received injuries. The French king advertiled by espials of their octormination, prepared also for the warres. In this meane time it chanced, that Denrie earle one Peter of Doway, a right valiant knight, with his brother that was the elect bilhop of Cambrey, were taken puloners in a fairmilh, and presented to the French king. Therebyon the cardinall of Capua (being at the same time the popes legat in France) interdiaco that realme for the taking of the same elect of Cambrey, also all Pormandie, for the deteining of the bilhop of Beauwis in pilon (who had laine there along time, 4 was taken in the field affer such manner as is before rehearsed) so that the French king was glad to reffore the elect of Cambicy to his libertic. And likewise king John delivered the bishop of Beaunois, the paied two thouland marks, belides expenses of diet during the time of his captivitie, and furthermore toke anoth. that he Chould never after beare armour in the war against any chistian or christians.

About the same time, bing Philip made Arthur Britisbuke of Bitaine knight, and received of him his ho of with mage for Aniou, Pointiers, Maine, Couraine, and mariang Britaine. Also somewhat before the time that the truce thould expire; to wit, on the morrow after the feast of the Assumption of our ladie, and also the day nert following, the two kings talked by commission ners, in a place betwirt the townes of Butenant and Guleton. Within the daies after, they came to gither personallie, and communed at full of the bariance depending betweene them. But the French hing the wed himselse stiffe and hard in this treatie, demanding the whole countrie of Cleulquestine to sings de be ressored onto him, as that which had beene grand manb. teo by Geffrey earle of Anion, the father of hing Henrie the fecond, anto Lewes le Groffe, to have his aid then against king Stethan . Woreover he demanded, that Poictiers, Aniou, Maine, and Tonraine, thould be delivered and wholie refigned but o Arthur duke of Britaine.

But thele, t diverle other requests which he made, king John would not in any wife grant buto, and so they departed without conclusion of any agree ment. Therfore diverte earls and barons of France, which before that time had formed king Kichard, repatred but o king John, and toke an oth to alliff him, o and not to agree with the French king without his consent: and he likewise sware buto them, not to make peace with the French king, except they were therein compriled. In the moneth of September. Jone king Johns lifter, wife to Kaimond earle of S. Tiles, and somtime quane of Sicile, died at Kouen, and was buried at Fontenerard. The French king also twke viverse townes and castels, but a mongst other the castell of Balun, and raced the Walnu fer wals thereof downe to the ground, wherewith Will Immediatlie opon his arrivall in those parts, 40 liam de Roches, generall of the armie of Arthur duke of Britaine, was greatlie offended, and die to much by his driff, that Chortlie after a peace was concluded betwirt king John and his nethureduke A peace be Arthur, though the same served but to finall purpose. Tourt bing

The French king having (as I have faid) over nephur. theowne the wals of Balun, belieged a fortrelle called Lauardin, but king John comming with an are Lauardia. mie, caused him to raise his siege, and to withdraw himselse to the citie of Pauns, whither he followed, peace, he came to visit him at Rouen, where they res 50 and compelled him (mauger his force) to remove from thence. All this while was William de 180° william te thes buillie occupied about his practife, to make bing isoches. John and his neithue Arthur freends, which thing at length he brought about, and there opon delivered into king Johns hands the citie of Pauns which he had in keeping. Also the vicount of Tours came to the The bicom king of England, and furrended buto him the ca. of Tours, stell of Chinon, the keeping whereof he betwhe buto Roger de Lacie the conessable of Chester. But in of Pamure, bother to Philipearle of Flanders, and 60 the night following, open some militust and suspicion gathered in the observation of the covenants on Is. The milital Johns behalfe, both the faid Arthur, with his mother that duke 31 Constance the said vicount of Cours, and diverse or that had ther, fled awaie secretile from the king, and got them to the citie of Angiers, where the mother of the to the citie of Angiers, where the mother of the faid Arthur refuling hir former hulband the earle of Cheffer, married bir felfe to the logo Bute de Cours, bio ther to the fair vicount, by the popes dispensation. The fame pere, Littlip baffard fonne to king Kichard, to whome his father had given the castell and honoz of Coinacke, killed the vicount of Limoges, in res Philip bill uenge of his fathers death, who was flaine (as poe Bichards to have heard) in besteging the castell of Chalus the bicolini faro fon fi of Limeges.

Mogeomer,

Fireance be wirt the bi :

Patribe.

9,

Moreover, there fell manie great flouds in Eng-Great Boubs. land, and on the borders of Scotland, by biolence thereof otherse bitoges were borne downe, and a mongst other, the bridge at Barwike. For the buils oing by againe whereof, some variance arose bes twirt Anily bilhop of Durham and carle Patrike lord cheefe tuffice of Scotland, and eapiteine at the fame time of the fowne of Barwike, tho by the Scotish kings commandement would have repar red agains the same bridge, which could not be done, 10 but that the one end thereof must be builded on the bithop of Durhams ground, which he would not fuf fer till by the counsell of the load William de Stu tenille, he agreed, to that the convention accorded and concluded between the king of Scots and his predes ceffour bishop Hugh might be referued inviolable.

A rate of § pal=

Furthermore, king John did let a rate boon the of wines, prices of wines, as Rochell wine to be fold for then tie shillings the tun, and not aboue. The wine of And for for twentie foure Hillings the tun, and no other 20 French wines about fine and twentie Chillings the innercept it were of fuch notable govenede as that fome peraduenture for their owne expenses would be contented to give after twentie fir thillings eight vence for the tun, and not aboue. Dozeover, the galon of Rechell wine he appointed to be fold at foure pence: and the galon of white wine at fir pence . It ivas also ordeined, that in everie citic, towne, and place there wine was vied to be fold, there thould be twelve honest men sworne to have regard that this 20 affile should not be broken: and that if they found any vintuer that thould from the pin fell any wine by finall measures contrarie to the same assie, his bodie thould be attached by the thiriffe, and deteined in pilon, till other commandement were given for his further punishment, and his gods leised buto the kings vie. Furthermore, if any persons were or thould be found to buy and fell by the hogihead oz tun, contrarie to this affile, they should be committed to wison, there to remaine, till other order were ta 40 ken for them: neither should there be any regrating of wines that were brought into England. But this vidinance lasted not long, for the merchants could not beare it, and so they fell to and sold white wine for eight pence the gallon, ted or claret for fir pence.

Ring John also came over from Pormandie into returnation Cingland, and there leuted a subsidie, taking of enerie ploughland the thillings. In the Lent follow: ing, he went to Pocke, in hope to have met the king of Scots there, but he came not, and so king John 50 returned backe, and failed againe into Pozmandie, bicause the variance still devended betweene him and the king of France. Finallie opon the Alcention day in this fecond years of his reigne, they came eff. somes to a communication betwirt the townes of Tiernon and Lifle Dandelie, where finallie they concluded an agreement, with a marriage to be had betwirt Lewes the sonne of king Philip, and the ladie Blanch, vaughter to Alfonso king of Castile the 8 of

In confideration whereof, king John, belives the Matth, Paris. fumme of thirtie thouland markes in filuer, as in respect of downie assigned to his said nice, resigned his title to the citie of Eureur, and also buto all those townes wich the French king has by warre taken from him, the citie of Angiers onelie excepted, which ritie he received againe by covenants of the same as grament. The French king restored also to king John (as Rate Niger witteth) the citie of Tours, and all the eastels and fortrestes which he had taken within Couraine: and moteouer, received of king John his homage for all the lands, fees and tenes ments which at anie time his brother king Richard, of his father king Henric has holden of him, the faid king Lewes or any his proceedfors, the quit claims and marriages alwaies ercepted. The king of Eng. land likewise did homage but the French king for Britaine, and againe (as after you thall heare) receined homage for the same countrie, and for the countie of Richmont of his nephue Arthur . He also gave the earledome of Glocetter buto the earle of Eureur, as it were by way of erchange, for that he religned to the French king all right, title & claime that might be pretended to the countie of Gureur.

By this conclusion of marriage betwirt the fair Lewes and Blanch, the right of king John went awaie, which he lawfullie before pretended buto the citie of Eureur, and buto those tolunes in the confines of Berrie, Chateau, Rour of Raoul, Creste and Isoldune, and like wife but othe countric of Menrin or Meniquestine, which is a part of the territorie of Gifors: the right of all which lands, townes and countries was released to the king of France by Ik. John, who suposed that by his affinitie, and resignation of his right to those places, the peace now made would have continued for ener. And in confideration on thereof, he procured furthermore, that the fore faid meth backe Blanch thould be conneced into France to hir hul again cinto band with all speed. That donte he returned into England.

Tertes this peace was displeasant to manie, but namelie to the earle of Flanders, tho here bon making no accompt of king Johns amitie, concluded a peace with king Philip Choetlie after, and ment to make warre against the infidels in the east parts, wherehy we may fee the discontented minds of men, and of how differing humors they be, so that nothing is harder than to fatilite manie with one thing, be the same never so god,

o cacis mortulia plena tenebris Pectora, co o mentes caligine circumfeptas!

But by the chronicles of Flanders it appeareth, that the earle of Flanders concluded a peace with the la. Meir. French king in Febzuarie last past, befoze that king John and the French king fell to any composition. But such was the malice of writers in times past, which they bare towards king John, that what soener was done in prejudice of him or his lubicas, it was ffill interpreted to chance through his default, fo as the blame Will was imputed to him, in 60 much that although manie things he did peraduenture in mata ters of government, for the which he might be hardlie excused, yet to thinke that he described the tenth part of the blame therewith writers tharge him, it might feeme a great lacke of adulled confides ration in them that so thould take it. But now to proced with our purpole.

King John being now in rest from warres with forcen enimies, began to make warre with his lub. teaspurfes at home, emptieng them by taxes and tallages, to fill his coffers, which alienated the minds of a great number of them from his love and obedience. At length also, when he had got togither a great that name, a nicce to la. John by his lifter Glianos. 60 malle of monie, he went ouer againe into Poemandie, where by Helias archbishop of Burdeaux, and the bishop of Polatiers and Scone, he was binoxled from his wife Plabell, that was the daughter of Ro, R. Houed. bert earle of Gloceffer, bicaufe of the nærencife of king John bloud, as touching hir in the third degræ. After that, is divoled. he married Isabell the baughter of Amerie earle of Matt. West.
Angolesme, by thome he had two sources, Henrie
R.Houed. and Kichard, and thee daughters, Habell, Chance, and Jane.

Poseover, about this time, Beffrey archbilhop of Matth, Paris, Porke was devrined of all his manours, lands, and Geffrey arch. possessions, by the kings commandement directed to of youke dethe thirifte of Porkethire for dinerle causes, for that prines. he would not vermit the fame thiriffe to lenie the on-

The king cas

75

1

111

Ling Tohn

England.

d fublidic.

De faileth a:

hno Reg.z.

T peace condubed with amarriage,

anine into Pomandie.

1200

tic called Charugage, that was ; the Chillings of co ueric ploughland within his diocelle , rated and appointed to be levied to the kings vie, throughout all parts of the realine. Secondlie, for that the same archbilhop refused to go over with the king into Pormandie to helpe to make the marriage betwirt the French kings sonne and his nece. Thirdlie, bis cause he had excommunicated the same shiriffe and all the province of Porke: wherebyon the king toke displeasure against him, and not onclie spoiled him 1 (as I faid) of his gods, but also banished him out of the court, not luffering him to come in his presence for the space of twelve moneths after.

In this yeare also, Hubert archbishop of Canturburie held a councell at Westminster against the prohibition of the lord chiefe inflice, Beffrey fitz

Poter earle of Effer. In the which councell or fornod, diverse constitutions were made and ordeined for orders and cultomes to be bled touching the feruice other articles concerning thurthmen and eccleliaffi call matters. About the same time, king John and Philip king of France met togither nære the towne of Mernon, where Arthur duke of Britaine (as balfall to his bucle king John) did his homage buto him for the duchie of Britaine, a thole other places which he held of him on this fide and beyond the river of Loir, and afferivard fill miffruffing his bucles curtelle, he returned backe againe with the french cle, who (as he supposed) did beare him little good will.

At the same time he gave commandement unto thould award his precepts but all forreffers within the realme, to give warning to all the white monks, remone out of his forcells all their horses of Hav ras, and other cattell, bnoor the penaltie to forfeit fo manie of them, as after that day chanced to be found within the same forcests. The cause that moned the king to deale so hardlie with them was, for that thep refuled to helpe him with monie, when before his last going over into Pormandie, he demanded it of them towards the paiment of the thirtie thousand pounds which he had covenanted to pay the French have done for reliefe of his people, and his owne king, to live in rest and peace, which he covered to 50 that before the quindene of S. Wichaell they thould 40

Rog.Houed. 3 councell called at west: minfter by the archbilhop of Canturburic.

Arthur buke of Butaine to the king of England.

King John returneth in= to England.

These things being thus performed, king John returned into England, and there caused his new married wife Isabell to be crowned on the sundate before the featt of S. Denile, the eight of Daober. Hugh Peuill high tuffice of his forrests, that he

In ambalfage fent buto the B.of Scots.

The king of Scots came to the king of England at Lincolne. Matth, Paris Ran. Higd. R. Houed. Polydor.

fuertie, knowing what enimies he had that laie in wait to destroic him, and againe, what discommodis ties had chanced to his father and brethren, by the of ten and continuall wars. But now to proceed with other boings. Immediatlic after the folemnization of the quæns coronation ended, he fent Willip bithop of Durefme, Roger Bigot earle of Porthfolke, and Henrie de Bohun earle of Hereford, nephue to Milliam king 60 of Scotland, and Dauid earle of Huntington, boo ther to the faid king, and Roger de Lacie conestable of Cheffer, the load William de Mescie, and the load Robert de Ros, which had married two of the daugh ters of the faid king, & Robert Fitz Roger thiriffe of Posthumberland, as ambaffadours from him bre to the foresaid William king of Scotland, with lets ters patents, conteining a fafe conduct for him to come into England, and to met with king John at Lincolne on the morrow after the feath of S. Co. mund, tho gladic granted therebuto, and to accorbing to that appointment, both the kings met at Lincolne the 21 day of Pouember. And on the mos row after king John went to the eathedzall church.

and offered boon the high altar a chalice of gold.

On the fame day, byon a hill without the citie, the king of Scots did homage buto king John, in the presence and fight of a great multitude of people, Amearing fealtie of life, limme, and worldie honour buto king John, which of he made byon the croffe of Hubert archbilhop of Canturburie. There were prefent at that time, belide other Poblemen, the arch bishops, Canturburie, Poske, and Ragule, with o ther bilhops, to the number of thirteene, as Durelme London, Rocheffer, Clie, Bath, Salifburie, Wine chester, Pereford, Porwich, S. Andrews in Scotland, Landaffe, and Bango; in Wales, and Deth in Ireland, belide a great multitude of earles, barons, and other Poblemen. When the king of Scots had thus done his homage, he required resistution of Porthumberland, Cumberland and Wellmerland. which he claimed as his right and lawfull heritage. Puch talke was had touching this matter, but they could not agree, and therefore king John afked respit and administration of sacraments in the church, and 20 to confider of it till the feath of Pentecost next infuing, which being granted, the king of Scots the next morrow being the 23 of Pouember returned homes wards, and was conducted backe againe into his countrie by the same Poble men that brought him to Lincolne.

The same day that the king of Scots toke his fournie homewards from Lincolne, the corps of Hugh bishop of that citie (latelie before, departed king, and would not commit himfelfe to his faid but 30 this life at London, after his returne from the parts of beyond the feas) was brought thither to be buried, the king and all the bishops, earles and barons went to receive it, and honoured his buriall with their picfence. On the morrow after being fridate, he was interred within the new church which he had builded. This Hugh was a Frenchman by nation, bosne at Granople, a man of a pregnant wit, and skilfull both in science of holie scripture and humane knowledge. He was first a regular canon, and after became a Carthulian monke. King Henrie the fecond moued with the fame of his vertue and godlie life, sent the bithop of Bath to bying him into England, and after be was come, made him first abbat of Whithing in the diocesse of Wielles, and after created him bishop of Lincolne.

> De was noted to be of a verie perfect life, name lie, bicause he would not sticke to reprove men of their faults plainelic and frankelie, not regarding the fauour of distauour of any man, in somuch that he would not feare to pronounce them accurated, which being the kings officers, would take byon them the punishment of any person within orders of the church, for hunting and killing of the kings game within his parkes, forreffs and chales, yea (and that which is moze) he would denie paintents of luch Appelant subsidies and tares as he was affelfed to paie to the bles of king Richard and king John, towards the bithop. maintenance of their wars, and did offentimes accurffe by his ecclefiafticall authozitie, such thiriffes, collectors, or other officers, as did diffreine byon his lands and gods for to fatilite thefe kings of their des mands, alledging openlie, that he would not paie as ny monie towards the maintenance of wars, which one chillian prince, bpon private displeasure and grudge, made against another prince of the same religion. This was his reason.

And when he came before the king to make answer to his disobedience the weo herein, he would so hand dle the matter, partie with gentle admonishments, partlie with tharpe reprofes, and fometime mixing merrie and pleasant speech amongst his serious arguments, that often times he would so qualifie the kings mod, that being driven from anger, he could not but laugh and imile at the buthops pleasant talke and merrie concetts, so that it might well be salvof

Omne tulit punctum quimiscuit vtile dulci.

This maner he bled, not onelie with the king alone, but with the father and the two sonnes, that is to fav. Henrie the fecond, Richard and John, in whole time he ruled and gouerned the fee of Lincolne. De was after his decelle, for the opinion which men conceived of his holinelle and vertues, admitted into the number of the faints.

Pa have heard how king John had conceived no finall displeasure against the monks of the white 02 Der, for that they would not part with any monie, erculing themselves that they might not do it with out consent of a generall chapiter of their order. Where upon the king had caused them diverse waies to be molested, but chefelie in restreining them of libertie to have any horfes or other cattell going to pasture within his forcests. They therefore taking aduite togither, chole forth tivelue abbats amongst 20 them of that order, the which in all their names went to Lincolne, there to make fuit to the king (comming thither at this time to meet the king of Scots) that it would please him to remit his displeasure conceined against them, and to take them againe into his

This fuit was to followed, although with some difficultie, that at length, to wit, the fundaie after that the king of Scots had done his homage, through the helpe and furtherance of the archbishop of Canturburie, they came to the kings speech, and obteined so much, as they in reason might delire : for he pardo. ned them of all his passed displeasure, received them againe into his fauour, toke them into his protecti on, and commanded that all infuries, greuances and molestations thould be reformed, redressed and amended, which in respect of his indignation had beine offered and dome to them by any manner of meanes. And to fee the fame accomplished, writs were directed buto the thiriffes of the counties, bear ring date from Lincolne the 27 of Pouember. And 40 thus were those monks for that time restored to the kings favour, to their great commoditie and comfort.

fine mones.

About the moneth of December, there were fæne in the province of Porke five mones, one in the east, the fecond in the well, the third in the north, the fourth in the fouth, and the fift as it were fet in the middeff of the other, having manie fars about it, and went five or fir times incompatting the other, as it were the space of one houre, and shortlie after vanished a waie. The winter after was extreamelie colo, more than the naturall course had beene afozetime. And in the springtime came a great glutting and continu all raine, cauting the rivers to rife with higher flouds than they had beene accustomed.

In the years 1201 king John held his Chismas at Gilford, and there gave to his fernants manie faire liveries and fuits of apparell. The archbilhop of Canturburie did also the like at Canturburie, see thould patte the other in fuch fumptaous appareling of their men: whereat the king (and not without god cause) was greatlic moused to indignation again. him, although for a time he coloured the fame going presentlie into the north, where he gathered of the countrie there no small summs of monie, as it were by way of fining them for their transgressions committed in his forceffs.

From thence he returned and came to Cantur burie, where he held his easter, which fell that yeare on the day of the Annunciation of our ladie, in the which feat he fat crowned, together with his wife quiene Flabell, the archiefhop of Canturburie bear ring the charges of them and their trains while they remained there. At the feath of the Alcention next infuing, king John fet out a proclamation at Tewkel. burie, that all the earles and barons of the realme, and also all other that held of him by knights service, fould be readie in the feat of Pentecost nert infuing, with horse and armour at Portesmouth, to palle oner with him into Posmandie, who made their amearance accordinglie. Powbeit, a great number of them in the end gat licence to tarrie at home, pais eng for eneric knights fee two markes of filner for a fine, which then was a great matter.

But he fent befoze him into Pozmandie Willie Rog. Houed. am Parchall earle of Striguille with an hundred knights of men of armes, which he had hired, and Roger de Lacie with an other hundred men of armes to defend the confines of Pozmandie against the enimies: and to his chamberleine Hubert de Burgh he delivered the like number of knights 02 men of armes also, to keepe the marthes betwirt England and Males as warden of the fame. This done, he pardoned his brother the archbishop of Thearchbish. Poske, and restored him to all his dignities, possess, of yorkeres ons and liberties, confirming the fame buto him in as full and large manner, as ever Roger late arch bishop of that see had entoted the same : for the which confirmation his faid brother undertwike to paie to the king within the terms of one yeare the fumme of a thousand pounds farling: and for the ale furance thereof, engaged his baronte to the king in requiring him that the time appointed for him to make answer touching his demand of Posthum berland, might be proroged butill the feast of faint

Michaell the archangell nert infuing, with was ob-

Pozeover, about the fame time, the king fent Bef- Imballadors frey bishop of Cheffer, and Richard Palebille, with fent to Scot-Henrie de Poilie, bnto William king of Scotland, teined, and then the king and quæne (being come to Postsmouth on the mondaic in Whitsunsveke) toke the feato palle ouer into Pozmandie, but not Che king both in one thip, so that the quiene with a prosperous patieth over gale of wind arrived there at hir owne defire. But into Pos-

the king was driven by reason of a pirrie, to take mandic. land in the Ile of Wight, and fo was fraied there for a time: howbeit, within a few daies after, he toke thip againe at Postlmonth, and so passed over into Pormandie, where shortlie after his arrivall in those parties he came to an enterview with the king of France, nære to Lille Donelie, where comming a Becommeth long time togither alone, they agreed to well, that totalke with within thice daies after, king John at the French theking of kings request went into France, and was received France. of him with much honour, first at S. Denise with procession of the cleargie: and there looging one night, bpon the morrow the French king accompanied him unto Paris, where he was received of the citizens with great reverence, the provost present entrething ting but ohim in the name of the whole citie manie Paris. rich gifts for his welcome. It. Philip feaffed him also ming in deed to frive with the king, which of them 60 in his owne palace, a for his part gave to him, to his loads, and to his fernants manie great and paincelie gills. Pozouer, the league at this time was renewed The league betwirt them, and put in watting, with this caution, renewed that whether of them first brake the covenants; such March. Paris, loads on his part as were become fuerties for perfor, R. Houed. mance, thould be released of their allegiance which they owight to him that so thouse breake, a that they might therebpon frælie become subjects to the other

These things done, at length when as king John had remained at Paris with great mirth and folace certeine daies, the French king brought him forth of the citie, and toke leave of him in verie louing wife.

Matt.Paris. Anno. Reg.3.

After this bing John went to Chinon, 4 from thence into Posmanoie; about which time there chanced fome troubles in Ireland, for there Walter Lacie buder pretende of a communication that was apwalter Lacie pointed betwirt him and John de Curcie, logo of Al meant to have neffer, meant to have taken the faid Eurcie, and for taken the load the accomplishment of his purpose set opon him, sue manie of his men, and for his fafegard confreined Turcie in the end to take a castell which belonged by the fame Dugh, to be preferued out of all danger, it came to palle, that when he was once got in, he might no moze be luffered to depart. For the Lacies thought to have delivered him to king John, but the servants and freends of the said Eurcie made such cruell war, in walling and destroteng the lands and pollellions that belonged buto the faid Walter and Hugh Lacies, that finallie they were confiremed to fet him againe at libertie whether they would or no.

Polydor. Did against and infidelg.

Matth.Paris.

England gaue large monie towards the mainte nance of the armie, which at this present went forth binder the leading of the earle of Flanders and o ther, to warre against the enimies of the christian faith, at the instance of pope Innocent. There was furthermoze granted buto them the fortith part of all the revenues belonging to ecclesiasticall perfons, towards the aid of the chaiffians then being in the holie land, and all such as well of the Pobilitie as other of the weaker fort, which had taken boon them the croffe, and fecrettie laid it volume, were compelled efflones to receive it now againe.

Mnfeefanable Sveather,

There chanced this yeare wonderfull tempetts of thunder, lightning, baile, and abundance of raine, in such wife, that mens minds were greatlie affonicd ther with: medowes and marth grounds were quite overflowne, bringes broken and borne downe, and great quantitie of come and hair lost and carried as wate, and diverse men and women drowned. Pars garet mother of Constance, buthes of Buttaine, fis 4 fer to William king of Scots, and mother to Henrie Boun earle of Hereford, deceasted. This yeare also by the counsell and advice of the burgetles of London, there were chosen 35 of the most substantie all and wisest men, which after the report of some ivaters, were called the councell of the citie of London, out of which number the Paioz and Bailiffes were pearelie chosen. In the yeare 1 202 king John held his Chill-made at Argenton in Pomandie, and in the Lent 50

following he and the French king met togither, nere unto the castell of Bulleton, and there in talke

Matth. Paris. I 2 O 2

Fabian.

had betweene them, he commanded king John with no fmall arrogancie, and contrarie to his former promile, to reffore buto his neglue Arthur duke of Britaine, all those lands now in his possession on The french that five the lea, which king John earnefilie denied to dw, thereupon the French king immediatlic affer, to make Snar began war against him, and toke Buteuant, Augi, against king callell of Radepont for the space of eight daics, till king John came thither, and forced him to depart with much diliponoz. Polobeit affer this, the French hing wan Gourney, and then returning to Paris,

Polydor.

John,

his lubication. Herebpon Hugh le Bun carle of Harch (buto Hugh earle of Chome querie Jabell the wife of king John had beene promifed in mariage, before that king John was motioned buto hir, and therefore bare an inward displeasure towards the king of England, for he appointed certeine persons to have the governes ment of the forefaid Arthur duke of Britaine, and then sent him forth with 200 men of armes into Policou, that he might bring the countric also under that he had to bereff tim of his promifed frouse) being now desirous to procure some trouble also buto king John, foined himfelfe with Arthur duke of Che Poids Britaine, and found meanes to cause them of Pot uns renot don (a people ener subied to rebellion) to revolt from hing from king John, and to take armour against him, fo that the young Arthur being incouraged with this new luplie of affociats, first went into Touraine. and affer into Aniou, compelling both those coun' Arthur pio onto Hugh Lacie, opon faire promifes made to him 10 tries to lubmit themselves onto him, and proclais claimeth med himselfe earle of those places, by commission selfetaries and grant obteined from king Philip.

Duene Cliano, that was regent in those parties Quance. being put in great feare with the newes of this fud- liano, den fturre, got hir into Mirabeau a Grong towne, Atuat in the countrie of Anion, and foothwith dis patched a mellenger with letters unto king John, requiring him of speedie succour in this hir present danger. In the meane time, Arthur following the At the fame time also, the kings of France and 20 bidozie, Chortlie after followed hir, and wone Diras beau, where he toke his granomother within the fame, whom he pet intreated verie honozablie, and with great reverence (as some have reported.) \Watth Parix other write far more trulie, that the was not taken, Matth. Well but escaped into a tower, within the which the was Fraitlie belieged. Thither came also to aid Arthur all the Robles and men of armes in Poictou, and namelie the forefaid earle of Parch according to aps pointment betweet them: so that by this meanes Arthur had a great armie togither in the field.

laing John in the meane time, having received his mothers letters, and understanding thereby in what danger the flod, was maruellouslie troubled with the Arangenesse of the newes, and with manie Polydon bitter words accused the French king as an untrue prince, and a fraudulent league-breaker: and in all possible half speedeth him forth, continuing his lours nie for the most part both day and night to come to the succour of his people. To be briefe, he bled such k. John com oiligence, that he was boon his enimies necks yer meth bronts they could understand any thing of his comming, 02 enumies us refle what the matter magnitude that the first leaked for gelle what the matter meant, when they faw fuch a companie of fouldiers as he brought with him to approch so nære the citie. For so negligent were they, that having once wone the towne, they ranged as broad over the countrie hither and thither at their 16 bertie without any care. So that now being put in a fudden feare, as prevented by the haffie comming of the enimies upon them, and wanting leifure to take advice that was best to be done, and having not time in manner to get any armour on their backs, they were in a maruellous trouble, not knowing thether it were best for them to fight or to flex, to pælo or to refift.

This their feare being apparent to the Englishmen (by their disorder the wed in running by and downe from place to place with great notice and turmoile) they let upon them with great violence, and compas fing them round about, they either toke or fine them and the castell of Linos. Pozeouer, he besteged the 60 in a manner at their pleasure. And having thus put them all to flight, they purfued the chafe towards the towne of Pirabeau, into which the entinies made berie great half to enter: but such speed was vied by the English fouldiers at that present, that they entred and wan the faid tolune before their entimies could come nere to get into it. Great flaughter was made within Mirabeau it felfe, and Arthur with the relidue Arthur but of the armie that escaped with life from the first bic or abstract kering was taken, tho being herebpon counnitted to prison, first at Falais, and after within the eitie of Matth. Paris Rouen, lived not long after as you thall beare. The other of the pilloners were also committed onto lake keping, some into castels within Populandie, and some were sent into England.

Inion,3c.

Rafe

King Iohn hauing gotten this victorie, and taken his nephue Arthur, he wrote the maner of that his successe vnto his barons in England, in manner as followeth.

Unn by the grace of God king of England, and lord of Ireland, to all his barons fendeth greeting. Know 10 yee that we by Gods good fauour are in found and perfect health, and through Gods grace that maruellouslie worketh with vs, on tuesdaie before Lammas daie, we being before the citie of Mauns, were aduertised that our mother was besieged in Mirabeau, and therfore we hasted so fast as we possibly might, fo that we came thither on Lammas daie, and Brun, Andrew de Chauenie, the vicount of Chateau Erald, Raimond de Touars, Sauerie de Mauleon, and Hugh Bangi, and all other enimies of Poictou that were there affembled against vs, to the number of two hundred knights and aboue, so that not one of them esarmes belides caped. Give God therefore thanks, and reioife at our good successe.

The French king at the same time lieng in siege

242 kmiahtsi

Anno Reg.4.

De Caftre

Eraib.

before Arques, immediatlie byon the newes of this overtheole, raised from thence, and returned home, wards, destroieng all that came in his waie, till he was entred into his owne countrie. It is faid that king John caused his nephue Arthur to be brought before him at Falais, and there went about to perfuade him all that he could to forfake his frænothip and aliance with the French king, and to leane and like one that wanted good counsell, and abounding to much in his owne wilfull opinion, made appea fumptuous answer, not onelie denteng so to ow, but also commanding king John to restore buto him the realme of England, with all those other lands and possessions which king Richard had in his hand at the houre of his death. For lith the fame apperteined to him by right of inheritance, he actured him, ercept re-Attution were made the somer, he should not long continue quiet . King John being foze moued with 50 fuch words thus ottered by his nephue, appointed (as before is faid) that he thould be traitlie kept in priion, as first in Falais, and after at Roan within the new castell there. Thus by means of this god succelle, the countries of Polatou, Touraine, and Aniou

Manh Paris Ring John aftlanes were recovered.

Rafe Cog.

Shortlie after king John comming over into England, caused himselfe to be crowned againe at Canturburie by the hands of Hubert the archbillyop there, on the fourteenth day of Aprill, and then went 60 backe againe into Posmandie, where immediatlie bpon his arrivall, a rumour was spred through all France, of the death of his nephue Arthur. True it is that great fuit was made to have Arthur fet at lie bertie, as well by the French king, as by William de Riches a valiant varon of Poicton, and diverse other Poble men of the Britains, who when they could not prevaile in their fuit, they banded them: felues togither, and foining in confederacie with Robert earle of Alanson, the vicount Beaumont, William de Fulgiers, and other, they began to lenie harpe wars against king John in diverse places, infomuch (as it was thought) that to long as Arthur lived, there would be no quiet in those parts: where, bpon it was reported, that king John through perfualion of his councelloss, amointed certeine perfons to go buto Falais, there Arthur was hept in pation, under the charge of Hubert de Burgh, and there to put out the young gentlemans cies.

But through fuch reliffance as he made against one of the tormentors that came to execute the kings commandement (for the other rather forloke their prince and countrie, than they would consent to obeie the kings authoritie herein) and such las mentable words as he ottered, Hubert de Burgh old preferue him from that infurte, not doubting but rather to have thanks than displeasure at the kings hands, for delivering him of such infamic as would have redounded but o his highnedle, if the young gens tleman had beine to cruellie dealt withall. For he considered, that king John had resolued byon this point onelie in his heat and furic (which moueth men to undertake manie an inconvenient enterpille, one there we tooke our nephue Arthur, Hugh le 20 beseming the person of a common man, much more reprochfull to a prince, all men in that mod being mere folish and furious, and prone to accomplish the peruerle conceits of their ill possessed heart; as one faith right well.

> -pronus in irans Stultorum est animus facile excande scit, co audet Omne scelus, quoties concepta bile tumescit) and that afterwards, bpon better abusement, he would both repent himselfe so to have commanded, 30 and give them finall thanke that thould feet put in erecution. Powbeit to fatiffie his mind for the time, and to fraie the rage of the Britains, he caused it to be bruted abroad through the countrie, that the kings commandement was fulfilled, and that Arthur also through forrow and græfe was departed out of this life. For the space of fifteene dates this rumour incellantlie ran through both the realmes of England and France, and there was ringing for him through townes and villages, as it had beine for his funerals. Micke to him being his naturall bucle. But Arthur 40 It was also bruted, that his bodie was buried in the monasterie of faint Andzewes of the Cisteaux ozder.

But when the Britains were nothing pacified, but rather kindled more behementlie to worke all the mischese they could deutse, in revenge of their fouereignes death, there was no remedie but to lignific abroad againe, that Arthur was as pet living and in health. Pow when the king heard the truth of all this matter, he was nothing displeased for that his commandement was not executed, lith there were diverse of his capteins which ottered in plaine woods, that he chould not find knights to keepe his castels, if he dealt so cruellie with his nemue. For it it chanced any of them to be taken by the king of France of other their adversaries, they thould be fure to talk of the like cup. \ But now touching the maner in verie deed of the end of this Arthur, luis ters make fundie reports. Peuerthelelle certeine it is, that in the yeare next infuing, he was remoued from Falais buto the castell or tower of Rouen, out of the which there was not any that would confesse that ever he faw him go alive . Some have written, that as he allaied to have escaped out of prison, and proving to clime over the wals of the castell, he fell into the river of Saine, and to was drowned. Other write, that through verie greefe and languor he pined awaie, and died of naturall licknesse. But some al firme, that king John fecretlie caused him to be murs thered and made awaie, to as it is not throughlie agreed upon , in what fort he finished his dates : but verelie king John was had in great suspicion, thether worthflie or not, the losd knoweth . Det how ertreamelie socier he delt with his neibue, he releas sevand set at libertie diverse of those loads that were 19.ty.

taken prisoners with him, namelie Hugh le Brun, and Sancrie de Mauleon, the one to his great trouble and hinderance, and the other to his gaine: for Dugh le Bun afterwards leuied and occasioned loze warres against him, but Sauerie de Manleon continued ever after his locall subject, doing to him berie agræable service, as hereaster may appeare. The Lord Tute, sonne to the viceunt of Touars, Baie fonne to the becomme of Couers.

mother of 3ohn.

dake Arthur

accufeth king

the had taken Arthurs mother Constance to wife, after the dinocle made betwirthir and the earle of 10 Cheffer, in right of hir obteined the dukedome of Buttame. But king Philip after he was advertised of Arthurs beath, twite the matter verie grænoullie, Constance the and byon occasion therof, cited king John to appeare before him at a certeine day, to answer such obiects ons as Constance the duches of Britaine mother to the faid Arthur thould lay to his charge, touching the murther of hir sonne. And bicause king John appear red not, he was therefore condemned in the action, and adjudged to forfeit all that he held within the pre- 20 cina of France, aswell Pomandie as all his other lands and dominious.

Matt. Paris. The ordinace for the allife of bread.

Great tem-

peffg.

About the same time the king canted a proclamation to be published for the lawfull affice of bread to be made by the bakers, bpon paine to be punithed by the villozie: which affile was anyoued and affelled by the baker of Geffrey Fitz Peter, lood thefe intice of England, and by the baker of Kobert de Tuinham. So that the baker might fell and gaine two loanes for the heater of the onen, and for foure fernants foure halfepence, for two boies a farthing, for allowance in falt an halfepenie, yest an halfe penie, for candell a farthing, for fewell three pence, and for a bulter an halfepenie. And this was the rate.

When wheat was fold for fir thillings the quarter, then thall everie loafe of fine manchet toep 41 shillings, and everie loafe of cheat shall wer 24 shill lings. When wheat is fold for fine thillings and fir pence, then manchet thall wey 20 thillings, and cheat 40 28 chillings. When wheat is fold for five chillings. then manchet thall wer 24 thillings, and the cheat bread 3 2 thillings. When wheat is fold for foure thillings fix pence, manchet thall twey 32 thillings, and theat 42 thillings. When wheat is fold for foure thillings, manchet thall wey 36 thillings, and cheat 46. Millings. When wheat is fold for thee Chillings fix pence, then thall manchet twey 42 thillings, and cheat 54 thillings. When wheat is fold for the thillings, manchet thall wey 48 thillings, and cheat 44 thil- 50 lings. Then weat is fold for two thillings and fix pence, manchet thall wey 54 thillings, and cheat 72 Chillings. When wheat is fold for two Chillings. manchet thall wer firtie hillings, and cheat foure pound. When theat is fold for 18 pence the quarter, manchet thall wey 77 thillings, theat foure pound and eight thillings. This optimance was proclaimed throughout the realme, as most necessarie and profitable for the common-wealth.

This yeare manie wonderfull things have ned 60 for belides the lose winter, which palled any other that had beene heard of in manie yeares before, both for continuance in length and criticame colonelle of frosts, there followed grifelie tempests, with thurs der lightning and Comes of rame, and baile of the bignetie of hensegs, where with much fruit & great flore of come was perified, belide other great burts done boon houses and young cattell. Also spirits (as it was thought in like nelle of birds and foules were fæne in the aire flieng with fire in their beaks, where with they fet diverte houses on fire : which aid import great troubles per long to infue, and follows ed in deed, as thall appeare hereafter.

With this entrance of the yeare of our load 1 203,

King Iohn. king John held his Christmaste at Caen, where not having (as some waters sap) inflicient regard to Matth. Par the necessarie affaires of his wars, he gave his mind to banketting, and palled the time in pleasure with the guene his wife, to the great greefe of his loids, to that they perceiving his retchleste demcanour (02 as some write, the doubtfull minds of the Pobilitie which ferued on that fide, and were readie dailie to revolt from his obedience) without their outiful hearts from him, and therefore getting licence, returned home into England.

In this meane time the French king, to bring his Anno Reg. purpole to full effect, entred into Pozmandie, waffer the countries, and wan me countries of Polydon.

Tal de Rucil, and Life Dandele. Le Tal de Rucil.

The find wis given over without any great inforcement of any minimum affault, by two noble men that had charge thereof, Pomantic the one named Kobert Fitz Walter, and the other-Saer de Duncie. Howbeit Liffe Dandele was valiantie for a certeine time defended by Koger de Lacie the conectable of Chester. But at length they within were to constrained by famine and long siege, that the faid Lacie and others perceining it to be more honourable for them to die by the sword, than to farue through want of food, brake out open their Roger bele entimies, and flue a great fort of the Frenchmen, but cre conclude yet in the end they were taken pationers, and to these of Chelin fortrelles came into the French hings hands.

The pope hearing of these bariances betweet the The pope in euerie quarter thee pence, belides the bean, and 30 two kings, fent the abbat of Cafiner into France, fendethis accompanied with the abbat of Ervissons, to move Nuncijing them to a peace. These time abbats toke such france. paines in the matter, that the kings were almost brought to agreement. But the French king perceiving himselfe to be aforehond in his butinesse, flicked at one article, which was to repaire all such abbeies as he had defiroised within the dominions of king John: and king John to do the like by all those that he had walked within the French kings course tries. The popes Nuncij mould have ercommunis Gaguinus cated king Philip, bicause he would not thus agree. But king Philip appealing from them, purfued the warre, and belieged the towne of Kadpont. The fouls Polydon diers within the towne defended the first assault berie manfullie, and caused the Frenchmen to retire backe: but king Philip meaning to have the towne yer he departed, did so inclose it about, that within ten daies he wan it, and toke there tiventie men of armes, an hundred demilances, and twentie ar cubaliffers.

Affer this, when he had fortified this place, he went Caffell Go to castell Galiard, which he besteged; and though by hard the high valiancie of Hugh de Gourney the capteine there, the Frenchmen were manfullie beaten backe, and kept out for a moneth and more, yet at length by fireid flege and neare appoches hardis Manin Park made, the fortrelle was belinered into the French kings hands. And in the end the laid Hugh Gourney Hugh & renolted from his obedience, delinering also the car wolreth from fell of Pountfort unto the French king, which cas king Ichi fell with the honor thereto apperteining king John Folyder. had given to the same Hugh, not verie long before. All this while king John did lie at Rouen: but forfor much as he could not well remedie the matter as then, bicause he wanted such helpe as he dailee hoked fo; out of England, and durft not truft amp of that five, he palled it over with a front countenance for a while, and would face oftentimes to fuch as frod as bout him; What else doth my colen the french & >> now, than freale those things from me, which hereas ,, ter 3 thall indeuour my felfe to canfe him to refleze with interest. But inher he sain that his enimics & your would fill proceed, and that no aid came out of Engi meth became land, he came over himfelfe, and landed at Postel to England mouth

laing libilip doubting by bling the vidozie with to. much rigor, least he thouse bring the Pormans into a desperate boldnesse, and so cause them for safegard of their lives to bazaro all opon relitance, he stated for a time, and withorew his fouldiers backe againe into France, bauing not onelie furnished those plas ces in the meane time which he had wun, with Grong garifons of his fouldiers, but also appointed certeine perlangues to travell with the people, pet remaining 10 in the English subjection, to revolt and turne from hing John, to his obeifance and subjection.

Ling John being returned into England accused diverse of his Pobles for thewing themselves near ligent and flouthfull in aiding him, according to his commandement, alledging furthermoze, that being bestitute of their due and requisite service, he was confremed to lofe his time in Pozmandie, as not being able for want of their aid to relift his enimies. Wherefore for this and other matters laid to their 20 tharges, he did put them to græuous fines. Up meanes thereof, and by leavieng a subsidie of his people, he got togither an huge fumme of monie. This sublidie was granted him in a parlement holden at Drenford, and begun there boon the fecond of Januarie 1 204, wherein of everie knights fee was granted the fumme of two markes and an halfe. Petther were the bilhops, abbats, noz any other eco clesiasticall persons exempted, by meanes thereof he ran first into the hatred of the clergie, and confes 30 quentlie of manie other of his subjects: so that they failed him at his need, whereby he often fusteined no small damage, which he might have prevented and withstoo, if he had beene so qualified with discretion as to have feene what was convenient and what inconvenient for his rotall estate, But

-voluntas

Improba perniciem ingentemmortalibus affert, as it did to him, which may be gathered by a due ob. fernation of the consequence. This yeare the aire 40 toward the north and east parts seemed to be on a bright fire for the space of fir houres togither. It began about the first watch of the night, on the first of Appell.

Anno Reg. 6.

Matth.Paris.

A naticinent

A fublidie

Rafe Cog. Ambassadors

king John about the beginning of this firt yeare of his reigne, sent in ambassage to the French king the archbithop of Canturburie, the bithops of Pozwich and Elic, the earles Marthall and Leiceffer, to treat with him of peace: but he was so far off from comming neere to any reasonable motions, bicause 50 he saw the world frame as he withed, that still by des manding somewhat that might not be granted, he kept off, and brought in such hard conditions, that it was not possible to conclude anie agreement. And this he did of purpole, hoping within thoat time to conquer all that the king of England possessed as pet on that five the feas. He was the more untoward to compound, for that he was informed how Arthur the duke of Butaine was dispatched of his life, and therfore not doubting but to have manie to take 60 part with him in sæking revenge of his death, he made that his thefe quarell, swearing that he would not cease to purfue the warre against king John, till he had deprined him of his whole kingdome. So the ambailadous departed without all hope to come to any agreement. This yeare Cafter day fell fo high as it possiblic might, that is to fair, on faint Parks dan.

king Philip binderstanding that king John re, mained Mill in England, rather occupied in gathe ring of monie amongst his subjects, than in making other provision to bring them into the field (to the great offense of his faio people) thought now for his part to lose no time : but assembling a mightie are mie,he came with the fame into pozmandie, and Cowns wan byon his first comming, he wan the towns of Ka, by the french laile, and shortlie after was Pampstont delinered king. buto him by furrender. This done, he marched further into the countrie, and with his funden invalion h oppelled the people sucriembere, that they could have no time to make thift by flight to get into the townes. With this fwiftnesse of speed, he brought als fo fuch a feare into the hearts of most men, that he wan all the countrie of Pozmandie cuento Pount S. Dichaell. The inhabitants in everie place lubmits ted themselues as those of Baieulr, Constances, Lifeur, and other townes thereabouts.

Finallie, he came before Rouen, the principall ci Rouen belietie of all the countrie, and incamped to in fundate plas geo by the ces about the citie, that all the issues, entries and french bing. wates were closed up by his armie, being to divided into feuerall camps, that the distance was not great from one to another, making a terrible thew to them within. At length after he had provided all things ne ceffarie for his purpole, and taken good adulte of his capteins how he thould best imploie his force for the winning of this citie (in which exploit he knew the full perfection of all his palled conquests thefelie to confiff)he did manfullie affault it, and they within as manfullie defended themsclues, so that he got little by the allaults and approches which he made. Where byon he fell in hand to practife with the citizens to win them with med, curtefie, gentle spech, and great promiles. So that in fine, they within were to moved with such reasons as he vied to persuade them with all, that they made request for a truce to be had for certeine daies, within the terme thereof if no luccour came, they covenanted to yold without any further trouble.

This truce being obteined, amballadours were fent from them of Kouen into England, to lignifie buto king John the whole state of the citie, and of the truce, so that if aid came not within the time appointed, the citie must néeds be delivered into the es nimies hands. The king having no armie in readinesse to send oner, not other thist to make for the fuccour of the citie, permitted the ambassadours to depart without comfort of any ato, who here upon returning to Rouen, and reporting what they had hard, fæne, and found, brought the citie into great forrow. For whereas that citie had ever beine accustomed Chegreat fito glozie for the great localtie and faithfull fivelitie delitie of the which the same have ever the wed towards their liege citizens of looks and naturall winces - not the cifficulty property. loads and naturall painces; now the citizens perceiued manifestlie, that buleste they would cast awaie themselves, and lose all they had, they must of force yeld into the hands of their enimies . Wherefore to make their true allegiance more apparant to the world, they flated the furrender as long as they had Roue through any store of vittels within the citie to releve their faminers furfainting bodies withall : and so in the end being vant rendeed to the quished with hunger, they submitted themselves to French king. the French king. Their submission being once knowne, caused all those other townes which had not pielded, to deliver by their keics buto the French men, as Arques, Aernucill, and others,

Pozeover the townes in Poictou, Touraine, and Aniou, which king John had recovered latelie before, bid now againe (being in no small feare) yelo them Mauth Paris felues buto king Philip: so that of all the townes within those countries, there remained none under the English obeisance, saue onelie Rochell, Tours, Piorth, and a few other. Thus Pormandie which king Rollo had purchased and gotten 316 yeares before that present time, was then recovered by the French men, to the great reprochand dithonour of the Enge lift, in this yeare 1 204. About this time quiene Clie anothe mother of king John departed this life, con-

fumed

faince rather through loroto and anguilly of mind. than of ampother naturall infirmitie.

25p Raie Coghfhals report this froute forme to haus thenccd in the bairs of E. Henrie tije A filh line to a man.

In this first prace of bing Johns reigne, at Deford in Suffolke, as Fabian faith (although 3 thinke he be deceived in the time a fifth was taken by fifth ers in their nets as they were at fea, refembling in figure a wife or favour man, whome they preferrice bnto fir Barthelomein be Glamille knight, that had then the keeping of the callell of Dieford in Sub folks. He was naked, and in all his hims and meme 10 bers refembling the right proportion of a man, he hab harres also in the bluell parts of his booie albeit that the crowne of his head was bala his beard was long and rugged, and his breaft hairie. The knight cauled him to be kept certeine daies e nights from the sea, meat set afore him he grædilie denoured, t did cat fifth both rain and fod. Those that incre rain he prefer in his band till he had thruff out all the modfure, and to then bid cat them. He would not or could not offer any speach, although to true him they 2 bung him op by the beeles, and milerablic tormented him. He would get him to his couch at the fetting of the furne, and rife agains at the rifing of the fame.

One day they brought him to the hanen, and fulferred him to go trato the lea, but to be fare he should not escape from them, they let thee ranks of mightie firong nets before him, to to catch him agains at their pleasure (as they imagined) but he streight maies bining botome to the bottome of the mater, felfe to them agains that flod waiting for him, and downing dinerle times buder water and comming to agains he beheld them on the those that frod fill losing at him, who famed as it were to mocke them, for that he had deceived them, & got past their nets. At length after he had thus spected himselfe a great while in the water, and that there was no more hope of his returne, he came to them agains of his owne accord, fivining through the water, and rewhen he was negligentlie loked to, and now firmed not to be regarded, he fled fecretile to the fea, and was never after feene not beard of.

Thus much out of Rafe Coghfhall, the affirmeth that this chanced in the dates of Henrie the fecond, about the 22 of his reigne, as Iohn Stow in his fum: marie bath also noted. Which report of theirs in respea of the Arangnesse thereof might seems incredibic speciallie to such as be hard of beliefe, and refuse owne cies have fealed to their conferences, to that the reading of fuch wonders as thefe, is no more beneticiall to them, than to carrie a candle before a blind man, or to fing a fong to him that is flarke deafe. Deverthelette, of all bucouth and rare lights, speciallic of monstruous appearances we ought to be to farre from having little regard; that we thould rather in them and by them observe the event and falling out of some future thing, no lette miraculous in the iffine, than they be townberfull at the funden 60 fight. This was well noted of a philosopher, who to the purpole (among other matters by him touched) bath spoken no lesse public than creablie, fairing;

M.Pal. in ∫∶op.

John Stow.

Net fleri aut errore aut casu monstra putandum, Cum certas habeant causas, vi tristia monstrent, Vnde ils nomen, quare & portenta vocantin

The war was mightilie maintenard all this while between them of Poisson and Aquitaine, and manie tharpe incounters chanced betweet the parties, of which the one following the king of Englands licutes nant Robert de Curneham, valiantlie relified the other that held with the French king under the conduct of William de Roches, & Hugh le Beun earle of Harch, chiefe leavers of that faction. But Robert Curncham fogifher with Sancrie be Bauleon am Gerare de Atie, bare themselnes to marfullie that in all conflicts for the most part the videoic remaines on their fibes. The Galesignes also to be part with king John, and continued in dutiful obiebierce to brards him, for the which their locative he was readic to confider them with princelie giffs and beneficiall rewards, in finds bountifull wife, that he gave but o a Poble man of that countrie named Popene, the formme of 28 thousand marks, to some & singe this tie thousand men to aid-him at his comming duct into those parties. The archbithop of Burbeaur, that was brother onto the foreland Portue, became fucttie for performance of the conchants, and remained in England a long time bicante the fame concnants more not in all points accomplished.

The billyop of London was ferft amballabour from king John buto the emperour boon certains earnest businesse. The duke of Lonaine, and the earle of Bullongne were made friends by the French hings biff, and promiled to invade England with an armie, and to make warre against king John for the withholding of fuch larios and revenues as they claimed to be one botto them, in right of their librars. hing Pailip also invertoketo foliow them within a moneth after they thould be entred into England, e thus did the French king leake to make him from with freetos, which valle fell from king John on ech hand. Coolier bilbop of Windelter that was four got past all the nets, and comming up, the med him 30 to the lock Kichard de Lucie departed this life. This peare the king was on Could malle day at Coukel burie, where he flated not past one day.

The 14 day of Januarie if began to frége, and fo Ancurem continued till the 22 of Sparch, with fuch extremitic, from that the hulbandmen could not make their tilth, by reason wherof in the summer softening come began to grow to an excelline price, so that wheat was sold by the quarter at 12 thillings of monie then currant. This prace about the feast of Pentecost, the Anne Rest mained with them two moneths after. But finallie, 40 king (by the abutte of his councell afterabled at Polydo. Posthampton) prepared a name of thips, multered March Pain fouldiers, and theined great foliens that he would king 30m renew the war, and fashe to be revenued of his enter street in m mie the French king . The Pobles of the realme can find indenoused themselves also to match the offigence of the king in this preparation, upon an earnest defire to renenge the inturies latelie done to the common-brain

Powithen all things were readic, and the thips to give faith and credit to any thing but what their 50 fraught with vittels, armour, and all other provide ons necessarie, the king came to Posthesier, there to take the sea, purposing becelve to passe ouer into France, in hope of luch faire promiles as his freends of Posmandie and Poisson had made, in fembring of tentimes to him, to procure him with speed to come to their fuccours. But as the bing was readic to en- Rafe Copter on thipbord, Hubert archbilhop of Canturburie, Che archiand Cifiliam Barthall earle of Penbaoke came floop of Co-to bim, and with manie great reasons went about to the earled personale him to flair his supports. perfuade him to flair his fournie. Who although he Bentzekt was berre loath to follow their countell, pet they put perfusion footh to manie doubts and dangers that might fold bing to how low of his departing the realine at that prefent to at home. the hazarding of the inhole flate, that in the end fore to his greefe) he was our reome by their importunate perfualions, and to dilimitting the most part of his armic, appointed his brother the earle of Salifburie with a certeine number of knights & men of armes to passe over into Rochell, whither the lose Settrey the kings base some was gone before him, with manic other knights and men of armes.

The loods and other that were dismissed, toke it berie cuil, confidering the great perparation that had beine made for that cournie. But speciallie the mariners

De goeth to the leathe 15

fome authors

mariners were lose offended, curling the archbilbon and the fair earle of Penbroke, that were knowne to be authors of so naughtie counsell as they toke this to be. It was thought there was never so manie thips gotten togither at one time before, as were at that present, to have attended the king : for (as well ters have recorded) there were to the number of fourteene thouland mariners that had brought their thips thither for that purpole. But as the breaking by of this votage graued others, fo it pinched the king so nere the heart, that he being come backe The king res from the fea fide to Winchester, repented fo much that he had not gone forward with his fournie, that gorin value, the next date he returned agains to the coast, and at 10the so side. Doctelmouth, entring the fea with his thips, on the fifteenth of Julie he failed to the Ile of Wight, and walted up and downe for the space of two daies togither, till by aduite of his freends he was vertuaded not to adventure to palle over, fith his armie was dismissed and gone home, and so he returned backe to 20 the those againe, arriving at Scotland, neere buto Marham, the third date after his setting forth: pet fuch as were behind, and hafted after him, thought berelie he had beene gone over, and fuch a brute was fped over all, till at length in time the truth was

> At his comming backe (as some write) he charged certeine of the Pobilitie with treason, bicause they did not follow him: whereupon thostlie after he pur nished them berie græuouslie, and peraduenture not 30 without some ground of full cause. For likelie it is, that some greater matter forced him to breake by his tournie, than ameareth in our writers, although Rafe Cogheshall setteth downe some reasons alled ged by the archbishop Hubert, and earle Marshall, to persuade him not to depart the realme. But peradventure other causes there were also of farre moze importance that constreined him so greatlie against his mind & full resolution, both at the first, and noto my contecture, it may be that boon his last determination to go over, he gave new commandement to his loads to follow him, and they peraduenture vied not such diligence in accomplishing his pleasure therein, as he loked they thould have done: 02 it may be, when the armie was once discharged, the fouldters made such half homewards, ediman towards his countrie, that it was no easie matter to bying them backe againe in any convenient time . But howfoener it was, as it had beene byon a change of 50 purpose, he came backe againe (as befoze yé hauc beard.)

The beath of Canturburie.

The thirteenth of Julie Hubert archbithop of Cans turburic departed this life at Tenham, the king not being gratlie sozie for his death (as some have written)bicause he gathered some suspicion that he bare tomuch good will towards the French king. In berieded (as some write) the archbishop repented himfelfe of nothing to much, as for that he had commens ded king John to the Poblemen and Piercs of the 60 realme, fith he promed an other manner of man than he loked to have found him. This archbilhop had go verned the le of Canturburie eleven yeares, eight moneths, and fix daies.

After his decease, the monks of Canturburie Anarchishop without knowledge of the king, those one Resymold the subprior of their house to be their archbishop, who fecretlie went to Kome to obteine his confirmation of the pope. Which thing been much mischese and great discord betwirt pope Innocent & king John, fince the pope would not confirme the election, bis cause he saw some piece of secret practice, till he might bitoerstand and be certified by report of suffice ent witnesse (for that he wanted the letters commendatorie from the king) that the fame election was lawfull and orderlie made'. Of this delaie also the monks being spédilie advertised, and to the end they might now recover the kings favour, whome they had berie fore offended in not making him pat nie to the first election, they made request onto him, that by his nomination it might be lawfull for them to chose an other archbishop.

The king gladlie herebnto affented, requiring Matth. Well. them to grant their voices buto John Grap the bis John Grap thop of Pozivich, being both his chapleine and prefix wich prefixens bent of his councell. The monks to gratific the king of the councell. obeied his request, and so electing the same bithop of Matth. Pariss Porwich, they fent their procurators to Kome in the peare following, to lignifie the fame buto the pope, and to require him to confirme this their lecond clection, as buminofull of their first, and clearelie adule hilating the same to all intents and purposes. As monglif other that were fent to Rome about this bus Belias de fineste, Helias de Brantfield was one, a monke of Brantfield great estimation, and had in good credit with the king, who ministred but o them that were thus sent, sufficient allowance wherewith to beare their chare ges and expenses.

Also at the same time the bishops that were suf- The bishops fragans to the lee of Canturburie, fent their procus quarell with rators to Kome, about a quarrell which they had at the monks of gainst the monks there, for that the same monks about the election of an archivistand about the election of an archivistand presumed to proceed to the election of an archbishop tion of an without their consent, having (as they alledged) a archbithcy. right by ancient decrees and cultomes to be allociat with them in the fato elections. But how this matfer was answered, yæ thall sæ hereafter. In the meane time, these and other like things procured the pope to reied both the elections, and of his owne are thoritie to nominate the third person, whereby the trouble begun was not a little augmented (as you thall heare hæreafter.) Pow whilest these procuratops were thus occupied in Rome, Philip the French at this second time to returne. Therelie to otter 40 king minding to conquer all that which king John pet held within France, allembled an armie, and comming before the towns of Loches, wan it, and toke Gerard de Atte pissoner, shat had so long time tic & Robert and with such daliancie defended it. The same time de Eurnham also was Kobert de Aurnham taken prisoner, who take puloners with great manhood had all this while repressed and challifed the rebellious Poictouins.

Pozeover, when the French king had wone Lo. ches, he went to Chinon, within the which Hubert de Hubert de Burgh was capteine, a right valiant man of warre Burgh a valia as was any there to be found, tho having prepared ant capteins. all things necellarie for defense, manfullie repelled the Frenchmen, who inforced themselves to win the towne with continuall affaults and alarms, not ful fering them within to rest neither day not night, tho yet for certeine daies togither, by the valiant incouragement of their captoine defended the tolvine, with great flaughter of the Frenchmen. Peuerthea leffe, at length beginning to despairs by reason of their incellant travell, certeine of them that were somewhat faintharted stale over the walles in the night, and ran to the Frenchmen, and for falegard of their lines instructed them of the whole cleate of the towne. The French understanding that they Polydor. within were in no fmall feare of themselues, with Chinon taken fuch violence came unto the walles, and renewed the by force of allault opon all floes, that freight waies they entred allault. by force. A great number of Englishmen were taken, and among Cother their capteine the forefaid Hubert de Burgh. This chanced on the bigill of S.John Baptiff.

. After this, king Philip toke diverse other fownes and castels in that countrie, of the which some he rased, and some he fortified and stored with garifons of his fouldiers. A is done he palled ouer the river of Loir, and wan a castell situat nerre buro a promontorie or head of land called Crapelitum, which was wont to be a great fuccour faid to English men arriving on that coalt. The occasion the he made wars thus opon the Britains, was (as some write for that Quie buke of Bittaine, who had married the duches Constance, and succeeded in the duthie after hir son Arthur, without regard to revenge the death of the same Arthur, was joined in league 1 with king John tegither with Sauere de Maule on, and Almerike be Lufignian, loods of great honour, power, and Coutnelle of Comach.

1206 Anno Reg. 8.

Polydor.

Montal: ban wone.

Les annales de France. Polydor.

King John wan the citie of Angiers by affault.

The dake of other of king Johns friebs ouesthrowne.

Matt.Well. Matth.Paris. Chis truce ded boon All hallowes bay.

hing John also in this meane wile, mouco with the increase of these his new allociats, and also with delice to revenge to manie inturies and lottes fulfet ned at the French kings hands, preparing an armie of men, and a namie of thips, twhe the fea with them and lunded at Rochell the ninth of Julie, where he people; and no small number of gentlemenand o thers that inhabited thereabout repaired but him, offering to ald him to the ottermost of their powers. He therefore with affured hope of god spice departed from thence, and wan the towne of Montalban, with a great part of all the countrie thereabouts. Finallic he entred into Aniou, and comming to the citie of Angiers, appointed certeine bands of his fot men, all hislight horffemen to compate the towne all the men of armes, did go to affault the gates. Which enterprise with fire and sword he so manfullie executed, that the gates being in a moment broken open, the citie was entered and delivered to the fouldiers for a preie. So that of the citizens some were taken, some killed, and the wals of the citie beaten flat to the ground. This done, he went abroad into the countrie, and put all things that were in his wap to the like destruction. Then came the people of the countries next adjoining, of their owne accord to 40 to affenteth the poet, fairing, submit themselves onto him, promising to air him with men and vittels most plentifullie. King John being verie toyfull of this god fuccelle, marched towards Poidon, lending out his trops of horsemen to waste the countrie on everis fioc. In the means while the French king being here. of advertised, came forth with his armie readic furnished to relift king John, and by the way encountred with the duke of Britaine, Sauerie de Maule. on, and Almerike de Lulignian, which had beene a 50 broad to spoile the French kings countries. But being now overlet with the kings pullance, they were taken, and all their companie fripped out of their armour, to their great sonfulion. This milhap fore weakened the power and courage of king John. But the French king proud of the victorie, kept on his fournic, and approching niere buto the place where king John was as then lodged, did cause his tents to be pitched downe for the first night, and on the morrowafter, as one desirous of battell, brought his 60 armie into the fields, ranged in good order and reas die to fight.

The like old king John, to that with front fromacha and eger minds, they floo there in the field readie to trie the matter with dint of fword byon found of the warning-blaff given by the frumpets. Howbeit, bp the mediation of certeine grave personages, as well of the spiritualtie as of the tempozalite, which were in good estimation with both the princes, a communication was appointed, which twhe fuch effect, that a truce was taken betwirt them for the terme of two peares, the pilloners on either live being released by waie of erchange: and thus the wars cealed for that time. Then king Hillip returned inth France, and king John into England, there he landed at Portel mouth the 12 of December.

About this time came one John Ferentino (6 John fin called peraduenture A ferendo, a common name to tinothe Fire all the whelps of that litter, for they never came into legar. the land as legats but they would be fure to carrie out with them manie large legacies and vourped ou ties a legat from the pope into England and palling through the same as it were in visitation, gathered a great fumme of monie; and finallie at Reading on the mozow after faint Lukes day, celebrated a councell, which being ended, he caused his coffers to be packed up and fent awaie, halling himfelfe affer to depart the realme, and so taking the sea bad England farewell. About the same season also pope 3112 The pope co nocent confirmed the authoritie and power which the arch fentence prior and monks of Canturburie had to elect and with from choice the archbishop of that see, giving sentence as against the gainst the suffragans which claimed a right to be was received with great toy and gladnette of the 20 toined with the faid prior and monks in the election, Sa Man le as by a letter directed to the same suffragans from fispagate in the laid pope it may more plainclie appeare.

After this it chanced that king John remembring copie. himselse of the destruction of the citie of Angiers, which (bicause he was descended from thence) he had before time greatlie loned, began now to repent him, in that he had destroice it, and therefore with all speed he twice order to have it agains repaired, which king John was done in most beautifull wife, to his great cost repairething about, whilest he, with the residue of the formen, $ 30 and expenses, which he might have saued had not his giers. folith rathnelle driven him to attempt that, whereof boon fober aduicement afterwards he was alhamed. But that will not an optinarte man do in the full tide of his furie; much more princes a great men, those anger is resembled to the rozing of a lion, e uen bpon light occasions oftentimes, to satisfie their unbitdeled and braineficke affections, which carrie them with a swift and full treame into such follies and dotages as are undecent for their degrees. Here magni regésque ducésque Delirant sape, & vitiorum peste laborant, Stultity[que sun sape vrbes exitio dant, Imperiumque sibi miscrorum cade lucrantur.

Moreover, in this yeare about Canclematte, the h. caused the 13 part of eucrie mans gods, as well of the spiritualtie, as of the tempozaltie, to be leuied 3 tax leuith and gathered to his ble, all men murmuring at luch dwings, but none being to hardie as to gainefair the hings pleasure, ercept onelie Geffrep the archbishop Chearthbe of Porke, who therebyon departing fecretile out of thep of yout the realine, accurred all those that law any hands to fealth out the collection of that naturent, buffin his articles. the collection of that paiment, within his archbilhops rike of Poske. Also byon the 17 of Januarie then Amighie last past, about the middest of the night, there rose tempes. luch a tempest of wind byon a sudden, that manie houses were overtheowne therewith, and there and other cattell destroied and buried in the driffs of fnow, which as then late verie depe everie where vp on the ground.

The order of frier Minors began about this time, and increased maruellouslic within a sport season. And the emperour Ditho came oner into England in The angent this yeare, where he was most rotallic received by Otho comes king John, who taking councell with the faid emper rour to renew the warre against the French king fine that (bicause he was promised great aid at his hands for fand marks the furnithing of the fame) gave but him at his desorting forth of the realine, great fummes of monie and Match. Wellin hand towards the paiment of fuch foulbiers as he hard thould lenie for this huffred to Chould levie for this butinette.

In this means while, the Grife depended Gill in Anno Rego the court of Rome betwirt the two elected archie Hops of Canturburie, Reginald and John. Buf

the printed

Mal Palis

into England.

Atephant Langton cho= fen archbilhop of Canturbu= of Canturbu=

the pope.

after the pope was fullie informed of the manner of their cleatons, he disanulted them both, and procured by his papall authoritie the monks of Canturborie (of thome manie were then come to Rome about of Canturous that matter) to chofe one Stethan Langton the carappointment. binall of S. Chaplogon an Englishman borne, and of god estimation and learning in the court of Kome to be their archbithop. The months at the first inere loth to confent thereto, alledging that they might and of their covent.

But the pope as it were taking the word out of ce their mouths, said buta them : Do vee not consider that we have full authoritie and power in the church of Canturburie : neither is the affent of kings or ec princes to be laked for byon elections celebrated in compresence of the apollolike lee. Wherefore I command you by vertue of your obedience, and byon " paine of curlling, that you being luch and so mante ce here as are fufficient for the election, to chole him to 20 your architchop, thome I thall appoint to you for father and palto; of your foules. The monks doubting to affect the pope, consented all of them to gratifie him, ercept Welfas de Bantfield, who refused. And to the forelaid Stethan Langton being elected of them, was confirmed of the pope, who lignified by letters the whole frate therof to king John, comment ding the faid Stephan as archbilhop buto him.

The king love offended in his mind that the bilhop of Rozwich was thus put belide that dignitie, to the 3 which he had advanced him, caused forthwith all the gods of the monks of Canturburie to be conficate to his ble, and after banifyed them the relme, as well I meane those at home, as those that were at Rome, and herewith wrote his letters but othe pope, giving him to understand for answer, that he would never consent that Stephan which had beene brought bp salwaies conversant with his entinies the French men, thould now entoy the rule of the bilhopathe and bioces of Canturburie. Pozeouer, he declared in the 40 same letters, that he maruelled not a little what the pope ment, in that he did not consider how necessarie the freenothip of the king of England was to the fee of Kome, fith there came more gains to the Komane court of Rome thurthout of that kingdome, than out of any other realme on this live the mountaines. He added here to, that for the liberties of his crowne he would fland to the death, if the matter fo required. And as for the election of the bilhop of Portoich unto the lie of Canturburie, fifth it was profitable to him and to 50 " his realme, he meant not to release if.

Poseover, he declared that if he might not be heard and have his mind, he would fuerlie reftraine the pallages out of this realme, that none thould go " to Kome, least his land should be so emptied of moce nie and treasure, that he should want sufficient abs litie to beat backe and expell his enimies that might attempt invalion against the same. Lastilie of all he concluded, fith the archbithops, bithops, abbats, and other ecclesiasticall persons, as well of his realine of 60 England, as of other his lands and dominions, were fufficientlie furnished with knowlege, that he would ec not go for anie néed that thould drive him thereto, to ce leke infice of inogement at the prefeript of any for ren persons.

The popes the bing.

The pope greatlic marnelling hereat, wrote as gaine to the king', requiring him to ablieine from the spoiling of those men that were printleged by the " canons of the church, that he would place the monks " againe in their house and possessions, and receive the " achbishop canonicallie elected and confirmed, the ec which for his learning and knowledge, as well in the liberall sciences, as in holic scripture, was thought worthie to be admitted to a prebend in Paris; and what elimation he himicife had of him it appeared, in that he had written to him thrice fince he was made cardinall, declaring that although he was 33 minded to call him to his feruice, pet he was glad ,, that he was promoted to an higher rome; adding further, how there was good cause that he idento have confideration of him, bicaule he was borne within > his land, of father and mother that were his fatthfull subjects, and for that he had a prebend in the church of not lawfullie do it without confent of their king, 10 Pocke, which was greater and of more dignitie than >> that he had in Paris. Whereby not onelie by reason 32 of fieth and blond, but also by having ecclesiasticall dignitie and office, it could not be but that he loved him and his realme with fincere affection.

. Panie other reasons the pope alleaged in his letters to king John, to have perfushed him to the allowing of the election of Stephan Langton . But king John was to far from giving care to the popes admonitions, that he with more crueltie handled all fuch, not onelie of the spiritualtie, but also of the teme posaltie, which by any manner means had aided the forenamed Stephan. The pope being hereof advertiled, thought god not to luffer luch contempt of his authoritie, as he interpreted it; namelie, in a matter that fouched the iniurious handling of men within orders of the church. Which example might procure hinderance, not to one privat person alone, but to the whole estate of the spiritualtie, which he would not fuffer in any wife to be suppessed. Therefore he des cred with speed to devile remedie against that large increating milchefe. And though there was no fuer dier waie to redrelle the fame, but by ercommunicad tion, yet he would not vie it at the first towards so mightie a prince, but gaue him libertie and time to confider his offense and trespalle to committed.

Thefe things being brought to this issue, the further narration of them thall traie for a time, till 3 have told you of a little trouble which about this time happened in London. For boon the feauenth of June, the bailiffes of London, Roger Winchester and Comund Hardell were discharged, and Serle Balliffes ct the mercer and Hugh of faint Albons chofen in their London diff the mercer and High or laint knows those that the towners. The two former balliffes were discharged charged and committed to prison by the kings commander ward. ment, upon displeature taken against them, bicause they had relitted his purveier of theat, and would not luffer him to conveie anie of that kind of graine out of the citie, till the citie was Aozed. The thirtie & fine rulers of the citie, having fulfilled the kings commandement to them directed for the discharging of those bailiffes, and impalloning them, dio after take aduice togither, and appointed a certeine nume ber of themselves with other to rive but the king, as then being at Langley, to obteine pardon for the faid bailiffes, and to comming thither, they made furt excuse in the matter, thewing further, that at the same leason there was such scarlitie of wheat in the ,citie,that the common people were at point to have made an infurrection about the fame . By which means, and through frænothip which they had in the court, the king was to fatisfied, that he released them from pailon, and pardoned their offenles,

Also opon the first of Daober , Henrie the sonnie The birth of of king John, begotten of his wife quene Jlabell, king Benrie was borne at Mincheller, tipo after succeeded his father in the kingdome. But now agains to our purpole. The pope perceining that king John continued The pope fill in his former mino (which he called obstinacie) fent over his bulles into England, directed to Willife bilhops. am bilhop of London, to Gulface bilhop of Clie, and Matt. Paris. to Pauger bilhop of Wlozeeffer, commanding them Nic. Treuef. that bulesteking John would suffer peaceablie the archbillyop of Canturburie to occupie his fee, and his monks their abbie, they floud put both him and

N.Triuct. 1208

Spritcth toth

Manh Paris

is luch chap-icines fran= gers as bc= longed to the pope.

These bilhops with other to them allociate made instant request and fuit to the king for the observing of the popes communication to elchew the cen. 10 fures of the chard, but that was in vaine: for the king in a great rage fware, that if either they or shy other prefumed to put his land bnder interdiction, he would incontinentlie therebpon send all the prelats within the realme out of the fame buto the pope, and feize all their gods buto his owne ble. And further Romans.that he added, that what Romans locuer he found within the precinct of any his dominions, he would put out their eies, and flit their noles, and fo fend them packs ing to Rome, that by such marks they might be 20 knowne from all other nations of the world . And herewith he commanded the bilhops to packe out of his light, if they loucd their awire health and prefers uation.

The mondaic in the paffion Specke faith Marth West. der the popes

Herebpon the fair bishops departed, and accouding to the popes committion to them lent, byon the cuen of the Annuntiation of our Ladie , Denounced both the king and the realme of England accurfed, and furthermore caused the dozes of churches to realme put bn was accustomed to be bled, first at London, and as ter in all other places where they came. Then percels uing that the Ik. ment not to Crope for all this which they had done, but rather fought to be revenged by on them, they fled the realme, and got them over buto Stephan the archbilhop of Canturburie, to wit, William bilhop of London, Cultace bilhop of Clie, Walger bithop of Wlozcester, Zoceline bishop of Bath, and Giles bithop of Hereford.

Anno Reg. 10. The dealing of the king atter the inter= diction was pronounced.

The king taking this matter in verie great dif 40 pleasure, seized upon all their tempozalties, and connerted the fame to his ble, and perfecuted fuch other of the prelacte as he knew to favour their dwings, banishing them the realme, and feiging their gods also into his hands. Howbeit the most part of the prelats wifelie provided for theinfelies in this point, fo that they would not depart out of their houses, ercept they were compelled by force, which when the kings officers perceived, they luffered them to remaine fill in their abbies, and other habitations, bicause they so had no commission to be any violence in expelling them. But their gods they did confiscat to the kings ble, allowing them onelic meat and drinke, and that verie barelie in respect of their former allowance. ¶ It was a miscrable time now for preefts and

In heavie time foz churchmen,

Matth.Paris.

churchmen, which were spoiled on enerie hand, without finding remedic against those that offered them wrong. It is reported that in the borders of Wales. the officers of a thiriffe brought before the king a fellow which had robbed and flaine a preft, defiring to 60 binderstand his pleasure what should be done with that offender : buto whome the king made this and fiver. De hath flaine mine enimie, and therefore fet bim at libertie.

The king also doubting least the pope should procoofurther, and absolue all his subjects of their aller glance which they owight to him, and that his loads would hamilie revolt and forfake him in this his trouble, take holfages of them whom he most suspec-Logo william ted . And as the mellengers, which were lent abroad for that purpose, came buto the losd William be Brenfe, requiring to have his fonnes for the faid pur. pole, his wife (like a quicke and halfie dame) taking the wood out of hir hulbands mouth, made this round bis land buter the fentence of interdiction, benouncing him and his land plainelie accurded . And fur ther he wrote expresse letters but all the suffragans of the thurth of Canturburic, that they thould by bertue of their obedience, which they owight to the poliolike fie, receive and obeie the archbilhop stewan for their father and metropolitane.

antwer, that the two ult rise william his former buto King Johnscho atreadle pail antile his dione in thuc Arminithoine he ought rather honourablie to hanc ? loued and pielertied. Elele weids bring fignified un to the ting yest him in luth an heat against hir bul band (though he rebute bhit diarpete for the dime) that the fair low was glad together with his lotte and Althren to flie but of the realme into Frelandfo, fafe. gard of their lines .

cost men times. Thisteas before this time London bridge was Londobut made of timber, and was ruled, guided & repaired by repaired a frateritie de colledge of publis, this pare by great ato of the citizens of London and others palling that waie, the fame bridge wilk began to be drane of fione. And hi the fame pears Bullarie Dueries in Southwarke was begunto be repaired. The came yeare allo, the citizens & London made fuch fuit onto the king, that he granted onto them by his letters patents, licence to choseto themselv an amaioz, and two thiritles eneris peace. After whith grant but to them confirmed, they didle for their rained Henrie Fits Alwin, who was sworne and charged at that prefent maior of that citte, boom the day of frintispis chaell the archangell, in the law tenth peare of king John his reigne. On the same bay and yeare, were Peter Duke & Thomas Pete Iwozne for Chiriffes. Thus the name of balliffes from thencebeth was clearelie extinguished. A tatt

But here ve have to bnoortimo, that this then, The king and be closed by, and all other places where divine fervice 30 rie Fitz Alwin had beine mato; of London long before this time, even from the first years of king kto tharo(as John Stow bath gaffered out of ancient in fruments and records botto this prefent tenthyenre loun Son of king John, and now boon grant made to the citisens, that it should be lawfull for them to chose everie yeare a maio: , and two thiriffes, for the better go. uernment of their citie, the fard Pencie fit; Alwin was newlie by them elected, and likewise after. wards from yeare to yeare, till he departed this life, which chanced in the years 1213, and fifteenth of king Johns reigne, so that he continued maisz of the fame citie of London , by the terme of twentie and foure peares. I Pow therefore bicaule it appeareth here how the governoes of the citie of London had their names altered for their greater honour, and the state of gouernment thereby partile changed, or rather confir med; I have thought god (though verie breefelie) to touch formethat the lignification of this wood spaire, The fignificant before I proceed any further with the rest of this his carionofthis force . The ancient inhabitants of Franconia, 02 word Man Frankenland, from whome the Frenchmen are del Berofus, conded, and their neighbors the old Sarons, of thom the Englishmen have their oxiginall, being people of Germanie, and descended as Berosus saith) of the the old Debines , have reteined manie Hebine words, either from the beginning, or else borowed them abroad in other regions which they conquered, palling by force of armes through a great part of the world. For no doubt by convertation with those peo. ple whom they luboued, they brought home into their owne countrie and tong manie bosowed words, fo that their language hath no small froze of them fet thed out of fundrie ffrange tongs.

Pow among other old woods remaining in thete tong, this wood Mar was one, which in Debrue fignie fieth Dominue, (that is to faie, lood) but pronounced now somewhat corruptlie Maire. So as it is to be supposed, hereof it came to passe that the head officer and lieutenant to the prince, as well in London as in other cities and townes of the realme, are called by that name of maloz, though in the cities of London and Porke, for an augmentation of honour by an arcient cultonic (through ignorance what the title of maire doth lignifie) they have an addition, and are intituled by the name of lood maire, where Maire fimplic pronounced of it felfe, fignificth no leffe than loed, without any fuch addition. Thus much for the name of Paire. And now to proceed.

De Breule.

1209 Matth. Paris.

The elche-

thing John holding his Challmalle this yeare at Brittow, let forth a commandement, whereby he refreined the taking of wild foule. About the same time, Denrie duke of Suaben came into England from the emperour Dtho, and receiving no small 10 portion of monie of the king, departed backe into his owne countrie againe. In the vigill of the Cpithanie also, the kings second some was borne, and quer removed. named Kichard after his bucles name. And the court of the eschequer was removed from West minffer onto Posthampton. Pozeouer in the same peare, Malter Bray was made lood chancellour. tho in all things Audied to fatisfie the kings will and purpole, for the which he incurred great indignation expings of the king.

At was furtie a rufull thing to confider the effate of this realme at that present, when as the king netther trusted his pieres, neither the nobilitie fauow red the king; no, there were verie few that trusted one another, but ech one hid & hourded by his wealth, loking bailie when another thould come and enter byon the spoile. The communaltie also grew into fas cions, some favouring, & some curling the king, as they bare affection. The cleargie was likewife at oil fention, to that nothing prevailed but malice and spite, which brought forth and spred abroad the fruits of disobedience to all good lawes and orders, areatlie to the disquicting of the whole state, So that herein we have a perfect view of the perpleted fate of princes, theflie when they are overswated with forren & prophane power, and not able to affure themselves of their subjects allegiance and localtie. Whereto this clause alludeth,

M.Pal.in (No Leo.

-cruciat comes improbus ipsos Aßiduimetus atque timor, suspectáque ysdem Omnia sunt : hinc insidias hinc dira venena Concipiunt, soli nec possunt ire nec audent, Nec sine fas illu prægustatore comesse.

Anno Reg. 11. Polydor.

I new ofh of allegiance

Micrander &.

King John notwithstanding that the realme was thus wholie interdicted and bered, so that no precis could be found to faie feruice in churches or chapels, made no great account thereof as touching any offense towards God of the pope: but rather mistrufling the hollow hearts of his people, he take a new 5 oth of them for their faithfull allegiance, and immediatlie therebyon affembled an armie to go against Alexander king of Scots, buto whome (as he had heard) diverse of the nobilitie of this realine were fled, which Alexander was the second of that name that had ruled the Scots, and latelie before was entred into the rule as lawfull successor to the crowne of Scotland, by the death of his father It. William.

In this meane while also Stephan archbishop of Canturburie lamenting (as some haue reported) the 60 fate of his natiue countrie, and pet not minding to give over his hold, obtained of pope Innocent, that upon certeine dais it might be lawfull for an amointed number of prefix within the realme of England, to celebrate divine service, that is to say, for those of conventual churches once in the weeke. But the manks of the white order were forbidden to vie that privilege, bicause in the beginning of the interdiction they had at the appointment of their principall abbat prefumed to celebrate the facraments without the popes consent or knowledge.

Inlike maner on the other tide, king John has ting his armie in a readineffe, hafted forth towards the borders of Scotland, and comming to the castell of Pocham, prepared to inuade the Scots. But king Alexander wanting power to give him battell, fought to come onto some freenolie agreement with him, and so by counsell of his loads, calling off his ar- Alexander Is. mour, he came to the king, and for a great lumme of of Scots com gold(02 1 1 thousand marks of silver as some write) pounoeth for with much adwhe purchased peace, delinering two hing John, of his daughters in hostage for more assurance of his dealing. Wherebpon king John, after his returne from Pozham, which was about the 24 of Polydor. June, thewed himfelfe not a little displeased with those of the nobilitie, which had refused to attend by on him in that fournie, having received freit commandement from him to attend byon him at that time. Certes the cause why they refused to follow him, was evident, as they faid, in that they knew him to frand accurled by the pope. About the fame time also, when come began to war ripe, to reuenge himselfe of them that had refused to go with him in of the cleargie, and other that favoured not the pro 20 that fournie, he caused the pales of all the parks & for rests which he had within his realme to be throwne Matth. Paris. downe, the diches to be made plaine, that the dere breaking out and ranging abroad in the corne fields, might destroie feat by the same before it could be repened, for which act (if it were so in deed) manic a bitter curfle proceeded from the mouths of the pore hufbandmen towards the kings perfon, and not bnipoz thilie. Poseover in this feafon the Welthmen which thing had not beene liene afore time) came unto Woodfoke, and there did homage buto the king, al though the same was chargeable, aswell to the rich as the poze to to come out of their countrie. About the same time also, it thanced that a preest Matth. Paris. Aue a woman at Drfozd, and when the kings offi. A murther at cers could not find him that had committed the mur. Drfozd. ther, they apprehended their other priests not guiltie of the fact, and freightway hanged them by without fudgement. With which crueltie others of the Unio Theé thous uerlifie being put in feare, departed thence in great fand as faith 40 numbers, and came not thither agains of a long time affer, some of them repairing to Cambridge, and Oxford forfasome to Reading to applie their studies in those plasken of the ces, leaving Drford boid. The fame yeare one Hugh scholers. archdeacon of Welles, and keeper of the kings great Bugh archdea feale, was nominated biffop of Lincolne; and here acon of wels withall he craned licence to go over into France of Lincolne, buto the archbilhop of Rouen, that he might be cons Polydor. fecrated of him. Where with the king was contented Matth. Paris. and gladlie gave him leave, who no somer got over into Pormandie, but he streight toke the high wate to Rome, and there received his confecration of Stephan archbilhop of Canturburie. Row when the king understoothis matter, and saw the dulnesse of the bithop, he was in a wonderfull chafe toward him, and ther upon made post-fale of all his good, and received the profit of the revenues belonging to the le of Lincolne for his owne vie. There lived in those dates a divine named Aler ander Cementarius, furnamed Theologus, who by his preaching incented the king greatlie buto all crueltie (as the monks and friers faie) against his Subjects, affirming that the generall scourge where with the people were affliced, chanced not through the princes fault, but for the wickennesse of his peop ple, for the king was but the rod of the Lords wrath, and to this end a prince was ordefned, that he might rule the people with a rod of fron, and breake them as an earthen bellell, to chaine the mighty in fetters, the noble men in icon manacles. He did fæ (as it thould fæme) the enill disposed humoes of the people concerning their dutifull obedience which they ought to have borne to their naturall prince king John, and therefore as a doctrine most necessarie in that dangerous time, he taught the people how they were

Cementarius

Matth. Paris. The white mouiss.

Polydor. Matth Paris.

by Gods lawes bound in dutie to obeie their lawfull prince, and not through any wicked perfuation of bu he heads and lewed discoursers, to be carried away to forget their locall allegiance, and so to fall into the Damnable finke of rebellion.

He went about also to proue with likelie arguments, that it amerteined not to the pope, to have todo concerning the temporall possessions of any kings or other potentats touching the rule and goted to Peter (the special and cheefe of the apostles of the Lord) but onlie touching the church, and matters apperteining therebuto. By fuch doctrine of him fet forth, he wan in such wife the kings favour, that he obteined manie great preferments at the kings hands, and was abbat of faint Austines in Cantur burie: but at length, when his manners were notifi. co to the pope, he toke such order for him, that he was despossed of all his goods and benefices, so that afterbread from doze to doze, as some write. This did he procure to himselfe by telling the trueth against that beatt, whose homes were pricking at everie christian prince, that he might fet himfelfe in a feat of fupze malie about all principalities: fo that we may faie,

In audaces non est audacia tuta.

1210 Matth.Paris.

Furthermoze, about the same time the king taxed the Jewes, and grauoullie tommented and empilo, ned them, bicaule divers of them would not willing, Rewes taxed, other, there was one of them at Uzissow, which would not concent to give anie fine for his deline. rance: wherefore by the kings commandement he was put unto this penance, that cuerie date, till he would agree to give to the king those ten thousand marks that he was leized at, he fhould have one of his teeth plucked out of his head. By the space of leas nen dates togither he flod fedfaft, losing everie of those daies a toth, but on the eight day, when he thuld come to have the eight toth and the last (for he had but 40 eight in all) drawne out, he paid the monie to faue that one, who with more wisedome and lette paine might have done to before, and have faved his feaven teeth, which he lost with such tozments, for those homes lie tothdrawers bled no great cunning in plucking them fouth (as may be confedured.)

21 Tew hath

Dzawne out.

his teeth

Anno Reg. 12. Matth. Paris. King John into Ircland. Matth, Paris.

Walter de Lacie.

Wzeule & hir

Wilhilest king John was thus occupied, neives came to him, that the Irith revels made foule worke and fore annoted the English subjects. He therefore assembling a mightie armie, imbarked at Pen 50 broke in Walcs, and fo halting towards Freland, arrived there the twentie fine of Paie, and brought the people in such feare immediatlie opon his arris uall, that all those that inhabited opon the sea coalfs in the champaine countries, came in, and peloco themselucs, receiving an oth to be true and faithfull unto him. There were twentic of the cheefest rulers within Ireland, which came to the king at his comming to Dublin, and there did to him homage and fealtic as apperteined. The king at the same time 60 ordeined allo, that the English lawes should be vied in that land, and appointed thiriffes and other officers to have the order of the countrie, to rule the same according to the English ordinances. After this, he marched forward into the land, and toke diverte for treffes and firong holds of his entimies, which fled before him, for feare to be apprehended, as Walter de Lacie and manie other. At length, comming into the countrie of Deth, he belieged a castell, wherein the wife of William de Becule, and hir sonne named also William were inclosed, but they found means The Ladie de to cleape before the castell was wone, though after ward they were taken in the Ile of Man, and fent by the king into England, where they were so araits lie kept within the castell of Windloz, that (as the fame went)they were familhed to death.

Time read in an old hilloxie of Flanders, witten by one whole name is not knowne, but printed at Lions by Guillaume Rouille, in the yeare 1562, that the faid ladie, wife to the lood William de Brew fe , presented bpon a time buto the quæne of Eng. land, a gift of foure hundred kine, and one bull, of Aprelma colour all white, the eares ercepted, which were red. nernment of their lubiects, fith no power was gran, 10 Although this tale may feme incredible, yet if we thall confider that the faid Breufe was a lord mare cher, and had goodlie pollelions in Wales, and on the marthes, in which countries the most part of the peoples substance consisteth in cattell, it may carrie with it the moze likelihod of truth. And sucrlie the fame author writeth of the fournie made this years into Ireland, to fentiblie, and namelie touching the manners of the Irith, that he fæmeth to have had god informations, faving that he milleth in the wards he was driven in great miserie to beg his 20 names of men and places, which is a fault in maher common to all forceine writers. Couching the beath of the faid lavie, he faith, that within eleven daics after the was committed to prison here in England, the was found dead, litting betwirt hir fonnes legs, who likewise being dead, sate directie by against a wall of the chamber, wherein they were kept with hard pitance (as writers do report.) Will, hehimlely liam the father escaped, and got away into France. escapeth,

Thus the more part of the Irith people being lie pay the fummes that they were tared at. Amongs 30 brought boder, he appointed John Gray the bishop Thebiting of Poswith, to be his deputie there, removing out of Roswithin that office Hugh Lacte, which bare great rule in that Juliand, quarter befoze . The bithop then being appointed beputie and there inflice of Ireland, reformed the coine Irifimond there, cauting the fame to be made of like weight and reformed. finenelle to the English coine, so that the Irish mos nie was currant, as well in England, as in Ireland, being of the like weight, forme, and finenelle to the Englift. Pozeoner, those that inhabited the wood countries and the mounteine places, though they would not as then submit themselves, he would not at that time further pursue, bicause winter was at hand, which in that countrie approcheth timelie in the peare. Having thus subdued the more part of all Freland, and order things there at his pleasure, he toke The king m the fea againe with much triumth , and lanced in currect into England about the thirtish day of August. From hence he made half to London, and at his comming thither, twhe counsell how to recover the great charges and expenses that he had beene at in this tournie, and by the adulle of William Brewer, An allembi Robert de Turnham, Reignold de Coanbill, and Mis of the plate thard de Warith, he caused all the chefe prelats of at Lonion. England to affemble before him at S. Brives in London . So that thither came all the abbats, abbel les, templers, holpitallers, héepers of farmes and pol fellions of the order of Clugnie, and other fuch for reners as had lands within this realme belonging to their houses. All which were constrained to paie fuch a greenous tar, that the whole amounted to the Atariand funnic of an hundred thouland pounds. The monks of the Ciffeaur order, other wife called white monks, were confireined to paie 40 thouland pounds of filuer at this time, all their privileges to the contrarie notwithstanding. Pozeover, the abbats of that order might not get licence to go to their generall chapter that yere, which pærelie was bled to be holden, least their complaint should moue all the world against the king, for his two bard and severe handling of them.

In the lummer following, about the 18 day of It. Anno Reg. 17. lie, king John with a mightie armie went into king John Wilales, and patting forth into the inner parts of the goeth into countrie, he came into Snowbon, beating bowne anarmie.

Matth Paris. Zihinke.

Dandulph T Durant the popes legais. Polydor.

Fabian,

Manh.Paris.

in the same

king John betwirt him

ferdinan=

Flanders.

all that came in his way, to that he subdued all the rulers and princes, without contradiction. And to be the better affured for their subjection in time following, he take pledges of them, to the number of 28. white thurch & fo returned to Album Monasterium on the date of the Assumption of our ladie, from thence he first set forth into the Welsh confines. In the same peare also, the pope fent two legats into England, the one named Dandulph a lawier, and the other Du rant a templer, who comming buto king John, er= 10 horted him with manie terrible words to leave his flubbozne disobedience to the church, and to reforme his mildwings. The king for his part quietlie heard them, and bringing them to Porthampton, being not farre distant from the place where he met them bpon his returne forth of Tales had much conference with them; but at length, when they perceived that they could not have their purpole, neither for restitution of the gods belonging to practs which he had feised boon, neither of those that apporteined to 20 certeine other persons, which the king had gotten ab fo into his hands, by meanes of the controverte bes twirt him and the pope the legats departed, leaving him accurled, and the land interdicted, as they found it at their comming.

Touching the maner of this interdiction there have bene ofucife opinions, some have said, that the land was interdiced throughlie, and the churches and houses of religion closed by, that no where was anie bivine fervice bled : but it was not fo freit, for there 30 John, being thus deprived, forfaken, and condemwere diverse places occupied with divine service all that time, by certeine priviledges purchased either then or before. Children were also christened, and men houseled and annoised through all the land, except fuch as were in the bill of ercommunication by name cryzeffed. But to our purpole.

King John, after that the legats were returned to ward Rome againe, punished diverse of those perfons which had refused to go with him into Wales, in like maner as he had done those that refused to 40 go with him into Scotland: he toke now of echof them for enerie knights fix two marks of filuer, as Reginald crie before is recited. About the same time also, Regiof Bullongue. nald earle of Bullongne being accurred in like maner as king John was, for certeine oppellions done to pozemen, and namelie to certeine proffs, fled ouer into England, bicause the French king had banithed him out of France.

The like len= The chefest cause of the French kings displear gurwas made fure towards this earle, may fixme to proceed of the 50 warre upon him, as a person so, his wick concesses. amitie and league which was concluded bottmixt hing John, and the faid earle, in the first years of the faid kings reigne, whereby they bound themselucs either to other, not to make anie peace, oz to take a nie truce with the king of France, without either others consent first thefeto had, and that if after anie agreement taken betwirt them and the king of France, he should chance to make warre against ele ther of them, then thould the other aid and affill him, termost of his power.

This league was accorded to remaine for ener betwirt them and their heires, with merties fluorne on either part: and for the king of England, these, whole names infue, William Parthall carle of Pendioke, Kanulse earle of Chester, Robert earle of Leicester, Baldwine earle of Albemuse, Withiam earle of Arundell, Kalke earle of Augi, Robert de Wellet, Hugh de Courney, William de Bacu, Gel frevor Cella, Kozer conestable of Grester, Kalfe Für Water, William de Albania, Kopert de Kos, Richard de Pontachet, Roger de Apper, Saer de Duincie, Milliam de Pentchenis, Peter de Pea tellis, William de Pose alia de Stagno, Adam de Post, Robert de Turncham, William Pallet, Eu-Kace de Welcie, Peter de Brus, William do Porce fennie, Hubert de Burgh, William de Panfey, and Peter Sauenie. For the earle, these were suerties, Anselme de Laen, Guy Lieschans, Ralfe the Laid earles brother Ac. But now to returne.

After that the earle of Bullongne was expelled out of France (as before ye have heard) he came of uer to king John, and was of him foifullie received. having the hundred pounds of revenues in land to him alligned within England, for the which he did homage and fealtie buto him. Sportlie after this allo, died William de Bzcule the cleer, which fee from the face of king John out of Ireland into France, and departing this life at Corbell, was bu ried at Paris in the abbeic of S. Ilido.

In the meane time pope Innocent, after thore Polydor, turne of his legats out of England, perceiving that king John would not be ordered by him, determined with the confent of his cardinals and other councel lours, and also at the instant suit of the English bis thops and other prelats being there with him, to deprinching John of his kinglie Cate, and fo fill abfolued all his subjects and bastals of their oths of allegiance made buto the fame hing, and after depris ned him by folemne protestation of his kinglie administration and dignitic, and lastlic significo that his deprivation unto the French king and other chip Mian princes, admonishing them to pursue hing ned as a common enimie to God and his church. He ordefined furthermore, that tholocust imploied goos or other aid to vanquish and overcome that dischedi ent prince, should remaine in affured peace of the thurth, as well as those which went to visit the sepulthre of our Lord, not onlie in their gods and persons, but also in suffrages for faving of their soules.

But yet that it might appeare to all men, that no thing could be more toifull buto his holinette, than to have king John to repent his trespaces committed, and to alke forgivenesse for the same, he amointed Pandulph, which latelie before was returned to Pasmiph fent Rome, with a great number of English eriles, to go und france into France, togither with Stephan the archbishop to prantle with the frech of Canturburie, and the other English bishops, gir king, forking uing him in commandement, that repairing with John his des the Frenchking, he thould communicate with him arriation. all that which he had appointed to be done against hing John, and to erhost the French king to make communicated. Dozeover this Pontoulth was commanded by the pope, if he law coule, to go over into England, and to deliver buto king John fuch letters as the pope had written for his better instruction, and to feeke by all means politible to draw hint from his naughtie opinion.

In the meane time, when it was bruted through the realise of England, that the pope had released the people sabbitued them of their oth of fivelitie to against them such warre should be made, to the bt- 60 the bing, and that he was deputied of his genericment by the papes sentence, by little and little a great number both of fouldiers, citizens, burgelles, capteins and conessables of castels, leaving their charges, thishops with a great multitude of walks renolting from him, and anothing his companie and perfence, fecretite stale awaie, and got ower info Dotwithstanding that diverse in respect of the Manh Waster popes curfle, and other confiderations them induing, Matt. Paus. bitterlie refuled in this manner to obeie hing John, pet there were manie others that did take his part, and mainteins his quarell verice carnefflie, as his the notic men bother Milliam earle of Salisburie, Albertatoe that connecting Alere erle of Drfood, Geffrey Hitz Peter lord chafe John.

Osti (Lib.)

diewears).

27.12 ali diarrent er, dinsk ,る漢

The water of invice of England, also three buthops, Durham, Windelfer, and Norwich, Richard de Sparify lood chancellour, Dugh Acuill chiefe forreffer, William de Carothing losd warden of the posts, Kobert Cleb pount and his brother Duan, Brian de Lille, Geffrey ve Lucie, Dugh Ballioll, and his brother Barnard, William be Cantlow and his fon William Kulke de Cantlow, Reginald de Cornehull Chiriffe of Bent, Robert Braidroke and his lon Parrie, Philip Chatelaine of Notingham, Peter de Paulley, Robert de Saugy, Gerard de Athie and his nemue Ingelrand, William Biewer, Peter Fitz Pubert. Tho mas Ballet and Foulks de Briant a Porman, with many other, two long here to rehearle, who as fautoes and councellors buto him, fought to defend him in all causes, notwithstanding the censures of the church focruellic pronounced against him; knowing that they were bound in conscience to sticke to him, now speciallie in this generall apostatie of his pieres and 20 people. For they were opinioned, that it was Ouid.lib.2.de Pont.

Bernewell.

The welch=

rebellton.

Matth. Paris.

Anno Reg. 14

King John

hangeth the wellh pled=

grs.

Turpe referre pedem, nec passu stare tenaci, Turpe liberantem deseruisse ratem.

The fame yeare king John held his Chiffmate at Caindlegand in the Lent following, on midlent fundaic being at London, he honoured the lood Alers ander sonne and heire to the king of Scots, with the high order of knighthwo. And (as I find it mentio ned by some writers) theras he binderstood how there were diverse in Scotland, that contemning their na 30 turall load and king by reason of his great age, king John went thither with an armie to represe the rebels, and being come thither, he fent his men of war into the inner parts of the country, who scowzing the coaffs, toke Suffred Pacivilliam capteine of them that moved fedition, whom king John caused to be hanged on a paire of gallowes. Wis Gutheed was descended of the line of the ancient Scotiff kings, and being allifed with the Briffinen and Scots that (named Donald) had done before him, somettine fecrettie under hand, and sometime agains by way of open rebellion.

Shootlic after, the Wellhmen began to furre allo, thornshing out of their owne confines, fell opon their nert neighbours within the English marthes, wasted the countrie, and overtheew ofverse castels flat to the ground. Thereof the king having knowcomming to Potingham, he hanged op the Welth hostages which the last years he had received, to the number of eight and twentie poing friplings. And by reason he was now set in a maruellous chase, he roughlie proceded against all those whom he knew not to favor his cale: some he discharged of their offices, other he deprined of their capteineships and o ther romes, revoked certeine privileges rimmunities granted to monks, preffs, & men of religion.

Furthermore, having his armie readie to palle 60 on into Wales, he received letters the same time, both from the king of Scots, and from his daughter the wife of Leoline prince of Males, conteining in effect the adnortisement of one matter, which was to let him know, that if he proceeded on his fournie, be thould either through treason be staine of his owne logos, og else be delivered to be destroied of his enimies. The king judging no lelle, but that the tenor of the letters conteined a truth, brake op his ar mic and returned to London. From whence he leut mellengers buto all fuch loads as he fuspected, commanding them to fend unto him hostages for moze affurance of their fidelities. The loads durft not difobete his commandement, but fent their fons, their neduces, and other their kinimen, accordinglic as he required, and to his rancour was appealed for a time. But Enface de Aelcie, Robert fit; Walter, and Stephan Kidell, being accused and suspected of the la. for the faid treason, were glad to flee the realme, Thescie departing into Scotland, and the other time into France.

The same yeare, the church of S. Parie Duertes, Manh. Pain and all the buildings upon London bytoge on both Matt. West. de Louccotes, John de Ballingborne, Willip Warth, 10 fides the fame, were confumed with fire, which was Maint Man tudged to be a lignification of some milhap to fol, Durus lain. The king held his Christmasse this neare at burnt. low. The king held his Christmasse this yeare at Westminster, with no great traine of knights as bout him. About the same time Beffrey arabithop The beng of Docke departed this life, affer he had remained in of Geffing erileabout a feauen yeares. But now to returne as archiffing gaine to the practiles of the popes legats.

Pe thall understand, the French king being requested by Pandulph the popes legat, to take the warre in hand against king John, was easilie perfuaded thereto of an inward hatred that he vare one to our king, and therebyon with all diligence made king pipe his prouition of men, thips, munition and vittell, in red to the purpole to palle ouer into England: and now was England. his navie readie rigged at the mouth of Saine, and he in greatest forwardnesse, to take his fournie. When Pandulph byon god considerations thought first to go efflones, or at the least wife to send into England, before the French armie thould land there, and to allate once againe, if he might induce the king to thew himselfe reformable unto the popes pleasure: king John having knowledge of the French kings purpole and optinance, affembled his people, and lodged with them alongst by the coast to wards France, that he might redul his enimics, and keepe them off from landing.

Here writers beclare, that he had got togither fuch Anno Regil an armie of men out of all the parts of his realme, Matth. Parth. both of lozds, knights, gentlemen, peomen, other Che grute facoured not the race of the kings that prefentlie 40 of the commons, that not biffold anding all the proof michigh from of vittels that might possible be recourered, there bled together. could not be found lufficient store to susteine the huge multitude of them that were gathered along E the evall, namelie at Douer, Feuersham, Giple with, and other places. Where won the capteins dis tharged and fent home a great number of the commons, refeining onelie the men of armes, peomen, and freeholders, with the croffebowes and archers. There came likewise to the kings atd at the same Chebilion ledge, allembled a mightie armie out of hand, and 50 time, the bilhop of Portulch out of Ireland, bring, Morwich ing withhim five hundred men of armes, 4 a great fort of other horsteinen.

To conclude, there was efficience of able men ab fembled togither in the armie on Barhamdowne, that of cholen men of armes, and valiant peomen, and other armed men, the number of firtie thousand: so that if they had beene all of one mind, and well bent towards the service of their king and defense of their countrie, there had not beene a prince in chissendome, but that they might have beine able to have defended the realme of England against him. he had also provided a navie of thips farre tronger than the French kings, readie to fight with them by ica, if the case had so required.

But as he lay thus readie, niere to the coast, to Polydon withfrand and beat backe his entinies, there arrived Two knight at Doner two Templers, who comming before the of the truth king, declared buto him that they were fent from Pandulph the popes legat, tho for his profit coneted to talke with him: for he had (as they aftermed) meanes to propone, whereby he might be reconciled, both to God and his church, although he were abtudged in the court of Rome, to have sufcited all the right which he had to his kingdome.

Marth.Paris, King John breaketh bp bis armie.

The legat Dandulph cometh ouer.

The king boverstanding the meaning of the med fengers, fent them backe againe to bangouenthe te gat , who incontinentlie came ouer to Douer, of those arrivall then the king was advertised; he went thither, and received him with all one honour and reverence. Pow after they had talked togither a little, and courteoullie faluted each other (as the course of humanitie required) the legat (as it is reported) bitered thele words following,

The fawcie speech of proud Pandulph the popes lewdlegat, to king John, in the pre-fumptuous popes behalfer

Do not thinke that you are ignotant, how pope Innocent, to do that which to his outle appertemeth, bath both absolued your subjects of that oth which they made but o you at the beginning, and also taken from routhe governance of England, according to your deferts, and finallie given commandement butó certeine princes of Chris stendome, to expell you out of this kingdom and to place an other in your come; so worthilie to punish you for your disobedience and contempt of religion: and that Philipking of France, with the first being readie to accomplish the popes comman 30 dement, hath an armie in a readinelle, and with his name newlie decked, rigged and furnithed in all points, lieth at the mouth of the river of Saine, loking for a-prosperous wind, that as some as it commethas bout, he may faile therewith hither into England, trusting (as he faith) with the helpe of your owne people (which neither name you, noz will take you for their king) 40 to spoile you of your kingdome with small adw, and to conquer it at his pleasure, for he hath (as he Aicketh not to protest openlie to the world) a charter made by all the chafelt lozds of England touching their fealtie and obedience assured to him. Ther: foze, lith God foz your full defert is wroth with you, and that you are as euill spoken of by all men, as they that come against you be well reported. I would adulle you, that whilest there is a place for grace and fauour, rather to obeie the popes tult des mands, to whose word other christian printes are readie to give eare, than by itri uing in baine to call awaie your felfe and all others that take your part, of are bent to defend your quarell oxcause.

These woods being thus spoken by the legat, king 60 John as then otterlie despairing in his matters, when he faw himselse construined to obeie, was in a great perpleritie of mind, and as one full of thought, loked about him with a frowning countenance, wais eng with himfelfe what counfell were belt for him to follow. At length, opposited with the burthen of the imminent danger and ruine, against his will, and berie loth so to have done, he promised byon his oth to stand to the popes order and decree . Taberefore Chortlie affer (in like manner as pope Innocent had commanded) he foke the crowne from his owne head, and delinered the fame to panduly the legat, neither he, not his heires at anie time thereafter to receive the fame, but at the popes hands . Thou this, he promifes to receive Stephan the archbilhop of Canturburie into his favour, with all other the bilhops and banished men, making buto them lufticient antends for all infurtes to them done, and fo to pardon them, that they foodlo not run into any dans ger, for that they had rebelled against him.

Then Pandulph keeping the crowne with him for the space of five dales in token of polletion thereof, Pandulph at length (as the popes vicar) gave it him agains. By meanes of this at (faith Polydor) the faint bent at to the king a thoch that king achieve the control of the king. broad, that king John willing to continue the memorie hereof, made himfelfe valtall to pope Innocent, with condition, that this fuccellors thould like wife from thencefouth acknowledge to have their eight to the fame king come from the pope. But those kings that succeeded king John, have not observed any fuch lawes of reconciliation, neither do the autentike chronicles of the realme make mention of any fuch furrender, so that such articles as were appointed to king John to observe, perteined but o him that had offended, and not to his successors. Thus faith Polydor.

Howbeit, Ranulph Higden in his boke intituled Ran. Higd. Polychronicon, faith indeed, that hing John did not onelie bind himselfe, but his heires and successors, being kings of England, to be feudaries unto pope Englandbe Annocent and his fuccessors popes of Koine, that is same tributes to fav. that they should half their populations of them. to fay, that they thould hold their pominions of them in fæ, pælding and patong percite to the fæ of Rome the funme of feauen hundged marks for England, Matth. Weft. and thice hundred marks for Iteland. Furthermore, by report of the most autentike and approued wit. Matth. Paris. ters, king John, to avoid all dangers, which (as he doubted) might infue, bespairing as it were in himfelfe, or rather most speciallie for lacke of locall ou tie in his subjects, consented to all the persuasions of Pandulph, and so (not without his great hartgreefe) he was contented to take his oil, togither with firtuine earles and barons, tho lateng their hands byon the holic cuangelists, sware with him bpon perill of their foules, that he should stand to the judgement of the church of Rome, and that if he repented him, and would refuse to stand to promise, they thould then compell him to make fatisfaction. Heer opon, they being all togither at Douer, the king and Pandulph, with the earls and barons, and agreat mulfitude of other people, agreed and concluded by on a finall peace in forme as here infueth.

The charter of king Iohn his submission, as it was conveied to the pope atRome.

Ohannes Dei gratia rex Anglia, omnibus Christi sidelibus hanc chartam in-pecturis, salutem in Domino. Vniuer-sitati vestra per hanc chartam sigillo nostromunitam, volumus esse notum, quod cum

Deum & matrem nostram sanctam ecclesiam of-fenderimus in multis, & proinde divina misericor. diaplurimum indigeamus, nec quid digne offerre possimus pro satisfactione Deo & ecclesie debita facienda, nisi nosmetipsos humiliemus & regna nostra, volentes nosipsos humiliare, pro illo qui se pronobishumiliauit víáz admortem, gratia fancti spiritus inspirante, non vi interdicti nec timore coacti, sed nostrabona spontaneág, volun'ate, ac communi consilio baronum nostrorum conferimus, & libere concedimus Deo & Sanctis apostolis eius Petro & Paulo, & Sancta Romana ecclesia matri nostra, ac domino papa Innocentio, ciúlg, catholicus successoribus, totum regnum Anglia, és totum k.John des intereth his frowns buto Panouiph.

Diff.

regnum

regnum Hybernia, cum omni iure & pertinentijs fuis, pro remissione omnium peccatorum nostrorum, & totius generis nostri, tampro viuis quàm pro defunctis, & amodò illa ab eo Getelefia Romanatanquam secundarius recipientes & tenentes, in prasentia prudentis viri Pandulphi domini papa subdiaconi & familiaris.

Exinde pradicto domino papa Innocentio, eiusque catholicis successoribus, & ecclesia Romana, secundum subscriptam formam fecimus & iu- 10 rauimus, & homagium ligium in prasentia Pandulphis, si coram domino papa esse poterimus, eidem faciemus: successores nostros & haredes de vxore nostra in perpetuum obligantes, ut simili mode summo pontifici, qui pro tempore fuerit, & ecclesia Romana, sine contradictione debeant fidelitatem prastare, & homagium recognoscere.

Ad indicium autem huius nostra perpetua obligationis & concessionis, volumus & stabilimus, 20 vt de proprijs & specialibus redditibus nostris prædictorum regnorum, pro omni scruitio & consuetudine, que pro ipsis facere debemus, saluis per omnia denarys beati Petri, ecclesia Romana mille marcas Esterlingorum percipiat annuatim : in festo scilicet sancti Michaelis quingentas marcas,& in Pascha quingentas : septingentas scilicet proregno Anglia, & trecentas proregno Hybernia, saluis nobis & haredibus nostris, iustitys, li- 30 bertatibus, & regalibus nostris. Que omnia, sicut suprascripta sunt, rata esse volentes at que firma, obligamus nos & successores nostros contranon venire, é si nos vel aliquis successorum nostrorum contrahac attentare prasumpserit, quicung ille suerit, nistrit è commonitus resipuerit, cadat à iure regni.

Et hac charta obligationis & concessionis nostra, semper sirma permaneat. Teste meipso, apud domummilitum templi iuxta Doueram, coram H. Dublinensi archiepiscopo, Iohanne Norwicensi e- 40 piscopo, Galfrido filio Petri, W. comite Sarisburia, Willielmo comite Penbroc, R. comite Bononia, W. comiteWarenna, S.comiteWinton, W.comite Arundel, W.comite de Ferarys, W.Briwere, Petro filio Hereberti, Warino filio Geroldi, 15 die May, anno regni nostri decimo quarto.

This ded and instrument being written and ingroffed, the king belittered it unto Pandulph, to take 50 with him to Rome, there to make delinerie thereof to pope Innocent, and herewith did homage to the same pope, in forme as followeth.

The words of fealtie made by king Iohn to the pope.

Go Iohannes Deigratia rex Anglia, Go dominus Hybernia, ab hac hora & 60 in antea, fidelis ero Deo & beato Petro & ecclefia Romana, & domino meo papa domino Innocentio, eiu g successoribus catholice intrantibus. Nonero infa-Eto, in dicto, consensu vel consilio, vt vitam perdant vel membra, vel mala captione capiantur. Eorum damnum si sciuero, impediam, & remanere faciam si potero: alioquin eis quam citius potero intimabo, veltali persona dicam, quam eis credam pro certo dicturam. Consilium quod mihi crediderint, per se velper nuncios suos seu literas suas, secretum, tenebo, & ad eorum damnum nulli pandunmesciente Patrimonium beati Petri, Especialiterregnum Auglia, & regnum Hybernia ad-iutor ero ud tenendum & defendendum, contra omnes homines pro posse meo. Sic me adiuuet Deus, & has fanota enangelia, Amen Acta autem funt hac, vi pradictum est, in vivilia dominica Ascenfionis ad Doueram, Armo 1213 and Anglith Abus.

Ohn by the grace of God king of England, and lord of Ireland, from this houre forward, shall be faithfull to God and to faint Peter, and to the church of Rome, and to mylord pope Innocentius, and to his successours lawfully entring. Ishall not be in word nor deed, in consent or counsell, that they should lose life or member, or be apprehended in euill manner. Their loffe if I may know it, I shall impeach and staie, so far as I shalbe able, or else so shortlie as I can I shall figuifie vnto them, or declare to fuch person the which I shall beleeue will declare the same vnto them. The counfell which they shal commit to me by themselues, their messengers, or letters, I shall keepe secret, and not vtter to any man to their hurt to my knowledge. The patrimonie of S. Peter, and speciallie the kingdomes of England and Ireland, I shall indevour my felfe to defend against all men to my power. So helpe me God, and these holie euangelists, Amen. These things were done on the ceue of the Ascension of our Lord, in the yeare 1213.

Pandulph having thus reconciled king John, thought not god to release the ercommunication, till the king had performed all things thich he had promised, and so with all speed having received eight Manh. Pain thouland markes terling in part of rectitution to be made to the archbilhop, and the other banished men, he lattes backe into France, came to Roan, tibere he declared to king Philip the effect of his travell, and what he had done in England. But king Philip having in this meane while confumed a great malle of monie, to the lumme of little thouland pounds, as fortic thes he himselfe alledged, about the furniture of his four of liner land marks of third he littlement to third he littlement to have the content of the littlement of liner land. nie, which he intended to have made into England, Marth Well bpon hope to have had no small and within the realme, by reason of such bishops and other banished men as he had in France with him, was much offen ded for the reconciliation of king John, and determined not lo to breake off his enterprise, least it might be imputed to him for a great reproch to have beene in difficult at luch charges and great expendes in vaine. There for the recommendation fore calling his councell togither, be veclared buto ciliation di them what he purposed to do.

All his Pobles in like manner held with him, and allowed his purpole to be verie god and requi lite, except the earle of Flanders named Ferdinando, tho (in hope to recouer againe those townes, which the French king held from him in Arthois, as Aire, and S. Omers) had tolned fecretite in league with king John, and with the earle of Bullongne, The french and therefore milliked the conclusion of their adiability manufacture. uise. Howbeit king thillip not being yet fullie certie to proced in fied hereof, caused his name to draw alongest the bies sound coast towards flanders, whither he himselse hasted against the to go allo by land, that comming thither, he might England from thence faile ouer into England, and take land at a place to him affigned.

Pow it came to passe, that at his comming to Graucling, he had perfect knowledge, that the earle of flanders was joined in league with his enimies, wherfore he determined first to hibdine the carle, least

Lohn with

The French gianberg.

Matth Paris.

philest he should be out of his realine, some great trouble of fedition might rife within his clone domi nions. Therfore, leaning the enterprise which he ment to have made against England, he turned his power against the carle of Flanders, and first commanded his namic to faile buto the port of Dam, whileft he himselse kæping on his tournie still by land, toke the towns of Callile, and likewife Popes . From thence he went to Bruges, and belieged the towne. but he could not win it at the first, and therefore lead 10 uing a power of men to mainteine the fiege before go by the using a power of men to mainteine the slege before french king. it, he himselse went to Baunt, and thereto also laid his stege.

In the meane time, the earle of Flanders percet ning that he was not able to relift to putifant an entimiens the French king, sent over in half buto the king of England for aid. Wherebpon king John understanding that his adversarie king Philiphad turned all his force against the earle of Flanders, and that thereby he was delivered out of the feare of 20 the Frenchmens comming into England; that fame nauie (which as before is recited) he had put in a readinesse, conteining the number of five hundred faile, he fent ffreight into Flanders with a ffrong armie, both of hordemen and formen, onder the aut ding of William duke of Holland, William Longspe earle of Salisburie base brother to king John. and Keignold earle of Bullongne.

These capteins being now palled forth with their flets into the maine fea, espied anon manie thips lieng without the hauen of Dam (for the number of thips of the French let was fo great, that the hauen could not receive them all, so that manie of them laie at anchoz without the hauen mouth, and all alongif the coast.) Wherefore they sent forth certeine shale lops, to elpie whether they were frænds or entimics, and what their number and order was. It chanced, that the fame time, the men of warre which were and pointed to keepe the French fleet, were gone forth, togither with a great number of the mariners, to 40 spoile and fetch boties abroad in the countrie.

The English espials therefore, making semblance as though they had beene some fishermen of those parts, came verieneere the French thips lieng at and or, and perceining them to be bufurnished of people necessarie to defend them.came backe to their companie, and declared what they had fiene, certific eng their capteins that the victorie was in their hands, if they would make speed. The capteins glad of these newes, commanded their men to make them 50 readie to give battell, and cauling their mariners to make faile directlie towards the Frenchflet, at their first apport they wanne those tall thips that late at anchor abroad before the hauen, without any great relitance, the mariners onelie making requell to have their lives faued. The other smaller velfels which (after the tide was gone) remained byon the lands (spoiling them first of their tackle and other things that would ferue to ble)they confumed with fier, the mariners escaping by flight.

Thus the Englishmen having dispatched this bufinesse with good successe, did set byon those thips that late in harbough within the haven. But here was hard hold for a while, bicause the narrownesse of the place would not give any great advantage to the greater number. And those Frenchmen that were gone abroad into the countrie, perceiving that the enimics were come, by the running awaie of the mariners, returned with all speed to their thips to aid their fellowes, and to made valiant relitance for a time, till the Englishmen getting on land, and ranging themselves on either side of the haven, beat the Frenchmen to on the fives, and the thips grapling togither on front, that they fought as it had bin in a pitcht field, till that finallie the Frenchmen were not able to luffeine the force of the Englishmen, but were confireined (after long fight and great flaughe ter) to peeld themselves prisoners.

The English capteins glad of this victorie gotten, contrarie to expediation, first gaue thanks to God for the same, and then manning these hundred of those French thips, which they had taken fraught with come, wine, offe, fleth, and other vittels, and also with armour, they fent them awate into England, and afterivards they let fire byon the relidue that late on ground, which were aboue an hundred, bicause they were drawne up to farre upon the fands, that they could not easilie get them out, without their further inconvenience. After this, comming on land with their power, they marched footh into the countrie in god order of battell, to the end that if they hould encounter with king Philip by the way comming to the refere of his thips, they might be readie to give them battell, which thing was not veniled, without god and great confideration.

For king Philip being certified of the banger wherein his thips floo by the ludden comming of his enimies, and there with all being in good hope to come to their faccours in time, and per the Englishmen had wrote their full feat, he railed his flege, and made half toward the coast: but as he was comming for ward towards his naute, he was advertised that the enimies had wone all his whole fleet, and were now marching footh to met him, and to give him battell. Also it was told him, how Ferdinando the earle of Flanders, being certified of the victorie atchined by his frænds, followed at his backe. Wherefore, leaft he Chould Cæme ouer rachlie to commit himselse into manifest perill, he stated a little from Bruges, and there incamped for that day, as if he ment to abide the comming of his enimies.

The nert morrow he railed and returned towards. The French France, the verie same wate that he came, no man k. returneth pursuing him. For the Englishmen contented with into France. that victoric which they had gotten, thought it not ne cellarie to follow him with their further pazaro. In the meane time, king John receiving newes of this prosperous victorie thus gotten by his people, did monderfullie rejoile for the same, concessing an hope, that all his bulinelle would now come forward and growe to god successe.

This is the truth of this hillorie, as some authors Macc. Paris. haue fet it fouth. But lames Meir in bis discourse of Polydor. Flanders declareth the matter formuhat otherwise, as thus: Upon the thursdate before the Pentecost (faith he) the English flet fetting voon the French naute, which late at anchor in the hauen of Dam, drowned certains of the French vestels, and take to the number of foure, which they conveied awate with them. Ferdinando the earle of Flanders having an armie of men readie by land, was lodged the same time not far off from the coast, and therefore hearing what had chanced, came the next day, and somed with 60 the Englishmen.

There were yet remaining also diverse other of the French thips (belives those which the English men had funke and taken) which were drawne up further into the land ward . The earle of Flanders therefore, and the English capteins judged, that it hould much hinder the French kings attempts, if they might win those thips also with the towne of Dam, wherin the king had laid by a great part of his proudion for the furniture of his warres. Herebyon the Englishmen were set on land, and soining with the earls power, they marched Arait towards Dam. This was boon Whitlun even, on the which day, as they were most busie in assaulting the towne and thips which late there in the haven, the French king

The English men affaile the French

Cir English tien wanne the French

Th: French hing burneth hisihips.

In bermit na: med Deter of Donifret, 02 walchelb as hanged.

being come alvaic from Gaunt, snovenlie set opon them, and though in the beginning he found tharpe relistance, pet in the end, the Englishmen and flemmangs overfet with the great multitude of the The English Frenchmen, were put to flight, and chalco to their The thips, with the loffe of two thousand men, belives mings ban those that were taken prisoners, amongst the with French force, were found to be 22 knights.

The earle of Flanders with the earles of Bullen and Saliburie, doubting to lofe their thips, and late 1 gotten botie, failed frait into one of the 3les of Ze land called Walkeren. Then the French king con-Areining them of Saunt, Bruges, and Ppres, to des liner bito him pledges, caused the towne of Dain, and his thips lieng there in the hauen to be burned, doubting least their thould come into the hands of his crimics. This tone, he returned into France, leaving his some Leives and the earle of S. Paule in garrifon at Life and Dottap, and for great fums of monte, which by agreement he received of the 20 townes of Saunt, Bruges, and Ppies , he reffored buto them their pleages. Thus faith Meire and Matthew Paris differeth not much from him touching the fuccesse which chanced to the Englishmen by land. There will I fleich abile in the further narration of this matter, and touch by the way a thing that have pened to king John about this prefent time.

There was in this featon an heremit, whose name was Peter owelling about Porke, a man in great reputation with the common people, bicaufe that eis 30 ther inspired with some spirit of prophetie as the people belæued, melfe having some notable skill in art Sa 39. Fox, magike, he was accustomed to tell what thould folteme fird, pag. low after. And for fo much as oftentimes his falengs promed true, great credit was given to him as to a verieprophet: which was no god consequence that therefore his predictions comprised bindoubted es uents. Paie rather, fith in this pleudoprothet or falle foreteller of afterclaps, thefe necessarie concurrents (namelie, si sensurat q effectus compresserit omnes, Sispernens prorsus mortalia gaudia, sese Abdicet a curs terrenis, asiduóg, Conetur studio ad superos extollere mentem, Tunc etenim sepiens siet, poterita, sutura Cernere, vel vigilans vel somno oppressiu inerti, Hoc pacto cecinere olim ventura propheta) were wanting, and that he was contrarilie qualified to that which this heptallichon comprehendeth, necel farilie it feloweth, that he was not as he was taken, 50 but rather a veluder of the people, and an instrument of fatauraised by for the inlargement of his kingdome, as the sequele of this discourse importeth. This Peter about the first of Lanuarie last past, had told the king, that at the feast of the Ascension it should come to palle, that he thoulo be cast out of his king dome. And (whether, to the intent that his words Chould be the better belæued, or thether bpon to much truff of his owne cunning)he offered himfelfe Hereopon being committed to palon within the cafiell of Cost, when the day by him prefired came, without any other notable damage onto king John, he was by the kings commandement drawne from and his sonne the said eastell, ento the towne of Warham, & there hanged, togither with his some.

The people much blamed king John, for this er, freame dealing, bicause that the heremit was suppofed to be a man of great vertue, and his some nothing guiltie of the offense committed by his father (if any were) against the hing . Posecuer, some thought, that he had much wrong to die, bicause the matter fell cut euen as he had propheticd : for the day before the Alcention day, king John had relig-

King Iohn. ned the supersocitie of his kingdome (as they take the matter outo the pope, and had done to him homage, to that he was no absolute king indeed, as authors affirme. One cause, and that not the least which moned king John the fonce to agree with the pope, role through the words of the faid heremit, that did put luch a feare of some great mishap in his hart, which thould grow through the dillotative of his people, that it made him pold the loner. But to the matter againe.

> Ling John (after his capteins in Flanders had fped to well as before you have heard) prepared to make a volage into Guien, not much regarding the matter, in that the realme food as pet interdiacd. But when he bnocessod by his loads, that they would not go with him except the interdicting might first be released, and he clearlie absolued of the popes curife, to the end that Gods weath and the popes being fullie pacified towards him, he might with better speed moue and mainteine the warres, he was confired ned to change his purpole, and to comming to Win: cheffer, dispatched footh a mellenger with letters, sign ned with the hands of foure and twentic earles and king Ich barous, to the archbishop of Canturburie, and the bis writing thops of London, Lincolne, and Hereford, as then for the other her the other here fourning in France, requiring them with all the or thousand ther banished men to returne into England, promis turne, fing them by his letters patents, not onelie a fure safeconduct for their comming over, but that he would also forget all passed displeasures, and franke lie ressore buto cuerie man all that by his means had beene wrongfullie taken from them, and as pet by him deteined.

The archbishop and the other bishops receiving the Chebishops letters, with all speed made has to come into to return. England, and lo arriving at Douer the lictenth day of Julie, with other the banished men, they went to Winchester, where the king yet remained, who hear Chepcane ring that the bishops were come, went footh to rewindfally ceive them are at his first meeting with the good and 40 ceive them, and at his first meeting with the archbi-Chop of Canturburie, he knæled dolwne at his fet, Che k. bie and belought him of forginenelle, and that it would beth to the please him and the other bishops also to provide for archbishop. the relate of the milerable Cate of the realme. Here with the water standing in diverse of their cles on both fides, they entred into the citie, the people greats lie retoiling to behold the head of the commonwealth agree at length with the members. This was in the reare after the birth of our Saufour 1213.

Hing John required of the archbishop (having as then the popes power in his hands, bicause he was his legat) to be absolued, promising boon his solemne The king received oth, that he would (afore all things) defend prairithou the church and the order of priesthood from receis absolute. ning anie wrongs. Also, that he would restore the old lawes made by the ancient kings of England, and namelie those of S. Coward, with were almost er tinguished and forgotten. And further, that he would make recompense to all men thom he had by anie to fuffer death for it, if his prophetic product not true. To incomes indamaged. This done, he was absolved by the is the the archbishop, though after he fent his contours to folico. Rome, to intreat with the bishop to take awaie the interolation of the land. On the morrow after allo, the king fent his letters onto all the thiriffes of the counties within the realme, commanding them to fummon foure lawfull men of everie towne belongs ing to the demeans of the crowne, to make their ap pearance at S. Albons, upon the 4 date of August, that they and other might make inquilition of the loss which enerie bithop had susteined, what had A quest's bæne taken from them, and what ought to be refice inquiris. red to them as due for the fame.

The archbishop for that time taking his leave of the king, went to Canturburie, where he restored the

monka

The archbt= thop taketh policition of hola.

Chelolog res

the fielt bis

The architic

monks to their abbie, and then take polletion of his fee, being the two and fortith archbifhop that had ruled the fame. In the meane time, the king revals ren to Portesmouth, there to take the sea to faile o ner into Polatow, committing the rule of the realme unto Beffrey fitt Peter og fitt Dærs, logo thefe inflice, and to the bilhop of Winchester, commany bing them to ble the counfell and adulle of the arche bishop of Canturburie, in governing things touch ing the common-wealth. Perewith there came also 10 to the king a great multitude of men of warre, ale ledging, that they had spent in stateng for him, and his going ouer sea all their monie, so that he must now needs give them wages, if he would have them to palle over with him into France. The which when he refused to do, he was constrained to take the may ter with his owne fernants, arriving about a three dates after at the Ile of Jersey: but perceiving that none of his loads followed him according to his commaidement, as one disappointed of aid, he returned 20 to controll him. backe againe into England, there to take further oz der for this their mildemeanour.

Whilest these things were thus in doing, Beffrey Fitz Peter, and the bishop of Wlinchester were come to S. Albons, togither with the archbilhop of Canturburie, and other bishops and pieres of the realme, where the kings peace being proclaimed to all men, it was on his behalfe Areitlie commanded, that the lawes of k. Henrie his grandfather Mould be observed universallie within his realme, and that 30 all butult lawes and ordinances thould be abrogated. It was also commanded, that no thiriffe, no, for rester, not other minister of the kings, should byon paine of life and limme, take biolentlie anie thing of any man by waie of ertostion, nos prefume to wrong ante man, or to fine ante man, as they had afore time beine accustonied to do.

After this, the king being come backe from his fournie, which he purposed to have made into Poldow, assembled an armie, and ment to have gone 4 against those loads which had refused to go with him, but the archbishop of Canturburie comming to him at Porthampton, fought to appeale his mod, and to cause him to state, but pet in his furious rage he went forward till he came to potingham, and there with much ado, the archbithop following him with threatning to excommunicate all those that should nicare those $ and him, procured him to leave off his enterprise.

all the king. Then the archbilhop (about the fine and twentith day of August) came to London, there to take aduste 50 for the reformation of things touching the god go vernement of the common-wealth. But here whilest the archbishop, with other pieces of the realme deuts fed orders verie necessarie (as was thought) for the fate of the common-wealth, the king doubting leaff the same should be a bridle for him to restreine his authoritie rotall from doing things to his pleasure, he began to find fault, and feemed as though he had repented himfelfe of his large promiles made for his reconciliation: but the archbithop of Canturburie 60 lo allwaged his mod, and perfuaded him, by opening but o him what danger would infue both to him and to his realme, if he went from the agreement, that he was glad to be quiet for feare of further trouble.

In this burlie burlie also the loods and peeres of the realme(by the letting on of the archbishop) were earnefflic bent to have the king to restore and confirme the grant which his granofather king Henrie the first had by his charter granted and confirmed to his lub ieas, which to dow, king John thought greatlie prein dictall to his rotall effate and dignitie. The earle of Tholouse having lost all his possessions, the citie of Tholouse onelie excepted, came ouer into England, t rendzed the faid citic into the hands of king John, and received at his departure, the lumme of ten thow fand marks as was reported, by the bountifull gift

Apon the fecond of Actober, Geffrey Fitz Peter Matth. Paris. earle of Eller and loed chefe tuffice of England de, Geffrey fitty parted this life, a man of great power and autopitie, Peter deparin those politike direction and government, the 02 teth this lite. der of things perfeining to the common-wealth chefelte confifted. He was of a noble mind, expert in knowledge of the lawes of the land, rich in pollette ons, and toined in blod or affinitie with the more part of all the Pobles of the realme, so that his death was no small lose to the commonwelth: for through him and the archbishop Hubert, the king was oftens times renoked from fuch wilfall purpoles, as now and then he was determined to have put in practice, in so much that the king, as was reported (but how trulie I cannot tell) fæmed to retoffe for his death, bicause he might now worke his will without ante

The fame time, to wit, about the feast of faint spi a cardinau chaell, came Picholas the cardinall of Tulculane in fentuneu to England, fent from the pope, to take awate the in gland, ferdiction, if the king would frand to that agreement which he had made and promifed by his oth to performe. Ling John received this cardinall in most ho nozable wife, and gladic heard him in all things that he had to faie. This legat at his comming to Wellminster, deposed the abbat of that place, named William from his rome, for that he was accus fed both of walting the revenues of the house, and also of notable incontinencie. Pozeoner the burgelles Che burgelof the towne of Drford came buto him to obteine tex of Oxford absolution of their offense, in that through their pres require absos fumption, the their schollers (of whom pe have heard lunon, before) were hanged there, to the great terror of all the relidue. To be thost, they were absolued and penance infoined them, that they should strip them out of their apparell at euerie church in the towne, and going barefoted with scourges in their hands, rie parith prest within their towne, faieng the pfalme of Miserere. After this, the faiocardinall called a councell of A conocation connocation of the cleargie, to reforme fuch things called by the touching the Cate of the church as thould be thought carbinall, requilite. And though he handled not this matter with fuch favour and oppightnette as the billiops wie thed on their behalfes, yet he cauled king John to reflose the most part of all those gods that remained buspent, and also the value of halfe of those that ivere consumed and made awaie, but othose persons as well spirituall as tempozall, from whom they had beine taken in time of the discord betwirt him and the pope. But before all things could be thus quies ted and let in order betwirt the king and the biftiops, manie meetings were had, as at London, Reading, they thould require the benefit of absolution of ene-

Wallingford, and in other places.

Pow the archbilhop and prelates for their parts thought this recompense to be but small, in respect of the great lolles and hinderances which they had liv feined: and to have the thole restitution delated, they take it not well. Howbett the cardinal leaned so to the kings side (having received of him to the popes vie the charter of indication of the realmes of England and Ireland, now bulled with gold, where at the first it was delivered to Pandulph sealed one lie with war. But their fuit came to little effect, and in the end it fell out in such wife, that their come plaint was lette regarded. Pozeouer, the rating of the value which the king thould refroze buto the arche bishop, and the other bishops, was by agreement of the king and them togither, appointed unto foure bas rons indifferentlie cholen betwirt them.

Ralfe Cog. The carte of Tholonic.

13 estitution to be male to the billiops.

King John

commended

to the pope

for an hum:

bie prince.

At length notivithstamping that deside toke no place : for it was other wife decreed by the pope, that the king thould reffere to them the fumme of fortie thousand marks, of the which he had paid alreadic tivelue thousand, before the returne of the said archy billiop and billiops into the realme, and fifteene thous fand more at the late meeting had betwirt them at Reading, so that there remained onelie 13000 bes hind: for not onelie the king, but also the caromail had fent to the pope, requiring him to take direction in the matter, and to advertise him, that there was a great fault in the archbishop and his fellowes. In so much that Panoulp which was fent to him from the legat, declared in fanour of the king, that there was not a more humble and movelt prince to be found than king John, and that the archbifthop and his fellowes were to hard, and the wed themselves to cometous in requiring the restitution that should be made to them for loves full eined in time of the interbidien.

Much. Paris. The pictum= ption of the carbinali.

13arton bpon Erent. Dunftable. A fpnod. Difcord betwitthe car:

Powthe cause therefore the legat and the king did send but o the pape, was this . There was some grudge betwirt the legat and the archbilhop, for that where the pope had written to the legat, how he Chould according to the order of the ancient canons of the church) place in enerie bishops lee and abbeie (that was boid) meet and able persons to rule and guide the same, the legat presuming on that authoritie granted him by the pope, without the adulle of the archbishop or other bishops, twke onelie with him certaine of the kings chapleins, and comming with them to fuch churches as were vacant, ordeined in them such persons as were nothing meet to take fuch charge bean them, and that according to the old abuse of England, as Matthew Paris faith, Elhere, opon the archbilhop of Canturburie repining at fuch dwings, sent to the legat as then being at Burton open Crent, two of his chapleins frem Dimfiable (where he and his luffragans beld as then a fried, after the featl of the Gpipanie) commanding him by wate of appeale, in no wife to meddle with institue dinail and the ting any governours to durdes, within the precinct archbishepol of his inrifolation, tipere fach institutions belonged onclic to him.

Herebyon therefore the legat dispatched Pandulph to Rome unto the pope as is aforefaid, and the king likewife fent amballadors thither, as the bishop of Periodic, and the archocacon of Posthumberland, with others, the which in the end to behave them felies in their luit, that notwithstanding Simon Langton the archbishops brother earnestice with fland them, as prodor for the bilhops, pet at length, the pope twice order in the matter, writing botto his les gat, that he thould le the faine fulfilled, and then abfolice the realine of the former interdiction . In this meane time, bing John made promition to go oner into France (as affer pæ fhall heare) but at his go, ing ouer he committed the whole ordering of this matter entothe legat, and to Tailliam Parthall the earle of Penbroke. The legat therefore byon the receipt of the popes bulles, called a councell at Lone 60 bon, and there declaring what was conteined in the fame, be twhe bands for paiment of the relique of the fortie thouland marks which was behind, being 1 3000 onelie, as before 3 haue faid.

celler is re: far of yezhe.

About the same time also, Chalter Gray bishop of walter Gray Worcester was removed to the government of the lie of Porke, which had been vacant over fince the ecath of the archbilhop Geffrey. This Walter was the them thirdth archiefhop that governed that fie. But now to returne and speake of the bings af faires in the parts beyond the les . De hall binders fland, that having fet his bufineffe in forne god flaie at home with the legat, he applied his Audie to the performance of his wars abroad, and therefore he first fent monie into flanders to paie the fouldiers wages, which he had fent thisher to aid the erde there Monthly against king Philip. Which earle came our this to franch peare into England, and at Canturburie the hing received him, where he did homage to the king for the whole earledome of Flanders: and on the other part, the hing as well to the fair earle, as to luch flanders loods and bithops which came over with him, declared both home his rotall liberalitie by princelle giffs of golo, filner, to h It iewels, and pretions frones. After his returne, lach capteins as remained in his countric with their the lines, bands at the king of Englands pale, made a cournic periodec into France, and walted the lands that belonged to nes walth the earle of Guilnes, wanne the castell of Burn cham, and raced it, taking within it dincres men of armes and demilances . They also wanne by liege the towns of Aire, and burnt it. The castell of Liens they take by affault, and flue manie fouldiers that defended it, believe those which they take pasoners.

Poseoner, they wasted and destroiced the lands which Leives the French kings forms was posselled of in those parts. In the meane time, king John has uing prepared a mightie name, and a frong armie of valiant foldiers, toke fea at Portimouth on Canolemas day, with his wife, his forme Richard, a Clianor the litter of Arthur duke of writaine. He had not many of his earles or barons with him, but a great number of knights and gentlemen, with whome he lambed at knochell in fafetie, within a few dates after his letting forth. De tolke over with him inellima ble treasure, as it was reported, in gold, filmer, and iewels. Immediatlie oponhis arrinall at Rochell, the barons of Pointow renolted from the French king, and comming in to king John, did homage but to him, as to their king and fourreigne loed.

But howlocuer it was , after the truce began to expire which he had granted but othe earls of Harth and Augi, on the friday before Whitfunday he came with his armie before the castell of Securient, which Anno Regi belonged betto Geffrey be Lucignam , and on the day next inlining being schillin eine, he wanne the fame. Dn Whitfundap he laid fiege buto gonant, Weirenn an other callell belonging to the fame Geffrey, tho as then was lodged in the fame, and also two of his formes : but within these bates after that the flege Conant. was laid, the earle of Parth came to bing John, and bid so much prevaile, that through his means, both Geffrey and his two formes were received to mers cie, and king John put in possession of the castell. Ab fer this, bicanie king John was aductifed ,that Lewes the French kings some had now besieged Mountcounter, a castell that was apperteining to the faid Geffrey, he halfed thitherwards, and came to Parthenay, whither came to him as well the forefaid earle of Parth , as also the earle of Augi , and gount both they togither with the fato Geffrey de Lucig: counter. nam, ded homage to our king, and so became his liege men . The fame time also, the lavie Zane the kings daughter was affianced to the faid earle of Parthony Sparth his fonne, thereas the French king made means to have hir married to his sonne : but bicause 3 ane the king John Doubted leaft that Init was attempted but broken prefered by the transfer of the tra binder some cloked pretense, he twould give no care marreting thereto, but rather made this match with the earle of erle of egal Marth, in hope to to affine himselfe of the said earle, that be might frame him in no fmall freed to defend his cause against his adversaries of France. 13uf noto to the doings in England.

T De have heard before hold pope Innocent (02 ra ther Pocent, who was the rost of much milchiefe and trouble, which qualities are mothing conformant to his name) according to that king John had required of him by folemne medlengers, directed his bulles buto

Che carred

19.

ð.

ìge

B cl

uf.

his legat picholas, declaring opon wat conditions his pleasure was to have the sentence of interdiction released. Wherein first he commanded that the king thould latilite and pay lo much monte bifto the archbilhop of Canturburie, and to the bilhop of London and Clie, as thould fullie amount to the fumme of 40 thousand markes (with that which als readie he had paied, which was 27 thousand markes, at two feuerall paiments, as boon his accounts appeared.) For true contentation and paiment to be 10 made of the relidue, he ordeined that the king thould be swome, and also seale to an obligation, and certeine fuertics with him (as the bishops of Pozwich and Minchester, with the earles of Chester, Winchester, and Parshall) all which things were perfor med at this present, so that after the affurance so taken for paiment of the od 13 thousand marks behind, The interdice relique of the 40 thouland marks, the interdiction conreleated. was taken ofterlie awaie, and the land folemnelie thurth of S. Paule at London, bpon the 29 of June, in the yeare 1214, after the terme of fir yeares, there moneths, and 14 dates, that the realme had beene firts ken with that dreadfull dart of correction, as it was then effermen.

King John in the meane time remaining fill in France , and finding at the beginning fortune faudrable inough buto him, by reason his power was much increased by the aid of the Poictonins, determis cause speciallie, that he might by so doing weaken the French kings power, and partlie also to with draw him from the wars of Flanders, on which lide be had procured likewise the French borders to be inuaded with great force, and that not onelie by the earle and luch capteins as he had fent thither, and re-The imperor teined in wages, but also by the emperour Ditho, who in proper person came bowne into that countrie bimfelfe.

Herebpon king John went forth with all his 40 power of hordemen, and entering into Britaine, made rodes through the countrie, walting the lante even to the walles of Paunts: but Mostlie after the Bittaines aftembled togither, bider the leading of Peter, the fon of Robert earle of Deieur (the French kings bucle, who had maried the ladie Adela, daugh. ter to duke Bute of Britaine) and marching forth into the field to defend their countrie from the entimies, came to toine with them in battell. At the first there was a verie tharpe incounter, but at length the 50 Bitains being vanquilhed and put to flight, a great number of them were taken priloners, and among & Beter theerle Other their capteins, the forefaid Peter was one, of Opicip his whom king John sent awaie with all the rest unto Angiers, to be kept in lafegard butill he Chould re-

After this, he belieged a callell that flood byon the banke of the river of Loier, called La Roch au moune, inforcing his whole indendur to have wone the French it. But per he could attein his purpole, he was ad 60 nertifed that Lewes the sonne of king Philip was comming towards him with a great power to rails his liege. Therefore having no great confidence in the Polatonins, and buderstanding that Lewes brought with him a verie frong armie, he toke aduise of his councell, who indged that it should be best for him to breake up his fiege and to depart, which he dio, and went streight wates to Angiers. Lewes (ab ter king John was thus rettred brought the Poicto uins againe to Subjection, and put the chiefe authours of the rebellion to death. In the meane time also his brite Frech. father king Philip with like successe, but in a foughten field, vanquithed the emperour Diho at the bridge of Bonins on the 28 day of Julie, as in the hi Copie of France more at large appeare. There as mong other puloners, the three earlies of Flanders Balifburie and Bullogne were taken.

Powking John being advertised of that over throw, was maruellouflie fad and forrowfull for the chance, in somuch that he would not receive any meat in a whole date after the newes thereof was brought unto him. At length turning his forrow in Che faieng of to rage, he openlie said, that since the time that he king John. made himfelfe this kingdom fubicat to the church of >> Rome, nothing that he did had prospered well with him. Indeed he condescended to an agreement with the pope (as may be thought) more by force than of denotion, and therefore rather diffembled with the pope (lith he could not otherwise those) than agreed to the covenants with any hartie affection.

But to the purpole. Perceiving himfelfe now defitute of his best frænds, of thom diverse remained palloners with the French king (being taken at the released by the legat, litting within the cathedrall 20 battell of Bouins)he thought good to agree with king Philip for this present, by way of taking some truce, which by mediation of amballabours riding to and A truce taken fro betwirt them, was at length accorded to endure betwirt the for five yeares, and to begin at Caster, in the yeare two kings of our Loed. 1215. After this shout the red being England & of our Lord, 1215. Affer this, about the 19 date of France, Daober he returned into England, to appeale certeine tumults which began alreadie to thot out buds of some new civill diffention. And suerlie the same fpred abroad their blottoms to frethlie, that the fruit ned to attempt the winning of Britaine, for this 30 was unit before the growth by ante timelie prouiseon could be hindered. For the people being fet on by diverse of the superiours of both forts, finding themfelues græued that the king kept not promife in reflozing the ancient lawes of S. Coward, determined from thenceforth to ble force, fince by request he might not prenaile. To appeale this furte of the people, not onlie policie but power also was required, for the people undertaking an euill enterpate, specio allie raifing a tumult or toining in a conspiracie are as hardie suppessed and vanquished as Hydra the monffer having manie heads : and therefore it is well faid that –comes est discordia vulgi, Namque à turbando nomen sibi turba recepit.

The Pobles lumoling that longer delate therein was not to be suffered, allembled themselves togis ther at the abbete of Burie (bnder colour of going thither to do their denotions to the bodie of S. Co. A cloked pils mund which late there inflyined) where they offered grimage. their complaint of the kings tyrannicall maners, alledging how they were oftentimes called footh to ferue in the wars a to fight in defense of the realme, and yet notwithstanding were still oppossed at home by the kings officers, who (vpon confidence of the lawes) attempted all things what focuer they conceiued. And if anie man complained, of alledged that he received wrong at their hands, they would ans fiver by and by, that they had law on their five to do as they had done, to that it was no wrong but right which they did, and therfore if they that were the lords and peres of the realme were men, it food them up on to provide that such inconveniences might be as noided, and better lawes brought in ble, by the which their ancessours lined in a moze quiet and hapie State.

There was brought fouth and also read an ancient The chartes tharter made sometime by Henrie the first (which of & Henrie charter Stephan the archbishop of Canturburie had the first. delinered buto them before in the citie of London) A firebrand of contening the grant of certeine liberties according to the lawes of king Coward the confesso, profitable to the church and barons of the realme, which they purposed to have universallie executed over all the land, And therfore being thus affembled in the quiere came to fight John.

A. John in:

nadeth Bio

The Bill

taines put fonne taken puloner.

to flight.

A. John remoueth to Ingierg. The Boicto: Bouing, dillention.

of the church of S. Comund, they received a folemne oth boon the altar there, that if the king would not grant to the fame liberties, with others with be of his owne accord had promifed to confirme to them, they would from thenceforth make warre upon him, till they had obtained their purpole, and inforced him to grant, not onelie to all these their petitions, but also yalo to the confirmation of them buder his feale, for cuer to remaine most fredfast and inuio

Bernewell.

The cheefe cause that moved the loads to this confpiracie, rose by reason the king demanded escuage of them that refused to go with him into Poictow: and they on the other part mainteined, that they were not bound to paie it, for any warres which the king made in the parts beyond the seas. But he to prome that he ought to have it, occlared how in his fathers and brothers time it was paico, and there. fore he ought to have it. Huch ado there was about this matter at the first broching thereof, and more as 20 dothere had bone, if the legats presence had not fomenhat flated the parties. But after they had got ten the charter of king Penrie the first at the hands of the archbishop of Canturburie, they made such a linister interpretation thereof, that supposing it to ferue their turnes, they proceeded in their wil full opinions (as aboue is mentioned.)

Finallie it was determined amongst them, that Chartlie after Chaffmalle, they thoulogo to the king, and require of him that they might have those laws 30 reflaced, which he had promifed to them (as is afore faid.) But for almuch as they knew well that their fute would not be thankfullie accepted, in the meane time they provided themselves of horse, armour, and other furniture for the warre, thereby to be in the better readinesse and safegard, if in exhibiting their request, the matter did grow to any such inforcement. They appointed also diverse of the most ancient loods to move the fair matter to the king, in all their names, who was as then at Worceffer, and being 40 advertised of this conspiracie, as some as the feast of Chilimalic was pall, he went freight to London: thither came the loses also with like speed, leaving their men in the townes and villages abroad, to be readie bpon any ludden warning to come buto them. if ned thould to require.

The iords prefent their request to the king.

Matt. Paris.

Polydor.

Being come into his presence, they required of him that it might please him, first, to amoint the er ercife and vic of those ancient lawes buto them, by the which the kings of England in times past ruled 50 their subicas : secondlie, that according to his promile, he would abrogate these newer lawes, with cuerie man might with goo cause name mere wongs, rather than laives : and thirdlie they required of him the performance of all other things, which he had mon faithfullie of late undertaken to observe. The king (though somewhat contrarie to his nature) -having heard their request, gave them a verte gentle answer. For perceining them readie with force to constraine him, if by gentlenesse they might not pres 60 natic, he thought it thould be more fafe and caffe for him to turne their buquiet minds with loft remedies than to go about to breake them of their willes by frong hand, which is a thing verie dangerous, especiallie where both parts are of like force. Therefore he promifed them within a few dates, to have confided ration of their request.

And to the intent they might give the more credit to his words, he caused the arthbishop of Canturburic, and the bishop of Clie, with William Parchall earle of Penbroke (buto thome he had given his daughter Cliano; in marriage) to bidertake for him, and as it were to become his suerties: which willinglie they oid. Here with the minds of the Pabilitie being somewhat pacifico, refurned home to their houses. The king some after also, to assure him. Much $p_{\rm min}$ felfe the moze effectuallie of the allegiance of his peo. The king to ple in time to come, caused everie man to renew his mounting are thus homage, and to take a new oth to be faithfull to him legrance against all other persons. And to provide the more his subling fuerlie for himfelfe, on Candlemaffe day nert infufucrlie for himtelte, on Cancumane on mer anning, ing, he toke opon him the croffe to go into the holie Etching is her for feare than any action to land, which I thinke he did rather for feare than any theriotic 10 denotion, as was also thought by other, to the end that he might (bnder the protection thereof) remaine the more out of danger of luch as were his focs. In which point of diffimulation he theived himselfe price dent, observing the counsell of the wiseman, – inclusum corde dolorem Disimula at g tace, ne deteriora subinde Damma feras.

Some lay that a great part of this variance that The cantes chanced betweene king John and his barons, was the villega thanced betweene bing your and you bacons, was between bicause the king would without skilfull admise have between king and by eriled the earle of Chester, and so none other occasion basins. than for that he had offentimes adulced him to leave Fabian. his cruell dealing, and and others. Other write, that Cheantal with his brothers wife and others. Other write, that Chefter, his crueli dealing, and also his accustomed adulterie Canton the same diffention role by reason of the great cruel Heftor Box. tie, and unreasonable anarice, which the king vied The kings towards all the flates and degrees of his subjects, as conecounted well towards them of the spiritualtie, as of the temposaltie. The pielats therefore of the realme forere, The reping pining at his doings, for that they could not patisagainfithe (contrarie as they toke it to the libertie of the church) found means through practile, to persuade both the kings of Scotland and France to aid and support them against him, by linking themselves togither with fundzie noblemen of England. But thefe feems to be contecures of fuch writers as were evill affect ted towards the kings cause.

Pow therefore to the sequele of the matter . The Polydon king having fent awaie the earons with agentle answer, though he minded nothing lefte than to fatif fie them in that they did demand, bicause it made much against his rotall perogative: and therewith forefæing that the matter would be like to grow at length to be tried by force, he began to dout his owne estate, and therefore prepared an armie, and fortis fied diverte castels and places with men, munition, and vittels, into the which he might retire for his lafetie in any time of need. The barons which understood the kings diligence herein, and contecturing thereof his whole intent, made readie also their power, ap, pointing for their generall one Robert Fitz Wal. Robert fit fer, a man both excellent in counfell, and valiant in warre. Herewith they came but o the archbillyop of Canturburie, prefenting unto him a boke, wherein was confeined a note of all the articles of their petitions, & required him to understand the kings mind Che archi. touching the same. The archbishop coueting to er Canturbus tinguish the sedition (whereof he himselfe had beene to fatilities no small kindler) which was like to grow, if the requestions Pobilitie were not pacified the somer, talked with barons. the king and exhorted his grace veric instantlie to fatilite the requests of his barons, and here with oid their the boke of the articles which they had delinered buto him.

The king, when he faw what they demanded which in effect was a new order in things touching the whole fate of the common wealth) fware in a great The hings furie, that he would never condescend but o those per fortists titions. Thereof then the barons had knowledge, they printed they gat them frait but armour making their ac. Marc. Paris they gat them Arait buto armour, making their alfemblie at Stamford in the Gaster weeke, wither they had drawne buto them almost the whole pobilitie, and gathered an erceding great armie. For the commons

fiver of their requells.

The R. 920=

f the loads gainst the

Anno Reg.17.

Manh Paris

commans flocked buto them from enerie part, ble cause the king was generallie hated of the moze part of his lubiects.

It was contenured that there were in that armie the number of two thouland knights, belide peomen on horfebacke or bemilances (as 3 may call them) and fotemen apparelled in diverte forts of armour. The chiefe ringleaders of this power were thefe, thole names infine: Robert fitz Walter, Cufface Clescie, Richard Percie, Robert Kos, Peter de 10 Bicule, Picholas de Stuteuill, Saer earle of Witin. cheffer, Roberterle of Clare, Henrie earle of Clare, Richard earle de Bigot , William de Dowbeay, Milliam de Crestey, Kalle Fitz Robert, Robert de Mere, Foulke Fit; Warren, Will. Mallet, Wil liam de Pontacute, William de Beauchampe, Simonde kime, William Parchall the yonger, William Manduit, Robert De Montibigonis, John Fitz Robert, John Fitz Alane, B. Lauale, D. Fitz A. Paurice de Baunt, Robert de Brakelley, Robert be Mounfichet, Will. de Lanualley, G.de Paunde uile earle of Gler, William his brother, William de Huntingfield, Kobert de Brelley, B. constable of Menton, Alexander de Panton, Peter Fitz John, Alexander de Sutton, Dibert de Bodie, John constable of Chester, Thomas de Wuleton, Conan fitz Helie, and manie other; they had also of councell with them as thiefe the arthbilhop of Canturburie.

The king as then was at Orford, who hearing of 3 the affemblie which the barons made, and that they were come to Brakelley, on the mondate nert after the octaves of Caster, he sent buto them the archbi Theking line thop of Canturburie, in whom he repoled great confidence, and William Parthall earle of Denbroke, to biderstand that they meant by that their assembling thus togither. Therebpon they delinered to the same messengers a roll conteining the ancient liberties, printledges and cultoms of the realine, fig. nificing that if the king would not confirme the 40 fame, they would not ceafe to make him warre, till he thould fatiffie their requells in that behalfe.

The archbillion and the earle returning to the king, shewed him the whole circumstance of that which the barons demanded, who twke great indignation thereat, and scornefullie said; Why do they " not alke to have the kingdome allo . Finallie, he af " firmed with an oth, that he would never grant any " such liberties, thereby he should become a saue. Dereupon the archbifthop and the earle of Penbroke 50 returned to the barons, and declared the kings dentall to confirme their articles. Then the barons na ming their hoaft The armie of God and the bolie durch, fet forward, and first came onto Porthamp ton, and belieging the towne, when they could not prevaile, bicaule the same was well provided for defense asozehand, they departed from thence, and came towards Bedford to beliege the castell there, in which fir William Beauchampe was capteine, the being secretlie confederate with them, delivered 60 the place incontinentlie into their hands.

Thilest they remained here a certeine time to for to the barons. tific and furnish the castell with necessarie provision, there came letters to them from London, giving them to biderstand, that if they would send a conucnient power of fouldiers to defend the citie, the same thould be received thereinto at some meet and reasonable time in the night feason by the citizens, who would toine with them in that quarell against the king to the uttermost of their powers. The loads were glad of these newes, to have the chiefe citie of the realme to take part with them, and therfore they feat four bands of fouldiers freightwaies thither, hhich were brought into the citie in the night feason

(according to order aforehand taken.) But as Matt. Paris faith, they were received into the citie by Algate, the 24 of Paie being sundaie, whilest the citisens were at malle. The nert day they made open rebellion, twke luch as they knew favoured the king, brake into the houses of the Jewes, a spoiled them.

The barons having thus gotten possession of the citie of London, wrote letters onto all those lords Matth. Paris. which as yet had not foined with them in this confeberacie, threatening that if they refuled to aid them The barons now in this necessitie, they would destroic their cas write to other stels, manours, parkes, and other possessions, mas of the nobilities bing once marro from them ag the enterior of the to toine with king open warre boon them as the entimies of God, them against and rebels to the church. These were the names of the king, those loads which yet had not swozne to mainteine the forefaid liberties, William Parthall earle of Penbroke, Rainulfe earle of Chefter, Picholas earle of Salifburie, William earle Marren, William erle of Albemarle, 19. earle of Comewall, W. de Albelane, Wi. de Pobrug, D. de Males, G. de Gaunt, 20 nie, Robert de Meipount, Peter fitz Perbert, Bite an de Lilley, G. de Lucie, G. de Furmuall, Thomas Ballet, 19. de Braibroke, J. de Ballingborne, W.de Cantlow, P.de Coznwall, John Fitz Hugh, Hugh de Peuill, Philip de Albenie, John Parchall, and William Brewer. All these opon receipt of the barons letters, or the more part of them came to London, and isined themsclues with the barons, be terlie renouncing to aid king John. Also the plas in the eschequer ceased, and the this riffes stated from executing their office. For there The king less was none that would paic ante monie to the kings defolate of ble, nor anie that did obeie him, in fomuch that there freends. remained with him but onelie seven horstemen of all his traine at one time (as some write) though some after he had a great power, which came to him to the castell of Wainologe, where he then late, and Polydor. meant to have led the same against the loads with all speed. But hearing now of this new rebellion of the Londoners, he changed his purpole and burff not bepart from Windloze, being brought in great doubt least all the other cities of the realme would follow their example. Herebpon he thought goo to affaie if he might come to some agreement by wate of communication, and incontinentlie fent his ambaffas dours to the barons, promiting them that he would fatilite their requests, if they would come to Winds fore to talke with him. Howbeit, the loads having no confidence in his The loads promile came with their armie within three miles of incamped be-Mindloze, and their pitcht dolune their tents in a twirt stancs and windloze, medalw betwirt Stanes and Windloze, whither king John allo came the 15 date of June, and thelw & John comed such friendlie countenance towards everie one meth to them of them, that they were put in good hope he meant no to talk of some veceipt. Being thus met, they fell in consultation as pacification. bout an agreement to be had. On the kings part (as Matth Paris. it were) fate the archbithops of Canturburie and Dublin, the bishops of London, Winchester, Lincolne, Bath, Mozceffer, Couentrie, Rocheffer, and Pandulph the popes Nuncio, with Almerike master of the knights templers: the earles of Penbroke, Salifburie, Warren, Arundell, Alane de Galoway, William Fitz Gerald, Peter Fitz Perbert, Alane Ballet, Pugh de Peuill, Pubert de Burgh sensichall of Poictou, Robert de Ropley, John Parihall, and Philip de Albenie. On the barons part, there were innumerable, for all the nobilitie of England was in a maner affembled there togither.

Finallie, when the king measuring his owne Arength with the barons, perceived that he was not able to relift them, he confented to subscribe and leale to fuch articles concerning the liberties demonded, in forme for the most part as is conteined in the time and Charta de tharters Magna Charta, and Charta de Foresta, be Foresta.

10 lie

ginning

The harmer iuc a plau G= their armic. Morthamp= ton belieged.

They wan the towne but not the caftell. Bedford ca=

Che chate:

lains of foure callels.

ginning Ichannes Deigratia, & c. And he did not onlie grant buto them their petitions touching the forfaid liberties , but also to win him further credit, was contented that they thould chose out certeine grave and honourable personages, which should have author ritic and power to lie thole things performed which he then granted bnto them.

There were twentic fine of those that were so elected, namelic thefe. The earles of Clare, Albemarle, Olaceffer, Wlindeffer, and hereford : also earle 10 hand, in the medow called Kuningsmede or Rime-Roger, earle Robert, earle Parthall the yonger, Robert Fitz Walter the ponger, Gilbert de Clare, Enllace de Mescie, Hugh Bigot, William de Dowbeap, the maior of London, Wilbert De la Mar le, Robert de Ros, John constable of Chester, Richard be Percie, John Fitz Robert, William Dallet, Deffrey de Saie, Roger de Molwbzay, William De Duntingfield, Kichard de Pountfichet, and Wil liam de Albenie. These fine and twentie were swozne to lie the liberties granted and confirmed by the king 20 to be in everie point observed, but if he went againff the fame, then they thoulo have authoritie to compell him to the obserning of enerie of them.

Pozeoner, there were other that were swozne to be obedient, and as it were affiftant buto these five and fwentic pieres in luch things as they thould appoint, which were thefe. The earle of Arundell, the earle Marren by his attornie, Benrie Doilie, Bu bert de Burgh, Datthelv Fitz Berbert, Kobert de Binknic, Roger Huscarle , Robert de Pewburgh, Henrie de Pont Audoin , Kafe de la Pay, Henrie de Brentfield, Marcen Fitz Gerald, Thomas Bal fet, William de Buckland, William de faint John, Alane Ballet, Richard de Kiners, Bugh de Bones uale, Jozdain de Sackuille, Kalfe Bulgrane, Rie thard Sificiwalf, Robert de Ropcley, Andzein de Beauchampe, Malter De Dunffable, Malter folt oth, Foukes de Brent, John Parthall, Philip Daub nie, William de Perca, Kalfe de Pozmandie, William de Percie, William Agoilum, Engerand 40 de Pratellis, William de Cirenton, Roger de Zuthe, Roger Fit; Barnard, and Gooffie de Grancombe. It was further ordered, that the chatelains or constables (as I may call them) of the sourc car Acls of Porthampton, Billingworth, Pottingham, and Scarbozow, thould be Avorne to the five and twentie parcs, to governe those castels in such wise as they thould have in commandement from the faid fine and twentie peres, or from the greater part of them: and that such should be placed as chatelains 50 in the fame, as were thought to be most true and faithfull unto the barons and the realme. Tt was allo decreed, that certeine frangers, as flemings and other, should be banished out of England. The king herebpon fent his letters patents buto the thiriffes of all the counties of this realme, commanding them to fee the ordinances and liberties thich he granted and confirmed, to be diligentlie ob formed. And for the more threngthening of this his John was become his obedient vallall, and the apofolike king) easilie granted to grantie both him and his loads herein, and so was the grant of the liberties corroborated & made god with a double confirs mation, and so lealed, that it was impossible for them to be separated in sunder, the kings grant being an nered to the popes bull.

Improductive also open the confirmation now made by the king, directle loods came to him, and requited restitution of surppossessions, lands, and how fes, as he had in his hands, the right whereof (as they alleoged) apperteined to them: but he excused the matter, and Chileothem off, till by inquell taken, # might appeare what right enerie man had to those things which they then claimed : and furthermore alfigned them a date to be holden at Wlesiminster, which was the firteenth day of Julie. But per he restored at that time the castell of Rochester buto the archbishop of Canturburie, the barons having Rockeling the archbishop of Canturburie, the barons having Rockeling obtained a great peece of their purpole (as they Rockelling obtained a great peece of their purpole (as they Religions) thought) returned to Lordon with their charter fear to chearing led, the date thereof was this: Given by our owne Cananta mede, betwixt Stanes and Windsore, the fifteenth of Iune, in the eighteenth yeare of our reigne.

Great retoiling was made for this conclusion of peace between the king and his barons, the people MattPain funging that God had touched the kings heart, and mollified it, whereby hapic dates were come for the realme of England, as though it had beene delivered out of the bondage of Aegypt: but they were much deceived, for the king having condesended to make the king having conduction to his minimations. fuch grant of liberties, farre contrarie to his mind, fee bundle was right locowfull in his heart, curfled his mother bublioby that bare him, the houre that he was borne, and the lubras. paps that gave him sucke, withing that he had recetued death by violence of fword or knife, in fred of naturall northment: he thetted his teeth, he did bite now on one faffe, and now on an other as he walked, and off brake the fame in pieces when behad done, and with such disordered behaviour and furious gestures he officed his greefe, in such soft that the Poble men berie well perceived the inclination of his inward affection concerning thefe things, before the breaking up of the councell, and therefore fore las mented the frate of the realme, geffing what would follow of his impatiencie and displesant taking of Herebpon they fato among themselnes, Wo be >> to be, year ather to the whole realme that wanteth a fufficient king, and is governed by a typant that leeketh the lubuer fron therof. Pow hath our fonereigne ? lord made be subject to Kome, and to the Komish ,, court, so that we must hence south obteine our pro-teation from thence. It is verie much to be feared, " leaft we do fiele hereafter some further peece of mis >> cheft to light boon be suddenlie. The name heard of any king that would not gladie indeno; to with draw his necke from bondage a captivitie, but ours of his owne accord voluntarilie (abantteth himfelfe to become vallall to cuerie franger. And thus the >> loads lamenting the case, left the king, and returned, to London (as before yet have heard.)

But the king disquicted not a little, for that he was Thehings thus driven to peeld to farre unto the barons, not parteting withstanding as much as was possible be kept his the Med purpole fecret, devised by that means he might bil wight appoint all that had beene done, and promifed on his part, at this affemblie betwirt him and the loods a pacification (as yee have beard.) Wherefore the next day berie late in the evening, he secretlie departed grant, he had gotten the pope to confirme a like chare 60 there he toke advice with his councell what remedie the femoth he might find to quiet the minds of his loads and bar and allabous rons, and to being them buto his purpole. At length to the pope. after much debating of the matter , if was conclubed by the adule of the greater part, that the king thould require the popen and therein . And lo Walter the bilhop of Worcester, a John the bilhop of Pozwith, with one Richard Parish his chancello, with all speed were sent as ambassadors from the king unto pope Innocent, to instruct him of the revellion of the English Pobilitie, and that he constrained by force had granted them certeine lawes and print leges, burtfull to his realme, and prefudiciall to his epozeouer, fith that all this was come by the mu gagh te Bourg.

Matth.Paris.

ı I

thoritie of the pope, the king belought him to make the fame voto, and to command the barons to obete him being their king, as reason required they thould. There were also fent by him other messengers, as Dugh de Boues and others, into diverse parts bepond the fea, to being from thence great numbers of men of war and fouldiers, appointing them to meet him at Douer, at the featt of faint Dichaell nert in fuing. De fent likewise buto all his chateleins and them to proute themselves of all things necessarie for defense of the holds committed to their charge, if they should chance to be belieged, though it were on the nert morrow.

His amballadours and other mellengers being thus dispatched, and having but few persons left as bout him, or in maner none, except fuch of the billion of Porwich his fervants as he had borowed of him. he fell to take prifes as any thips came by fulpected not to be his freends, fo feeking to win the favour of 20 the mariners that belonged to the cinke posts, and so lay close in the Ile of Wlight and there about the lea-coalls for the space of thee moneths togither. In which means time, manie things were reported of him, some calling him a fither, some a merchant, and some a pirat and rouer. And manie (for that no certeine newes could be heard of him) judged that he was either drowned, or dead by some other means. But he Will loking for some power to come over to his ato, kept himselfe out of the way, till the 30 fame should be arrived, and dissembled the conceit of his revenge and hart-grudge, till opportunitie ferned him with convenient securitie to put the same in ercention. Therein he thewed himselfe discreet and provident, and did as in fuch a case one wiseman doth counsell another, saieng,

-Sapiens irámque coercet. Sapè etiam viiliter cedit, placidisque furentem Demulcet dictis, & dulcibus allicit hostem Blanditys, donec deceptum in retia mittat.

The loods all this while lay at London, and began to doubt the matter, bicause they could heare no certeine newes where the king was become: for doub ting (as I faid) the fuertie of his person, he conveied himfelfe fecretie from one place to another, looging and taking his diet oftentimes moze meanlie than was decent for his effate: and fill he longed to heare howhis amballadours (ped with the pope, who in the The amballa = meane time comming buto Rome, and declaring their mellage at full, twie it opon their folemne oth, 50 that the right was on the kings five, and that the fault rested onelie on the loads, touching the whole controversie betweene them and him, who sought with great rigour and against reason to bridle him at their pleasures.

They the wed also a note of certeine articles confeined in the charter, which fæmed to make most for the kings purpole, and withall declared that the king in open allemblic, where he and the barons met to dome of England speciallie apperteined (as touching the fonereingtie) but othe church of Rome, wher boon he neither could not ought without knowledge of the pope to ordeine anie thing anew, or change ought within that kingdome in prejudice thereof . Theres fore whereas he put himselfe and all the rights of his kingdome by way of appealing bnder the protection of the apostolike see: the barons yet without regard had to the same appeale, did seize into their possessiv on the citie of London, and getting them to armour, inforced the king to confirme fuch unreasonable articles, as there appeared for him to confider.

The pope having heard their tale, and confidered of the articles, with bending browes (in witnesse of his indignation) made forthwith this thort answer: the kings am-And is it fo, that the barons of England do go about balladours. to expell their king, which hath taken boon him the " croffe, and is remaining vnoer the protection of the " apostolike sæ? And do they meane indeed to trans " flate the dominion that belongeth to the church of " Rome buto another: By S. Peter we cannot luffer " this inturie to patte onpunithed . Herebpon (credi- " ting the amballadours woods) by the abutce of his contrables of castels within the realme, requiring 10 cardinals, he decreed that all those printledges, which the king had granted buto the loads and barous of this realme, as inforced thereto by their rebellious attempt, should be accounted boid and of none effect. Also he wrote but o the lords, admonishing them by his letters that they thoulo obeie their king, upon paine of his curfle if they thould attempt anic thing that sounded to the contrarie.

At the same time there was in the court of Rome Hect. Boerius. (as Hector Boetius faith) a cardinall named Bualo Cardinall 03 Mallo, a verie couetous person, and such a one (as Gualo. in that place some are never wanting) which for mos nie palled not what he did to further anie mans fuit, without regard either to right or wrong, by whose thiefe travell and means the pope was greatlie induced to favour king Johns caule, and to tudge with him in prejudice of the lords purpoles, as before is erpzeffed. But to proceed. The amballadours being dispatche Polydor. ed, and having the popes prescript, and such other his the amballations with them on the please of the control letters with them as they had obteined of him, res from the pope. turned with all speed into England buto the king (who was come a little before buto Windlore castell) and there declared but him how they fped. It. John being foifull in that they had brought the matter fo well about for his purpole, caused the popes decree The popes to be declared unto the barons, commanding them decree is defreitlie to obeie the same. The barons taking the clared to the matter grienoullie to be thus mocked, with great indignation both blamed king Johns bniuft dealing, 40 and the popes wrongfull judgement, in that he had pronounced against them, without hearing what they had of right to alledge for themselves. There bpon out of hand (notwithstanding the popes prohis will trie their bition and prescript to the contrarie) they determined quarel by dint to trie their cause by dint of swood, and with all speed of swood affembled their powers, which for the greater part they had latelie dismissed and sent home. They fur nished the castell of Rochester with a strong garris fon of men, and placed therein as capteine one Wills liam Albeney, a verie failfull warriour. King John, after he bnderstod that the barons (contemning the popes decree and inhibition) were The in. fenmore offended and bent against him than before, lent detheftions once againe to the pope, to advertise him of their dis to the pope. obedience and great contumacie thewed in refuting to fland to his prefeript. This done, he returned to The bing rethe Ale of Might, and failed from thence to Douer, turneth into where diverse of those his commissaries which he had the Isc of fent to hire foldiers in forcen parts returned to him, talke of such matters, had professed that the kings 60 bringing with them out of diverse countries such a Matt. Paris. multitude of fouldiers and armed men, that the one = Polydor, lie fight of them Aroke the harts of all the beholders with great feare and terroz. Fozout of the parties of The arrivall Poicton and Galcoine, there came men of great no, of foren loulbilitie, and right worthie warriours, as Saucrie de kings aid. Mauleon, Geffrey and Dliver de Buteuile two bie Saucrie de thren, having under them great numbers of god Mankon, fouldiers and fall men of warre. Also out of Bigbant there came Walter Buc, Berard de Sotignie, and on. Godelfall, with the legions of armed men and croffebowes. Likewife there came out of Flans ders other capteins, with diverse bands of souldiers, Ferdinando which Ferdinando earle of Flanders (latelie retureries of flanders) ned out of the French captinitie) for old frendships ders.

The barons

The popes animer buto

Polydor.

Diclence De:

clare their

Matth. Paris,

mellage,

fals furnished and lent once to all him against his limiteds according as he had tremefine. thing John then heming erconered firength as hou him, and being advertises that Milliam be Albenie was entred into the eaffell of Rocheffer with a great number of knights, men of armes and other fouldiers halfer thither with his whole armie, and be-fiegen them within, inforcing bimbelle by all toates possible to win the castell as well by battering the faults: but fire garifon within confiffing of mintie and faure knights before comitances, and other foul-beers defended the place berie manfallie, in hope of refere from the barons, which late as then at Low don: but they comming forward one dairs whenie wito Dartford, when they beard that the king was comming forward in god arate of battell to meet them, byon confideration had of their otone forces, for that they were not able to match him with fort-ing that affared promise which they had made and als to confirmed by their folerance othe, which was that if the cativit thouto chance to be belieged, they would confireined to peels it op buto the king, after it had beene belieged the leace of the leace dates: during which time they have beaten backe their enimies at fundice affaults, with great flaughter and loffe. But bpon grate conceined for the lotte of to manie men, and also because he had line so long about it per he could winne it, to his inclimable colls and charges, was determined to have put them all to death that had kept it. But Sauerie de Pauleon admied him otherwise, left by such crueltie, the barons in any like case thousa be occasioned to be the same extremitie towards such of his people, as by chance might fall into their hands. Thus the bing spaced the Robles

liam de Lancalter, William de Emeford, Thomas de Buleton, Olbert Siffact, Olbert de Bobie, Doie

nell de Albenie, and diverse other to the casfell of Corfe, there to be kept as prisoners. But Robert

Charnie, Kichard Guffo; d, and Thomas de Lincolne were fent to floringham, and fo other were fent to 3 that to call them) and the arcubalisters which had flaine manie of his men during the fiege (as Mat-and gentlemen, sending William de Albenie, Will 4

the king having now got the possession of that hold, 30

At length they within for want of vittels there not faile but raife the fiege.

men, they returned backe agains to the citie, break: 20

Wid de Albe: nic engening of Maugeller CART

k ng John beliegeth the catteff of Bo: chefter.

Bernewell

Bochefter cato the king.

The counter

Brenbalifiers other places. As for all the benflances or peomen (if

Bernewell

to put other in feare that thould to obstimative reliff Accuertic lette as the booke that belonged to Bernewell above faith)there was not any of them hanged, faming one arcubalifier onelie, whome the king had brought by of a child. But how foeuer the king dealt with them after they were velded, true it is as by the fame boke it appeareth) there had beine no flege in those baies more earnealie inforced, nor more obfinatlic defended: for after that all the limmes of 60 the castell had beene renersed and theoreme downe, they kept the maister tower, till halfe thereof was also overthowne, and after kept the other halfe, till through famine they were confirmed to palo, has uing nothing but horffelich and water to luffeine their lines withall.

Here is to be rememberd, that whilest the stege laiethus at Kochester, Hugh de Boues a valiant knight, but full of prior and arrogancie, a Frenchman borne, but bamilhed out of his countrie, came downe to Calice with an huge number of men of warre and fouldiers to come to the aid of king John. But as he was boon the fea with all his people, meaning to land at Doner, by a fudden tempest which role at that infrant, the late Pooph with all his come book has partie was designed by fightwacker. Some after the man bosts of the fame Hogh with the carraies of other immumerable, both of men, women, and children, were found not farre from Permouth, and alt along that coast. There were of them in all fortie thousand, as faith Matthew Paris , for of all those which he brought with him, there was (as it is laid) not one man left alme.

railes with engines, as by gining thereto manie al. 10 The king as the fame went but beto true I know not have guien by charter buto the fact bugh de Boues, the whole countrie of Louthfothe, so that he ment to have expellen the old inhabitants, and to have peopled it with frangers . But whether this was 60 or not, fure it is that he was verie for while for the lotte of this forces and aid thich thus perithed m the leas, though it happened bette well for his links ieas of England, that thould have beene fore opposiles by luch multitude of Arangers, which for the most part must needs have lived been the countrie, to the otter becoming of the inhabitants therefoever they spoudo haux come.

Here is to be noted, that curing the flege of Ros Fale Cop cheffer (as some write) there came out of France to the number nerre hand of leanen thouland men fent from the French king buts the aid of the barous, at the luit of Sacr de Amneie earle of Winchester and other ambailadours that were lent from the barons, during the time of this fiege, although it thould fæme by Marthew Paris, that the fam earle was not fent till after the pope had excommunicated the bas rons as after yee thall beart. The Frenchmen that came over at this first time lanced at Opinell, and at other havens there neere adjoining.

About this leafon, the canons of Porke bicante the archbishops see there has remained boile a long time obteining licence of the king, affembled togither about the election of an archbilhop. And though the bing had once agains earneitlie movied them to preferre Malter Graie bishop of Morceffer , pet they refuled to to doo, and therefore choic sommon de Langton, brother to the archbilhop of Canturburie, which election was afferward made bood by the earnost travell of the king to the pope, breamle his biother the law arthbulhop of Canturburie was known to famour the part of the barons against him, so that the faid Walter Crate was then elected and promo water bis ted to the guiding of the lie of Porke, according to affort. the kings speciall defire in that behalfe.

thew Paris fauth) the king caused them to be hanged, 50 About the fame time allo, pope Irmocent being certified, how the barons of England monito not o beie his preserret, indged them enimies to the church and gane commandement to Peter the billhop of CCLunchester, to the abbat of Reading, and to the subdeacon Pandulph, to pronounce the fentence of ercommunication against them. 15ut they could not at the first erecute the popes commandement berein, by reason that the archbishop of Canturburie, tipo faucured the barons cause, would not permit them. Etherefore the fame archbishop was interdiced out barons parof the church, and from fateing bittine fertice, and also being cited to appeare at Kome, was in danger to be depriced of his miter; had not certeine cardinals intreated for him, and obteined his pardon. The arrisbishop being gone to kome, as well to excele himfelfe in this matter, as to be prefent at the generall councell there holden at that time (for he twas readie to go take the fea thitherwards when the billhop of Colinchester and Pandulph came to him with the March Park popes letters the faud bilhop of Clincheffer : Pan Str burst builth proceeded to the pronouncing of the eccommun. nication against the barons, renewing the same euer cursisbers rie sundaie and holiebay: albeit the barons breass management of them becomes about the barons breass. none of them were expresselic named in the popes elected arch

In.Reg.17.

letters)made none account of the centure, reputing it as void, and not to concerne them in any manner of point. But now to returne to king John.

After he had wone the castell of Kochester (as before you have heard he halted to S. Albons, and Tohn bird there divided his armie into two parts, amointing buthis armis the one to remaine about London, whilest he hims felfe with the other might go into the north to waste and destroic the possessions of certeine losos there, which (as he was informed) went about to raile an 10 armic against him. He made capteins of that armie which he left behind him, his brother Milliam earle of Salifburic, Saucrie de Pauleon, Mill. Brewer, Malter Buc, and others. De himfelfe departed from S. Albons about the 21 day of December, leading his faid armie northwards: in which were chiefe capteins thefe that follow, William erle of Albemarle, Philip de Albency, and John Parthall. Also of frangers, Gerard de Sotigam, and Godffall, with the flemings, the croffebowes, and others.

The first night he laie at Dunstable, and from houses, which belonged to the adversaries, and so kept late in the castell on Christmasse day, and in the mor ning (being S. Stephans day) he went to Langar, and lodged there that night, sending his summons

William Albeney, who had committed the cultodie thereof buto his sonne Picholas de Albeney prest, tofir William de Stodham, and to fir Bugh Char-nelles knights: the which came to the king with the keies of the castell, and surrendered the same buto him, with condition that he Gould be god to their matter the faid William Albeney, and grant buto them their horfes and armour, wher with they would remaine with him winder his peace and protection.

A. John goeth thence palling forwards towards Porthampton, he ochroied by the waie all the manours, places and Matth Paris.

polydor.

Matth Paris.

on his journie till he came to Potingham, where he Potingham. 1216

Beauer caffle in the morning to the castell of Beauer, willing william de Stodham.

The callell of On the next morrow (being S. Johns day) the king 40 bered to the king.

Dunnington caltell taken end raced.

Manh Paris,

Beautre rene went to the castell, and receiving the same, delivered it to the keeping of Geffrey Buteuile, and his brother Dliver. After this the castell of John Lacie at Dunning ton was taken and laid flat to the ground, by commandement of the king, who having accomplished his will in those parties, drew towards Porkelhire, and at his comming thither destroied the houses. townes and manours of those loads and gentlemen which were against him. It is hourible to heare, and 50 lothsome to rehearse the crueltie which was practiced by the fouldiers and men of warre in places where they came, who counting no honour of renowme moze ercellent, noz glozie (as warrfours fap)

Maior nulla quidem quam bello parta videtur, Horrida Mauortis tractare ferociter arma, Hostilique suam temerare in sanguine dextram, and therfore were wholie bent to spoile and ransacke the houses of the people without pitie or compassion, belides the robberies, spoiles and great outrages bled by the fouldiers generallie against the common people. Few there were in that countrie of great linage or wealth, whom the king for their affembling themselves with the barons either spoiled not, 02 put not to crecution. Thus with his armie (to the great defolation of the countrie) he passed forth to the box ders of Scotland, and entring that realme, toke the castell of Barwike, and other places of strength in thoseparts, meaning to have wone more from the Scots, if other vigent businesse had not called him backe againe. This being done, he committed the described the continues of Secretary and the continues of Secretary the continues of Secretary and the continues of Secretar the confines of Scotland, to the keeping of Hugh de khalcous. Balioll and Philip de Pulcotes, affigning to them fuch convenient number of men of warre as was thought expedient, and the custodie of the castels in Ribert de Cle Poskethire he delivered to Robert de Acpount, to pount, Bran Brian de Life, and to Geffrey de Lucic.

Finallie, when he had so ordered things in the Porth parts as flod with his pleasure, fothat there remained no moze but two castels, that is to saic, Mountlorell, and another in Porkelhire that apper- Mountlorell teined to Robert de Kos in possession of the barons, betweet Leis he returned by the borders of Wales into the fouth coffer a Lugparts: and by all the way as he passed, he shewed bozough. great crueltie against his aducrfaries, besieging and taking their castels and strong houses, of the which some he caused to be fortified with garrisons of fouldiers to his owne ble, and some he raced. The like feats were wought by the other armie in the parts about London: for Milliam earle of Salifburie, and Foukes de Brent, with the other capteins which the king had left behind him there, perceiving that the citie would not easilie be wone by anie siege, first furnished the castell of Windloze, Dertford, and Barkhamsted, with such strong garrisons of soulois ers as might watch, opon occasion given to assaile those that should either go into the citie, or come from thence: they marched footh with the relidue of the armie, and palling through the counties of Eller, The earle of and Pertford, Middlefer, Cambridge, Puntington, Solifburie they wasted the countries, and made the townes be- with his arcome tributaries to them. As for the houses, manour the countries places, parkes, and other postestions of the barons, about Lonthem within to yold. This castell apperteined to 30 they walted, spoiled and destroied them, running es don. uen hard to the citie of London and setting fire in the fuburbs.

In this meane time, whilest the king went for wards on his journic northwards, byon the 18 of December last past, the eastell of Hanslap was tar The castell ken by Foukes de Brent, which apperteined buto of Handap. Milliam Panduit. On the same day also was the castell of Tunbrioge taken by the garrison of Ko. Tunbrioge chester, which castell of Tunbzidge belonged to the castell. earle of Clare. Pozeover, the forelaid Founcs de Bedford take Went comming buto Bedford, wan both the towne by Founce ve and castell: for they that had the castell in keeping, Brent. after 7 daies respit (which they obtained at the hands of the faid Foukes) when refcue came not from the lood William Beauchampe their maister, they vell: Will. Beaux ucred it buto the faid Foukes. Unto whom h. John champe. gaue not onlie that caffell, but also committed to his Caffels della keeping the castels of Posthampton, Drfood and nered to the Cambringe. The king had this Foukes in great ellimation, Foukes de and among it other waies to advance him, he gave to him in marriage Margaret de Rivers, a ladie of high nobilitie, with all the lands and possessions that Brent adto hir belonged. Pozeouer, to William earle of Al vanced by bemarle the king delivered the custodie of the cas marriage. fiels of Kockingham, Saivey and Biham. To one Bockingham, Kanulfe Teutonicus, the caffell of Barkehamfeed, Biham. and to Walter Godzenill servant to Koukes de Berkhamsted Brent, he betwhe the keeping of the castell of Hert ford. Thus what on the one part, and what on the of fiell, ther, the barons lost in maner all their possessions from the fouth fea unto the borders of Scotland, the king feizing the fame into his hands, and committing them to the keeping of ffrangers, and such other as he thought moze truffie and convenient. All this while the barons late at London banketting and making merrie, without attempting anie exploit praife-worthie. But pet when they heard by certeine advertisement, what havecke and destruction was made of their houses & possessions abroad, they could not but lament their mileries, and amongst other their complaints which they bettered one to another. they fore blance the pope, as a cheefe cause of all

M.itt.

frep de Lucie.

-Fouker de

thelegals, for that he mainteined and defended the bing against them

The barons accurles by

Indeed about the fame time pope Jimocent , tho before at the instant suit of king John had ercom. municated the barons in generall, did now ercom. municate them by name, and in particular, as thefe. First all the citizens of London which were authors of the mildheefe that had happened by the rebellion of the faid barons. Allo Robert fit; Walter, Saer De Quincie carle of Windelter, B. his sonne, G. De 10 Mandenille, and Cal. his brother the earle of Clare, and G. his fonne, Dearle of Dercford, R. de Percie, O.de Clescie, 3. conestable of Chester, W. de Mow. braie, Will. de Albenie, WI. his sonne, Jd. de 13 jeuse, R. de Cressey, 3. his sonne, Ranulse Fitz Robert, R. earle Bigot, 19. his sonne, Robert de Tere, Foulke fit; Warren, W. Hallet, W. de Dountacute, W. Fit; Marthall, Wi. de Beauchampe, S. de Lime, K. De Wontbigons, and Pichelas de Stutemile, with diverse other. The armie which king John had left behind him in the fouth parts, bender the leading of the earle of Salisburic and other, late not tole, but scowzing the countries abroad (as partlie pæ haue heard) came to S. Comunosburic, and having intelligence there, that diverse knights, ladies and gentlewomen that incre there before their comming, had fled out of that towne, and for their more fasetie were with drawne into the 3le of Clie, they followed them, befieged the 3le, and affailed it on ech fide, fo that ale 30 though they within had fortified the pallages, and appointed men of warre to remaine byon the gard of the fame in places where it was thought most ned, full; yet at length they entred byon them by force, Walter Bucke with his Brabanders being the first that let fot within the 3le towards Perbie. For by reason the waters in the fenes and ditches were hard frolen, to that men might palle by the fame into the faid He, they found means to enter, and fooiled it fro five to five, togither with the cathedrall church, 40 carrieng from thence at their departure a maruellous great prey of gods and cattell.

The barons of the realme being thus affliced with so manic mischeses all at one time, as both by the tharpe and cruell warres which the king made a gainst them on the one side, and by the enmitte of the pope on the other live, they knew not which way to turne them, nor how to like for reliefe . For by the lotte of their complices taken in the castell of Roches fier, they faw not how it should any thing quaile 50 them to toine in battell with the king. Therefore confidering that they were in fuch extremitie of despaire they resolued with themselves to sæke for aid at the Frenchkings enimics hands, and therebpon Saer earle of Winfonne,offering cheffer, and Robert Fitz Walter, with letters binder their feales were fent buto Lewes the forme of Philip the French king, offering him the crowne of England, and fufficient pledges for performance of the fame, and other couchants to be agreed betwirt them, requiring him with all speed to come unto their 60 fuccour. This Lewes had married (as before is faid) 13 lanch daughter to Alfonse king of Callile, nece to king John by his fifter Clianoz.

Now king Philip the father of this Lewes, bes ing glad to have such an occasion to invade the relme of England, which he never loned, promifed willing. lie that his sonne should come onto the aid of the said barons with all convenient speed but first he receive ned foure and twentie hostages which he placed at Campaine for further affurance of the covenants accorded) and here with he prepared an armie, and dis uerfelhips to transport his sonne and his armie of uer into England. In the meane time, and to put the barons in comfort, he fent over a certeine number of armed men, under the leading of the chatelaine of faint Omers and the ctatelaine of Arras, Bugh frech Thacon, Gufface de Bemille, Baldwin Brecell, Will frit min Thacon, Culface de jarmar, Daivour Daten, Continue licanon, licanon, licanon, licanon, barons, datons, ches de policie de la continue de la c Oiles de Herlie, Bilet de Ferlie, and others, the which taking the sea, arrived with one and fortie thips in the Mames, and to came to London the lease the land uen and twentith of Februarie, there they were re- attentice tien and fluenfith of Fedhalis, uperson, and gladnelle, phanistic ceitied of the barons with great for the barons, that Moreover the faid Leines wrote to the barons, that he purpoled by Gods allifance to be at Calice by a day amointed, with an armie redie to palle oner with all fpero unto their fuccours.

The fridaie before Candlemalle day, Sanarie de Rafe Co. Mauleon, and other capteines of the kings lide , laid flege to the caffell of Colcheffer, but having intelligence that the barons which late at London made forward with all speed to come to succour that castell, on the Wednesday after Camblemasic day, being the third of Februarie, they raised their siege, and went backe towards S. Comundburic.

In the meane while, the B. being gone (as per haue heard) to the booders of Scotland, a brute was railed that he was dead, and fecretlie burico at Krading. But this rumour had not time to worke any great alteration, for after he has dispatched his bulinche in the north, as he thought expedient, he returned, and comming into the east parts about the miost of Lent himselfe in person belieged the castell of Colchester, and within a few daies after his comming thither, it was delivered but ohim by Frenchmen that kept it, with condition that they might depart with all their gods and armour, buto their fellowes at Louis don, and that the Englishmen there in companie with them in that cattell, might like wife depart opon reasonable ransoms.

But although that covenant was kept with the Frenchmen, pet the Englishmen were stated and committed to pilon. Where upon when the French mencame to London, they were awichended and charged with treason for making such composition, thereby those Englishmen that were fellowes with them in arms were fecluded from to beneficiall convitions as they have made for themselves. They were in danger to have beine put to death for their enill dealing herein, albeit at length it was concluded that they should remaine in prison till the comming of Lewes, but o whose pleasure their cause should be referred.

After this the castell of Hivingham was wone, which belonged buto earle Robert de Aere. Then the king prepared to beliege London, but the London ners were of luch courage, that they let open their gates, and hearing of the kings approach, made reas die to illue forth to give him battell : wherof the king being aduertifed, withorew backe, but Sauerie de Dauleon was suddenlie set boon by the Londoners, lost manie of his men, and was loze hurt and wours ded himselfe.

The king perceiving that it would not prevaile him to attempt the winning of the citie at that time, diew along it the coast, fortified his castels, and preparco a great name, meaning to encounter his entimie Lewes by sea: but through tempest the thips which he had got togither from Parmouth, Dunwich Lin, and other havens, were dispersed in sunder, and manie of them call awaie by rage and violence of the outragious winds.

Somethat before this time also, when he heard of King Ido the compact made betweet the barons and his ad once again ucrfaries the Frenchmen, be dispatched a mellenger embeth of in all half to the some frontiffener to him what the start the pope. in all half to the pope, fignifieng to him what was in hand and practifed against him, requiring furthers moze the laid pope by his authoritie to cause Lewes

Ralfe Cog.

The lozes feno to the crowne.

The 3le of Clie ipoiled.

Polydor. Bernewell.

Carbinall

Matth.Paris.

The French

tions to the popta legat

Matth. Weft.

Suaio.

Gualo.

to state his tournie, and to succour those revels in England which he had alreadie ercommunicated. This he needed not have done, had he beene indued with such produce and prowelle as is requilit to be planted in one that beareth rule, of whom it is faid,

Cui si quando Deus rerum permittat habenas, Imperyj decus, tunc aurea secula fiunt, Tune floret virtus, terrasque Astrea reuisit, Pax viget, vitium duris cohibetur habenis.

bare to low a faile, in that he would be fo folified as being a king, to luffer blurped lupzemalie to be caruer of his kingdome. But let bs lee the confe-Anno. Reg. 18. quence. The pope desirous to helpe king John all that he might (bicause he was now his vastali) sent his legat Bualo into France, to diffwade king Whi lip from taking anie enterpaile in hand against the king of England. But king Philip though he was hings allegas content to heare what the legat could faie, pet by no meanes would be turned from the execution of his 20 purpole, alledging that king John was not the lawfull king of England, having first blurped and taken it awaie from his nephue Arthur the lawfull inheritour, and that now lithens as an enimie to his owne rotall dignitie he had given the right of his hingdome awate to the pope (which he could not do without confent of his nobles) and therefore through hisowne fault he was worthilie deprived of all his kinglie honoz. For the kingdome of England (faith he)nouer belonged to the patrimonie of S. Peter, 30 no: at anie time thall. For admit that he were rightfull king, yet neither he not anie other prince may give awaie his kingdome without the allent of his barons, which are bound to defend the same, and the prerogative rotall, to the ottermost of their powers. Furthermore (faith he) if the pope do meane to mainteine this errour, he thall give a perilous eram ple to all kingdomes of the world. Perewithall the Pobles of France then present, protested also with stand to the death, which is, that no king or prince at his will and pleasure might give awaie his king dome, or make it tributarie to anie other potentate. thereby the Pobles thould become theall of subject

> Lewes on the morrow following, being the 26 of Aprill, by his fathers procurement, came into the councell chamber, and with frowning loke beheld the legat, where by his procurator he defended the cause 50 that moved him to take byon him this fournie into England, disprousing not onelie the right which king John had to the crowne, but also alledging his owne interest, not onelie by his new election of the barons, but also in the title of his wife, whose mother the quene of Castile remained onelie alive of all the brethren and litters of Henrie the fecond late king of England (as before ye have heard.) The legat and answer herebuto, that king John had taken co byon him the croffe, as one amointed to go to warre 60 against Gods enimies in the holie land, wherefore he ought by decree of the generall councell to have peace for foure yeares to come, and to remaine in sucrtie buder protection of the apostolike see. But Lewes replied thereto, that king John had by warre first invaded his castels and lands in Picardie, and walled the fame, as Buncham castell and Liens, with the countie of Guilnes which belonged to the fæ of the faid Leives.

to a forcen governour. These things were done at Lions in the quindene after Caffer.

But thefe reasons not with standing, the legat war ned the French king on paine of curling, not to luffer his sonne to go into England, and likewise his lonne, that he should not presume to take the tournie in hand. But Lewes hearing this, declared that his father had nothing to do to forbid him to profecute his right in the realme of England, which was not holden of him, and therefore required his father not to hinder his purpole in such things as belonged nothing to him, but rather to licence him to loke the recouerie of his wives right, which he meant to purfue with perill of life, if need thould require.

The legat perceiving he could not prevaile in his fute made to king Philip, thought that he would not thereas by meanes of defeas in the contrarie, he 10 spend time longer in vaine, in further treating with him, but fped him forth into England, obteining pet a safeconduct of the French king to passe through his resline. Leives in like maner, purposing by all The French meanes to preuent the legat, first dispatched footh kings some amballadours in all half buto the court of Rome to fendeth to ercuse himselfe to the pope, and to render the reas the pope. fons that most specialite moued him to proceed forward in his enterprice against king John, being called by the barons of England to take the crowne thereof opon him. This done, with all convenient speed he came downe to Calice, where he found 680 Be commeth thips well appointed and trimmed, which Gustace to Calice. furnamed the monke had gathered and prepared there readie against his comming.

Lewes therefore forthwith imbarking himselfc with his people, and all necessarie provisions for such the taketh a fournie, toke the fea, and arrived at a place called the fea. Stanchore in the Ile of Tenet, byon the 21 day of Pate, and Mortlie after came to Sandwich, there in Belandeth landed with all his veoule where he also income in Bent. landed with all his people, where he also incamped bpon the those by the space of thee daics. In which meane time there came buto him a great number of those loods and gentlemen which had fent for him, and there everieone apart and by himselfe sware feethers do homoge him altie and homage buto him, as if he had beene their tohim.

true and naturall prince.

King John about the same time that Lewes thus arrived, came to Dover, meaning to fight with his adversaries by the way as they should come for one voice, that in defense of this article they would 40 ward towards London. But yet opon other adultes ment taken, he changed his purpole, bicaule he put fome doubt in the flemings and other ftrangers, of Mauth Paris whome the most part of his armie consisted, bicause he knew that they hated the Frenchmen no more than they did the English. Therefore furnishing the castell of Doner, with men, munition, and vittels, he left it in the keeping of Pubert de Burgh, a man of notable prowelle & valiancie, and returned himselfe buto Canturburie, and from thence toke the high wate towards Minchester. Lewes being advertised that king John was retired out of Bent, palled through the countrie without anie incounter, and wan all the castels and holds as he went, but Douer he could not win.

At his comming to Rochester, he laid stege to the Rochester cacassell there, and wan it, causing all the strangers stell wone. that were found within it to be hanged. Ahisdone, Lewescomhe came to London, and there received the homage meth to Lonof those loads and gentlemen which had not vet done don. their homage to him at Sanowich. On the other part he toke an oth to mainteine and performe the old lawes and cultomes of the realme, and to reffore to eueric man his rightfull heritage and lands, requiring the barons furthermore to continue faithfull towards him, affuring them to bring things so to palle, that the realme of England Chould recover the former dignitie, and they their ancient liberties. Poseover he vico them to courteoulie, gave them fo faire words, and made such large promises, that they belœued him with all their harts. But alas! Cur vincit opinio verum?

The rumour of this pretended outward courteffe being once speed through the realme, caused great numbers of people to come flocking to him, among mom frech kings fonne main= tic to the England.

them the croffe.

Matth, Paris.

Moblemen reuciting fro k. Tohn bnto Lewes.

Simon Lag: to Lewis.

Cardinall

moth ouer into England.

The more pact of the ttrangers bes parefrom the feruice of la.

John.

william de

Collingham a gentleman

pf Sulker.

whome were diverte of those which before had taken part with king John, as William earle Warren, William carle of Arundell, William carle of Sa lifburic, William Parthall the ponger, and diverfe other lumoling verelie that the French kings sonne should now obtaine the kingdome, who in the meane time ordeined Simon Langton afore mentioned, to conchancellog behis chancellour, by whose preaching and erhortation on, as well the citizens of London as the barons that were excommunicated, caused dinine service to be celebrated in their prefence, incuced thereto, bicaufe Lewes had alreadie fent his procurators to Kome before his comming into England, there to thew the godnesse of his cause and quarell.

But this qualled them not neither toke his ercufe any fuch effect as he did hope it thould : for those amballadoes that king John had fent thither, replied as gainst their assertions, so that there was hard hold about it in that court, albeit that the pope would des cre nothing till he hard further from his legat Bua 20 lo, tho the same time (being advertised of the proces dings of Lewes in his fournie) with all diligence has fied over into England, and palling through the middle of his adverfaries, came buto king John, then fofourning at Cloceffer, of Wome he was most foiful lie received, for in him king John repoled all his hope of victorie. This legat immediatlie affer his comming did ercommunicate Lewes by name, with all his fautors and complices, but speciallie Si mon de Langton, with bell, boke, and candle, as the maner was . Howbeit the fame Simon, and one 30 Gernale de Hobzug deane of S. Pauls in London, with other, alleaged that for the right and frate of the cause of Lewes, they had alreadie appealed to the court of Rome, and therefore the fentence published by Sualother twice as boid.

At the same time also, all the knights and men of warre of Flanders and other parts beyond the feas, which had ferued the king, departed from him, the Poidoning enclic excepted: and part of them that thus went from him referted buto Lewes, and entred into his wages; but the relique repaired home into their owne countries, to that Lewes being thus increased in power, departed from London, and marching towards Winchester, he wan the castels Caffels won of Rigat, Gilford, and Farnham. From thence he went to Mincheffer, where the citie was pelded unfolim, with all the eastels and holds thereabout, as Wolnesop, Dotham, and Beaumere.

TChilest the said Lewes was thus occupied in Suffer, about the subduing of that countrie buto his obeisance, there was a young gentleman in those parts named William de Collingham, being of a valorous mind, and loathing forren subteation, who would in no wife do fealtie to Lewes, but allembling togither about the number of a thousand are thers, kept himfelfe within the woods and defert plas ces, whereof that countrie is full, and so during all the time of this warre, the wed himselfe an enimie to the Frenchmen, flateng no fmall numbers of them, as man of English bloud! And D

Grandia que aggreditur fortis discrimina virtus!

In like manner, all the fortreffes, townes, and caffels in the fouth parts of the realme were subdued unto the oberfance of Lewes (the castels of Doner and Windsoze onelie excepted.) Within a little while affer, Will. De Mandenille, Robert Fit; Walter, and William de Duntingfield, with a great power of men of warre, did the like unto the countries of effer and Suffolke. In which featon, king John for tified the callels of Wallingford, Corfe, Warham, Buffolo, the Clies, and dinorfe others with munité on and vittels. About which time letters came also onto Lewes from his procurators, abom he had fent to the pope, by the teno; whereof he was admertised. that notivithstanding all that they could do or say, the pope meant to ercommunicate him, and did but onelie state till he had received some advertisement from his legat Gualo.

The chefelt points (as we find) that were laid by The points Lewes his procurators against king John were wherewith thefe, that by the murther committed in the person of was charged, his nethue Arthur, he had beine condemned in the parlement chamber, before the French king, by the peeres of France, and that being fummoned to apveare he bad oblimatelie refused so to do , and there, fore had by good right forfeited not onelie his lands within the precinct of France, but also the realme of England, which was now due onto the faid Lewes as they alledged, in right of the ladie Blanch his wife, daughter to Clianoz quene of Spaine . But the pope refelled all such allegations as they produced for profe hereof , flæmed to defend king Johns cause verie pithilie; but namelie, in that he was but der the protection of him as supreme lood of England: againe, for that he had taken boon him the crosse (as before yee have heard.) But now to returne where we left.

About the feast of faint Margaret'. Lewes with the losos came againe to London, at whose comming, the tower of London was ywlded by to him by appointment, after which the French capteins and gentlemen, thinking themselves assured of the realme, began to their their inward dispositions and hatred toward the Englishmen, and forgetting all The French former promifes (luch is the nature of firangers, and men begins men of meane estate, that are once become loops of the most begins in felius in their delires, according to the poets words, Asperius nihil est humili cum surgis in alsum) they did manie ercessive outrages, in spoiling and robbing the people of the countrie, without pitie oz mercie. Pozeouer they did not onelie bzeake into mens houses, but also into churches, and toke out of the fame such bessels and ornaments of gold and sil ver, as they could late hands upon : for Lewes had not the power now to rule the greedie fouldiers, be ing wholte given to the spoile. But most of all their tyrannie did appeare in the cast parts of the realme, when they went through the countries of Eller, Suffolke and Porthfolke, where they miserablie spoiled the townes and villages, reducing those quarters boder their subjection, and making them tributaries onto Lewes in most feruile and flauith manner . Furthermoze, at his com- The called a ming to Poswich, he found the castell void of des for a propie fenle, and to toke it, without any reliffance, and put Lewes. into it a garison of his souldiers. Also he sent a pow er to the towne of Lin, which conquered the fame, and take the citizens prisoners, causing them to Lin. paie great lummes of monie for their ransoms. Por ouer, Thomas de Burgh, chateleine of the castell of Thomas de Porwich, the open the approch of the Frenchmen to prifoner. the citie, fled out in hope to escape, was taken priso he twice them at any aduantage. D worthie gentles 60 ner, and put bider fafekeping. He was brother bito Hubert de Burgh capteine of Douer callell.

Pow when Lewes had thus finithed his enterpair les in those parts, he returned to London, and those Saunt mal lie therespon created Gilbert de Gaunt earle of carle of Lw Lincolne, amointing him to go thither with all cone coinc. utnient speed, that he might relift the illues made by them which die hold the cattels of Pottingham and Dewarke, walling and spoiling the possessions and lands belonging to the barons nære adjoining to the fame caffels. This Gilbert De Baunt then, togither with Robert de Ropcley, comming into that countrie, twie the citie of Lincolne, and brought all the Lincolne countrie under autication (the castell onlie excepted.) wone.

their kind. Immen. fat.9.

Caffels fortis fi by hing John.

Polland in Linconthire inuaded.

yothethire Lewes.

The legat Gualo gathe=

nelleth in

Rafe Cog.

baine to take

After that, they invaded Holland, and spoiling that countrie, made it also tributarie unto the French. Likewife, Robert de Ros, Peter de Bruis, and Rie dard Percie, suboued Poake and all Poakethire, bringing the fame under the obeifance of Lewes. The king of Scots in like fort fuboued onto the faid Lewes all the countrie of Posthumberland, ercept the castels which bugh de Balioll, and thilip de Bulcotes valiantlie defended against all the force of the

And as these wicked revels made a prev of their owne countrie, so the legat Guallo not behind for his part to get fomething per all should be gone, byon a falkonith of woluth appetite fleeced the church, con-lidering that,

Η δι άρη παραμείζεται μινήθη δε τοι 'εργον, μελέτη δε τὶ "δργον οΦέλλει, and toke prories of enerie cathedrall thurth & house of religion within England, that is to fay, for everie prorie fiftic Millings. Poreover, he sequestred all the 20 benefices of those persons and religious men, that either aided or counselled Lewes and the barons, in their attempts and enterpiles. All which benefices he we office converted to his owne ble and to the ble of his chapleins.

In the meane time, Lewes was brought into some god hope thozough meanes of Thomas de Burgh, whom he toke prisoner (as before you have beard) to persuade his brother Bubert to peeld by the castell of Douer, the siege whereof was the next 30 enterpife which he attempted. For his father king Hilly, hearing that the same was kept by a garri-lon, to the behose of king John, wrote to his sonne, blaming bim that he left behind him foffrong a fortreffe in his enimies hands. But though Leives inforced his whole indeuour to win that castell, vet all his travell was in vaine. For the faid Bubert oe Burgh, and Gerard de Sotigam, who were cheefe capteins within, did their belt to defend it against him and all his power, lo that despairing to win it by force, he affaired to obteine his purpole, by threatning to hange the capteins brother before his face, if he would not peeld the soner. But when that would not ferue, he fought to win him by large offers of gold and filuer. Howbeit, such was the fingular constant tie of Hubert, that he would not give anic eare buto those his flatering motions. Then Lewes in a great furie menaced that he would not once depart from thence, till he had won the castell, and put all them within to death, and began to affaile it with moze 50 force than before he had done.

The barons also, which at this season lay at London, making a rode to Cambridge, toke the towne, and after went fouth into Posthfolke and Suffolke (as it were to gather up such scraps as the French had left) spoiling those countries verie pitifullie, thur thes and all. They constrained the townes of Permouth, Dunwich & Giplwich, to pay to them great lummes of monie by wate of ransoming. And at length returning by Colchester, they vsed like place 60 tiles there. From thence they returned to London, and thostlie after, buder the conduct of the earle of Peners (opon a sudden) going to Windsoze, they late a firong flege about that castell; in the which was capteine Ingelard de Athie, with firtie valiant knights, sother men of war of their luit, the which manfullie Aod at defense.

In the moneth of August, Alexander king of Ilexamor & Scotland came through the countrie unto the liege of Scots both of Douer, and there did homage unto Lewes, in bonnage to K. right of his tenure holden of the kings of England, and then returned home, but in his comming by, as he came by castell Bernard in the countrie of Has liwerkfolke (which apperteined unto Hugh de Ba-lioli) he lost his brother in law the lord Enstace de Chis Cultace Melcie, who was ariken in the forehead with a quar had married rell, as he rode in companie of the king neere onto Alccander, the same castell, to view if it were possible bpon anie fide to win it by affault.

About the same time, or rather in the peare last pall as some hold, it fortuned that the viccount of Welune a French man, fell siche at London, and Maul. Paris. perceiving that death was at hand, he called onto him certeine of the English barons, which remained in the citte, ppon falegard thereof, and to them made The vicount this protestation: I lament (faith he) your destruct of Melune tion and defolation at hand, because ye are ignorant inconcreth of the perila hanging over nour books. For this true of the perils hanging over your heads. For this one of Lewes. derstand, that Lewes, and with him 16 earles and barons of France, haue secrettie Swoone (if it Shall " fortune him to conquere this realme of England, >> to be crowned king) that he will kill, banish, and confine all those of the English nobilitie (which now do ferue under him, and perfecute their ofunc king) > as traitours and rebels, and further moze will dispos >> fesse all their linage of such inheritances as they now hold in England. And bicaufe (faith he) you thall not have doubt hereof, I which lie here at the point ? of death, do now affirme but o you, and take it on the perill of my foule, that I am one of those firteen that haue swozne to performe this thing : wherefore I ad-

When these words of the lord of Welune were o vened but o the barons, they were, and not without cause, in great doubt of themselves, so, they saw how Lewes had alrevie placed and let Frenchmen in most of such castels and to wines as he had gotten, the right thereof indeed belonged to them. And a The English game, it greened them much to bnoerkand, how bee nobilitie be sides the hatred of their prince, they were everic sun, ginneth to Daig and holiedate openlie accurred in enerte church, the match lothat manie of them inwardlie relented, and could which they have bin contented to have returned to king John, had made if they had thought that they Chould thankfullie have with Lewes.

spech was vitered he ffreightwates died.

bæne receiued.

In this yeare, about the 17 of Julie, pope Innocent died, at ichofe beath (being knowen in England) of pope Inall they that were enimies to king John greatlie remocent, foised, for they were in great hope that his succesfour would have rather inclined to their part, than to the kings. But it fell out otherwife, for Ponorius Ponorius the the third that succeeded the same foresaid Innocent, third chosen mainteined the same cause in desense of king John. pope. as earnesslie or rather more than his predecessour had done, sending with all speed his buls over into England to confirme Bualo in his former authoritie of legat, commanding him with all indeuour to proced in his businesse, in mainteining the king as gainst Lewes, and the distoiall English nobilitie that after the fair Lewes. But now to our purpole.

Ling John lieng all this while at Winchester, and having knowledge how his adverfaries were dailie occupied in most hard enterprises, as in belieging fundzie ffrong and innincible places, fent forth his commissioners to assemble men of warre, and to ale lure unto his service all such, as in hope of prey, were minded to follow his flandard, of the which there reforted to him no finall number. So that has uing gotten togither a competent armie for his purpole, he brake with of Winchester, as it had beene an hideous tempete of weather, beating downe all The honocla things that flod in his wate, fending forth his peor which king ple on echilde to wall the countries, to burne up the Ishninate in townes and villages, to woile the churches a church townes and villages, to spoile the churches a church eithes acute men. With which fuccesse still increasing his furie, farics.

uife you to provide for your owne fafeties, and your >> realmes which you now destroie, and heepe this thing, fecret which I have betered buto you. After this The vicouns of Melune Dicth.

Fermouth) Dumwich, & Sufwich

12ozthfolke and Suffolke.

he turned his ti ole biolence into Cambridgefhire, libere he did erceding great hurt. Then entring into the countries of Porthfolke and Suffolke, he committed the like rage, wast, and destruction, in the lands and policifions that belonged buto the earle of Arundell, to Roger Bigot, William de Hunting field, and Roger de Creffey.

Che liege railed from windlog.

The barons in the meane time that lay at flege before the castle of Windloze, hearing of that hauocke with king John had made in the cast parts of the realine, secrettie in the night season raised their camps, and leaning their tents behind them, with all fpeed made towards Cambaioge. But king John by faithfull espials, having advertisement of their in tent, which was, to get betwirt him and the places of his refuge, withozew him and got to Stamford, per they might reach to Cambridge, to that milling their purpole, after they had taken some spoiles abroad in the countrie, they returned to London. Ling John from Stamford, marched toward Lincolne, bicaufe 20 he heard that the castell there was befreged. But those that had belieged it, as Gilbert de 刄(n.

Gilbert de Gaunt fleth from the face of king John.

The abbeics

burgh & Crow land fpoiled.

of Deter:

Bernewell.

Saunt, and others, hearing that king John was comming towards them, durft not abide him, but fled, and fo escaped. The king then turned his journie towards the marthes of Wales, and there did much burt to those places that belonged to his adnersaries. After this also, and with a verie pulfant armie he went efflones callivards, and palling through the countries, came againe into the counties of Porth 3 folke and Suffolke, walting and affliding all that came in his waie, and at length comming to Lin, was there toifullie received. Then keeping forth northwards, he spoiled the townes and abbeies of Deterburgh and Crowland, where a number of the kings enimies were withdrawne into the church, but Saueric de Mauleon, being fent forth to læke them, found them in the church the morrow after S. Pfca ell, and drew them out by force, spoiled the house, and getting a great botie and prey of cattell and other 40 riches, he with his people conucied the fame awaie at his departing, after he had ranfacked enerie coze ner of the durch, and other the houses and places belonging to that abbeic.

The loffe of the kings carriageg.

Matth.Paris. Matth. West.

Iting John falleth licke of an ague. Matth. Paris.

Lafoid. Matth. West. Matt. Paris.

King John departed this

Thus the countrie being walted on each hand, the king halted forward till be came to Wellestreme fands, where passing the washes he lost a great part of his armie, with horses and carriages, so that it was judged to be a punishment amounted by God. that the spoile which had beine gotten and taken out 50 of churches, abbeies, and other religious houses, fould perith, and be lost by fuch means togither with the spoilers . Det the king himselfe, and a few other, escaped the violence of the waters, by following a god guide. But as some haue written , he toke such grafe for the loffe fuffeined at this pallage, that im mediatlie therespon he fell into an ague, the force and heat whereof, togither with his immoderate feeding on raive peaches, and drinking of new fider, so increased his sicknesse, that he was not able to 60 rive, but was faine to be carried in a litter presentlie made of twigs, with a couch of frame wiver him, without any bed or pillow, thinking to have gone to Lincolne, but the difeafe fill fo raged and grew bpon him, that he was inforced to ffair one night at the ca. fiell of Laford, and on the next day with great paine, cauled himfelfe to be caried unto Delvarke, there in the callell through anguith of mind, rather than through force of ficknesse, he departed this life the night before the ninetenth day of Daober, in the peare of his age liftic and one, and after he had reigned featientene yeares, fir moneths, and featien and twentie daies.

There be which have written, that after he had lost his armie, he came to the abbete of Swineshead in Lincolnethire, and there understanding the cheave. nesse and plentie of come, thewed himselfe greatlie displeased there with, as he that for the hat red light he bare to the English people, that had so traitezons lie renolted from him buto his adverfarie Leines. withed all miferie to light opon them, and therebyon fait in his anger, that he would cause all kind of graine to be at a farre higher price, per manievaire: should passe. Takere byon a monke that heard him: speake such words, being moused with teals for the oppellion of his countrie, game the king poilon in a cup of ale, wherof he first toke the affaie, to cause the Caxton. hing not to suspect the matter, and to they both oted in manner at one time.

There are that write, how one of his otone fer: Gisburn & aliq uants did conspice with a convert of that abbete, and that they prepared a bith of peares, which they pollo ned, the of the whole number excepted, which dish the laid convert presented but him . And when the king suspected them to be possoned indeed, by reason that fuch pretious fromes as he had about him, cast forth a certeine liveat, as it were bewrateng the poison, he compelled the said convert to tast and eat some of them, who knowing the thee peares which were not polloned, toke and eat those thee, which when the king had læne, he could no longer absteine, but fell to, and eating greedilie of the rest, died the fame night, no bort hamening to the convert, who thorough helpe of fuch as bare no god will to the lk. found thiff to escape, and conneted himselfe awaie from danger of receiving due punishment for lo wicked a beed.

Belide thefe reports which per have heard, there The bands are other that waite, how he died of furfeting in the reports of night, as Rafe Niger; fome, of a bloubte fifr, as one waters, to faith that writeth an addition toto Roger Houeden, terning the And Rafe Cogheshall satth, that comming to Lin, beatholing (where he amointen Sauerie de Manulennin he com (where he appointed Sauerie de Panleon to be cap) feine, and to take order for the fortifieng of that towne)he take a furfet there of immoverat viet, and withall fell into a latke, and after his latke had left him, at his comming to Laford in Lindley, he was let bloud: furthermore to increase his other greefes and for owes for the loffe of his carriage, ternels and men, in palling ouer the wathes, which troubled him fore; there came onto him medengers from Hubert be Burgh , and Berard de Sotegam capteins of Douer castell, advertising him, that they were not aable to reliff the forceable allalts and engins of the enimies, if specie succour came not to them in due time. Whereat his grafe of mind being doubled, fo as he might fæme even oppelled with forrow, the same increased his bisease so behementlie, that within a small time it made an end of his life (as before pe haue heard.)

The men of warre that served buder his entignes, being for the more part bired fouldiers and frangers, came togither, and marching footh with his bodie each man with his armour on his backe, in warlike order, conveied it buto Warreffer, where he was pompoullie buried in the cathedrall church before the high altar, not for that he had to appointed (as fome write but bicaufe it was thought to be a place Bernewell of most sucrtic for the lords and other of his freends there to affemble, and to take order in their bulineffe now after his decease. And bicaule he was some that fat and corpulent, his bowels were taken out of his bodie, and buried at Crorton abbeic, a house of monks of the order called Pramonstratenses, in Staffordhire, the abbat of which house was his phytician.

How loener or there loener or then loener he died, it is not a matter of such moment that it should impeach

dij

Plays, in Perf.

impeach the credit of the Aorie: but certeine it is that he came to his end, let it be by a furfet, og by os ther meanes ordeined for the Chartening of his life. The manner is not so materiall as the truth is certeine. And sucrlie, he might be thought to have procured against himselfe manie molestations, manie anguithes & verations, which nipt his hart & gnawd his very bowels with manie a loze fymptome oz pal tion: all which he might have withfrod if fortune had had remained towards him inuivable, that his po bles with multitudes of adherents had not with fuch thamefull apostatie withstoo him in open fight, that forcen force had not weakened his dominion, or rather robbedhim of a maine branch of his regiment. that he himselse had not sought with the spoile of his owne people to please the imaginations of his ill affeded mind; that courtiers & commoners had with one aftent performed in dutie no lette than they pretended in veritie, to the preservation of the state and 20 the securitie of their sourceigne: all which presumos sed plagues concurring, that happinesse could the king acrogate to himselfe by his imperiall title, which was through his owne default to imbezelled, that a small remanent became his in right, when by oven hostilitie and accurated papalie the greater poy tion was pluckt out of his hands.

Here therefore we lie the issue of domesticall or homebred broiles, the fruits of variance, the gaine that rifeth of diffention, thereas no greater no. fa, 30 fer fortification can betide a land, than when the inhabitants are all alike minded. By concord manie an hard enterpate (in common fence thought unpol fible) is atchined, manie weake things become so des fended, that without manifold force they cannot be distoluced. From division and mutinies do issue (as out of the Arciane horse ruines of rotalties, and decases of communalties. The line wes of a realme is supposed of some to be substance and wealth; of other fome policie and power; of other some convenient 40 defenses both by water and land: but a most excellent description of a well fortified countrie is that of Plautus, fet downe in most pithie words and graue fentences; no lesse worthis to be written than read and confidered. The description is this. si incola bene sunt morati pulchrè munitu regnu arbitror: Perfidia & peculatus ex vrbe & auaritia si exulent, Quarta inuidia, quinta ambitio, sexta obtrectatio, Septimum periurium, octana indulgentia, Nona muria decima quod pessimum ag gressu scelus : Hac nisi inde aberus cetuplex murus reb secundis paru est. And therefore no maruell though both courtiers and commoners fell from king John their naturall prince, and twke part with the entinie; not onelie to the disgrace of their sourcigne, but even to his overthrow, and the depopulation of the whole land; lith these maine bulwooks and rampfers were wanting; and the contrarie in most ranke fort and detestable manner extended their virulent forces.

But we will furceasse to aggravate this matter, 60 lich the same is sufficientlie byged in the verie course of the historic concerning his acts and deeds, continuco to the verie day of his death, and the verie time of his buriall, uhereof I faie thus much, that whether it was his will to be interred, as is aforclaid, or tipe: ther his copple being at the disposing of the surul uers, to elea the place as a convenient flore boule for a princes bones, I leave it as doubtfull, and therfore bindetermined, effeening the leffe to labour therein, bicause the truth can hardlie by certeintie be winnowed out, but by confedurall supposals aimed and that at. Potwithstanding, in my page sudgement it is verie likelie (first in respect of the time which was superstitious and popish; secondice by reason of the custome of funerall rites then commonlie vsed) that he was buried in the faid place for order fake, a his bodic (if I may prelume to farre by warrant of mine authoz) wzamed in a monks cowle and to laid in his grave or tome. For the manner was at that time, in such fort to burie their Pobles and great men, who were induced by the imaginations of monks and fond fansies of freers to believe, that the faid cowle was an amulet or defensitive to their soules from beene so favourable, that the localtie of his subjects 10 hell and hellish hags, how or in what somer fort they died; either in forrow and repentance for finne, or in blafthemic, outrage, impatiencie, 02 desperation.

This forme of funerals was frequented in Malcs, hauing beine first brewed and broched in England, from whence (if we may give credit to our late Chio, Humf Lhloyd nographers) as from a poisoned spring it spred it David Powell, felfe into Wales. For the first abbeie or frierie that is read to have beine erected there, fince the diffolution of the noble houle of Bango2, which lauoured not of Romish diegs, was the Twy Gwyn, with was builded in the years 1 1 4 6. Afterwards these vers mine swarmed like bees, or rather crawled like lice over all the land, and drew in with them their lowfie religion, tempered with I wot not how manie mile lians of abhominations; having otterlie forgotten the lection which Ambrofius Telefinus had taught them [tho writ in the yeare 540, when the right that Cian faith which Joseph of Arimathia taught the Ne of Aualon) reigned in this land, before the proud and bloothirstie monke Augustine infected it with the poilon of Komish errozs] in a certeine ode, a part whereof are these sew verses insuing,

> Gwae'r offeiriad byd, Nysangreifftia gwyd, Acny phregetha: Gwae ny cheidw ey gail, Acefyn vigail, Ac nys areilia: Gwae ny theidw ey dheuaid, Rhae bleidhie Rhiefeniaid, Aiffon grewppa,

Wo be to that preest yborne, That will not cleanelie weed his corne, Andpreach his charge among: Wo be to that shepheard (I saie) That will not watch his fold alwaie, As to his office dooth belong: Wo be to him that dooth not keepe, From rauening Romish wolucs his sheepe, With staffe and weapon strong.

This (as not impertinent to the purpole) I have recorded, partlic to thew the palpable blindnes of that age wherein king John lived, as also the religion which they reposed in a rotten rag, esteming it as a Scala coli malander tolife; but speciallie inferred to this end, that we may fetch some light from this clieve candle (though the same sæme to be duskish $ dim) whereby we may be lead to conceive in reason and common fenfe, that the interrement of the king was according to the cultome then in vie and request, and therefore by all likelihoos he was burico as the pieces and fraces of the land were wont to be in those dates, after the maner above mentioned.

But to let this palle as a colo discourse of a coffen of bones concred with closs of claic; you hall king Johns binderstand that he lest behind him posseritie of both children. feres. For he had iffue by his wife queene Flabell tivo sonnes, Henrie who succeded him in the kings dome, and Richard; their daughters, Joans married to Alexander king of Scotland, Alabell coupled in matrimonic with the emperour Frederike the fe-

Thus in Era alith almost word for

Matth. Paris.

Polydor.

Ralij,

cond, and Cliano, whome William earle of Gloce ffer had to wife . He had also another daughter (as fome have left in writing) called Clianoz.

The was comelie of Cature, but of loke and countenance displeasant and angrie, somewhat cruell of nature, as by the writers of his time he is noted, and not to hardie as doubtfull in time of perill and dans ger . But this fameth to be an enulous report btte. red by those that were given to speake no goo of him idome they inwardlie hated. Howbeit some give i this witnesse of him (as the author of the boke of Bernewell abbete and other) that he was a great and mightie prince, but pet not verie fortunate, much like to Marius the noble Romane, talking of for time both wates: bountifull and liberall buto frame gers, but of his owne people (for their dailie treasons practifed towards him)a great oppellour, fo that he trufted more to forreners than to them, and therfore in the end he was of them otterlie forfaken.

Merelie, who so cuer shall consider the course of the 2 bistorie written of this prince, he thall find, that he bath bene little beholden to the writers of that time in which he lived : for scarfelie can they aford him a god word, ercept then the trueth inforceth them to rome out with it as it were against their willes. The occasion whereof (as some thinke) was, for that he was no great frænd to the clergie. And pet buboub tedlie his deds thew he had a zeale to religion, as it was then accompted: for he founded the abbete of Beauleau in the new forrest, as it were in recom. 3 penie of certaine parish durches, which to inlarge the fame forrest he caused to be throwne downe and rul

De builded the monasteric of Farendon, and the abbite of Pales in Spopthire : he repaired Gods Now where his fathers concubine Rolamund lais interred; he was no finall benefactor to the minster of Lichfield in Staffordhire; to the abbete of Cro. kelden in the fame thire, and to the chappell at Inatelburgh in Pozkthire. So that (to lay that I thinke) 40 he was not so boto of denotion towards the church, as divers of his entmies have reported, who of meere malice conceale all his vertues, and hive none of his vices; but are plentifull inough in letting forth the fame to the ottermost, and interpret all his dow ings and falengs to the world, as may appeare to those that adulfedlie read the works of them that write the order of his life, which may leme rather an inusative than a true historie: neverthelesse, sith we cannot come by the truth of things through the ma, 50 lice of writers, we must content our selnes with this bufrændlie description of his time . Certeinelie it Chould ferme the man had a princelie heart in him, and wanted nothing but faithfull subjects to have aflisted him in reucnging such wrongs as were done and offered by the French king and others.

Poseouer, the prior and pretended authoritie of the cleargie he could not well abive, when they went as bout to wrest out of his hands the prerogative of his princelie rule and gouernement. True it is, that to mainteine his warres which he was forced to take in hand, as well in France as elfembere, he was con-Areined to make all the thiff he could denile to reco. uer monte, and bicause he pinched their purles, thep conceined no finall hatred against him , which when he perceived, and wanted peraduenture discretion to patte it over, he discourred now and then in his rage his immoderate displeasure, as one not able to brible his affections, a thing berie hard in a front fo mach, and thereby milled now and then to compalle that which otherwise he might verie well have brought to valle.

It is written, that be meant to have become few Math. Pak Darie (for maintenance fake against his owne dillot all subjects, and other his adversaries) buto Wira. muneline the great king of the Saracens : but for the truth of this report I have little to faie, and therefore I leave the credit thereof to the authors. It is reported likewife, that in time when the realine o frod interdicted, as he was abroad to hunt one day, it chanced that there was a great frag or hart killed, which when he came to be broken op, promed to be be. rie fat and thicke of fleth; Dh(faith he) that a plefant ,, life this deere hath led, and yet in all his daies he neuer heard malle. To conclude, it may feine, that in some respects be was not greatlie superstitious, " and pet not boto of a religious zeale towards the maintenance of the cleargie, as by his bountifull lie beralitie bellowed in building of abbeics and thurches (as before pe have hard)it may partie appeare.

In his baies manie learned men lived , as Gel frey Minelaufe, Simon Frarinus alias Alh, Ada. mus Dozenlis, Bualter de Constantijs first bilhop of Lincolne and after archbiftop of Rouen, John de Erford, Colman furnamed Saplens, Kichard Ca nonicus, William Beregrine, Alane Teukelburie, Simon Thurnaie, who being an ercellent philosopher Bale but flanding to much in his owne conceit, bpon a ludden did to forget all his knowledge in learning, that he becaine the most ignozant of all other, a pur nichment (as was thought) appointed him of God, for such blasthermies as he had wickedlie vitered, both against Moles and Chist. Bernalius Dozobernenlis, John Hanwill , Pigell Mozeker , Gilbert de Holland, Benet de Peterburgh , William Paruus a manke of Rewburgh, Roger Poueden, Bubert Walter, first bishop of Salisburie and after archbie thop of Canturburie, Alexander Theologus, of whome you have heard before, Bernalius Tilberienlis , Sylneffer Giralous Cambrentis, tho wrote manie treatiles, Joleph Denonius, Walter Papis, Radulfus de Diceto, Bilbert Legley , Mauricius Poganius, Walter Poganius, John de Forde ham, William Leicelter, Joceline Brakeland, Ro ger of Crowland, Hugh White alias Candidus that Intote an historie intituled Historia Petroburgensis, John de faint Omer, Adam Barking, John Gray an bie Coriographer and bishop of Portoich, Walter of Couentrie, Radulthus Piger, ec. Se Bale scripterum Britannia centuria tertia.

Thus farre king John.

Henrie the third, the eldest fonne of king Iohn.

Anno Reg. 1. 1216

Enrie, the third of that name, the eldeft fonne of In. John, a child of the age of nine peres, began his reigne ouer the realme of England the nineteenth day of Dato. ber, in the yeare of our Lozd 12 16, in the feuenth yeare of the emperour Frederike the fecond, and in the 36 years of the reigns of Philip 10 the fecond king of France.

Immediatlie after the death of his father king william Mar John, William Parthall earle of Penbroke, generall of his fathers armie, brought this young prince with his brother and lifters onto Bloceffer, and there called a councell of all such loads as had taken part with king John . Anon after it was once openlie knowne, that the formes and daughters of the late occeasied prince were brought into a place of fafetie, a great number of the loads and thefe barons of the 20 realme halfed thither (I meane not onelie fuch as had holden with king John, but also diverse other, which boon certeine knowledge had of his death, were newlie renolted from Lewes)in purpole to aid young king Henrie, to whome of right the crowne did ap-

> Thither also came Mallo oz Buallo the popes les gat (an earnest defender of the kings cause) with De ter bishop of Winchester, & Jocelin bishop of Bath: also Kanulph earle of Cheffer, Milliam Ferrers 30 earle of Derbie, John Marthall, and Philip de Albe. nie, with diverse other loads and peeres of the reline, and great number of abbats and priors, who by and by fell to councell togither what waie Gould be best to take, for the good order of things now in so boubtfull and perilous a time as this. The pieres of the realme being thus allembled, William earle of Penbroke, bringing the yong king into their prefence, and fetting him before them, spake these words following.

The earle of Penbroks short and Sweet oration as it is borrowed out of maifter Fox.

Chold right honourable and wel-beloued, although we have perfecuted the father of this young prince for his entil demeanor, and worthilie, pet this young child whome here 50 you se before you, as he is in years tender, loishepure and innocent from those his fathers doings. Wherefore, in so much as euerie man is charged onelie with the burthen of his owne works and transgressons, neither chall the child (as the scripture teacheth bs) beare the iniquitie of his father: we ought therefore of dutie and conscience to pardon this young and tender prince, and take compassion of his age as pælæ. And now, for lo much as he is the kings naturall and eldelt sonne, and mult be our souereigne king, and successour in this kingdome, come and let bs appoint him our king a governour, let bs remove from bs this Lewes the French kings sonne, and suppresse his people, which are a confusion and thame to our nation : and the yoke of their servitude let by cast from off our houlders.

When the barons had heard this earles words, after some silence and conference had, they allowed of his fatengs, and immediatlie with one confent, proclaimed the young gentleman king of England, whome the bishops of Winchester and Bath did crowne and annoint with all due folemnities at Olocester, byon the day of the feast of the apostles Simon & Jude, in prefence of the legat . Being thus crowned, he was committed to the governance of his brother in law, the foresaid William Parthall earle of Pendroke, tho to win the god will of the people towards the poing king, sent foothmessens gers with letters into all parts of the realme, to fignific the newes of the kings coronation, with an of. fer also of pardon to all such of the barons side as would turne to his part : and likewife of great rea wards to those, which having hitherto continued faith full, would so remaine until this trouble should be overpaft. By this means it came to paste, that his frænds greatlie rejoiled at these newes, and manie of those which till that time had affed the French men, revolted from them, and in hope of pardon and reward turned to king Denric.

It is reported by writers, that amongst other things, as there were diverse which withdrew the hearts of the Englishmen from Lewes, the confideration of the confession which the * vicount of De: *Sépag. lune made at the houre of his death, was the princi 193.col.2. pall. The order whereof, in the later end of the life of king John, yé haue heard. Truelie how little god will inwardie Lewes and his Frenchmen bare towards the Engliff nation, it appered fundzie wates. And first of all, in that they had them in a manner in no regard or estimation at all, but rather fought by all means to spoile and hope them under, not suffering them to beare anie rule, not putting them in trust with the custodie of such places as they had brought them in possession of . Secondic, they cal led them not to councell, so often as at the first they bled to do, neither did they proceed by their directs ons in their bulinette, as before they were accusto, the frencl. men procureto them hatrib.

Thepitoc of med. Thirdlie, in all manner of their concertation, neither Lewes nor his frenchmen bled them lo far miliarlie, as at their first comming: but (as their mas ner is thewing more loftic countenances toward them, they greatlie increased the indignation of the English lotos against them, who might cuill abide to be so oner-ruled.

To conclude, where great promiles were made at their entring into the land, they were flowe inough English barons was quite made boid : fo: they percoinco danlie that they were delyifed a feoffed at for their difficialtie the wed to their owne naturall prince, hearing now and then nips and tawnts openlie by the Frenchmen, that as they had the wed them felnes falle and untruffic to their owne lawfull king, to they would not continue anic long time true buto a Aranger. Thus all these things laid togither, game occasion to the English barons to remember themfelices, and to take just occasion to repolt buto bing 20 Henrie, as before wee have mentioned. But now to the purpose of the bistorie.

Pehaue heard how Lewes had spent long time in vaine about the belieging of the callell of Douer. for although he plagued them within verie fore, yet Hubert de Burgh and Cerard de Sotigam bare themselves to mansulite, and ther with so politikelie. that their aduer faries could not come to buder frand their diffresse stanger within the castell, in so much that despairing to win it in anic short time, even be 30 fore the death of king John was knowne (as some write) Lewes was contented to grant a truce to them that kept this castell, till the feast of Caster nert infining: but(as it appeareth by other this truce was not concluded till after the death of king John was lignified to Leines, who greatlie rejoiling there at, supposed now within a short time, to bring the ubole realme buder his subjection: and therefore raise ling his liege from Douer, in hope to compatte entermiles of greater consequence, he came backe but 40 to the citic of London.

Then they within the callell of Doner law the fiege remaired, they came footh, and bornt fuch hous fes and buildings as the Frendymen had ratico beforethe fame caffell, and comming abroad into the countrie, got togisher such buttels and other necessarie promition, as might ferme for the furnithing of their fortrelle for a long fealon. After that Lewes was returned unto London, he remained not long there, but with a great armie marched fouth but 50 Dertino, where he belieged the castell, which was in the karping of Walter de Codardule servant in household unto Fouks do 13:ent, who defended the lace from the feats of S. Partine, butill the feats of 3. Licholas, and then delinered it by composition, that he and his people might depart with all their gods, boile and armour. From thence Leives went vato Verkehamsticed, and belieged the eastell, which was valiantlie defended by a Duch capteine named Waleron, who with his people behaued himselse so 60 manfielie, that a great number of Frenchmen and other of them without, were left dead in the ditches. It an issue also made boon the side, towards the north inhere the barons lay, they spoiled the carriage and truffe of the faid barons, and to be there with all the flandard of Milliam Pandenile. Finallic about The castell of the 20 day of December, they yet perioed the place buto Leines, bicause they were no longer able to hape, it their lines, gross, horse and armour faired.

Letwes having formithed this caffell with a luther ent garrifon, returned backe towards London, and comming to S. Albons, confircinco the about to give bitto him foure loose marks of filmer, for a line, in recognitance of during his homage till the feath of the purification of our ladie next infuing. Which pore abbat was made to believe, that he ought to take this ocaling to be an act of great courtefic, the earle of Winchester being an earnest meane fo; him that he might to calilie escape. About the same Bernewell time was a generall truce taken betwirt the king I track and Lewes, and all their partakers, till the 20 day af ter Chilimatic, for the obtaining of which truce (as fome write) the castell of Berkehamsted was furin performing the fame, so as the expectation of the 10 rendered but othe same Lewes, as before we have

> After Chilimatte, and ichilett the truce yet dured, Lewes and the barons affembled at the councell which they held at Cambridge, 4 the loods that toke part with the king met likewise at Orfoed, and much talke there was, and great travell imploied to have concluded some agreement by composition befwirt the parties, but it would not be, not yet ante longer truce (which was also fought for) could be granted: wherebyon Leives belieged the castell of Hidingham, the which together with the eastels of Populd, Coldeller, and Orfood, were furrendered unto him, to have a truce granted butill a moneth after Caffer nert infuing. And to by this meanes all the east part of the realme came buto the possession of Lewes. For the Ile of Clie was won by his people a little before the last truce, whilest he himselfe lav in liege at Berkehamsten, ercept one fortrelle belonging to the same Fie, into the which the souldiers that ferued there under the king were withdrawen. But pet although Lewes might sæme thus partlie to prevaile, in having these callels delivered into his hands, yet being advertised that dailie there renolted dinerle of the barons of England onto king Henrie, which before had taken part with him : he find in great doubt and feare of the rest, and therefore furnished all those calleds which he had wome with convenient garrifons, and namelie the cassell of Heriford, and after went to London, there to bus Polylot. derifand what further trust he might put in the rest of the English loads and barons: for as diverse had alreadie forfaken him, as it is faid, so the residue were doubtfull what they were bell to do.

For first they considered, that the renouncing of The pupil their promiled faith onto Lewes, whome they had the in which fluorine to mainteine as king of England, floorly be the barms a great revised furth floor. a great reprody but othem: and agains they well fair that to continue in their obedience towards him, thould bring the realme in great danger, lith it would be hard for any louing agreement to continue betweine the French ; Englichmen, their natures being lo contrarie. Thirdlie, they flood come what in feare of the popes curile, pronounced by his legat, both against Lewes and all his partakers. Albeit on the other live, to renolt but a king Henrie though the love which they did beare to their countrie, and the great fowardnesse which they saw in him greatlie moned them; pet lith by realon of his young peares, he was not able either to follow the wars himlelfe, o. to take comfell what was to be done in publike gonernement, they indged it a verie dangerous case. For inhereas in wars nothing can be more expects ent than to have one bead, by whole appointment all things may be governed : to nothing can be more hurtfull than to have manie rulers, by whose autho-ritie things that! patte and be ordered. Therefore their confiderations flated and kept one part of the English loods still in obcdience to Lewes, namelie, for that dinerle of the confederats thought that it fleed not with their honours to to forfake bim, till they might have some more honorable colour to renolt from their promites, or that the mate ter thould be taken by by fome indifferent agrees ment to be concluded out of hand between them. Here

Bed furres-

Matth. Paris.

feil delmered to Lewes.

Much Pris

த.Albons

peffroico.

March Paris

Coble men

opon they relozted in like maner buto London, and there with Lewes toke councell what was to be pone with their bulinelle touching the whole flate of their cause. There pe thall note, that before the concluding of this last truce, Fouks de Brent the capteine of the castell of Bedford gat togither a number of fouldiers out of the garrifons of the castels of Orford, Porthampton, Bedford, and Windlor, and comming with them to S. Albons the 22 of Februatie, he spotled the towne tabbie, in like maner as he 10 had done all the townes and villages by the way as he passed through the countrie, from Bedford buto S.Albons.

The most engers which Lewes had remaining in the court of Rome, signified buto him about the fame time, that ercept he departed out of England, the sentence of ercommunication, which Gualo 02 Walo the legat had pronounced against him, should be confirmed by the pope on Paundie thursdaie next inluing. Therebpon Lewes was the moze inclined 20 to pelo to the truce before mentioned, that he might in the meane time go over into France to his fav ther, who had most earnesslie written and sent in commandement to him, that in any wife he Mould returne home to talke with him, and so about midlent after the truce was concluded, he prepared himfelfe, and failed over into France, and as Polydor faith (but with what authoritie I know not) the king of Scots went also with him.

Affer his departure over, William earle of Sa- 30 lifburie. William earle of Arundell, William earle Warren, and diverse other revolted to king Benrie. Pozeouer, William Parthall earle of Penbzoke fo travelled with his fon William Parthall the por ger, that he likewife came to take part with the pong king : whereby the fide of Lewes and his French men was fore weakened, and their harts no leffe anpalled for the sequele of their affaires. Leives returned pet into England before the truce was expired. of Lewes, were not forgetfull to ble opportunitie of time: for beside that they had procured no small number of those that before time held with Lewes to revolt from him to the kings side, they at one selfe time belieged diverse callels, and recovered them out of their aduerfaries hands, as Marlebzough, Farneham, Winchester, Cicester, and certeine o ther, with they overtheew and raced, bicause they thould not be taken and kept againe by the enimie. Lewes now at that time, when it food him most up on to have beene present here in that troublesome feason (which he ought to have regarded with singular circumspection, and warilie to have watched, for Virtus est, vbi occasio admonet, dispicere) brought no small hinderance to the whole state of all his businesse, in so much that he was never so highlie regarded afterwards among the English men as before.

About the same time Ranuse earle of Chester, 60 William earle of Albermarle, William earle Fee rers, Kobert de Aeipount, Baian de Lille, William de Cantlow, Philip de Marc, Robert de Baugi, Fouks de Beent, cothers affembled their powers, The calcil of and comming to Mountloyell beside Loughborough in Leicestershire, besieged the castell there, the capdenne 1830: teine thereof was one Penrie de Weatbooke. This Henrie defended the place right manfully, and doub ting to be in diffres by long flege, fent with all speed to the earle of Winchester, Saer de Anincie as then being at London with the Frenchmen, requiring him to fend some succour to remove the stege. Ocception the earle of Winchester, to thom that castell belonged, required Lewes that some connenfent power might be fent, whereby the fiege might be remoned. Therefore boon councell taken with deliberate adulte, it was ordeined that an armie thould be fent thither with all speed, not onlie to raise the slege, but also to subdue that countrie onto the of bedience of Lewes. Her with there went out of Loudon 600 knights, and with them about twentie thous fand men in armour, gredie (as it seemed) to have the spoile of other mens gods.

Meir chiefe capteins were thefe: Saer de Duincie earle of Winchester, Robert Fitzwater, and o thers, and they did fet forward byon the last of Appill, which was the mondaic before the Ascention date. palling through S. Albons, where they lodged the first night, and so to Dunstable, and by the wate such fouldiers as were vied to spoile and pillage, placed their parts, not sparing to rob and ransacke as well religious houses as other. From Dunstable kée ping on their fournie northwards, at length thep came to Dountlozell, but the earle of Chester and the other loads, aduertifed of their approch, were retired Chefter rais before to Potingham, betermining there to abide, feth his liege. till they might binderstand what waie the enimies would take.

In the meane time the earle of Winchester and the other barons, finding their enimies departed and the flege raifed, determined foothwith to go buto Lincolne, where Gilbert de Gaunt and other had kept siege a long time befoze the castell, but yet in vaine. For there was a noble ladie within that cas Bernewell. ffell named Pichola, who demeaned hir felfe to vali antlie in relifting all affaults and enterprises, which the enimies that belieged his could attempt by anie meanes against hir, that they rather lost than wan honour and estimation at hir hands dailie. Therefore Robert Fitzwater and the other leaders of this ar mie, to the end they might get that castell out of hir and other their entinies hands, toke their tournie forward, and palling through the vale of Beau-The loads that held on the kings part in the absence 40 uere, all things there that came to sight fell into the hands of the grædie fouldiers. For the French foot men, which were as it had beene the four a reffuse of their countrie, least nothing untouched that they might lay hands boon, not sparing thurth or thurthpard, not hallowed place more than common of promane. For they were to pore and ragged that they The pore had scarle anie tatters to cover their privile parts estate of the withall. Finallie comming onto Lincolne, they al french forfaulted the castell with all maner of engins, and ale For ye must understand, that the going over of 50 saled by all water possible whereby they hoped to aduance their purpole.

Thus whiles the barons with the Frenchmen were much buffed about the flege of Lincolne caffell, UA. Marthall earle of Penbroke, by the adulte of the les gat Bualo 03 Malo, and of Peter bishop of Minthefter, and other of the councell with king Henrie, canfed fummions to be given to all capteins and Summons chateleins on the kings part; to be at Dewarke up, toraife an aron mondate in Whitfuntwelte, with fuch power as mie for the they might make, from thence to march to Lincolne, king, there to raile the fiege, and deliner the countrie from imminent oppession. Therebpon there assembled at the date and place prefired, a great pullance of people desirous to fight for the defense of their counfrie against the Frenchmen and other adversaries, revels to the pope, and ercommunicated persons, so that when the muffer was taken, there was numbered 400 knights, 250 croffebowes, befides demilances and horsemen in great numbers, which for neomight have suplied and served in steed of men of armes, being beric well furnified for the purpole, armed at all points.

The chiefe capteins of this companie were thefe: The capteins Milliam Parthall earle of Penbioke, and his fon armie.

William

Matth. Paris. The earle of Chefter.

bjohe.

Bact he Quincie etle of win= thefter.

Milliam Parthall the yonger, Peter bith. of Min. cheffer, a man right fkilfull in feats of warre, Kamulth carle of Cheffer, William earle of Salifburie, William earle Ferrers, William earle of Alber marle, belides barons, as William de Albenie late lie released out of captinitie, John Parthall, Wil liam oc Cantlow, and William his sonne, Fouks de Beent, Thomas Basset, Robert de Terpount, Bilan de Lille, Geffrey de Lucie, Philip de Alber nie, with manie other chateleins and constables of 10 fundrie caffels.

The legat ac= curicth Lem= cs & his com=

The legat being there present also on the fridate in the Whitlunweite aforelaid, reucited in a white albe, accompanied with the cleargie, accurled in folemne wife Lewes the French kings fonne, with all his fautours and complices, telpeciallic thole which held flege before the castell of Lincolne, with all the citie: and the more to incourage all those that should palle footh in this armie, to ratle the liege, he granted to them free remission of all their sins, whereof they 20 were trulie confessed, and by authoritie which he had from almightie & DD, and the apostolike see, he promifed to them the guerdon of everlatting faluation. Herewith when the armie had received ablolution, and the legats bleffing, everie man marched forth in his order and place appointed, and comming to Stow, an eight miles from Lincolne, they low ged there all night.

In the morning they palled forth towards Line colne, bnoor the conduct of the fato earle of Pen- 30 broke as generall of the whole armie, who being come thither, compatted about the citie with his are mie. And to cause the enimie the soner to leave the fiege of the castell, he assaulted the gates of the citie. inforcing his power to beare downe and breake them open. The Frenchmen perceiuing all the dans ger to be about the gates, withozew a little from the alkailing of the castell, and resorting to the walles of the citie, did their best with shoting and casting of fromes and other things, to drive their adversaries 40

from the gates. Fouks de

Thus whiles they were occupied on both parts. Fouks de Beent entered into the castell by a poferne gate on the backelide, and a great number of fouldiers with him, and ruthing into the citie out of the callell, he began a fierce battell with the citizens within the citie: which when the Frenchmen percel ned, by the noise and crie raised at their backs, they ran to the place where the fkirmish was, doing their best to beat backe the aforesaid Foukes de Went 5 with his companie. But in the meane time the Enalithmen, under the leading of Sauerie de Paules on, a Poictouin (of whom you have heard in the life of king John) brake open the gates and entred the citie. Then the fight was fore increased and maintel ned for a time with great furie: so that it was hard to moge who should have the better. But at length the Frenchmen and those English loods that were with them, being fore late at on ech five, began to retire towards the gates, and finallie to turne their 60 backs and fo fled awaie : but being befet round about with the kings horffemen, they were freight, waies either flaine or taken for the most part of 25zent.

The French men put to flight at Lin-

Gilbert de Saunt by the gift of Amongst other that were there staine, the earle Perch Caine. of Perch a Frenchman was one, tho being gotten into a churchyard manfullie defended himfelfe till his house was killed under him, and lastlie himselfe Poble me ta- was also beaten downe and flaine. There were taken puloners. Ren of Englithmen, Saer de Muincie erle of Mincheffer, and Humfrey de Bohun earle of Pereford, Gilbert de Gaunt earle of Lincolne by the gift of Lewes, Kichard de Pontfichet, William de Pour braic, Milliam de Beauchampe, Milliam de Manduit. Dliver de Parecourt, Roger de Creste, Wil liam de Colcuill, William de Kos, William de Ropeley, Raife Chanduit, and diverse other: so that of knights there were taken to the number of foure hundred, belide luch multitude of demilances, and o ther horstemen and formen, as could not well be numbered . Mozeover, all the provision, truffe, and baggage loden in carts, clothfackes, and males belonging to the barons and Frenchmen was taken, and the citie was spoiled, rifled and facked.

This enterpile and discomfiture at Lincolne, which Leves he was in derition called Leweshis faire, chanced the faire. 14 kalends of June, being faturdaie in the Whitfunweke. Panie honest matrons of the towne were droloned, as they were got into boates to avoid the danger of their persons, wanting skill how to guide the same boates. The earle of Wendzoke the same date before he received any repair, rode backe in post to the king, whom he had left at Stow, and there declared the forfull newes of his god speed, in banque thing of the enimies. On the next morrow, newes came to the king, that they which had kept the castell The R. m. of Mountlozell were fled out of the fame, and had left mandeth for it boid. Wherebpon immediatlie he sent in come Actiof Mon mandement buto the thiriffe of Potinghamthire, foull tolers that going thither in his owne person, he thouse rule nat the faid castell, make it plaine with the ground. The Frenchmen which escaped with life from the Caughter of Lincolne, as the Parchall of France, the chateleine of Arras, with others, made towards London with all possible speed, in hope to escape so well as they might: but manie of them, and namelie the formen were flaine by the countrie people where they palled, and that in great numbers : for the hub bandmen fell bpon them with clubs and fwoods, not sparing those whom they got at advantage. Two hundred knights or men of armes (as we may call Millis, them)getting to London, presented but o Lewes the fozowfull report of their miladuenture, and were of him not moaned, but blamed and loze rebuked, for that they had fled, and chamefullie left the recidue of their companies to be diffreffed, taken, and flaine by the adverlaries, where if they had manfullie Awd to tt, they might hamilie have faued their fellowes, and obteined viaorie.

The chronicle of Duntrable theireth in ded that Chr. Dunla Simon de Peldie and Henrie Braibroc, perceining that Fouks de Brent was entered into the citie, and that they were now affailed both afront, and on the backes, they withdrew, and getting togither 80 French knights of men of armes (if we thall to call them) departed out of the citie, and fleeing through the countrie by Lin and faint Comundiburie, at length got through to London. How we uer they were welcomed of Lewes, certeine it is, that the loods that twke part with king Henrie, were put in no small hope by the atchining of this so great a victopie, to bring within a thort time all the realme to the obedience of king Henrie; and hereopon mardy ing footh into the countrie, put the people in such feare, that they submitted themselves buto the gonernment of king Henrie in all places where foener

On the other part, Lewes who all this feafon remained at London, being fore difinated for the loffe of his people, began to feare everie date moze and more, least by some practice be thould be betrated and delinered into his enimies hands. Therefore he went Lewes la about to make himfelfe as ftrong as was pollible, beth tohis & fortiffeng the citie , fent mellengers into France, ther los il to require his father to fend him more aid . His far ther force to heare of his fons diffresse, and loth that he should take the foile, caused his daughter the wife of Lewes, to prepare a power of men, that the fame

In armic prepared in of Lewes.

Polydor.

might passe with all speed over into England to the alo of hir hulband. For the French king himfelfe moulo not fæme to aid his fonne, bicaufe he was cre communicated : but his daughter in law, hauing licence and commission thereto, gat togither thee hundred knights, or men of armes, whome with a fracto come great number of other fouldiers and armed men, the fent downe to Caleis, where Cufface the monke had provided a naute of thips to convete them over into England. But how they fped you thall heare 10

In the meane time the earle of Penbroke approthed towards London, purpoling to affaile the citie now in this opportunitie of time, letting palle no oc. casion that might further his proceedings, night and day Audieng how to recouer the realme wholie out of the Frenchmens hands, and to fet the fame at li-The diligence bertie : lo that what was to be Deuiled, he did deuile. and that was to be done, that he did, not for flowing anie occasion or opportunitie that might be offered. 20 The English barons also calling to mind the benefit which they had received at the Frenchmens hands in time of their most need, sought now by all means pos fible fome waie how to procure a peace betwirt king Henric and the faid Lewes, thinking by that means to benefit themselves, and to gratifie him in lieu of his former courteffe bountifullie the wed in a cafe of extremitie, which bicause it was obtained in a wished time was the more acceptable, whereas being linger red it had beene the leffe welcome, as one faith,

Gratia qua tarda est ingrata est, gratia náma Quum fieri properat, gratia gratamagu.

Herbpon they caused dailie new articles of agree ment to be presented in writing buto the saw Lewes, as from king Henrie . But while thefe things were adwing, the earle of Penbroke and other the loods that toke part with king Henrie, having aduertilement, that a new supplie of men was readie to come and aid Leines, they appointed Thilip de Albenie and John Warthall to affociat with them the 40 power of the cinque posts, and to watch for the comming of the adverfaries, that they might keepe them from landing, who on faint Bartholometus day fet forth fro Caleis, in purpole to arrive in the Thames. and to to come up the river to London. Howbeit Hubert de Burgh capiteine of the castell of Douer, to. gither with the faid Philip de Albenie and John Marthall, with other such power as they could get togi. ther of the cinque poets, having not yet aboue the number of 40 thips great & small, boon the discours ring of the French fleet, which confided of 80 great thips, belides other letter bettels well amointed and trimmed, made fouth to the fea. And first coasting alate from them, till they had got the wind on their backs, came finallie with their maine force to affaile the Frenchmen, and with helpe of their croffebowes and archers at the first foining, made great slaugh ter of their enimies, and so grapling togither, in the end the Englishmen bare themselues so manfallte, that they vanquished the whole French siet, and ob. 60 teined a famous victorie.

Enfrace the monke was found amongst the capteins, who although he offered great fummes of gold for his ransome, so that he might have had his life faued, and also to serve king Penrie, pet the English capitoins would none of that: but Richard the bas fard some of king John, toke him, and cut off his head, and fent it unto king Penrie his brother, as a witnesse of this their atchieucd victorie. This En face was a Fleming borne, and Comtime a monke, but renouncing his coivle to receive such heritage as fell to him by the death of his brethren, deceafing without illue, he became a notable pirat, and had done in his dais much mildhæfe to the Englishmen, and therefore was now rewarded according to his demerits. Foz

Rarò antecedentem scelestum Deseruit pede pæna claudo.

The spoile and prey of the French thips was veric rith, so that the Englishmen being loven with riches and honour, byon their fafe returne home were receiued with great joy and gladucife. But Lewes, affer be biderfood of this milchance happening to his peop ple that came to his ato, began not a little to desvaire of all other fuccour to come but him at any time herafter: wherfore he inclined the foner unto peace, so that at length he take such offers of agreement as were put buto him, and received furthermore a fum of monie for the release of such hostages as he had in his hands, togither with the title of the kingdome of Anaccord be-England, and the possession of all such castels and rice Lewes. holds as he held within the realme. The French theonicle (to the which the chronicle of Dunstable and The English Matthew Paris do alfo agree) affirmeth that he recei chaomicle faith ued fifteene thouland marks. Pozeouer, the popes les athousand gat absolued Lewes and all those that had taken his part in the offense of disbedience thewed in at- Matth. Paris. tempting the warre against the popes commandes ment.

Then Lewes with all his complices that had bin ercommunicated Avare boon the holie enangelist, that they should stand to the sudgement of holie thurth, and from thencefooth be faithfull buto the pope and to the church of Kome. Poseover, that he with his people thould incontinentite depart out of the realme, and never boon evill intent returne as gaine. And that lo farre as in him late, he thould procure his father king Philip, to make restitution buto king Henrie of all the right which he had in the parts beyond the sea: and that when he should be king of France, he thould religne the fame in most quiet manner.

On the other part, king Henrie toke his off to gither with the legat, and the carle of Penbroke go. nernour of the realme, that he thould restoze buto the barons of his realine, and to other his subjects, all their rights and heritages, with all the liberties be fore demanded, for the which the discord was moved betwirt the late king John and his barons. Pozed uer, all prisoners on both parts were released and set at livertie, without pateng ante ransome: pea and those which had covenanted to paie, and opon the same were set at libertie before the conclusion of this peace, were now discharged of all summes of monie which then remained bupaid.

This peace was concluded on the eleventh bay of September, not farre from Stanes, bard by the riner of Thames, where Lewes himselfe, the legat Buallo, and diverse of the spiritualtie with the earle of Penbroke lord governor of the realme, and others did met and talke about this accord . Polu when all things were ordered and finished agreeable to the articles and covenants of the peace, so farre as the time present required, the loods of the realme (when Lewes thould bepart homeward) attended him to Doner in honozable wife, as apperteined, and there twie leave of him, and to be departed out of the realme about the feast of faint Hichaell,

King Penrie by this meanes being put in full pole fellion of the reline, according to the prescript of that article conteined in those conditions of the peace latelie specified, parboned all those that had aided his adversarie Lewes during the wars, ercept certeine of the spiritualtic, which were put to such fines, that they were compelled to late all that they had to pleage, to leuie such summes of monie, as they might the prelate with the same obteine the kings fauour againe : and are fined. belive that, to fue to Rome for their entier absolution

Hor.lib.3.car.

2 rich Choile.

Anfonin epig.

habert de Burgh af: french Bet.

The French detis banquilbed.

Manh. Paris.

Cufface the and beheaded.

Birhard bale formet) bing Enflace the k wag.

Anno Reg. 2. mhat che uance the icgat made.

Fouks be at the popes of the hands. Amongst other, bugh bis thop of Lincolne returning into England , was compelled to pare a thouland marks to the popes ble for reconcric of his bilhopitke, an hundred marks allo to the legat of good and lawfull monie. Such the uance made the legat amongs them of the church, as well persons secular as regular, that he got togither tivelue thouland marks towards his charges, where, by it appeared, that be loft no time in England, But to proceed.

The realme now being quiet and in all outward fer licitic, a number of burnlie persons, such as delight. ing in idlenesse, knew not how to live in time of peace, aftembled themselves togither and appointing Fonks de Brent, who was a man of great Comach and more rathnesse, to be their capteine and ringleber) began to make warre against the king, and to spoile the townes and countries about them, so that their enill doings might have caused no small perill to have insued by some great civill sedition, if the 20 earle of Penbroke had not in time prevented their attempts. For he affembling the kings power, bafird towards the rebels, and what by his owne authoritie, and by the reverend regard of some bishops in his companie; more than by bling any force of armes, he state the matter for that time, so that no Mauh. Paris. further milchefe followed of this mutinie.

Belides the forelaid Foults de Brent, there mere other of the Pobilitie also which practiled the like dif. order, as William earle of Albemarle, Robert De 30 Meipount, Brian de Lifle, Bugh de Balfoll, Philip de Parc, and Kobert de Gaugi, the thich Robert withheld the castell of Pewarke that belonged to the bishop of Lincolne, and would not deliver it, till Dewarke re- the king with William Parthall erle of Penbroke had laine at flege before it an eight dates, in the end of which terms by mediation of freenos the matter was taken by, and the bilhop reconcred his castell, pateng to the fato Robert de Bangi an hundred pounds feeling for the viduals which he left within 40

Some after this, Ranulth earle of Cheffer was fent into the holic land by king Henrie, with a god lic companie of foulviers and men of warre, to aid the christians there agains the insidels, which at the fame time had belieged the citie of Damieta in Aes gypt, in which enterprise the valiancie of the same earle after his comming thither, was to his great praise most apparant. There went with him in that fournie Saer de Quincie earle of Wlincheffer, 50 fuffeineb about the building of which caffels and ab-William de Albenie earle of Arundell, befides dis uerle barons, as the loed Robert Fitz Walter, John constable of Thefter, William de Parecourt, and De liver Fitzroie some to the king of England, and de nerse other.

The next years, which was after the birth of our loid 1219, William Parthall the foresaid earle of Denbroke died, governour both of the realme and also of the kings person, a man of such worthinesse both in foutnesse of stomach and martiall know, 60 lege, as England had few then living that might be compared with him. De was buried in the new term ple thurth at London opon the Ascention day . The fame yeare also Wallo or Guallo the legat retur. ned to Konie, and Pandulph, who (as before is expect fed)did the incliage to foutlie from pope Innocent to king John, was also made bilhop of Porwich.

Morcouer, the governement of king Henrie af. fer the death of William Parthall the elder, earle of Perbioke, was committed unto Peter bishop of Windhester: for the young king was almost desti-Quanc Ifa- tute of any of his kindred that were worthte to have the rule of him: foralmuch as his mother queenc Is fabell was latelic marico to Hugh Brume the earle of Warth in France, buto whome the was promited before king John toke hir to wife, as in the life of the fame king John is mentioned.

The bishop of Winchester being now in the pol fellion of the kings person, doubting least he had taken a greater charge bpon him than he might well answer, caused diverse sage and honourable perso. nages to be admitted of the kings councell, to affif him in the administration of the common-wealth and god governance of the realine. Which being and god governance of the realine. bone, a parlement was holden at London, wherein a parlement and a subline a substoic was granted to the king of two thillings R. Fabian, to be gathered and lenied of cuerie ploughland with in his dominions, towards the relieuing of the great charges which he had lulleined by the warres against the forefaid Lewes.

About the same time also he began the building The new

of the new worke of the church at Wellminster. In thurch of which meane time the citie of Damieta afore menti- wellm.beggi oned, was wone by the chiffian princes, and Has Anno, Reg. nulth earle of Chester returned home, leaving the Matth. Weil nulth earle of Cheffer returned yome, teauning the Checarlest earle of Arundell with a great number of fouldiors Cheffer that behind him there in aid of the chaillians against the nethhome. Saracens, which dailie attempted the recoverie of Polydon the same. Poscover, in the yeare inswing, which was of our load 1 2 2 0, and byon the seauenteenth day of Daie being Whitlunday, the king was efflones fo lemnelic crowned at Westminster, to the end it Thek me might be fate, that now after the ertinguishment of ned the sum all seditions factions, he was crowned by the generall consent of all the estates and subjects of his realine. The fame yeare also was the bodie of Thomas Marth Paris.

ner in the vigile of Peter and Paule, the king finds ing the castels of Rokingham and Sauncie at that present unpurueied of victuals, toke the fame into ercept those that came with merchandize. Author.

more Kanulph earle of Cheffer, after he was come fuch persons as passed by the same with any cattell, fer in their cournie which they made into the holie land. Alfo the fame years the profes or canons that inhabited within the kings caffell of old Salifburie, which by the king was made a citie. The billiop Ri-thard procured this removing, through the kings fet things in a new broile, departed from the court in the night fealon, without leave or licence, and halfed with all speed unto the castell of Biham, where he alfembled a fost of pouthfull persons, given to lewe be meanor, and wearie of quietneffe (as to whome the ff and robberies were verie plefant) by whose helps he spoiled diners townes and billages about him, as Tenham and Deping, with others.

chaffre oz merchandize.

archbishop of Canturburie translated, and Hugh bithop of Lincolne canonized for a faint. In like man Math Path his hands against the will of Willtam of Albemarle uhich before held the same. This yeare also was a Ran. High proclamation made in London, and throughout all a proclamab the realme, that all frangers thould audio the land onto anoth before the feath of faint Dichaell then next following trangers, from the holie land, began to build the castels of Chartlete and Bellon, and afterward he also builded of Charles of Thier Homers and Angel and Charles the abbeie of Dien Lencresse, commonlie called Bestonbut Delacreffe of the white order . Toward his charges Ran.Higd beie, he twke toll throughout all his torothips of all

This yeare deceased henrie de Boun earle of Ango Regs Hereford, and Saer de Daincie earle of Winches 1 1 2 1

remoued with the bilhops lee buto new Salifburie, Balifberik helpe, who was berie willing therebuto, as it feemed by his charters largelie granted in that behalfe . Ale Marth Pails fer this, king Henrie heldhis Chillmalle at Dren ford, at what time William De Fort; earle of Albes Cheente marle meaning to trouble the kings peace, and to Athemanic

> The callell of 25 than;

The cafteil of frozed to the bilhop of Lin-

Matt. Paris. The carle of Chefter goeth into the holic lanb.

Sonne to k. John belike.

Anno Reg. 3. 1210 Cte deceaffe of the earle of Penbroke.

De is buried church.

13 andulph of Mozwich. The billion of Winchester gouernour to the king. b'll married to the earle

Ebere

There were of counsell with him also (as was thought) Fouls de Beent, Philip de Parc, Peter pe Mauleon, Engellard de Athie, and manie other. tho piuille fent men to his ald, and furthered him inhis tumultuous affaires, that they might partici pat with him the sweetnesse of the spoile, which is the marke thereat everte one Moteth that is

-iners & inops, qui viuere luxurios è Vult quamuis nequeat, non respondente crumena, Proinde animam vendit pretio, seseque periclis Object, ve raptis alienis victor ouanque Ad proprios referat pradam & spolia ampla penates.

In the meane time the countrie people withozew to the churches, and gat their gods into the church pards. Mozeover, the pieres of the realme affemi bled themselnes in councell at Wlestminster where the king was present, whither the earle of Albermarle was funmoned to come, tho faining as though he had meant to have gone thitherward bires The callett of alie, turned suddenlie his waie to the castell of For 20 foninghep. pringher, and take it boon the fuoden, furnithing it allo with a garrison of souldiers, to be kept hereafter to his owne vie. That callell was in the keeping of the earle of Cheffer, who at that instant had but fem fouldiers there in garrison, wherby it was the somer furplifed. When these newes were brought to the king, he railed a power and came with all speed to the castell of Biham, bpon the wednesdaie nert after the feast of Candelmaste, and then compassing the fame about with a firong fiege, he confireined them 30 within by force of such engins as they bled in those vaies, that finallie on the eight date of Februarie they came footh, and submitted themselves and all that they had but o the kings pleasure. Tho caused them to be fafelie kept, till he might take further aduisement what should be done with them.

In the meane while also came the earle of Albemarle, who by the helpe a means of the archbillyop of Porke, and the legat Pandulph, purchased peace at the kings hands, the rather indeed bicause he had 40 faithfullic served both the king and his father king John in their wars, before that time. All those men of arms a fouldiers also, which had submitted them. sclues and remained as puloners, were pardoned. Which over-great clemencie caused other burulie persons to attempt the like offense of rebellion The weithing thoutlie after. At the very felfe same time the Wiels. begin to thir, men began to fource, and binder their prince and leasder Leolin they entered byon the English marthes, and with great crueltie spoiled and robbed the same, 50 therebyon it was determined by the councell, that the king (as he was comming toward the castell of Biham) thould divide his armie, and to he did, ferr ding one part thereof against the Welthmen: where won Leolin, after he understood that the kings power came toward him, as one not able to relite the same, cast off his armour, and submitted himselse tohis mercie.

There be which write, that where prince Leolin had belieged the callell of Buet belonging to Kegis 60 nalo de Bicule, the same Reginalo besonght the lk. to helpe to remove that siege. The king contented with his request, came with a pulfant armie into those parts, and therewith the siege was raised, for the Welchmen (according to their accustomed maner) fled. The king then entring further into the Bountgome: countrie, came to the place where Pountgomerie breathe balls, note flandeth, and perceiving the lite of the same to ferue well for fortification, he caused a castell to be builded there, to reffreine the Wielthmen from their accustomed trade of harrieng the countrie. And so after he had forated those quarters, and taken order for the full accomplishment of that castell, he reture Chaggepaid, ned, the Pobles granting to him of everie linights fætivo markes of filuer.

Things being thus in quiet, the king (who by dais lie experience of matters grew to moze knowledge from time to time) began now of himselfe to oder his affaires for his owne behalfe, namelie touching the estate of his kingdome : and bicause he was minded to affair the recoucrie of those places which his father had lost in France, he ordeined Sauerie de Mauleon to be his lieutenant in Buien, whereof 10 a great part as pet remained in his hands, and moze quireth refts oner fent ambassadours onto the French king, restation of his quiring of him restitution of those places which he right of the had taken from his father.

These oratours being come into France, and admitted to the kings presence, received answer, that The French nothing ought to be reflozed, which by law of armes was rightlie conquered: and other redreffe at that time would none be granted. ¶ But a maruellit was to confider here at home, in how thoat a frace the Cate of the English common-wealth was changed, and from a troubled fourme reduced to a flouris thing and prosperous degree : chiefelie by the diligent had and carefull provision of the king himselfe. So much availeth it to have him that ruleth, to attend that which belongeth to his office. After this, to the intent that whiles he might be occupied in warres abjoad, he should not be troubled with civill discord at home, he denised to some in af finitie with the Scots, gluing his litter Jone in mariage buto Alexander the king of Scotland, and Hu: Marriages bert of Burgh on the other lide married the litter of concused. the same Alexander called Pargaret. These marriages were folemnized at Porke on the morrow af ter the featt of S. John Baptist, in the presence of a great number of the Pobles both of England and Scotland. A councell allo was holden by the arch Anno Reg. 6; bilhop of Canturburie at Orford for reformation of the frate ecclelialticall and the religion of monks. A councellog In which councell two naughtie felowes were pre- food. fentes before him, that of late had beene apprehenbed, either of them naming himfelfe Chaff, and preatheo manie things against such abuses as the cleargie in thole dates bled. Pozeouer, to proue theirer Ewo diffemrour to have a thelw of truth, they theived certeine bing persona tokens and fignes of wounds in their bodies, hands apprehended. and feet, like buto our faulour Jelus that was trais Man. Westin. ted on the croffe. In the end being well apposed, they were found to be but falle diffemblers, wherefore by dome of that councell, they were indged to be nailed buto a croffe of wood, and to those to whom the erecution was alligned, had them forth to a place called Arborberie, where they nailed them to a croffe, and They are crea there left them till they were dead. The one of them cuted. was an Hermophodite, that is to fay, both man and woman. Also there were two women condemned, of whom the one had taken boon hir to be that blet fed virgine Parie, and the other fained hir felfe to be feines to be, Marie Magdalene.

Ralfe Coghshall sheweth this matter otherwise, ther sharie and faith, that there were two men and two women Magdalene, brought before the archbithop at this councell, of the Ralie Cog. which one of the men being a deacon, was accused to be an apostata, t for the love of a woman that was a . Jew, he had circumcifed himfelfe: a being herof convided & disgraded, he was committed to the secular power, a fo burnt by the fernants of Fouks de Wient. The other being a young man, was accused of conterming the facraments of the church, a that he fulfered himselfe to be crucified, having the prints of the fine wounds appearing in his bodie, and counterfeld ting himselfe to be Chilt, resolved to have the two women give out and spread the rumour abroad. that he was Christ in deed, one of the which women being verie aged, was also accused of witcherie, has

R. Benrie re-Frech king.

kings answer

Matt Westing Manh Paris

1222 frnod at Dr=

Ewo women ting them= he one our,

The caltell of

Matth.Paris. remembreb.

Polydor.

Muth Paris.

Beginalo de

ning withhir forceric and withcraft brought that verng man buto luch wicked folize and madnelle. They time being hereof committee, inerectioned by betions two walles, where they remained till they burd, the other woman being lifter to the young man, was pardoned and let go, breamle the had renealed the diusion practic of the other.

This yeare also was the building of the steeple belonging to the church of So. Waule in London finithen And this yearc also been faint James day the 10 Math. Paris. citizens of London kept a place of defense and wie fling at the holpitall of faint James, against other their neighbours of the luburbes, and the quarters nert admining. In the end whereof it lo fortuned, that the Londoners had the opper hand: and amongst other that were put to the foile the firtuary of the abbat of Westminster with his folkes went awaic with the worff, to their great greefe. Wherebpon the fame freward beurfed an other game of welling to be bolden at Calcilminiter on Lammas dap next 20

following, and that wholoever could get the opper hand there, should have a ram for the puce, which the blie, and the ffe ward had got together out of all parts the best weethers that might be beard of , to that there was hard hold betweet them and the Londo ners. But finallie, the feeward opon defire of reuenge, procured them to fall togither by the eares beaten and wounded, and confiremed to flee backe to the citie in great despect. Electitizens soze offen-des to la their people lo miluled, role in tumult, and rang the common bell to gather the more companie rie paste, till by orderlie plaint they might get re-dreffe, as law and inflice thould affigue . 13at a cer-teine fout man of the citie named Constantine Fitz

the multitude not to harken but o peace, but to feeke revenge out of hand (wherein he thewed himselse so farre from true manhod, that he beingaico himfelfe

quod vindicta

Arnulfe, of god authoritie amongst them , souised 40

without any inst cause, so that the Londoners were 30

At the day appointed, there was a great affem-

A tell-wedter felvaro had perpared. Come late.

A rict com: mitten beiber egetenle of welling.

Mart Paris.

Marth West.

Acbert Serie to them. Robert Serle maio: of the citie would have many of Lone pacified the matter, perfuading them to let the intu-

Confrant:ne, a citizen of London p20: cureth the citisens tore: uenge therr eanse by wate rather to have had a womans heart, Mauh Paris.

:::

:::.

The load

fice taketh in quilition of Conftantine

apprehended.

Chefe in= tipe riot.

"Nemomique gaudet quam famina) fill profecuting the strife with toth and naile, and blowing the coles of contention as it were with full belioives, that the houses belonging to the abbat of Westminster, and namelic the house of his steward 50 might be overthrowne and beaten downe flat with the around.

This lewd counsell was some received and erecuted by the outragious people, & Constantine him. felfebeing thefe leader of them, crico with a lowd boice, Pount foy mount top, God be our ato and our louereigne Lewes. This outragious part comming to the notice of Hubert de Burgh lost chefe inffice, he gat togither a power of armed men, and came to diefeoffendors, found Constantine as constant in affirming the deed to be his, as he had before confantlie put it in practife, there boon he was awre hended and two other citizens with him. On the next day in the morning Fonks de Beent was appointed to have them to erecution: and fo by the Chames he quiettie led them to the place there they thould ful fer. Pow when Constantine had the halter about his necke, he offered fiffeene thouland marks of filner to raue bene pardoned, but it would not be. There was hanged with him his nephue named also Constant tine, and one Seffrey, tho made the proclamation denifed by the faid Confrantine. The crie also with tainfull enterville in the name of Leives most of all offended the kings freends, as the lost cheefe influe and others, who not fatified with the death of the three before remembard persons but also entring the citie agains with their bands of armed men, approperated directle of those whome they take to be culpable, not onelie putting manic of them into person, but also punishing other of them, as some with lotte of a fort, forme of an hand, and other of their eie-light. The bing furthermore to revenge this matter, deposed all the magistrats of the citic, and ordeined new in their romes. Which caused great hartburning against me verse of the Aobilitie, but cheefelic the loss Hubert and fouks de Brent, on ichome in time they hoved to have revenge.

Constantine bled to the letting ferward of his bus

As this brotle vered the citie of London, lo in this Guntand peare there chanced great tempest of thunder, lightning and raine, whereby much hart was done in of verse parts of the realme, and at sundre times, as by Agencial throwing downe of freples, durdies, and other buil, thouan. dings, with the rotivalting of trees, as well in woos as ordards, berie frange to confider, thefelie on the eight day of Februarie at Crantham in Lincolnes there, where there chanced (befide the thunder) fuch a finke and filthie fancur to follow in the church, that the people fled out, for that they were not able to a bide it. Likewise in the day of the evaluation of the crosse, a generall thunder happened throughout the realme, and ther boon followed a continual leason of foule weather and wet, till Canocimas nert after, foule weather and wet, the Canorumas ness ares, which canted a dearth of come, to as wheat was fold of come, at twelve fullings the quarter. Likewife on the day of faint Andrew an other terrible temper of thunder In other te happened through the realme, throwing downs and pell of thum thaking buildings in manie places, in to much that at Pillerdeston in Warwikeshire, in a knights house, the ladie thereof and six other persons were defroied by the fame . And a turbarie thereby compal Polydor. fed about with water and marreile was to dried by, that neither graffe noz mire remained , after which infued an earthquake. Dozeouer on the even of faint Aucie, a mightie wind raged, which bid much burt in fundate places of the realme. Furthermore, about this time there appeared in England a toomberfull comet of blating flarre. The lea allo role with higher a count a tides and logings than it had been accustomed to do. blaking las All which wonders were afterward sudged to betoken and lignifie the lotte which the christians fullet ned the fame years in Acgypt, inhen they were confreined to furrender the citie of Damieta into the The look of Saracens hands, which latelie before (as yet have the cite of heard) they had more with long and chargeable fiege. Damitta After the perloing by of Danieta, William de Albenic earle of Arundell (thome Ranulse carle of benicents Cheffer left behind him in the holie land) with manie Trundella fouldiers and men of warre (then he returned from partitional thence) came now homelvards towards England, and died by the wate. About the same time Zohn the sonne of Dauld the citie with the fame, and taking inquisition of the 60 earle of Anguish in Scotland, fifters some buto Res. Zohn die nulse earle of Cheffer, married the daughter of Leolin prince of Wlales, as it were to procure a finall baugund accord betimene the faid Leolin and Ranulfe. After Leolin prin which marriage, king Henrie beld his Christmasse of water. at Drenford, and thortie after the twelffive came to London: where affembling a councell of his barons, 3 council he was earnesslie required by the bishop of Cantur, London. burie and other pæres, to confirme the liberties, franchiles, and free cuitomes of the realme, for which the Potether warres in his fathers time had beine moued : which birth to birth to denie (as the archbifhop fæmed to alledge, figula new comme have beene alhamed to open his mouth, to the dif tion. avuantage of his lovereigne, but that it is likelic he forgat the old polic, namelie that, he might not with ante reason, sith he had couenant ted (and all the baronage with him) to fee the fame observed, by the articles of the peace concluded with Lewes, when the same Lewes departed the realme.

Zohn Sia

Imago rex est animata Dei.)

The answer of william 2520mer to the archbi mong de=

Thab accu= (eth Delias.

In inquili-

Manh Paris,

Checarle of of walco.

I conspiracie against the lord chiefe

Matt.Paris. Cheking of > lie intended. In this yeare Philip the French king departed this life, and after him lucceded Lewes his fonne, buto whom king Penric fent in amballage the arch bilhop of Canturburie with three other bilhops, to require, that (according to his off made and received at his returne out of England he would restore and deliner up to him the dukedome of Posmandie, with > other such lands and possessions as his father in Derevpon William Brewer one of the kings councell, hearing the archbishop so earnest in these matters, tolo him, that fith thefe liberties were procured a extorted rather by force than otherwise, of 10 the king being bnder age, they were not to be obserucd. Therebuto the archbithop replied, that if he loned the king, he would be loth to læke to trouble the quiet state of the realme. The king perceluing the archbishop to be chased a taking the tale himselfe, made a courteous answer, and further adulle had in the matter, sent footh waits to the thiriffe of everie countie, commanding them by inquirie of a sufficie entiurie impanelled, to make certificat within the quindenc of Elfer, what were the liberties in times 20 past of his grandfather B. Denrie, bled within the realme of England.

The same peare, whiles William Warthall earle of Penbroke was buffe in Ireland in war against Hugh Lacie, Leolin prince (or king) of Wales, as fome baue intitled him, toke by force two callels that belonged to the same earle: whereof when he was advertised, with all speed he returned out of Treland. railed an armie, and recovered the faid caffels, put ting to death all such as he found in the same, to requite Leolin with the like damage as he had the wed him before in his absence. This done he entered into the land of Leolin, walking and spoiling the fame. whereof when the faid Leolin was informed, he affembled an host of Talelshmen, and comming into the field gave battell, but the victorie rested on the Theplace of earle of Penbroks tide: so that there were taken and flaine in this bickering to the number of 9000 Welthmen. There was in this yeare a conspiracie allo begun by the earle of Thefter, and other Poble 40 men, against Bubert de Burgh lood chiefe juffice of England, by whole counsell (as it was thought) the king was more Areia towards the nobilitie and other his lubisets, in flateng his grant to confirme the charter of liberties, than other wife he would have bene, if the same Dubert and other had not aduled him to the contrarie.

In this feafon also John de Wzen king of Jerufa lem, and the load great maifter of the knights holpis tallers came into England, where they were hono, 50 rablic received of king Henrie, and liberally rewar ded. The cause of their comming was to require aid of the king for the recoverie of the holie land out of the possession of the Savacens. In like maner about the fame time Leolin prince of Porthwals, with cerfeine English loods, as Hugh Lacie and others, bpon an hatred which they bare towards king Henrie for his fathers fake, supposing that so enill a stocke as they take him to be, could not bring forth anie god branch, fought by open warres to bring William 60 Marthall earle of Penbroke and other barons that were faithfull friends to the king onto their purpole: but the whole countrie riling against them, they were disappointed to their owne confusion, and so they could never bying that to passe which they so earnest times past had taken from king John, and still did wrongfullie withhold. H. Lewes answered herebuto, that he held pormanoie & the other lands by god right and institle, as he could well prome and instifie, if king Henrie would come to the parlement in France to heare it. And as touching the oth which he had swoone in England, he aftirmed that the same was first broken by king Henrie, both in that his men which had beene taken at Lincolne were put to græuous ransoms, and also for that their liberties for which the warre first began, were not observed, but denied to the English subjects, contrarte to that which was concluded at the agreement betwirt them at the same time made.

Pozeouer, king henric fent other ambastadours to Rome, who purchased a bull of the pope, wherby he was adjudged to be of age sufficient to receive the government of the kingdome of England into his owne hands, thereby to order and dispose all things at his pleasure, & by the adule of such councellours as he should elect and chose to be about him. Theres bpon after the faid ambalfadours were returned, all those earles, barons and nobles, which held anie cafiels, honors, manors or places apperteining to the king, were commanded to deliver and refigne the fame to his vie, which caused much trouble, as after Mall appeare. For diverse Poble men, whose harts were filled with coverousnesse, would not obein the popes order herein, but fore repined; pet not fo much against the king as against the lood Hubert de Burgh, by whole councell the king was most led and ruled. And therefore they did put him in all the blame, as one that thould fet the king against them, and state him from suffering them to intoy those lie berties, which they from time to time fo much labour Anno Reg. 8.

red to have had to them granted and confirmed. Upon this occasion therfore, they fued to the king Polydor. for the restitution of the ancient lawes according to The king gia his promife, who to pacific them for the time, gave ueth a gentle them a gentle answer, affuring them, that he would lope, perfourme all that he had promited, to some as opport funitie would permit and lufter him to to do. How beit, afterwards by the adule of certeine old councellours, which had beene of the privic councell with king John his father, he found a thift to disapoint them of their demands, by requiring them on the o ther lide, to restoze buto him those things which they had in times past received of his ancestors. Furthermoze, bicause he would the moze easilie obtetne his purpole, and make the relique afraid to follow a fuit so displeasant and irkesome, he thought best to begin with the thiefe authors and first procurers of the faid petitions, and to take from them what soeuer they held belonging to his crowne. Hereopon therefore affembling a great power about him, he demanded of Kanulch earle of Cheffer The king dethe relitution of certeine loodships which ancientlis manded reftie amerteined to the crolune of the realine, which earle tution of pornot being as then able to rests, readilie obeted the cels of inheristance being pleasure, and resigned them all. By this entended the king into the erecution of his purpose, crowne, and the being diverse of the rest of the barons were brought into such feare, that they were contented also to do the like, so that by this meanes the loads being cut hors and weakened in power, forceased as then from molefting the king anie further with the demand of o ther lands or liberties.

The archbishop of Canturburie also threatence them with the dart of ercommunication, if they went about to disquiet the realme with anie civill commotions, though no man was more desirous to have that matter go forward than he, as appeared by his diligent travell therein (hoping as now in thort process of time, and that by courteous incanes, to perfuade

Che death of the French amballadojs France.

Difcord be:

twirt Saucrie De Eldan=

icon and the carle of &

Damerie be

Manicon re=

noite theo the French king.

Matth. Paris,

found be quietnelle.

Mart. Weilm,

perfuade the king to his purpole) but the king drove him off with faire words, and minded nothing leffe than to alter anic one of the lawes which he knew to be profitable to himfelfe and his successours after him. Therebyon diverse militing his dealing herein, without themselues secrettie, some into one place, and some into an other, to the intent they ninght auoid the dailie fight of fuch abufes, as they to; the most part could not well above to beare.

Whilest king Denrie thus politikelie provided r for his affaires at home, Saucrie de Wauleon made provision in Quien to withstand such perils and bangers as he faw most likelie to infue by the practics of the Frenchmen. But as he was most busilie occupied about the purueiance of such things as thould be verie necessarie for his dwings, there sprang a great diffention betwirt him and Telilliam the earle of Salisburie, who was sent oner into that countrie with commission to survice the state thereof, and by colour of the fame commission, twhe bpon him 20 to order all things at his owne pleasure. Whereas the forefaid Sauerie de Mauleon (being a man of high parentage in those parts (there he was borne) indged it to be a matter nothing fanding with his bonour, that another man thould order things at his will and commandement within the countrie, where of he himselfe had the chiefe charge, as the kings lientenant; and therefore determined not to luffer it

Derebpon verelie arose the contention befwirt 30 them, which the English souldiers that were there, did greatlie increase, favouring the earle as the kings uncle, and contemning the lieutenant as a Aranger boine, by meanes whereof the forefaid Sa nerie doubting least if he thould fight with his enimics, and through such discord as was now among s them, be put to the woole, the fault thould be laid wholie on his necke : he fecretlie departed and fled to Lewes the French king, who was latelie come to the crowne of France by the death of his father 40 king Ihilip, as you before have heard: wherein he dealt inselie in respect of safetie. For boot him, as other wife.

Quil peteris instatutius esse fuga?

About the same time Foules of Bent, being a man of an unquiet mind, readie to milchiefe and loth to live in peace (as some saie) conspired against the Bient an em: mie to reliand king of England, and advertised the king of France that if he would boldlie begin the warres against king Henrie in France, he would not faile but raife of England, bauing dimerfe noble men in a readineffe, that would willinglie take his part. But how focuer it fellout, certeine it is that this Founs has ning fortified his callell of 15edford, attempted manie enterpules greatlie to the pretudice of the kings peace, aswell in robbing and spoiling the countrie as

> And now fearing to be punished therefore by 03 der of law he the wed his malice against fuch as had the erecution of the same lawes chieflie in their 60 hands. Hereupon be twic puloner Henrie Wiate broke, one of the kings inflices of his bench, and led him to his callell of Wedford, and there that him up close as his lawfull pulloner. Indeed the faid igenrie de Braidroke, with Bartine de Patrihuil, Shomas be Pulton, and other of the hungs inflices were come to heepe their circuit at Dunffable. Where, bpon information given and prefented before them, Founds de Brent was condemned to the bing in great funness of monie. Where with all this founds toke fach in bigmation and displeasure, that he commanded his men of warre which late in the califell of Bedfind, to ride unto Duntlable, and there to appear bendihe faid-inflices, and to bring them but o 15cde ford, where (as he faid) he meant to commen further with them. But they having knowledge of his purpole, fled quicklie out of the towne, læking to escape euerie man which wate he might best deuise. Hoin beit, the fouldiers vied fuch diligence, that Henrie de Braibroke fell into their hands, & fo was brought captive to Bedford as their mailler had commanded them.

The king advertised hereof by the greenous complaints of his lubicus, was as then at Porthampton (where he had allembled his parlement) and there bpon having gathered specilie a power, with all erpedition he halted towards Bedford . At his compedition pe gaues comments actual on ech fide, and 13 colons in ming thither, he besieged the castell on ech fide, and dell besiege, at length after two moneths, though not without much ado, he wan it, and hanged them all which were taken within, being in number 80 02 aboue: and a mongli other William de Beent, the brother of the faid Fouks was one. There were but thee that co scaped with life, who were pardoned, byon condition they should passe into the holic land, there to serue a mong the Templers. The flege began on the Alcenfion even, and continued till the 15 date of August, being the fealt date of the allumption of our ladie.

Fouks himfelfe, whilest the liege continued, laie De wasing alofe in Gethire, and on the borders of Wales, as borders of one watching to do some milchiefe: but after the cas wales, when one watching to do some musices; our accessing the tarket fell was swone, he got him to Coventric, and there the tarket Cheffenba was per long apprehended, and brought to the king, look of whom he obteined pardon of life, but yet by the whole consent of the nobles and pieces of the realme, he was exiled the land for enermore, and then went to Rome, where he knew to purchale his pardon eafile inough to, mony of what crime foeuer he thould be ludged culpable. Dis wife, bicaufe the neuer confented to his doings, not pet willinglie to the marriage had betwirt hir and him, was acquited of all blame, and to like wife was his forme Thomas.

Howbett at length the forefato Fouks, having obteined his purpole at Kome (by meanes of his Chemba chapleine Robert Pallew an Engliffman, who was foutso his follicitor there) as he returned towards Eng. Bunk, land in the yeare infining, was polloned and died by the wate, making to an end of his inconstant life, which from the time that he came to peares of discretion was never bent to quietnes. Which map be reposted of him, not to his honour or renotune (for a las that fame is gotten by gluing occations of enill) but to his everlatting thame and infamie, for the warre against him here in the middest of his realme 50 same shall never die, but remaine in perpetuall memorie, as one faith right well.

Hominum unmertalis est infamia,

Etiam tune viuit cum effe credismortuam.

But now to leave these things, and returns to the doings in France where we left. De thall underffand, that affer Saueric de Panteon was renolted to the French king, the fato king with all speed determined to make warre boon bing Denrie, and to win from han certains townes and fortrelles willin the countrie of Poictou.

The French writers affirme, that king Leives re coursed out of the Englithmens hands the townes of Piort, S. Johns d'Angell, a Rochell, before Saucrie de Bauleon revolted from the French part. In Derd, the chronicle of Dunstable faith, that after the Dunstable truce twice end, this years the French king railed an armie, and todie High, and affer they of S. John d'Angeli lisbnitted themleties unto him . From thence be went to knockell, within the which at that perfent was the faid Sameric de Mankeon will fetientie knights, and Richard Grais, with Cettrep Bemill, tho had in their retinue firtie knights. Their with the forces of the totone fallied footh, a encourtring with the French armie, flue manie of their av 13 edford (1:

Perís.

uerfaries.

Matth, Paris. Denrie Bistbiobe taken by founds be unnufored.

uerfaries, and loff forme of their ofone people. Det atter this, the French la. befieged the towns, and in the end wan it, whilest the bing of England being occupico about the belieging of Bedford cattell, neglected to fend them within Rochell necessarie fuccours.

The Points missiend to Bochel won.

Manh.Paris.

Anno Reg.9.

3 filtenth

the king.

But Polydor Virgil writeth, that now after that Saucrie de Pauleon was become the French king his man, the Polasuins fent onto king Henrie, fia nificing, that they were readie to renolt from the French kings lubieaton, and poeld themselves buto 10 him, if he would fend buto them a power of men to pofend their countrie from the Frenchmen . Pow king Benrie having received thefe letters, interter nco them that brought this mellage verie courteoul lie, and promiting them to fend over aid with all erpedition, he caused his nause to be made readie for that voiage . In the meanetime, the French king fent forth an armie bnder the leading of Sauerie de Mauleon, who then toke Prost and Rochell, placing in the fame fundrie garrifons of fouldiers, but chefe lie he fortified Rochell, which had beene long in the Englishmens hands, and alwaies ferued them to berie god purpole, for the handlome landing of their people, when any occasion required. The French king therefore having got it, fortified it, and meant to kepe it, to the intent the Englishmen thould not have hereafter in time of warre, to necessarie a place for their arrivall in those coasts.

King Penrie holding his Guismasse at West, minster, called his high court of parlement there the 30 2 parlement. fame time, and demanded a relecte of monie, toward the maintenance of his warres in France, and bad granted to him the fifteenth penie in value of all the moneable gods to be found within the realme, as well belonging to the spiritualtie as tempozaltie, but buder condition that he should confirme buto his subjects their often demanded liberties. The king boon desire to have the monie, was contented to condescend onto their requests, and so the two chars ters were made, and by the king confirmed, the one 40 intituled Magna Charta, & the other Charta de Forresta. Thus at this parlement were made and ton. firmed these god lawes and laudable ordinances, which have beene from time to time by the kings and princes of this realme confirmed, so that a great part of the law now in vie dependeth of the fame. The same charters also were directed and sent footh

> It was moreover decreed, that at a certaine date 50 after Caffer, there thould be an inquitition taken by the inquest of a substantial turie, for the seucring of forrests, the new from the old, so as all those grounds which had been emade forcetts, lince the dates of king Henrie the granofather of this Henrie the third, should be differented . And therebyon after Caffer, Hugh de Peuill, and Bilan de Liste, were sent forth as commissioners, to take that inquisition. By force thereof, manie woods were afferted and improved to anable land by the owners, and so not one: 60 liemen, but also dogs, which for fafegard of the game were accultonicd to lofe their clawes, had good cause to reinife for these confirmed liberties.

into enerie countie within the realme to be pro-

In the meane time, and about the feast of the purification, king Henrie (having full occasion to purfue the warre, for recoverie of those townes taken, as before you have heard by the Frenchmen) fent of uer his brother Kichard, whom he had made earle of Connewall and Potacow, with a mightie naute of thips buto Galcoigne. This earle, having in his companie the earle of Salisburic, Chilip de Albenie, and others, with prosperous wind and weather arrived at Burdeaux with foure hundred failes, and there landing his men, went fraight unto the towneof faint Bachaire, fituated boon the banke of Garon, there, opon his first comming, he gat the castell, and facked the towne, and then patting further, wan die Cowns won uerle other townes, as Longuile, Bergerat, and o by the Engther, and after went with great viligence to beliege lidmen. and recover Rochell, or rather Rioll. The French king advertised of the earls arrivall, and of these his atchined enterposes, sent footh by and by the earle March sauh of Champaigne with a mightie armie into Guien Matth.Paris. to aid his people there.

The earle of Comewall buderstanding of the comming of that Frencharmie, twke a part of his bolf, and therewithall went to meet his enimics, and lieng in ambulh for them by the way, had them at a god The French aduantage, and flue great numbers of them. Aiter "Che French this, the earle of Champaigne keeping his men with abuantage. in their trenches and campe, without attempting a nie other exploit, the earle of Cornewall thought it fufficient, if he right hope the Balcoignes in obedience, which had alreadic practiced a rebellion, by fend, ing letters and mellengers for the fame intent onto the French king, and therefore breaking up his fiege. The earle of before the Rioll, he flated a while from exploiting any Connewall further enterpolic About the form time the enterpolic About the form time the enterpolic along the form time to the enterpolic about the form time to the enterpolic along the enterpolic about the form time to the enterpolic about the form time to the enterpolic about the ent further enterpile. About the same time, the earle of face from Salifburie returning homwards out of Galcoigne, the Bioti. was so tolled and turmoiled on the seas by tempels The death of of weather, that he fell licke therof, and within a few the corle of dates after his arrivall died.

Alis yeare allo, there came forth a decree from the archbilhop of Canturburic, and his luffragans, pochlacons that the concubines of pacifis and clearlies within cubines for orders (for so were their wines then called in consbidden chaifempt of their wedlocke) Mould be benied of chaiffig trian buriall. anduriall, except they repented whilest they were a. liue in perfect health, or elfe theined manifelt tokens of repentance at the time of their deaths. The same becree also prohibited them from the receiving of the par at malle time, sallo of holic bread after malle, folong as the preeffs kept them in their houses, or bled their companie publikelie out of their houles. Pozeover, that they thould not be purified when they thould be delinered of child, as other god women were, onlesse they found sufficient sucrtie to the arch deacon, or his officiall, to make fatisfaction at the nert chapter or court to beholden, after they fould be purified. And the preests thould be suspended, which did not present all such their concubines as were reliant within their parillies. Also, all such women as were convict to have dealt carnallic with a preeff, were amointed by the same occree to do open pens ance. There the question may be asked, thether this decree was extended to prefts wives or no. Wherebuto answer may be made, that as a quadrangle in geometrie compileth in it a triangle, and a quater, nion in arithmetike conteineth a ternion; fo in logike a bniverfall propolition comprehendeth a particular. But it is faid here, that all such women as had carnall knowledge with a pieck, were to be punithed, therefore some, and confequentlie all preffs wines. But yet this fæmeth not to be the meaning of that decrée, for prefes were allowed no wives, naie Sericius the pope iuoged that all such of the cleargie as had wives could not please God, bicause they were In carne, which woods he and the relidue of that litter restreined to marriage, admitting in no case that churchmen thould intop the rights of matrimo. nie. Therin they offer God great inturic, in feeking to limit that large institution of wedlocke, wherein all estates are interressed; and they sæme like wife to bride nature, and to compell hir within certeine precinas, wherein they offer intollerable inturie to all mankind, confidering that

–ad venerem compellimur exercendam Non modò nos, verùm omne animal, terræg, marífg, Natura

Matth.Paris.

fortelle.

Shéhen: afrith

Nature imperio : facias peiora necesse est, Si non frminei forberis ab ore barathri.

This yeare, or (as some saie) in the next, the king granted to the citizens of London free warren, that is to faic, libertie to hunt within a certeine cir, cuit about London, that all weires in the Hames Anno Reg. 10. thould be plucked up and destroied. Also in this tenth reare of his reigne, king Henrie granted to the citis zens of London, that they might have and ble a com mon feale. About the time of the making of which of 10 dinances Otho the cardinall of S. Aicholas in Car-A legat from cere Tulliano came as legat from pope Honozius into England to king Henrie, presenting him with letters from the pope. The tenour whereof when the hing had well confidered, he declared to the legat. that without the whole affent of the estates of his realme, he could dwlittle in that which the pope as calleb.

the pope. Matth. Paris

then required. Dereupon therefore he canled a parlement to be fummoned at Westminster, there to be holden in 20 the octanes of the Cpithanic: this legat also moued the king in the behalfe of Fouks de Brent, that he might be reflored to his possessions, and intop his wife as before time he had done: but the king declared that for his manifest treason committed he was infilic criled, and not onlic by his, but by the fentence of the nobles and other estates of the thole realme: which answer when the legat had heard, he lest off to folicit the king for Fouks, and from thenceforth tal hed no more of that matter. Shortlie affer by waie 30 of provie, the faid legat gathered a dutic which he claimed of the spiritualtie, that was of eueric connentuall church within the realme two markes of 1 2 2 6 The king in Gebe.

In this yeare the king held his Chrismasse at Winchester, and after comming to Parlebioge, chanced there to fall licke, so that he late in despaire of life for certeine baies togither. In the meane time also came the date appointed for the parlement to begin at Accomminger, where the legat and other of the 40 that they had aided and succourse his adversarie spiritualtie and temporaltie being affembled, the faid Ditho the wed the popes letters, and according to the tenour and purport of the same, was earnesslie in hand to have the priests to grant the yearclie valment of a certeine pention or tribute to the pope, towards the maintenance of his estate, which thep generallie denied. Then he faw that this bait would not take, he onelic demanded a tenth part of all their spiritual linings for maintenance of the wars as gainft the Saraccus, which was cafilie granted, as 50 realme, paidaccoodingtie as it was granted. more reasonable than the first.

Matt Westm. Matth. Paris. The caron nais requelt.

I here by diverse credible writers of good credit, it flould appeare, that the pope demanded to have affigi ned buto him out of enerie cathed all church two prebends, one out of the portion belonging to the bishop. an other out of the portion belonging to the deane and chapiter: and like wife of the abbeies, where there were severall postions, that is to fair, so much of the convent as belonged to the finding of one monke, and as much also of eueric abbats lining as thould 60 counternaile the fame. The cardinall vied follie perfuations to induce the prelats to affent to this grant, alledging that the durch of Rome was run in great flander for taking of monie in dispatch of suiters causes, which arose by meanes there was no maintenance of living sufficient for the churchmen there: and therefore he added, how it was the parts of naturall chilosen to release the necessitie of their louing mother, and that ercept the charitable denotion of them and other god and well disposed persons were Mostlic ertended, they thould want necessarie mains tenance for the luffentation of their lines, which thuld be altogither an unlamelic thing for the dignitic of the Komane durch.

The clergie reforting togisher to take adulte what answer they should make, at length opon their refolute determination, John the archdeacon of 13cd Cheanley ford was appointed to tell the tale for them all : tito of Johnt ford was appointed to tell the rate 102 them and 1 the architectum comming before the cardinall, declared boldle but of 2500m. him, that the demand which he had proponed, touched the king especiallie, and generallie all the nobilitie of the realme, which were patrons of anie churches. He added furthermore, how the archbishops and bis thops, and manie other of the prelats of England (fi thens the king by reason of his sickenesse could not be there) were also absent, so that they which were there present, being but as it were the inferiour part of the house, neither might not ought to make anie resolute answer as then in this matter. Immedia attie here with also came the losd John Parthall, and other mellengers from the king buto all the prelats that held anie baronies of the king, freightlie com, m moting them, that they thould in no wife bind and indanger his laic fie buto the church of Rome, where by he might be deprined of his due and accustomed feruices, and so everie man herebyon departed and

This yeare, the ples of the crowne were pleaded Fabian, in the tower of London. And on the firteenth daie of Warch in this fenth years of his reigns, the king granted by his charter infealed, that the citizens of a grant to London thould patte toll free through all England, the citiens and if anie of them were confireined in anie citie, of London bosough ostowne within the realme, to paie toll, that then the thiriffes of London might attach anie man of the faid citie, bozough or towne, where fuch toll was eracted, being found within the liberties of London, and him reteine with his gods and cattels, till the citizens that paid such toll were salissied, by restitution of the same, with all costs and charges sur fleined in the fuit . Dowbett, about the fame time, the king constreined the Londoners to give but a Math Pag him the lumme of five thouland marks as a fine, for Lewes against him, and lent to the said Lewes at his departure out of the realine a like fumme. What it may rather be thought they gave but othe king the faid five thouland marks for his favour thewed in granting buto them the aboue mentioned fredoms and liberties. At the same time, be had also tivelue bundled pounds of the burgettes of Porthampton, belives the fifteenth, which not onelie they, but also the Londoners, and all other generallie through the

In Februarie, the king called a parlement at Dr Anno Regul ford, in the which he made open declaration buto all 122 the allemblie, that he was now of lawfull age to go a parland uerne of himselfe, without anie to have rule over at Differ him, and to thereas before he was governed first by The king! the earle of Penbroke lord protectour, whilest he lis lawfull agr tied, after by the bilhop of Maintheffer and others, Polydon he now removed them from him by the counsell of the lood chiefe inflice, taking the regiment inholie to himselfe, eto such as thouso please him from thence, forth to appoint. Allo in the fame parlement, he did The chantel cancell and difamult the two charters before mentios cancelled ned, after that the same had beine vied through the realme for the space of two yeares, pretending them to be of no value, lith they were scaled and signed whilest he was under age. This deed of the king was greenoussie taken, and all the blame put in the load chiefe inflice. Herewith all fuch also as claimed anie manner charters of liberties, were appointed to remome the fame (a practile onelie to get monie) and to get them confirmed with the kings new feale, the old being made boid and pronounced of none effect.

In this peare died the French king Leines the Lewis it eighth, and his fon Leives the ninth faccorded him, frenchis

The beath &

The earle of meth ouer to effereth him his feruice.

Polydor.

Manh.Paris

Polydor.

The earle of

fancic diverse pæres of the realme began to with brate their obedience from him, as Theobald earle of Champaigne, Bugh earle of Marth, and Peter buke of Bittaine. Powbeit, the earle of Champaigne was calilie reduced againe to his former obedience, by the high wisevome and policie of the quiene mother. the had the government of hir foine the pong king anohis realme committed onto hir . But the earle of Marth constant in his purpole, came oner to king Henrie, whose mother he had married, and peclared buto him, that now was the time for him to recover those places, which king Philip had briufflie taken from his father king John: and to bring the fame to paste, he offered himselfe and all that he could make, in the furthering of this botage. The it. being thus pricked forward with the earle of Warth his words, determined without delaie to take in hand the warre. There authors varie, for some write, that king 20

Henric lent over certeine persons, as the archbishop of Booke, the bishop of Careleill, and the Lord Phis lip Dalbenie, to understand the minds of the Pozmans, the Britains and Pointouins. And for that those that were sent, brought word agains that the faioveople were not greatlie minded to forfake the French gouernment, he furceassed from attempting any exploit at that time. Dther write, that gathering agreat summe of monie of his subjects, towards the maintenance of his charges, he prepared a nauie 3 of thips, and failed over with the faid earle of Warth into Britaine, and there walked the confines of the French dominions, and that when the French king was readie with an armie to fuccour his subjects, he suddenlie retired to his thips, and returned into England, without atchiuing anie enterprise work this of remembrance, so that whether he went him selse or sent, it soccety not: for certeine it is that he profited nothing at that felon, either by fending melfengers to procure him frændship, or by going ouer 40 himselfe to make an entrie to the warres.

When the French affaires were thus at a ffaie, within a few moneths after, Kichard earle of Corne. wall returned footh of Balcoigne into England, and Mostlie after bicause he heard and was crediblie in-Commallie formed, that a certeine manour place which Wales rane the Duchman, capteine of Berkamffeed caffell held, by the gift and affiguement of king John, apperfeined to his earledome of Cornewall, he feized the castell into his hands. So that Walerane being 50 thus dipostested, crhibited his bill of complaint to the king, who inconfinentlie fent to the earle, commans ding him to make restitution, which he otterlie resu led to do. But forthwith, comming to the king, and without reteining any advocate, he declared his right which he offered to auerre in open presence, in any of the kings courts, before that soener pieces of the realme hould be there affembled.

This addition [the pæres of the realme]nothing thefe inffice, by whose advice the king meant to have appehended the earle the same night, after he was withdrawne to his lodging. But the earle warned fronthe court thereof, secretlie departed, accompanied onelie with one man, and never drew bride out of his horffes month, butill he came to Keading (whither his fernants reforted to him) and from thence he rode straight to Harlchitoge, there he found his deare frand William earle Parthall, to whome he did impart the danger likelie to have befallen him . Then they drew to the erle of Geller, a taking order with him for the railing of an armic, there met shortlie al diamford ter at Stamford the persons whose names hereaffer buhan armie infue; Kanulfe earle of Chefter, Milliam Parthall earle of Penhioke, Richard earle of Coincivall the kings brother, Bilbert earle of Bloceffer, William earle Marren, Henric earle of Hereford, William carle Ferrers, Milliam earle of Marwike, and diuerle barons, loods and knights, having there with them a great puissance of warlike personages.

The king having understanding as well of their demeanor, as also what they required by their letters and mellengers to him dailie fent, thought god for A day appoins a time to pacific their furie, and there opon appointed ted to make at a day at Posthampton, there he would met, and Posthampfo, minister fuch inffice onto them, as should be thought pacification, reasonable, and to stand with their god willes and contentation. Therebpon, the parties comming to The kings Porthampton at the day alligned, he granted to the grant to his earle his brother (at the instant desire of the loods) all brother. his mothers downie, with all those lands which belonged to the earle of Britaine within England, and withall, those lands also that americaned to the earle of Bullongne deceased. Hous the matter being pact fied, everieman departed to his home, whereas if the king had beine froward (as he was mild and patient, knowing that non solis viribus equum Credere, sapè acri potior prudentia dextra)

warres had immediatlie bene raifed betwirt them, namelie, bicause manie of the loops bare a secret grudge towards the king, for that he had reunked certeine liberties which in the begining of his reigne he had granted to be holden, though now to take a wate the envic which might be conceived towards him for his doing, he alledged, that he did not infringe any thing that he had then granted, but such things as his governours had luffered to palle whi left he was under age, and not ruler of himselfe: he caused them therefore to rederne manie of the same privileges, whereby he gained great finance for the fetting to of his new feale (as before ye have heard beclared.)

Pozeover, in this yeare there were fent certeinc persons from pope Gregozie the ninth (that succeeded hozteth the Honozius) into all the parts of Europe, to move by christians to preaching the christian people to make a tournic into make a tours the holie land against the Saracens. Such a multi-nie against tude by means hereof did affemble togither from all the Saracens parts, and that within a Most time, as the like had file dome times beene heard of. It is faid, that among E them there thould be to the number of fortie thou, Matth. Paris fand Englishmen, of whome Peter bishop of Win- fixtic thousand theffer, and William bishop of Erceffer were the thefe. Capteins also of that great multitude of crosfed fouldiers that went footh of fundie countries twere these, Theobald earle of Champaigne, and Phis Polydor. lip de Albenie, through whose negligence the sequels of this noble enterprise came but to small effect. But to procéed.

About this time the king minding the benefit of Anno Reg. 12. the commonwealth, caused the weights and meafures generallie within the land to be reformed affer Matth. Paris. pleafed the king and his councell, namelie the lord 60 one kandard. Furthermore, he created Hubert de weights and these since the king modern to have Burgh earle of Bent, the which Hubert how much Polydor, praise so ener he got at the beginning for his valian. Dubert de cie the wed in the befending of Douer caffell, and in Burgh creavanquishing the Frenchsteet that was comming to ted cat the fuccour of Leives by battell on the fea, it is certeine, that now he purchased himselse double as much hatred and entil will, bicante that being of secret councell with the king, and thereby after a fort fequeared from the loods, he was knowne to diffuspe the faid prince from restoring of the ancient lawes and cultomes but the people, which the barons off required: whereby it came to passe, that the more he grew in favour with the prince, the further he came into the envie of the Pobilitie, and hatred of the pro-

Val. Flac lib. 4

ted carle of feceetite.

De coince! himlelfe with the earles of Chefter and Denbloke and othera. They meet ple, which is a common reward to fuch as in respect of their maifter bo little regard the profit of others, us the proverbe faith,

Plus quis honoratur hostis tum multiplicatur stephan arch bilhop of Canturburie be= parted this Richard Tre= therficid che ded in big place. Matth Paris. walter 奶心 melhan.

I new trous

ble about the archbulhon of Canturburie.

Fabian.

Polydor.

Che carle of March mor=

the Mormans

to famour the king of Eng-

The Mos:

mane witte

England,

Matt.Paris.

to the bing of

Furthermoze, opon the ninth of Julie Stechan the archbishop of Canturburie died, after he had gouerned that let the terme of 21 yeares, after thome fucceded Richard Wethersbeiddeane of Baules, tho was the three and fortith archbishop of that lee. The monks of Canturburic had first cleaced one of 10 tipir owne concent, named Walter de Helmes thain: which election was made by the fame monks the third date of August nert inluing the death of their faid archbishop Stechan, but the king would not confent that he thould have the place for binerfe causes, which he objected: as first, for that he knew him to be fuch a man as thould be bupsofitable, both to him and to his kingdome. Secondic, bicante his father was a thæfe, and thereof being condid, fuffes red death byon the gallowes. Thirdlie, for that he 20 bimfelfe had flwd against king John in time of the interdiction.

On the other live, the bilhops affragans to the thurch of Canturburie obiected allo againft him, that he had bled the familiar companie of a nunne. and begot of hir certeine children. Dozeouer they at ledged, that no election without their confent, could be god, no: ought to take place. But the monke making his appeale, flood in it, and taking with him certains of his fellow monks of Canturburie, went to Kome, and there made supplication to the pope, that his election by his authoritie might be ratified and confirmed. Whereof the king and the other bis thops being souertifed, did put their objections in writing onder their feales, & fent the same to Rome to be exhibited to the pope by the bishops of Wieff. chefter and Rochefter, and John the archdeacon of Wedford, who vied fuch means, that his election was ludged boid, other the faid Richard Wethertheid allo, a grant was made to the citizens of London. that they should have and ble a common scale.

In this means while, Hugh the earle of Warch fo laboured with the Pormans and Pointouins in the behalfe of the king of England, that they began to keth to induce incline to his purpole: whereopon he fent his let-& Pontouns ters by fecret meanes bnto king Denrie, fignifieng to him, that if it would please him to come over with an armie to make warre against the French king, they would be readie to turns but o his lide, and 50 receive him as their fourreigne. Ling Penrie to king acuife what to answer and bo herein, with his welbeloued councellour Bubert of Burgh, thought it not god to attempt anie thing rathlie in this mat: ter, because the dealings of the Pormans were ne uer without some fraudibut pet to satisfie the request of his frænds, he promised to come over thortie but to them, if in the meane time he might perceive that they remained fledfaff in their purpole, gluing them furthermore manie great and harrie thanks for their 60 god meaning and fingular kindneffe towards bim.

Dow things beyond the fea fanding in this oze der, it happened in the moneth of August, that the foldiers which late in garrison within the castell of Mountgomerie, toke in hand to focke op a wood not farre from the faid castell, through which lay an highmaie, where oftennmes manie fellonious robberies and murders were committed by the Wielfh. As the fouldiers were buffe at worke in flocking op the woo, there came boon them an ambushment of Welthmen, which not onlie draw them awaie frem their worke, but also toke and fine diverse of them, confirming the resions to sie into the cassell, which immediative the Welfihmen innirence also about with a firong liege, thurking to find the defendants bubsonigeg

They within advertised Hugh de Burgh, the lord there inflice (to whome the castell belonged by the kings late gift) of the exploit and enterprice attemp ted by their enimies, with all possible hast; thereby on the king at request of the faid Hubert levied a power, and came to raile the fiege. But the Wielth The king men hearing of the kings approch, fled awaie like with anare theepe, to that comming to the castell, he found no res comment to Mance : howbett, for fo much as he faw the forefato the income from to be trouble forme and an annotance to the faid the cant castell, he willed it to be destroicd. True it is, that the same wood was verie thicke and rough, and farther it conteined also five leagues or fifteene miles in length: yet by such diligence as was vsed, the fame was wasted, stocked op, and quickelie rid out of the waie by fire and other means, so that the countrie was made plaine a great waie about.

After this, the king departed fouth into the Wielth After this, the king departed way into the writing confines, and comming to an abbete of the write Endebut monks called Cride, caused it to be burnt, bicause it ferued as a refuge for his crimics. Ehen by the ad, Chebing b uile of the lood chiefe inflice Hubert de Burgh, he gui fet in hand to build a castell there, bicause the place build a selled femed berie fit for fortification. But after the king with his armie had laine there thee months, through lacke of bittels (the Welthmen Mill cutting the Cre alithmen off as they went abroad to fetch in forrage and other provision) he was constrained to fall to as græment with Leolin their prince, and receiving of the latoprince the fumme of three thouland marks, he was contented that so much of the castell as was alreadie builbed, thould be raced and made flat a peistom gaine with the ground, before his departure from ned to agra thence. Herebpon, manie men toke occasion to iel with the at the lost chiefe fulfice and his doings about this ca, wellman, ffell, who at the beginning named it Huberts follie. Amongst other also that were taken prisoners by was out of hand eleded a confirmed. In that yeare 40 the Welthmen, whileff the king thus bainelie spent his time about the building of that fort, Walliam de tid de Brid Breule a right valiant man of warre was one, the taken pile being taken by Leolin prince of Wales, was by mr. him cruellic put to death (as after thall appeare) for the which act, and other finch inturies received at the fame Leolins hmos, king Henrie at length greenoullie punithed him. Tho; the most part of this Man. Pain. funmer fealon, great thunbers happened in Eng. Strangt land: the element also feemed as though it had bur fights in ned with continuall flames: freples, churches, and the and other hie buildings were Griken with lightning, and the harvest was soze hindered by continuall rainc. Also in the middest of the day there came a twonders Polydon full darkenesse byon the earth, that the brightnesse of the aire fermed to be concred and taken awate.

In the thirteenth years of this king, Stephan the Anno Reg. ! popes chapleine and his Nuncio came ouer unto 1 229 king Penrie, requiring to have towards the maintenance of the popes warres against the emperour Frederike, a tenth part of all the mourable gods within the realmes a countries of England, Wiales, and Ireland, as well of spirituall persons as temporall. Therebpon, a parlement of affemblie of the 3 parlement loods was called at Wichminifer, on the fecond fundors commis date after Caster, which was the 29 of Aprill. At helden tipich parlement, when the popes buls were read, and the matter therein conteined plainelie opened and cramined, to the end it might appeare boon what necellaric canles the pope was confirmed to purine the faid wars, and to aske relecte of faithfull chaffian people, being members of the holie church: the king, bicause he had by his procurators at Kome aforce hand promifed a bound bimfelle to fuch paiment of tenths, fate fill, and answered not to the contrarie

(wereas

The Weithmé

stephan be of the Spiritu=

aitte granted

wthe pope.

Mlarerg.

Manh Paris

gegraue. The tenthe

Athereas the hope of a great number was repoted in him, that by his deniall the popes request thuld have bene frustratio that when by his silence he was adjudged to confent, pet the temporall lords & late men The temporal otter lie denied to agree onto luch paiment, not wil ling in any wife to bind their baronies and tempos rall possessions buto the church of Rome.

Howbeit, the bilhops, abbats, priors, and other eco clesiasticall persons, after they had thewed them. felues to rell doubtfull (not without great grudging 1 and murmuring in the meane time, for the space of thie of foure daies togither) at length, for feare of cre communication, consented to be contributozie, but in luch lost, as they hav escaped for a farre more reas sonable summe , if Stethan Segraue one of the kings councell had not by compact (as was thought) made with the Nuncio, wought to in the matter, that the tenths were finallie granted, to the great cio thewed the procuratorie letters, whereby he was authorised to gather those tenths, and that not after a common manner, but by a verie Araight and hard baluation.

And for the more fure waie of proceeding herein. he had letters of authoritie from the pope, to ercoms municate all fuch as should withstand him or his deputies in proceeding with thole affaires. He the wed himselfe mozeover berie extreame in collecting of this monie, and namelie towards the prelats of the 30 durch infomuch that appointing him a certeine day in the which binder paine of ercommunication thep thould make paiment, divers for want of readie mo. nie, were compelled to make thiff with the chalices, and other bestels and ornaments belonging to their thurthes, and other were glad to take by monie byon interest, and for that thist there were come oner with the Nuncio diverse wicked blurers buder the name of merchants, which when they law those that flod in need like to be ercommunicate for want of 40 readie monte, they would offer themselves to lend onto any that would bosow after the rate of one no ble for the loane of twentie by the moneth, to bring ing the needie into their inares, to their irrecovera ble losses and bnowing. Hereby the land was filled with bitter curlings (though in fecret) by those that withed fuch unreasonable eractors never to see god end of the ble of that monie.

From that day forward there wanted not in England certeine vourers called Caursini, which 50 fought nothing else but the wealth of such persons as they might get into their fnares, namelie those whome the church of Kome doth ver and put to trouble with hir cractions and paiments. The earle of Thearle of Chester onlie stood mansfullie against the paiment Chefter wold of those tenths, insomuch that he would not suffer not permit the his lands to be brought under bondage, neither wold gathered with he permit the religious men and preeffs that held of his for to pay the same, although the rest of England, contributorie thereto, having onelie this comfort, that not they alone, but also other foren regions were driven to do the like . Thus did the locults of Rome from time to time lucke the Iweetnesse of the land, and all to mainteine the pompe and pride of the fame, wherein what other practices did they bie, than as one truelie tellificth :

Cuncti luxuria atg, gula, furtífg, dolífg, Certatim incumbunt, oc.

king henrie

But to let this pade: king Henrie purpoling to faile present to Our into Britaine and musue France, with fuch an armite pateurinto Portimouth about Wichaelmatte, with luch an armite and alon Treland, and affembled out of England , Wales , Ireland, and Scotland, as the like for number of people had not bæne knowne to have passed over with any of his ancesters: howbeit when he should come to the veric point of imbarking his people, with vittels, armoz, and other provision, there were not thips sufficient to passe over the one halfe of the armie: wherefore when the king law this default, he was loze offended, but thefelie with Hubert the earle of Bent, los chafe tuffice, infomuch that he openlie called him old trais toz, and laid to his charge how he had thus bled the matter of purpole , onelie to plealure the quæne of The carle of France, of whome (as he faid) he had received five frent fallen in thouland marks to hinder his proceedings. In this to the kings heat if the earle of Cheffer and other had not beine vilplealure. at hand, he had suerlie slaine the chefe inflice even there with his drawne sword, who was glad to audio his presence, till his anguie mod was somwhat oucre paffed.

In the meane time there arrived Benrie earle of Benrie carle impowerithment and inestimable damage of the church and realme of England. After this, the Nun-20 conducted the king into his countrie. But sith win- The kings tourned the king into his countrie. But sith win- The kings tourned the king into his countrie. ter was come byon them , he adulted him to flay till terred, the nert spring, and so he did. Then cuerie man was licenced to depart home, and the earle of Bent reconciled agains into fauour. The erle of Britains in like maner did homage to the king for Britaine, and the king restozed him to all his rights in England, and further giving him five thousand marks to defend his countrie against the enimies, sent him home a Anno. Reg. 14. gaine in most courteous and louing maner. In this pære of our Load 1 230 king Henrie held his Chailte Matth Paris. malle at Porke, togither with the king of Scots, The king of whome he had delired to come thither at that time, thome he had desired to come thither at that time, Ehrismalle that they might make merrie: and so for the space of with the king thee dates togither, there was great banketting of England and sport betweene them . Du the fourth day they at yorke. toke leave either of other, the king of Scots with rich giffs returning towards his countrie, and the king of England towards London.

Apon the flue and twentith day of Januarie allo, Matth. Paris. while the bishop of London was at high masse with. A Grange in the durch of & Name in the durch of the durch in the church of S. Paule in London, a ludden dark London, nelle overlhadowed the quiere, and therewith luch a nelle overshadowed the quiere, and therewith such a se some tempest of thunder and lightning, that the people stow, pag. there allembled thought verelie the church and fier 261. of his ple had come downe upon their heads . There came large collection mozeover such a filthie favour and finke withall, printed 1580. that partie for feare, and partie for that they might not abide the fauour, they boided the church, falling on heapes one bpon another, as they lought to get out of the fame. The vicars and canons for loke their delkes, to that the bifton remained there onelie with one deacon that ferued him at malle . Afterward, then the aire began to cleare op, the people returned Matth Paris, into the church, and the billyop went forward and finished the masse.

In the meane time the king levied a great fumme The king geof monie of the prelate of his land towards his four, thereth monie nie into France : he had also a great relecte of the course into citizens of London. And the Jelves were confired France. Wales, Ireland, and Scotland were compelled to be 60 ned to give to him the third part of all their moves ble goods. In the moneth of Aprill, Leolin prince Matth. Paris. of Wales caused William de Breuse, ichom he had The Lord taken paloner long before (as aboue is mentioned) hanged. to be hanged on a paire of gallowes, for that he was taken (as was reported) in adulteric with the wife of the faid prince. And on the last day of Aprill, the king with a puillant armie toke the lea at Portelmouth, The king lake and landed at faint Palos in Britaine on the third terh over inco day of Pay, where he was right infullie received of France, Henrie earle of that countrie, After he was thus are rived in Britaine, he entered into the French dominions, with the fair earle, and the earle of Parth his father in law, doing much hurt within the same. Disarmie dailie increating by the great numbers

1230 towardshis

m. De 2Bzeule

of Permans and other, thich et the feare of the bong al Consistes attended in their parts, cause fortung from marrie places to air inco.

tions Comment. Freibr and William of the foreibn

Immyl oher, here were ties kuthun hei

Twe breeken n' che Page: mys n. Par: Marria Paris

Chrence of ben begæ

den i diame

ching andlic.

recta mon ed

fro cuerre

and formann of the Paganelles or Danielles bring race of getter butch and commence on their commerce. trinip krought with firm specience kangles at men of streets that's income and release in feats of load. Direct Public marn insuld faint have perinaded the I king to have enterd into Decimande, for Calles thry afternet at though he an cafe matter for hem to fabbut the triple countrie: thereto the bing incold glattic have conferies, if the earle of Bent has not oberieb ham adher weie. There thes they be founded bein A fix leaf ince to grant from the hunters beights En mure of menues of this menue, both whole and they banisted men to be mide as they fand to expell all the from home set of from a mich is nother beside this in observed, to that those Parman leads crown 20 med instituat country, tabalca the freedy hang causes Spoir casticis and mannours to be femal bente his rife.

During spisteme, king Lebers (who a felo bases after has taken from the buke of Britaine the triumes of Arbane, Campanell, and Belefene bring from mater by the bang of Constant, ballet forth inch his accuracy make that communic of Amoust, and their by for five of the Louis, incompres, to fine the being of feinen in had allman in famegrioules inouid reu tests lam. Her the being of Constant atmention of his agreed, pulled that court femot than arest man hand hanc unget, and incamped first in the coun-

Landange, the french being fell falletining, and be for later definiting the interest of forming, wh

Calas, petrang is see Curte Hadfriger als he passed the risker of Charent, and brasted all the countrie of Lantunge. Where of me may believe forme lacety to the time bangs seemed butted inhich con-factors a long time right factor a creek : but at length

the Conglishmen groung backs the transmit transmit on the french the, a great manches of their about the ties bring flame and taken.

n delicinging to the emical Hurty. Afternut 40

Conglant, that or Grand not parke meer the fame ti- ; o made combined by his capality, of the Lamb

Polydon

De tobe the first of Noyers, faint Jame Bor mm, FE krám the master are use poster, forcing leaf the Posteriors of Journal ..

Pointer no trie of Pointer, and after total into the contines of Famonge,

After this battell, they fair also that a prace was Concluded between fiver. Low object benefits being to corners, that the matter massing taken by he a france 50 heathers and battell, because both the langs been pong men, ard as pet and bette ficilital in control effects, were content to give core unto quene Plane to the cried Echange, and to Kanadi earle of Christi, tipel that take byen bem to interal a peace, and prefer the concennes of agreement, by thich necessis they becre at the last accesbed. Assuring after things thich incre concludes at this perfect time rise bake of Bename , 210 the carie hang, and received efficiency unto his farmer. Thus coaling the beartres in that time between the bings of Capien an franc, as fear har minefer. Solution of her final believe other, which bester and lizes in those bases, direct loas no peace at that time concludes: but affect that bing specific has pulled from American Poster and mit battell, he come into Calcourse, where he corrians the homogres and fraises of manie made man in Consequences, and to transmit min Printers, rest oncide has the biar also of factors leads and more of borners in that countries, but alle took the cellect of Disabran by affants, the raugh the marbon of the Craditioners, the choic rather with desperat abundances to make entrance to homour, than by timesoulinelle as femal of courage to parchaft reprod; for they brete berie beil , that Lan emperat forces from Aforement reported

Make part of makes corner for relationes and herefore they made trials of their ballandpuse ruen with altrinement of biderie to the bekomin ture of the entitude, this gapes after the concern.

This botte, and enter taken for the lake keeping him bur of their quantities be returned unto Harianes, & comming to the citie of Counts, remained a tiple three, it was forming the time bainche in pleaface and banket ting. Finallie in the moneth of Derber he toke the Relaid fra and returning and Concluse after manic perits. Commen land at Bertefmuch, he was Desber, leaving believe him in Britaine coe knowles at men of acces a thousand resonant or Cipendanie forthiers. for defende of the countrie against the Freedmann. The week and appointed for their capterine the earle of Cheffer, Curleit the racie Berthall, and the early of Albertania into in ing CULTURE offer ballant and appoint beautions, the after the department of the burn made time cours into the French countries, but first unto Anion, ichere who ber they communicate basics touched basted, taking and he wood, befrowing the called of Govern also Articolated topon the rimer of Sant, and finallie labor both planfix of rich spoiles, they recognod into Bollaine, from there der let fort. Souther Mer there extend total Commente, belleveres the called of Ponte fon, f Bunga burning the telure: which enterpole when they has burn. accompletion at their lasts, they returned efficient into Bataine libere they been entallie received.

The crie of Cheller in his curine him livinghe secd a function the control of S. James be L'elemente. S. James which themses it belonged to the right of his later Terrory the early of Balance had like the times comment of act reflects bate han. To his water bean he 1. I have of Price a manuelious eclapic of the feature chances where numeriation after the rilling fix most be that the comb famed as it has been court or area beth franc of made. On the :: base of flower and the mane time into land librante extiples being as then 1 : bairs old.

furthermore, while the bing bass in france. their constant and Constant in butte of Samuel Turbit cases to the bing, and of the cultures of Lordon ince homen ablie received. He was a man of find bieft Expel me tal fature. Con very toke great pleasure to be hald him. In the fame pears who in the more the of Julic, an July daily had best governoon of Cons. Cubigl nach interfacing that both the bong of Emplan. Cample adds care Publican guar our litte france. बर्ट है उत्तरेशक कि क्रिकेट साथ क्रिकेट करे में साम वी learns on the Coulds west, radics a marking armed. क्षेत्र के सावीक्षण को संस्था राजारात स्थान के के से केर राजारात स्थान Coglific bostonian feeling and hearing the comtime bester from Albertof them College by Manage College in delich teiler of Arriand des Apperied the college of Arriand des indicate to the of Julian has about this in car character ko to from Wester de Lacie and Kielpurd de Borgh, af Josef. Membing frequential a mobile areas, which he would be of Party were made friends again such the french to be Lace, and littlend by Borok such the first best favore. These peris se la un suchaf) bales custane books. Coreceived the state of the state mandam facts with the thirt which is referred to his stone generalment be profess buttel to the Juliomen, the about when there lets but one builted of the Coglishaum bubbis allaice die Rose.

The Considerate accepting to the error agreed fed, frigues as though they had fird, and Century वीताह की वस्तावार स्वतं कार कार्य कार अवस्थ वस्ता अवस्थ वित lumbers desirate of their other than bastels, which corremany facili busa dican, bit fit on them cycelis, with ind the other when farmed before to the criticals backe against, and fet boon them in like marrer, by Est meants theired the Brithmen being in Bernaud, month

Mari Prin

Marine.

were beaten downe on all parts, and biterlie vanauthed, with loffe of 20 thouland men (as it was crediblic reported.) The king of Connagh was also taken and committed to palon.

Thiranth and tenth granted to the hing. Englichmen:

Bargeens.

In the meane time king Henrie hauing fpenta great deale of treasure in his tournie made into france, there was granted but o him a fifteenth of the temporaltie, with a difme and a halfe of the fpirts tualtie, towards the furnishing out of a new power of mento be fent into Spaine against the Sara to uile, faleng, cens, which made fore warres byon the chaiffians in that countrie, therebpon king Henrie being requi red of the L. of Aragon to aid him with fome nump ber of buldiers, he fent a great power thither with all speed, and so like wife did the French king . By means whereof the Spaniards, being foined with Englishmen and Frenchmen, obteined a noble vice torie, in vanquilling those their enimies. Alus faith Manh. Paris. Polydor. But other write that the king on the fear at McCliminster (where the Pobles both spirituall and temporall were affembled) demanded escuage of all those that held any baronies of him, that is to faic , forren knights fæ, fortie thillings , or thræ marks.

The archb. of hs cleargue.

esfenage Dec

manbed.

Moreoucr, the archbithop of Canturburie (an Canturburue they lay) frod against the king in this demand, mainteining that the cleargie ought not to be subject onto the indgement of late men, lith this escuage was granted in the parts beyond the leas without their 30 confent. Therebpon the matter as touching the bis thops was deferred till the quindene of Caffer, albeit that all the laitie, and other of the spiritualtie confented to the kings will. About this time also there chanced to rife a great firife and contention betwirt Richard the archbishop of Canturburie, and Hubert the earle of Bent, who as gardian to the young erle of Clocefter had got into his hands the castell of Tunarch, and the bridge, with the towne, and certeine other podellions tarie of Bent. which belonged to the archbishops see, and therefore 40 did the archbishop complaine to the king of the inite rie which he fusteined.

pow when he perceived no hope likelic to come for any redrefte at the kings hands, he toke an other way: and first by his pontificall authoritic accurred all those that withheld the same possessions, and all their mainteiners (the king ercepted) and therewith appealing to the pope, he went to profesute his appeale at Kome; whither the king and the earle fent allo their procurators, and made the pope their arbis 50 tratour to indge of the matter. In the end pope Ore gone having heard the thole process of the control uerlie, indged the right to remaine with the archbithop, who having then obteined his velice, halfed to ward England: but as he was returning homewards, he died by the way, not farre from Rome, thereby the popes inogement toke no place: for whilest the see was void, there was none that would follow the fuit: and fuch was the end of this contro, vertie for this time.

Rate Rentll After the decease of this archbishop Richard, the anoarch of monks elected Kalfe Penill bishop of Chichester Cantarburie. the kings chancelloz, an opzight man, and of full dear ling in all his dwings. In whome also it is to be no. ted, he would not give one halfepenie to the monks towards the bearing of their charges in their fournie to Rome, which they should take byon them from thence to fetch his confirmation, according to the manner, least he should burthen his conscience with the crime of fimonie which he greatlie abhorred, although some imputed this to proceed rather of a clohed spice of couetousnesse. Thich practice of his mas acth greatlie to the confounding of the indirect means now vied to affire onto promotions, for the obteinment whereof no temedie is forboine; no, though the fame be repugnant to reason, and otterlie against conscience and honestic. But this is the temptation of auarice caro ambitton, which poilon the minds of men in luch lost , that rather than thep will want their withed advancement, they will ble thele meanes that may further them moff, namelie, frendlhip, monie, and mightie mens countenance; which one noteth verie well in a difficion of neat de-

Artu, honestatis, recti, pracepta, decin, vim, Conculcat, superant, spernunt, sauor, ara, potentes,

But to the purpose from whence we are digressed. Withen the monks came to the popes prefence, ope ontinquirie made , and chefelie by report of Simon Sino Lang Langton, who (as some thinke) gaped for the dignitie, tons report of he understood that the said Kalse Penill Hould he at the conduct. man unlearned, a courtier, hastie and thost of inged, frenth. and that which most vilpleased the pope, it was to be uen and twentith of Januarie, holding a parlement 20 feared, that if he fould be preferred to that rome, he would go about to beliver, the realing of England from the thealdonne of the poper, and the court of Kome (into the which being made tributorie be being John it had latelie beene brought) that (as he thould alledge) it might ferne God and holie church in the old accustomed libertie.

To bying this to passe (having the king thereto greatlie inclined, and all the realme readie to affile him in the fame) he would not Aiche to put his life in teopardie, namelie byon confidence of the right and appeales of Stephan the late appliffing of Canturburie, made in folemne wife before the altar of S. Se before Paule in the cathed all durch of London, when hing in pag. 177, & Paule in the catheorau gurch of London, wear aug in paul 1/13.

Is in religning his crowne into the hands of the let 1 78.

Expression gat, made that writing obligatorie most execuable keth void the

When the pope had heard this tale told, he firett disamilled the election and request of the confirmation on of the faid Kalle Deuill, granting libertie to the monks to chole some other which might prone a wholfome thepheard for the foule of man, profitable to the church of England, and a faithfull sonne to the fee of Rome, and to the monks returning home, made relation to the covent bow they had sped. After this, the manks elected the prior of their house named John to be their archbithop, tho going to kiome for his confirmation, was perfuaded in the end fores nounce his cleation : fo that at length one Comund that was treasurer of the colledge of Salisburie, was elected, confirmed, and confectated, aman of great zeale, being the foure a fortith archiffion that hadgouerned that fee.

This yeare the kings brother the earle of Comes The earle of wall married the counteffe of Gloceffer, widow to Cornewall the late earle Gilbert , and fifer to Milliam Par, marricitithe hall earle of Penbjoke, the which erle of Penbjoka countede of Counted of Cou thootlie after the same marriage departed this life, shortlie after the same marriage peparteo this tie; and was buried on the fifteenth day of Appill, in the Pendode des new temple at London, necte bute bis father. Pozes parer this 60 ouer, Leolin prince of Wales about this feafon lite. ouer, Leoun prince or corners about this readily for enterprising to inuade the English confines, burned Polydor, and walled the countrie in most cruell wife. Thereof of wales in the king being advertised, halfed footh by great four water the nies, with purpole to revenge fuch intaries. But the English bozs enimies hearing of his comming (according to the bers. cultome of their countrie) without into the mounteins, bogs, and marifhes. Wherefore the king feeing that he could not have them at his pleasure, and least he should be thought to spend time in vaine) came backe, and left behind him a small trope of soulviers to reliff their attempts, if they thould happen to rife bp any moze.

The Welthmen having intelligence that the king was refurned home, brake forth agains as before in

Æ.iy.

. 5 -- 7

The weith: men put to flight, weidhmen. Matt. Paris.

Mante caftell repaired.

Matth Paris.

Penrie carle of 25 titaine. of Chefter diffreffe the cariages.

Atruce ta:

Anno Reg. 16. 1232

Mauh.Paris.

to the English martices, and not onelic toke preces and boties, but went about to believe with fire and fword all that flod in their way. Howbeit in their returne, and as they ranged abroad fornewhat unabut feolie, they were intrapped by the fouldiers which the hing had left there for the defense of the countrie, and put to flight neere the caliell of Bountgomerie, with great flaughter a loffe of their people. But Leolin no thing difmated ther with, affembled a greater power than he had before, and began forthwith to rob and re spoile within the English marthes with paganish extremitie. Which thing when it came to the under-Namoing of the king, he was verie fore displeased, that so meane a man as Leolin was, should put him to lo much trouble, therefore he railed a farre greater The king go- armie than he had done at anie time before, and with eth against the the same came to the citie of Hereford.

In the meane time Leolin comming nière buto the fair callell of Pouritgomerte, by the practife of a The English traitozous monke, trained forth the English fouldi 20 menditrelled ers thichlate in garrifon there, and counterfeiting to flee, till he had laid them by in bogs and mires with their horses, so as they could not helpe themfeluesithe fell opon them, and fo flue and toke a great number of them even as he could have wished. The king advertised hereof, halted the faller forward, and comming into hole patts, as he patted by an abbeie of the Ciffeaux order of which house the monke was that had betrated the Englishmen of Mountgome ele) he burned a grange that belonged to the same 30 others. abbete, and further spoiling the fame abbete it selfe, he had let it on a light fire allo, if the abbat therof had not redeemed it with the summe of three hundred marks of filver. After this, he caused Pawds car fell to be repaired and fortified, which the Melthmen in times pair had overtheowne, and when the works was finished, he left there a firong garrison of soul diers to keepe backe the Wickymen from making their accustomed incursions.

Whilest the king was thus occupied in Wales, 40 there mas forme busines in France: for in the moneth of Jame, the French tring with an armie came to me uade the countrie of Bittaine, but earle Henric with the earle of Cheffer and the other English capteins forms incanes to take and defirote all the carriages and wagons which came with vittels and other prout from to ferne the French armie. When the French Frenchkings men percettied they could not have their purpole, by mediation of the archbishop of Beintes, and the earle of Bollongite on the French part, and by confent of 50 the earles of Britaine and Chester on the English part, a peace was concluded, or rather a truce to indure for three yeares betwirt the tivo kings of Engs land and France. This agreement was made the fift date of Julie, and then the earles of Britaine and Cheffer, with Kichard Barthall, came over into England, and rove to the king, whom they found at Mainos castell, where he remained till the works was finished, and then in the moneth of Daober returned into England.

In this meane time no finall grudge arofe among the people, by reason that their churches were occupied by incumbents that were Arangers, promoted by the popes and their legats, who neither instructed the people, nor could well speake ante more English than that which ferned for the collection of their tithes. in formuch that for the infolencie of fuch incumbents as well the poble men and those of god reputation, An bunder as other of the meaner lost, by an budilereet prefumlie prefump ption attempted a diforderlie redrelle, confederating trons attempt themselves togither, and taking byon them to write and direct their letters buto bishops and chapters, commanding them by waie of inhibition, not to feine to interrupt those that should seize opon the beneficed frangers, og byon their renennes.

They also toke byon them to write unto such religious men and others, which were farmers buto anie of those Grangers, forbidding them to Cand accountable buto the faid firangers, but to reteine the rents and profits in their hands to answer the same buto such as they thould appoint for the receipt ther, of . The superscription of their letters was this. Tra- The super li episcopo, & sali capitulo, universitus corum, qui magis vo- scription of o lunt mort quim à Romanis confundi, aluten. That is to ther letting say, To such a bishop and chapter, all those which had rather die than be confounded by the Romans, fend greeting. In the feale where with the faid letters were fealed, were two fwords ingraven.

This matter went to farre forth, that there were fundice persons armed and disguised like mummers, which enterpiled not onelie to take diverte of those frangers that were beneficed men, but also came to their barnes, threshed up their graine, and either Masking made fale therof, or gave it awaie for God his fake, thethera. thewing counterfeited letters under the kings feale, which they had procured for their warrant, as they did pretend. At length the pope opon complaint The popular made buto him of fuch violent boings, wrote to king plainth to Denrie, blaming him not a little for fuffering fuch the is in the disorders to be committed within his realme, com- ming him, manding him opon paine of ercommunication to The popt manding him open paine of eccommunication to mandeth the cause a diligent inquirie to be had of the offendors, offendors to and to fee them harpelie punithed, to the example of be accured,

Dozeover he fent letters to the bilhop of Wincheffer, and to the abbat of faint Comunofburie, to make the like inquilition, and to accurle all those that should be found culpable within the south parts of England, as he did to the archbilhop of Porke, to the bishop of Durham, and to an Italian named John a canon of Porke, to do the like in the north parts, to that the offendors thould remaine accurled, till they came to Koine, there to fetch their absolution. Here Inquilities bpon therefore a generall inquilition was taken, as taken, well by the king as by the biftops, and manie found quiltie, some in fact, and some in consent: amongst which number there were both bilhops and chapleins to the king, with archdeacons and deanes, knights, and manie of the lattie.

There were force thirittes and ballittes allo, which by the kings commandement were arrefted and put in prison, and diverse of all forts did keepe themselves out of the wate, and would not as yet be found. In like maner, Dabert earle of Bent, logo chefe fullice, Che tant ! was accused to be chiefe transgressour in this mat blame, ter, as he that had given fouth the kings letters par tents to thole bilguifed and masting thelbers, who had taken byon them to to lequester other mens gods, whereto they had no right. There came also to the king one fir Robert de Twing, a knight of the Sir Robert north parts (which named himselfe William We therse, and had led about a companie of the foresaid malkers) protesting that he had done it boon inst cause to be revenged byon the Romans, which went about by fentence of the pope, and manifelt fraud to spoile him of the parsonage of a certeine church thich he held, and therfore he faid he had rather stand accurfed without tult cause for a time, than to lose his bene fice without due indgement. Dowbeit the king and the other commissioners counseled him in the end to go to Rome to purchase his absolution, ath he was fallen in danger of ercommunication, and there to fue for his pardon in the popes confiftorie. And to incourage him the better to to do, the king wrote allo in his favour to the pope tellifleng the right which he claimed to the church, inhereby at length he obteined his fuit (as after pe thall heare.)

The king called a parlement at Aleuminster, & perhap mereni

Mentputa

An.Reg.17.

r fubliote bundunted,

The bishop of

wherein declaring what charges he had beine at of uers waies , he required to have a lublidie granted him, for the relace of his want, which was flattie penied, the Pobles and other effats creating the ponertte amongst all degræs of men, by manie cuts bent reasons. Hereopon the bishop of Winchester canfellguen heing a berie eloquent and faire-fpoken man, openlie counselled the king to favour his people, whom he had alreadie made poze and bare with continuall tri butes and eractions. And if it were fo that he flood in fud ned as was alledged, that then he should take into his hands againe such possessions and things, which during the time of his young peeres he had behowed byou his scruants, without any god adulled confideration, for lacke of ripe indgement and dis cretion, and againe to take from certeine couctous persons, who now were become horstelethes and car ferpillers in the commonwealth, all fuch offices as they held, and had berie much abused, causing them to peald by their accounts, and to ble them after the 20 manner of sponges, so that where he had in times past made them full of moissure, he might now inzing them drie, following herein the example of Telpalian . And by this means it was not to be douted but he should have inough of his owne, with fice of cheefe Matth. Paris.

The earle of

Elecitizens of London

out doing infurie to any man. The king gave verie god eare to the bishous

The king fol: woods, and following his counsell, caused his receive when the biffipp of win: vers, treasurers, and other such as had medled with theders coun anic of his receipts to come to a reckoning. And bre derstanding by the auditors appointed to take their 3 accounts, that the most part of them had received much more and by other means than they had enter red into their reckoning, he compelled them to re-Close it out of hand with interest. Also he caused the magistrats to be called to a reckoning, and manie of them being convicted of fraud, were condemned to make restitution . And among other Kanulfe Bis ton treasurer of his chamber was put beside his of fice, and fined at a thouland marks, in whole place was let Peter de Rinales, or after some copies de Dzuiales, a Poldouin, nephue oz rather fonne to the bishop of Winchester, by whose advice the king take a more first account of his officers, and often remove ued fuch as he tudged guiltie.

kmonichar- deposed from the office of high instice, and Stephan goothisof- Secretar amointed in Live and institute of the control of the cont At the same time also, Hubert earle of Bent was Segrave appointed in his rome. The faid Hubert (bicanfe he refused to answer a certeine dutie which was demanded of him to the kings ble) ran fo farre into his displeasure, that he durst not abive his light, but for lafegard of himfelfe got him to the abbeie of Perton, and there twhe fanctuarie. The king hear: ing of this his demeanoz, was so highlie offended withall, that he fent to the Londoners, willing them to go thither and fetch him to his presence. The Londoners, which in no wife loved him, bicause of the death of their citizen Constantine, were verie reas die to accomplish this commandement, insomuch that where the major overnight late declared to them the effect of the kings commission, there were 60 thur good des twentie thousand of them in armoz gotten forward earlie in the morning towards Perton, in full hope taile of Bent, now to be revenged of him, for the finall god-will that he had borne unto their citie heretofore.

But the king being informed by the earle of The: ffer and others, that if the Londoners being thus in armoz, and in fo great a number, Chould commit any other outrage by the way, the matter might grow to some such inconvenience as would not easilie be stated, he sent to them a countermand to returne backe to the citie againe, which they did, though forie in their hearts that they might not go through with their delired enterpille. Authermoze (lie hiere the mutabilitie of fortune and hir inconstancie, imereof complaint hath beine made by our forefathers time out of mind, fateng, Passibus ambiguis fortuna volubilis errat, Et manet in nullo certa tenáx y loco ; Sed modo lata manet, vultus modo sumit acerbos, Et tantum constans in leuitate sua est.)

now that the erle of Bent was thus out of the kings fauour, there were few or none of those whome he had before been beneficiall buto, that the weothems felues as frænds and louers but o him, but all fozloke were readie to fair the world of him, the arch bishop of Dubline ercepted, who yet obtained of the king respit for him to make answere buto such things as thould lawfullie be objected against him, both for the bebt which should be due to the king, and also byon points of treason, which were now laid to his charge. Wherin we map fee what hath beene the course of the world in former ages touching freends, who in the spring of a mans felicitie like swallowes will flic about him; but when the winter of advertitie nipoth, like fnailes they keepe within their Hels: therebuto the poet verie well alluding, faith,

-diffugiuni cadıs Cum face sucatis amici,

Ferre iugum pariter dolosi. After this, as the faid Hubert would have gone to S. Comundsburie in Suffolke, where his wife as then remained, he was apprehended at Burntwood in Gler, within a chamell there (as faith Fabian.) Manh. Paris But (as Matthew Paris faith) fir Robert de Crane= combe, with these hundred armed men was fent to apprehend him by the kings commandement, and fo he was taken in a village belonging to the bishop of Porwich in Eller, and by the kings commande, ment call into pillon, but yet afterwards he was reconciled to the kings fauoz, when he had lien foure moneths in prison, and thirtiene moneths banished the court.

In this yeare, on the evaluation of the croffe, at Anblivie Lambeth, in the assemblie of the states there, a substitute parlement big man granted to the 12 of the factor of the country of the factor die was granted to the U. of the fortith part of eue, holden at rie mans gods towards the discharge of his ochts Lambeth. which he owght to the earle of Britaine. Also in the Anno Reg. 17. beginning of the seaventeenth peers of his reigne, Matth. Paris. Kanulic earle of Cheffer and Lincolne departed this life the fix and twentish day of Datober, whose bodie of Chester dewas buried at Cheffer, and his bowels at Wallings parceth this ford where he died. This earle Kanulse was thrice use. married, first to Constance daughter and heire to Erle Ranulfo Conanearle of Britaine and Richmund, and fo in thrice maried. right of hir was intituled earle of those two places: which Constance has beene first married buto Gef frey the third sonne of king Henrie the second, by thom the had thue Arthur (as before per haur heard.) But by earle Kanulfe the had no iffue at all, but was from him divozced, and afterwards married bnto Buy vicount de Towars. Then after earle Kas Chis Clenulfe was to divogled from the faid Constance, he mence was married a ladie named Clemence, and affer hir de, daughter to cease, he married the third time the ladie Pargaret, erle ferrers. daughter to Humfrey de Bohun earle of Hereford and Effer, conffable of England.

Howbeit he never had iffue by any of those his Chepartition wines, to that John Scot his nechue by his litter Dawd fucceded him in the earldome of Cheffer, and Milliam Dalbenie earle of Arundell, nephue to him by his lifter Pabell, had the manour of Barrow, and other lands that belonged to the faid Ranulfe, of the perelie value of five hundred pounds. Robert Duin, cie, be that married his litter Hauile, had the earle dome of Lincolne, and to of a baron became an earle tho had iffue by his wife, Pargerie countelle of Lincolne, that was maried to Comund Lacie earle Ouid.lib 1.de trist.5.

Hor.lib.car.I. ed. 35.

This Roger

Lacic is fur:

named Gelie.

of Lincolne, William carte Ferrers and of Darble, that had married Agnes, fifter to the faid Kanulfe, had the callell and manour of Gartlev, togic ther with other lands fer his pourpart.

Here is also to be remembered, that the aforement tioned earle Rannlie (or Randulfe whether ve lift to call him) atchined manie high enterprises in his time, as partlie in this boke pe have aircadic heard: he held fore warres against the Excelshmen, till at length an agreement was concluded betwirt him 10 mid Leolin prince of Wales. Fremember I have read in an old record, that boon a time as this earle paffed into Walcs with an armie, his chance was to be overfet by the Melihmen, so that he was bit uen to retire into a callell, wherein the Melthmen did beliege him. And as it fortuned at that time, Roger Lacie the confiable of Cheffer was not then with him, but left behind at Theffer to fix the citie kept in order (for as it thould fæme, their folemne were then in hand, or else their faire which is kept at Midlummer.)

Wherefore the earle fent a mellenger in all polls ble half bnto his conflable, praieng him with fped to come to his faccour in that extreame point of ne cellitic. Lacie made no delaie, but allembling all the forceners, plaiers, mulicians, and others which he could find within that citie fit to weare armor, went forth with them, and in most specie maner marched toward the castell, where the Wellhmen kept the 30 early belieged, tho now perceiving such a multitude of men comming towards them, incontinentlie left the fiege and fled awaie. The earle then being thus delinered out of that prefent danger, came forth of the castell, returned with his constable buto Chester, and in recompense of that service, gave buto his faid constable Roger Lacie, the rule, order, and authoritie ouer all the forreners, platers, mulicians, and other Arangers referring to Cheffer at the time, when fuch publike plaies (or elle faire) should be kept & holden. 40

John Lacie the sonne of the faid Roger married Alice the daughter of Gilbert de Aquila, and affer hir occcaste, he married the ladte Pargaret, the daughter of Robert Quincie carle of Lincolne, of whom he begat Comund Lacie constable of Chester, which Comund after the deceafte of his father, married Alice the daughter of the marquelle of Saluces in Italie, which ladie was furnamed the quene, of thom he begat Henrie Lacie earle of Lincolne, to William Long especarle of Salifburie, by whom he had two fons, Comund and John, and two daughters, Alice and Joan, which Alice Thomas earle of Laucaster married, who claimed and had the same rights and puniledges which ancientlie belonged to the faid Roger Lacie, and other the constables of Cheffer, concerning the fines of forreners and or thers. This have I the more willingly declared, that it may appeare in that estimation and credit the La. cles constables Chester by inheritance lined in their 60 time, of whole high valiancie, and like wife of other of that familie, highlic commended for their noble the nalrie in martiall enterpites pe may read in fundie hillories at large.

But now to returne and speake of other boings, which chanced about the time in which the faid Ramulte earle of Cheffer departed this life. The king in the meane while feized into his hands a great portion of the treasure which Hubert de Burgh earle of Bent had committed to the keeping of the templers. But thereas there were that travelled to have had him put to death, the king in respect of the service which he had done to him and to his predecellors king Rihard and king John, granted him life, with those lands which he had either by purchale, or by giff of king John, but neuertheles he caused him to be kept The tain in frepilon at the castell of the des, under the cu tentity in in frequion at the eater of the Cornewall, Warren, Wenbroke, and Ferrers, which Class. foure earles were become fuerties for him.

This peare also about the same time, to wit, the Matth Period mozowafter S. Partins baie, chanced great thun Egreatta der and lightning, which continued for the space of 15 dates togither, to the great terrour and feare of the people, and namelie of the Londoners, which have that kind of weather to familiar to them, that if there be anic abroad in the land, they have their part there: of. Pozeouer on the 23 of Parch, was heard an o ther great and ferrible tempest of thunder, and after Trilling followed a maruellous wet fimmer with manie mer. flouds. Also on the 8 date of Appill, in the parts a flonds. Also on the 8 date of Appen, in the parts at fourthmen bout Hereford and Wiocester, there appeared source beside the ex funnes in the element, befide the naturall funne, of cultomet in plaies which commonlie are vied at Whitluntide 20 red colour, and a great circle of chaiffaline colour, the which compatied with his largenetic as it had beene the whole circuit almost of the tipole realme of Eng. Mauh.Para land, from the fides whereof went forth certeine halfe circles, in whose seations appeared the said foure funnes. The naturall funne was at the fame time in the east part of the firmament, for it was about the first house of the daic, or betwirt fix and seven in the morning, the aire being the same time verie bught and cleare. The bilhop of Hereford, and fir John Monmouth knight, and manie others beheld this wonderfull light, and testified the same to be most true. And after this there followed the same peare in Manh Pain, those parts cruell warre, laughter, terrible bloudthed, 4 a generall trouble through England, Walces, & frange and Ireland. About the fame time, to wif, in June, Sounder, in the fouth parts of England nere to the fea coaff. two huge dragons appeared fighting in the aire, and after a long fight the one overcame the other, and followedhim, dixing into the depth of the lea, & to they were fæne no moze, Adopeouer in this years great variance and firife role betwirt the king and his barons, for the king toke great displeasure against all other his officers, fo much the moze millruffed them, for that he found Polydor. himselfe decrived in the earle of Bent, to whom he had committed a further credit than to anie other, and had made him high inflice of England, onelie for the god will that he alwaies bare to him. There fore perceiving this, he was doubtfull whom he Theking by uhich Henrie married the ladie Pargaret, daughter 50 thould trut, dicharging the most part of those En gunner to be glithmen that bare any office about him, and in their woar from romes placed firangers, as Poladouins and 1376 tains, of the which there came once but o him manie knights and other, to the number of 2000, which he placed in garrilons within callels of diuctle places of the land, and committed the order of all things for The billions the most part to the bithop of Winchester, and to his winchester.

nephue or sonne Peter de Rivales.

Herioth he offended to much the minds of his Novel bles, that Richard Parthall eric of Pendyake (chiefe Pendyake of that familie, a bolocit to speake, naiv that Kanulse of Cheffer was gone) as well in his owne name, as in the names of other, twhe open him openlie to me prome the kings dwings herein, as pernicious and Dangerous to the flate of the realme. Herebuto the Stranger bithop of Winchester (tipole counfell as it femed be ous to fixed followed) made aufture that the king had become followed) made answer, that the king had dome no bone. thing in that behalfe bnadmicolie, but byon god and Deepe confederation : for fith he might perceive how the English nobilitie had first pursued his father with malicious hatred topen war, and now that he found diverse of them whom he had brought by and advaneed to high honours, bufaithfull in the administrativ on of their offices, he did not totthout tulk cause recrive into his favour Arangers, and preferre them before those of his owne nation, which were not so faithfull in his fernice and obedience as they

This answer of the bishop to pricked and woun-Ded the minds of the English Pobilitie, that manie of them amongst whome the fair carle of Wenbroke was the chefe) began an open rebellion, some of them resorting to one place, and some to an other, to gather people for their purpole. The names of fuch barons as ffirred upon this occasion were thefe; Ri thard Warthall earle of Wenbroke afore named. Cilbert Ballet and his brethren, men of great honoz and right haroie capteins : allo Richard Sward a warlike personage, trained by in feats of armes Theking pro from his youth, with Walter Clifford a worthie knight, and manie others. The king having know ledge of their dwings proclaimed them all traitors, confilcated their gods, and fent for a great power of men out of Flanders to ferue him in his warres.

Whilest king Denrie thus provided himselfe of 20 an armie, the loods with their capteine Richard Parthall foince themselnes to Leolin prince of Wales. s doubting the comming of the king, spotled all the marthes next adjoining to England, leaving no bits tels not cattell any there about in those parts where by the kings armie might have reliefe, and further made all things readie for their owne defense so well as they could denife. The earle of Bent about the fame time, by helpe of two peomen that attended bpon him, cleaped out of the castell of Ties, and toke 30 fanduarie in the next thurth: but when those that had the charge of him and the castell in keeping, mis fed him and heard there he was, they fetcht both him, and the two peomen that holpe him to make the escape out of the church, and bringing them backe to the castell, imprisoned the earle.

And though the bishop of Salisburic came this ther and threatened to accurate them, if they would not deliver the carle, and restoze him to sanduarie as gaine: they made answer, that they had rather the 40 earle thould hang for himfelfe, than they for him. And so bicause they would not beliver him, the bishop did ercommunicate them, and after riving to the court, and taking with him the bithop of London, and other bilhops, prevailed to much by complaint erhibited to the B. that the earle was restored to the church againe hismoord the eighteenth day of Daober: but so, as the thiriste of the thire had commandement to compatte the thurch about with men, to watch that no relecte came buto him, whereby he might be confireined 50 through familhing to lubmit himfelfe. Potwithstan: ding, shortlie after there came a power of armed men, and fetcht the fact earle from thence (fetting him on hosfebacke in faire complet armour) and lo conucied him into Wales, where he toined with o ther of the kings enimies, the thirtith day of Datos

Within a few dates after came the king with his Cheking en armie, and entring into Wales, for want of vittels was constrained to retire backe to the marshes, be: 60 twirt Mozesterthire & Salopthire, ichere ffaieng certeine dates togither in those parts, his fouldiers fraicd abroad in the countrie bnaduisedie, and képing no watch noz ward about their campe, were furpalled in the night by their enimies, and flaine on euerie lide. The llaughter had beene greater, but that the residue which late in campe, brake forth about midnight, and in a plumpe togither fled into acaffell thich was note at hand, called Groffemound, in the thich the king himselfe was lodged . There were flaine aboue five hundred men, and all the truffe and baggage of the campe loft. Det Matthew Paris faith there were but two knights flaine, thich cast awaie themselnes by their owne wilfulnesse, that would needs frand to it and make reliffance, where the relidue being spoiled of all that they had with them, got awate by flight, as the bishops of Minchester and Chichester, the lood cheefe fustice Stechan Segraue, Peter de Kinales treasurer, Hugh Bigot carle of Porsolke, William carle of Salisburie, William lood Beauchampe, and William Dalbenie the panger, the were witnestes of this loss amongs the relidue.

Hereof it came to palle, that manie of the kings armie (speciallie those which had lost their horses, are mour, monie, and other furniture, with their vittels) returned into their countrie, to their great confulion. For the Welthmen and other outlawes, having spotled the eampe, returned with the cartages and fumpters which they hav taken, into places of fafe refuge. The king having received this lotte, and of Polydor. tentimes tried fortune nothing favourable buto him in those parts, by reason of the streits and disaduantage of the places, thought good to referve the reuenge of his received inturies butill a moze conucnient time, and therebpon returned to Gloceffer, and The king furnished divers castels and fortresics in the borders of water. of Wales, with garrifons of fouldiers, namelie Pointouins and other Arangers to defend the fame against William Parshall, and the other his complices, who byon occasions bailte lought to suppelle and diffresse the said strangers.

And belide other encounters, in the which manie of those Poictouins and other Arangers were laine and oppelled by the late William Parthall and his adherents, it chanced that 'opon faint Katherins day, the faid William Parthall comming niere to the castell of Ponmouth to view the same, was in danger to have remained pulloner in the enimies hands, through an illue made by fir Baldwine de Guines, capiteine of that callell, with his Poictouins and Flemings. But by fuch rescue as came to Pendrokein his ald, he was delivered out of their hands, and the banger. Poictonins and other of the garrifon discomfited. At this fkirmishfir Baldwine himselse being soze Beis rescued, wounded, was borne out of the field into the castell, The Points loting fifteene knights of his part, and a great fort of other which were taken pailoners, belides no small fited. number that were flaine in the place.

The fame yeare chanced a great dearth, by reafon Dearth, that the growth of all things was much hindered with the ertreame cold weather. Allo there hamened Competts: about the beginning of Powember great thunder and lightning, and there with followed an earthquake Ancarthto the great feare of the inhabitants of the towns of quake. Huntington and other places thereabouts. After A death, this, came a great dearth amongst the people, being commonlie a nære companion to great famine and dearth.

Richard Parchall crie of Penbroke in this meane time ceaffed not to wafte the marthes of England nertadioining to Wales, and dailie diverse of the English Pobilitie repaired to him, so that the king was fore troubled in his mind. It chanced at the fame time, that one John of Monmouth a right bas liant capteine, who led the kings armie, received a great overtheowat the hands of Kithard Parthall. For thereas the forelaid John, having affembled a mightie holf, made great half towards his enimies, in hope to have come boon them at bowares, and therefore marching by night, that he might be readic to affaile them fornethat afore the breake of the day, which in the furnmer leason is the most filent time of all the night, it chanced farre other wife than he loked it thould have done . For the earle of Penbroke, having knowledge by his fries of his adversaries intent, late him lefte with his people within a woo in amouth by the way, there the fair John thoulo palle, returneth out

nine difcom=

traitogs.

The loads

& withdrew into walcs.

Much. Paris

Polydor.

Strangers

De is fetcht

Matth Paris.

The earle of

Bent elcapeth

Anno Reg. 18 The earle of and connected into walca.

Polydor.

Mauh.Paris.

John Monneth an ouer= th:ow.

1 2 3 4 Polydor.

Marth Paris.

B part of the Dhiewsburge.

burnt.

Polydor.

and fetting byon him as he approched, put his people in such scare by the sudden incounter, that they knew not what capteine or enligne they might follow, and winnediatlie fell to running awaie. The flaughter was great on enerie lide, both of Polatonins and others. Diverse of them fleing also into the next woos, were received by such as were laid there to cut them off, and fo Claine of taken out of hand. How beit their chiefe capteine the forenamed John of Domnouth escaped, with a few other in his compa, 10 nic. This overthrow chanced the morrow after Christs malle bate.

The next date Richard Parthall having thus got the victorie, destroiced certeine houses and loodships there in the marthes which belonged to the faid John of Honmouth. About the same time also, Kichard Sward with other outlawes defiroised the polletts ons belonging to the earle of Cornewall belide Bre. bull, and burned a place there called Segrave, where Stechan de Segrave the lood chiefe instice was 20 borne, and likewise a village belonging to the bishop of Mincheffer, not farre from Segrane aforefaib. This was the maner of those outlawes, that they burt no person, but onelie those councellers about the king by thom they were eriled, and therefore bear ring fromach against them, they did not onlie ercogitate but also execute this revenge; which till they had obteined, they were no leffe ill appaid, than well pleas fed when the fame was pall, for minuit vindicta dolorem

Immediatlie within the odaues of the Epithanie, the earle Parthall and Leolin prince of Wales was fice and robbed all the marthes betwirt Wales and shewfburie, a part of which towns they also burnt. Bing Penrie being hereof certified as pet foiour ning at Glocoffer, was foze troubled in his mind, and calling togither his councell, asked adule what wate he might best take to redresse such iniuries. After fundate opinions amongst them declared, they a greed all in one sentence, that it should be most expe dient to ameale the minds of the revels with gentle offers, to grant them pardon of their offenles, wifelie to winne them to tractablenette, and not rough lic afflicting them to erasperat their fiersenette, lith, (ape acri potior prudenti i dextra. Also to banish from his court diverse that bare great rule, and namelie Peter the bilhop of Winchester, and his sonne of nephue Peter de Rivales, by the counsell of which two persons all things had bene changed in the kings house. Pozeouer, to put from him such Arangers as bare offices, and to res Noze Englishmen againe to the same.

The king allowing this adule to be god, follow, ed it accordinglie, and first of all discharging the bis thop of Wlinchester of all publike administration of things, he commanded him to repaire home to his diocelle, and to lie to the gonernement thereof, as to his dutic apporteined. He also banished from his prefence Peter de Rinales, Stephan Segraue, Kobert Pallelew, and dinerle others of his thiefe councel- 60 lers, by whole means he had procured the entil will of his Pobilitie. Then received he againe his old fernants cofficers, finallie fent the archb. of Canture burie, the bishops of Thefter & Rochester buto the bas rons in Wales, to offer them peace & pardon of all inturies past, if they wold returne to his obedience. Thus in the end there was a truce taken betwirt the king and the revels, to begin at Candlemalle, and to Denbroke paf indure butill Caffer nert insuing, in which meane feeth ouer into time, Kichard the earle of Penbroke, hearing that Paurith Fitz Gerald, with Walter Lacie, Richard Burgh and others walled his lands and pollections in Freland (according to luch commission as they had received of late from king Denrie and his councell) palled over thither, and there incountering with his enimies, was fore wounded and taken priloner, has beis the uing entered the battell verie rathlie, and with a pallout small companie of his people about him, onlie by the fraitozous perfuacion of Geffrey Paurill, who with other fled at the first bount, and lest him in maner Manner alone, to stand to all the danger. Those that thus toke him, brought him into his owne castell, the which the lood chiefe justice Paurice Fitz Gerald had latelie wone. This incounter, in which Richard Parshall was thus taken, chanced on a faturdaic, being the first of Aprill; and on the 16 of the same moneth, by reason of the wound which he had received, he departed this life.

The find also that the bilhop of Minchester, and Ponbose bis sonne (oz kinsman as some haue called him) Des ter de Rivales had procured the king to send commillion bnoer his feale buto the forefaid noble men in Ireland, that if the faid Richard Parthall earle of Denbioke chanced to come thither, they thould do their best to take him, and in reward of their paines, they thould intop all his lands and postessions which he held in that countrie. But after his death, and when the king had removed those his councellers from him, he confested he had put his feale to a water ting, but that he bnocestoo what were the contents thereof he otterlie denied. Finallie, this was the end of the worthie earle of Penbroke Kichard Dar. hall, a man worthie to be highlie renowmed for his appoued valiancie. Dis death suerlie was greatlie bewailed of king Henrie, openlie protesting that he had loft the worthiest capteine that then lived.

After this, the loads that had remained in Wales. by fafe conduct came to the king, and through the oilsgent travell of the archbishop of Canturburie, he received them into favour. Amongst them were these men of name, Bilbert Parthall the brother of the Polydor forefaid Kichard Parchall, Hubert earle of Bent, Manh.Pra Bilbert Ballet, and Kichard Sward, befide diverle o ther. Unto Bilbert Parthall he delivered his beothers inheritance, and opon Whitlandaie made him knight, giving buto him the rod of the office of Par, Gilben 9 thall of his court, according to the maner, to ble and thall early erercife as his ancesters had done before him. And Penduk herewith the earle of Bent Gilbert Ballet and Rie thard Sward were received agains into the court, and admitted to be of the kings privile councell.

Sone after this, Peter de Kivales, Stephan Se grave, & Robert Passelew were called to accounts, that it might appeare how the kings treasure was spent, and how they had vice themselucs with the kings feale. The two last remembred kept them Officers felues out of the waie, and could not be found. Ste ico was phan Segraue throwding himfelfe in fecret within counts. the abbete of Leicester, and Robert Passelew fet ning himselfe licke, kept within the new temple at London. Peter de Rivales also, with his father the bishop of Minchester, toke sanduarie at Minches fer, for they were attain least their bodies should not be in safetie if they came abroad, bicause they boders food that their manours and grange places were spoiled and burnt by those that bare them displeasure. Howbeit at length, under the protection of the archi bishop of Canturburie, they came to their answer, were fore charged for their brink dealing, traito rous practile, and great fallhood bled in time of their bearing office, and (as it appeareth by writers)they could but forthe cleare themselves in those matters itherewith they were charged; but yet by reason of their protection they were relieved to the places from whence they came, or else otherwise thisted off the matter for the time, to that me read not of anie great bodilie punishment which they should receive as then. In the end they were pardoned a reconciled to

The bent ! the earled

Matth. Paris.

Matth.Paris.

Erciand.

the kings fauor, byon palment of fuch fines as were affected opon them.

The truce moed. fent ouer to the aid of the earle of 2521:

The earle of felfe to the 1235

Der the like in pag. 56.

Polydor.

Fabian.

This peare, bicaufe the truce endeabetwirt the kings of England and France, king Benrie fent of ner to ato the earle of Bettaine , theefcoze knights: and two thousand Wellymen , the which when the French king came with his armie to enter and in uade Britaine, did cut off and take his carrage laden with bittels, armoz, and other providing overthrow ing allo no finall number of the fremchmen, and tar 10 king from them their holles, they returned backe in fafetie, without any great damage received. Rotmithitanding this , the French king inforcing as gaine his power, wared to firong for the earle of Bittaine, so that he was confreined to take a truce to indure till the feast of all faints, that he might in the meane time binderstand if the king of England would come over with some puisant armie to his ald 02 no: but bicause it was perceived in the end but how to get monie out of king Henries coffers, and to do him no pleasure for it, bicanse he was in manner at an other agreement alreadie with the king of France, king Penrie refused to satisfie his requests at such time as he came ouer buto him (as ter the taking of that truce) for more monie. Here: Bittaine fith with also the fait erle being offended, got him backe mutth home into his owne countrie, and shortlie after awarant lie lubmitted himselse to the French king, which (as the report went) he had done before in fecret.

Anno Reg.19. These things being thus brought to passe, and all troubles quieted, the king as then being at London, there was brought before him by one Tolie, a complaint exhibited against the * Jewes of Popwich. which had stolen a young chilo, being not past a tiveline moneths old, and fecretlie kept him an whole yeare togither, to the end that he might (when Efter cante) crucifie him in delpite of our fautour Jelus Chriff. and the chaiffian religion. The matter as it hawened fell out well for the lad: for within a few dates before 40 that those curled murtherers purposed to have thed this innocents blow, they were accused, conniced and punished, whereby he escaped their cruell hands. About the same time, to wit the seaventh of Februar rie died Hugh de Wels bilhop of Lincolne, a great enimie to monks and religious men. Robert Brofled was then preferred to his come, a man of great learning, and trained by in scholes even from his infancie.

The emperoz marieth the lands lifter.

Matth, Paris.

I great and

The same yeare, the emperour Frederike the fe. 50 cond, maried the ladie Habell the kings lifter . This Habell was a most beautifull labie, of comelie perfonage, and of age about one and twentie years. She was affianced by procuracie, about the featien and twentith of Februarie. And after Caffer, the archbe thop of Cullen, and the duke of Louane came over from the emperour, to have the conveiance of hir bus to the emperous presence. There was such a feast holden, so sumptuous service, so rich furniture, and role from London towards the fea fide, that more could not be imagined. The same feast was kept at Tolesto minster on the fift day of May, and the day follows ing the did fet forward, and by eatle tournies came to Sandwich, the king bringing hir thither with three thousand hostics. Finallie, the twie the sea the electrical menth of Hay, the king taking leave of hir not without teares, when they thus departed the one from the other. And so with prosperous wind and weather the arrived at Antiwerpe, and from thence palled for ward, till the came to hir husband the emperour, by thom the was received with great toy and comfort at ectorms, where the marriage was confummate bpon a lundaic, being the two and twentith day of Aulie,03 (as Matthew Westminster (asth)the seauen and twentith of Pay, being Whitlunday.

This yeare the bilhop of London pronounced the fentence of eccommunication against certeins blurers called Caordini. But bicaufe, the fame plurers Marth. Paris. Hadowed themselues under the pretert of the popes Maries calmerchants (as they named themlelues) they prenate led Caorlini, led so much by the favour of the court of Rome, that of whome see the faid biffing being ticke and fable, was cited per, more in pag. emptorilie in the parts beyond the leas, before tudges chosen forth by the same blurers, to make and fwer for fuch high inturie as he had here done to the popes factors. The billiop willing by the example of Mem, rather to couer his fathers thame, than fore. ticale it to the imale world, did quietlie put by the matter : aminity commendable patience received the proffered twong, having learned this lector, that Gaudet patientia duris, and to pacific the trouble, luffered their wickednesse, that the fato earle of Britaine fought nothing else 20 commending in the meane while the cause but his patrone S. Paule. And when he preached of the force of faith, he vitered this fateng: If an angell preach London his contrarie doctrine to vs in these things, let him be pourtine, accurssed.

In the twentith years of king Henries reigns, in Anno Reg. 20, the Adment time, the noble baron the lood Robert Hitz Mater departed this life, and so like wise did a noble yong man descended of most noble parentage, one Roger de Somerie. On the foureteenth day of Januarie infuing, the king married the ladie Elia, king henrie noz, daughter to the earle of Pronance named Rais marrieth the mond. This marriage was folemnized at Cantur, bangber to burie, and in the octaves of S. Hilarie next infuing the earle of being lunday, the was crowned quene of Eng. Pzouance. Land at Westminster. At the solemnitie of this featt Match. Paris. and coronation of the quienc, all the high pieres of the realme, both spirituall and tempozall, were prefent there to exercise their offices as to them appers teined,

The citizens of London were there in great are rate, bearing afore hir in folemne wife, the hundred and the close cups of gold and filner, in token that they ought to wait byon hirrup. The archbithop of Canturburie (according to his outie) crowned hir, the bishop of London allisting him as his deacon. The earle of Cheffer bare the fwood of faint Coward The earle of before the king, in token that he was earle of the value, and had authoritie to correct the king, if he hould le him to warue from the limits of inflice, The confiahis constable of Cheffer attended opon him, and re ble of Cheffer, moued there the presse was thicke, with his rod or The earle of warder. The earle of Penbroke high Parthall bare Penbroke. the rod before the king, and made rome before him, both in the church and in the hall, placing everie man, and ordering the feruice at the table. The wardens of the cinque ports bare a canopie ouer the king, sup- The warden ported with foure speares.

The earle of Leicester held the bason when they ports. Encarle of washed. The earle of Marren, in the place of the erle Leicester. all banketting kept the day befoze hir departure 60 of Arundell, bicause he was under age, attended on Enewarren, the kings cup. D. Pichaell Bellet was Butler by office. The earle of Hereford exercised the rame of high Parthall in the kings houle. The load William de Beauchampe was almoner. The chefe inflice The carle of of the forrests on the right hand of the king remodered will be used the dishes on the table, though at the first he was North william faich by some allegation made to the contests. Stated by some allegation made to the contracte. The The citizens citizens of London ferued out wine to everie one of London. in great plentie. The citizens of Windhester had The ringues oversight of the kitchin and larberte. And so exercise of winchester. person (according to his dutie) exercised his rome: and bicaule no trouble thould arife, manie things were luffered, which byon further adule taken therin were reformed. The chancellog and all other optimarie of ficers kept their place. The feath was plentifull, to that nothing wanted that could be withed . Porece ner fit Authill field coiall falles were holden by the space of eight dates togither. And some after the king called a parlement at London, where manie things were enacted for the good government of the realine, and there with the king demanded a subsidie.

of the cinque

3 parlemen; Polydor.

Strange fights. Matth. Paris.

About the same time wonderfull grange fights were feene. In the northparts of England, not farre from the abbic of Roch of Rupie, there appeared convito ming forth of the earth companies of armed men str hor Revacke, with speare, thield, sword, and baners wil plaich, in fundrie formes and thapes, riving in order of batter, and incountering togither tam this light was fone fundie baics echafter other. Sometime they feemed to wine as it had beine in battell, and fought fore; and formetime they appeared to full and breake staues, as it had beine at some triumphant insts of tornie. The people of the countrie beheld them a farre off, with great wonder: for the thing 20 thewed so livelie, that now and then they might see them come with their emptie hordes fore wounded and burt : and then men likewise mangled and blee ding, that pitie it was to let them. And that which lee med more frange and to be most maruelled at, the prints of their feet appeared in the ground, and the graffe troden downe in places where they had beene læne. The like light was also sæne moze apparent lie in Ireland, and in the parts thereabout.

great tempels of raine, which filled the earth full of water, and caused montiruous flouds: for this raine continued all the space of the moneths of Zanua rie, Februarie, and a great part of Warch; and for eight dates it rained (as forme write) in maner with out ceatting: and bpon the tenth of Februarie, immediatlie after the change of the mone, the Thames role with such an high tide, that boats might have bone rowed by and downe in Westminster hall. In there chanced a great thunder, and on the first fridaie in December, which was the fift of that moneth, there was a counterfet sunnesene beside the true funne. Dozeover, as in the spring preceding there happened fore and erceeding great raines, so in the fummer following there chanced a great drouth, a towne in Surrie, distant from London 7 miles.

by one Gilbert a losd of Posmandie, that came into the realme with William conquerour. At this par-lement, dinerse god a profitable lawes were made

This yeare was a parlement holden at Perton, continuing by the space of foure moneths or more.

Great raine. Matth Paris.

Matth.West.

3 great thunder.

3 Drie fums mer.

Gilbert Po:= man founder A9crten

Diahtiben. Matth Paris.

wilbech peo= ple perilling by rage of waters.

and established, which yet remaine in vie, bearing the name of the place where they were first ordeined. Anno Reg. 21. In the beginning of the 21 years of king Henries reigne, on the mogrow after the featt of S. Martine, and certeine daies after, the fea burft out with fuch high tides and tempeles of wind, that the marrich uerflowen: and belide great heards and flocks of cattell that perithed, there was no finall number of men lost and drowned. The fea rose continuallie in flowing the space of two daies and one night, with out ebbing, by reason of the mightie biolence of contrarie winds. At Wilbech allo, and in villages there, abouts, the people were drowned in great numbers, so that in one village there were buried an hundled copples in one date. Also the date before Christmatte ceie, there chanced agreat wind, with thunder and

> In a parlement holden at Talefiminater about the onaices of the Epithanic, the king required a lublidie were thaken and ouerthrowen.

raine, in fuch extreame wife, that manie buildings of his lubisets, which request was not berie well ta. ken, but yet at length, bpon promite that he would be grow tout white them, and not feeled to infringe and off. anuli the grants which he had made by pretence of want of the popus confirmation (as it was thought he meant to do) they agreed to give him the thirtith a subside part of all mower ble goos, as well of the spirituality as the temporaltie, telerating pet to everie manchis reavie come; with horte and armour, to be inchoich for the profit of the common-thealth. In confideration of third grant, the king being of perfect ane, and in his otone rule and full governance, of his frie and more good to this at the request, and by countell of the loads of his realitie, efflorics granted and confirmed the liberties and cultomes conteined in the two tharters, the one called Magna charta, and the other Charta de forelta, with this addition following some in the end.

The confirmation of the charters, under the kings acknowledgement and subscription of witnesses.

Vnc autem concessimus, & hac prasen. ti charta confirmauimus omnibus pradictis de regno nostro, omnes libertates & liberas consuetudines contentas in chartis nostris, quas eis fidelibus nostris

Immediatlie followed, or rather preceded palling 30 fieri fecimus cum in minori effemus atate, scilicet in Magna charta nostra, quam in charta de Fo-resta. Et volumus pro nobis & haredibus nostris, quòd prafati fideles nostri, & successores, & hare-des eorum habeant, & teneant in perpetuum omnes libertates & liberas consuetudines prædictas, non obstante quòd pradicta charta confecta fue-rint cumminoris essemus atatis, vt pradictumest, hystestibus, Edmundo Cant archiepiscopo, & omnibus alijs in Magna charta nominatis.Dat.per the winter before, on the twentith of December, 40 manum venerabilis patris Cicestriensis episcopi, cancellarij nostri 28 die Ianuarij, Anno Regni

Belive the confirmation of thele charters, the king Manh Pank further to win the fauour of his people, was contented to remous and lequelter from him dinerie of his souncellours that were thought not to be well minded towards the advancement of the commonthere was an abbete of regular canons founded 50 wealth, and in their places to admit the earle of Wlaren, William de Ferrers, and John Fitz Geffrey, tho were swozne to give to the king faithfull counfell, and in no wife to go out of the right waie for as ny respect that might other wise move them. About the first date of Warch, there began soze raine and tempelfuous weather, thereof infued great flouds, as before in the beginning of the yeare passed, had chanced, though not doing to much hurt as before. John Scot allo earle of Cheffer and Huntington John Soil countries note to the same were drowned by and o 60 bied at Deren hall the seventh date of June, without surflowen; and before great heards and flocks of the many many and before great heards and flocks of the many many and the seventh date of the many many and before great heards and flocks of the many many and the seventh date of the many many and the seventh date of the seventh da fflue, and was buried at Cheffer. He was poisoned by this life. the divelify practile of his wife daughter to Leolin prince of Wales (as Matt. Paris faith.) De had foure Ran High litters, of whom the first named Wargaret was mar. Dis litters ried to Allen of Gallowate, by thom the had iffice a daughter named Demozgoill; which Denozgoill was married to John Balioll, by thom the had it fue John Balioll that was afterward king of Scotland. The fecond named Isabell, was married to Robert le Bruis. The third named Walod, vied without iffue. And the fourth called Alda, was marris ed to Benrie Hallings. But bicause the land perteining to the earledoine of Cheffer, Choulo not go amongs rocks and distances, having such rotall pzero-

gatiues

gatives belonging thereto, the king leized them into his owne hands, and in recompense affigned other tands to the forfaid fifters, as it had beene by way of

Row lith the earles of Cheller (I meane those of the line of Hugh Lupus) twke end in this John Scot; I have thought it not impertinent for the honor of so noble a linage, to set downe the descent of the fame earles, beginning at the forefaid Bugh the first that gouerned after the conquest, as I haue feen 10 the fame collected out of ancient records, according to their true fuccession in seaven descents one after another, as here followeth.

The true genealogie of the famous and most honourable earles of Chester.

Mah Lou or Lupus, first earle of Thester after the conquest, ne-20 phue to William Conquer our by his sister Margaret, wife to Richard Aicount of Auranches, married a noble ladie named Armetruda, by whom he had issue Richard that succeeded him in the earledome, Robert abbat of faint Ed= mundsburie, and Dtuell. He departed this life about the yeare of our Lozd 1102, when he had beene earle about 40 yeeres.

2 Richard Lupus eldelt son to Hugh Lupus, and second earle of Chester, mar= ried Aband the daughter of Stephan erle of Blois, Charters and Champaigne, and lister to U. Stephan. This Richard with his brother Otuell was drowned in the feas, in the pære of our Lord 1 1 2 0, as be= fore hath beene thewed, after he had beene earle about nintæne yeares.

3 Ranulfe of Randulfe the first of that 4 name called Bohun, and otherwise Mestheins, the sonne of John de Bohun, and of Margaret, litter to Hugh Lupus, succes ded Richard, as coulin and heire to him in the earldome of Chester, and was the third earle in number after the conquest. He married Apaud the daughter of Auberie de Mere earle of Gilney and Drenfozd, by whome he had issue Ranulfe surnamed 50 Geruous the fourth earle of Chester. He died about the yere of our Lord 1130, after he had continued earle eight yeares.

4 Ranulfe oz Kandulfe Bohun, the se= condof that name, and fourth erle in num= ber after the conquest, surnamed Gernous, lucceded his father, and married Alice, daughter to Robert erle of Glocester, vale had iffue Dugh kevelocke, the lift earle of Cheffer. He deceased about the yeare of our Lozd 1 153, when he had beine earle 29 yeares.

5 Hugh Bohun otherwise Keuelocke, the some of the said Ranulse, was the first earle of Chester after the conquest, and second of that name . He married Beatrice, daughter to Richard Lucie lozd cheefe jus tice of England, by whom he had issue Banulfe the third of that name, and foure daughters, Mawd married to Dauid that was earle of Angus and Huntington and lotd of Galloway, Mabel maried to Tailliam Dalbegnie earle of Arundell, Agnes maried to Tatilliam Ferrers earle of Der= bie, and Pauila toined in marriage with Robert Duincie, a baron of great Honour. This Hugh died about the years 1181, when he had beene earle eight and twentie peares.

6 Ranulfe Bohun the third of that name, otherwise called Blundeuille, the sonne of Hugh Keuelocke, was the firt earle of Cheffer after the conquest. He was also earle of Lincolne, as nert couline and heire to William Romare earle of Lins coine. He had the wines (as before pæ have heard but yet died without iffue, as bout the yeare of our Lord 1232, after he had bæne earle 51 yeares.

7 John Scot, the sonne of David earle of Angus & Huntington, was in the right of his mother the leventh earle of Chefter after the conquest. He died without issue (as before you have heard) by reason where: of, the erldome came into the kings hands in the yeare 1237. Thus much may luffice (with that which is faid before) touching the descent of the earles of Chester. And 30 now to proceed.

The same yeare that John Scot died, cardinall Cardinal Diho(by some writers named Disobon) about the Othor Da feast of S. Peter and Paule came into England thoben, from pope Gregozie. He was receined with all hos nour and folemne reverence as was decent, yea and moze than was occent, the king meeting him at the fea five. Dis comming was not fignified afore to the nobles of the realme, which caused them to millike the matter, and to grudge against the king, seeing that he did all things contrarie to opper, becaking law, faith, and promife in all things. We hath coupled The lostes himfelfe (fait they)in mariage with a firanger, with hing for receiout confent of his freends and naturall subjects, and using the care now he bringeth in a legat secrettie, who will take dinail without bpon him to make an alteration in the thole flate of their knows the realme.

But this legat thewed himselfe a verie sober and The legat discret person, not so couetous as his predecessars, praised so in so much that he refused diverse gifts which were become offered buto him, though fome he received, and indeed hautour. commanded the other to be referred for him. He also distributed liberallie the vacant rents onto such as he brought with him, as well persons worthic as onworthie, and pacified such controversies as were fprong betwirt the nobles and peeres of the realme, so that he made them frænds. An ad memorable & to be kept in record, that the instrument and servant of so bad a maisser as he serued, namelie the pope, some to king Penrie the first by whome he 60 should be the procurer of so god a worker considering that from the lie of Kome full tives and violent Areames of feditions have flowed, and verie filoome any occasion of means made to plant peace among men, which is the daughter of love, and the worthieff thing that is, as one faith verie well in these words:

Gignit amor pacem, pax est dignisima rerum. The bilhop of Winchelfer, the earle of Bent, Gil bert Ballet , Stechen Silvard tothers were by him accorded, who had borne secret grudge ech to other a long time, which hatred was at point to have broken fwith, and the wed it felfe in perilous wife at a tomie I tournie holden at Blie in the beginning of Lent, there the et Buc. Southernmen froue against the Portherne men, and in the end the Southerne men prenailed, and

Anno Reg. 22. The legat holoetha fp: nod at Lon=

1 2 3 8 The leaat con meth to Drioto.

A frate be: twitt the le= garsmen, and the fcholers of Drford.

A cokeg aunes.

Che legats cohe flaine.

Che legat to the king. The earle waren fent to apprehend the offendozs.

The legat curffeth.

The regents of & Univer: fitie abfolucd. Polydor.

Matth.Paris. of Constanti= nople cometh inis Eng:

twhe diverte of their adversaries, to that it sæmed not to be a triumphant infies, but rather a charpe challenge and incounter betwirt enimies. Mut & Carle Bigot, mongft all others, carle Bigot bare himfelfe verie Coutlie.

After that the legat had thus agreed the noblemen, he affembled a fynod at London, the morrow affer the octaves of D. Wartin wherein manie ordinances were newlie conditated for the flate of the cleargie, but not altogither berie acceptable to diverse young 1 praits and icholers (as fome write) in fomuch that the legat afferwards comming to Drfoid, and lodging in the abbie of Dinie, it chanced as certeine scholers predied to the gates thinking to come in and do their dutic (as they take the matter) but o the legat, the porter kept them backe, and gave them overthwart words, where boon they ruthed in boon him, a to began a fraie betwirt them and the legats men, who would have beaten them backe.

It fortuned in this burlie burlie, that a pope grift 2 Scholer being got in nære to the kitchin deller, befought the coke for Gods fake to gine him some reliefe:but the coke (as mante of that calling are choles rike fellowes) in a great furie toke op a lable full of hot broath out of a kettell therein fielh had beine fode den, and theew it right byon the Irishmans face. which thing when another Welth Scholer that floo by beheld, he cried out; What meane we to luffer this villance, and there with all toke an arrow, and fet it beginning of the fraie, and drawing it by to the head let flie at the coke, and fo flue him there outright.

Derevyon againe noise and tumult rose round a bout the house, the legat for feare got him into the belfraie of the abbeie, where he kept himselfe close till the barke of the night had fraied the byzore, and then stale forth, and taking his horse escaped as fecreticas he could over the Thames, and rode with all speed to the court, which lais not far off at Abing. ton, and there made his complaint to the king, in such 4 lamentable wife, that he foothwith fent the earle Waren with a power of armed men, to fetch awais the relidue of the legats fernants with remained behind in the abbeie, and to apprehend the miefe offen.

The earle comming thither, twhe thirtie scholers, with one matter Doo a lawier, and brought them to Wallingfood castell, and there committed them to pulon. The legat also in revenge of the inturie in this wife to him done, prencunced the curffe against 50 the mildwers, and handled the matter in fuch wife, that the regents and masters of the Univertitie were at length confircined to come buto London, & there to go barc-foted through Theapelide, but o the church of S. Paule, in luch wife to alke him forgivenelle, and to with much ado they obteined absolution . This legat among other things demanded some after the tenthpart of all spirituall mens yearelie reuenues, towards the maintenance of the wars against the Saracons in Alia.

Pozeoner, the emperour of Constantinople.names The emperor lie, Baldwine sonne to Peter carle of Austerre, being expelled out of his empire, came this peare into England, to fue for afo : but at his firft arrinall at Douer, he was told, that he had not done well to come to peclumptuoullie into the land of another prince, without his fafe conduct. But when the faid emperour famed to be force for his offense, and to ex cule his innocencie and fincers meaning, the king was pacified, t willed him to come to London, where at his comming thither, being the 22 daie of Aprill, he was honorablic received, and at his departure with richgiffs highlic honosed, so that he had awaic with him to the value of about feuen hunderd marks as was reported. About this time allo, Glianor the Che con hings fifter (that was fometime wife unto William telle of Bin kings lifer (that was comercine were onto Southann Sook, lin Sparthall earle of Penbroke) was now by the kings both, lin to the high meanes married the fecond time to Simon Pont marnen ford, a man of high parentage and noble protecte.

This Simon was indowed with luch vertue, god Montage countell, courteous discretion, and other amable Polydoc. qualities, that he was highlie favoured as was funpoled, both of God and man: in fornuch that he might right well, as for birth, fo also for education and god demeanour be counted (as he beferued) a notable Poble man for he was lo qualified as flandeth with the nature of true nobilitie, according to that of the non census_inec clarum nomen auorum,

Sed probitas magnos ingeniumque facis. Potwithstanding all which noble indownents concurring in him, he was banished out of France, bpon displeasure, which Blanch the quiene mother conceived against him. But now comming into England, he was totfullie received of king Henrie, tho not onclie gave buto him (as above is mention ned) his litter in mariage with the earledonte of Lei ceffer in name of a downie, but also advanced him unto offices of greatest honour within the realms of England. Howbeit, this marriage was verie dis The arthu pleasant onto Comund the archbishop of Canturbus Chop of Can rie, bicaufe that the forefair Clianor, after the death pleafer min of hir first husband, had bowed perpetuall chassitie, the mariag in his bow, which he had caught up in his hand at the 30 and betaken hir (as was faid) to the mantell and the

As the prelat was not pleased with this match, to the king was as highlie offended with the archbishop for not favouring the cause, in somuch that the arche bishop went some after to Rome, where he not onelie Deguetto complained of certeine injuries received latelie at Rometoci the kings banos, but also lignified the estate of this bing. marriage, to procure a binorce. In like manner, Bis thard the kings brother found great fault with the The wild king for the same matter, but chieflie, for that he Community Aroke it by without making him and other of the aif officed Bobles of councel therein. To be frost it has not for the last Pobles of councell therein. To be thost, it was not marriage. long per this grudge grew to far, that civill war was Much Pain verie likelie to have followed there boon. But then the king faw that all the loods leaned to his brother, he fought to pacifie the matter by courtcons means, ther were reconciled, to the great griefe of the loss, which had blought the matter now to that point, that the king could not have to relited their force, but that they were in god hope to have delivered the realme out of bondage from all manner of frangers, as well of those Komans that were beneficed men, as of anic other.

and so by mediation of the legat, the king and his bros

Simon the earle of Leicester also perceiving bow the matter went, made thift another wate to get all the monie becould in prest or otherwise (in somuch that he had of one burges of Leicester, named Sie The tout mon Curleuath, fine hundzeb markes) and leauing therein markes 60 his wife in the castell of Belingworth, he secrettie des parted out of the realine, and got him to Rome, to pegoch " purchale a confirmation of his marriage, which he ear Rome to gill file obteined, not with standing the architishop of dispensation of the architishop of the architi Canturburies former and verie behement information against him and 6 harrises heart the information of firmation of tion against him, and so having brought his purpose his marnist about, in the latter end of this yeare, he returned into England, and was folfullie received, first of the king and after of his wife, whome he found at Belings worth, neere to the time of hir travell, and Chortic ab ter delinered of a young fonne, ithom they called Si mon after the name of his father.

At the fame time, Frederike the emperour going air lenting into Italie, had a great number of Englith fouldiers of England with him, which king Perurie furnithed for his ald, the compensation under the leading of a right valiant warriour, nagenie Crus med Ponrie de Crubleuille, with whome went alfo biculte.

Iohn Panfell, whole valiancie in that iournie well aweared, and William Barbbit. non inas treasurer and paimaister to the fouldiers. Herewith the pope was fore offended, and wrote his mino thereof to the king, who forthwith returned an cloquent answer, requiring him to be moze fauoura, ble to the emperour, considering his cause was such as could not infflie offend his holineffe. About the 10 fame time, or rather (as by some writers it should appeare)somichat befoze, the kings litter Joane quiene of Scotlano, comming into England to fee bir bio. ther, fell into a licknelle, and died.

Mozeover, the archbithop of Canturburie retura ned into England, who at his comming to Rome, obteined little oz nothing touching the fuit which he had before the pope, for (as some have written) the les gat Otho being his heavie freend, had to fomed the popes eares from hearing any of his complaints, 2 that all his whole travell did come to none effect . In Chebishop of like manner, Peter des Roches bishop of Minches fer vico this yeare in his manoz at Farnham, about departeth this the ninth of June, which prelat had governed that le about 32 peares. He was a man of great wife. dome and derteritie in ordering of weightie affaires touching the fate of tempozall regiment. He buil bed manie gwolie monasteries, as the abbeies of Hales, Tikbozne and Selebozne, with the hospitall at Bostelmouth. De made allo a notable testament, 30 and belides his bequelts which were great, he left his bishopsike so stored and throughlie furnished, that there was not so much diminished of that which he found at his comming in value, as the cattell that ferned to draw the verie ploughs.

About this time, a learned esquire, or rather a clearke of the butuerlitte of Drenford, bearing fome malice toward the king, fained himfelfe mad, and efpieng thereby the fecret places of his house at Wiod. foke where he then laie, bpon a night by a window 40 wetchmeant he got into the kings bedchamber, and comming to the beds live, threw off the coverings, and with a dar, ger frake divers times into a pillow, supposing that the king had beene there, but as OD D would, that night the king late in another chamber with the quane. In the meane time, one of the quænes cham bermaids named Margaret Bilet, hauing espied the traitor, made an outcrie, fo that the B. feruants which came to boder frand what the matter meant, presentlic apprehended the said clearke, who being 50 conneced to Coventrie, was there arreigned, and by lawfull profe had of his malicious intent, was condemned, and executed as a traitor. At his death he confessed, that he was fent from " William de Darisch the some of Geffrie de Parisch to murther the king by such manner of means, not caring what had become of himselfe so he might have dispatched his purpole.

Thele practiles of treason In summo gradu, which cannot be committed without irrecoverable detris 60 ment to the whole estate (speciallie where succession is bucerteine) are of an old brewing, though they be never to newlie broched. And trulie, if the curfled mis fcreant which undertaketh an enterprise of this qualitic, had the grace to confider how manie murthers he committeth by implication in giving the rotall person of the prince a deadlie wound; 3 doubt not, if he were a man and not a ranke divell, he would be weaned from that outragious villance. Foz, in wounding and killing the prince, he is guiltie of homicide, of parricide, of theisticide, may of descide. And therefore a thousand woes light on his hart that thall Arctchout his hand, naie, that Chall once conceive in thought a murther to hemous, as both God and nature doth abhore; speciallie if it be commensed as gainst a thristian prince; and such a one as to whome frue and undefiled religion is no lette pretions and dere than life it felfe. Princes therefore had need to le to the fafegard of their perfons, lithens the fafetie of manie millians dependeth thereupon. Foz ccr teine it is, that the fate of a poze privat man is leffe perillous by manie degræs than the Cate of a potens tat, which is ment by this true allegozie following.

Quatiunt altas sape procella, Aut enertit fortuna domos: Minus in parus fortuna furit, Raros patitur fulminis ictus Humida vallis.

Seneca in Octa. & Hippol.

In the thee and twentith yeare of his reigne, king Anno Reg. 23. Henrie held his Christmatte at Winchester, where a great grudge arole betwirt him and Bilbert the Matth. Paris. earle of Pendsoke, by reason that the laidearie with twick the king his servants (having tipstanes) in their comming to and the earle earle of Penbroke, by reason that the Said earle with Clariance bethe court, were not fuffred to enter within the gates of Denbroke. but were kept backe by the porters and other. Of which inturie when he had complained, the king made him such an overthwart amwer, that the earle perceiving him not to like berie well of his fervice , departed forthwith, and rode into the Porth countrie, fo that from that day footh, neither he not his brother Walter loued the king as they ought to have done. Some after this departure of earle Bilbert, upon Candlemas day the king gave the earloome of Lef. ceffer bnto Simon de Dountford, and inueffed him thereints, having first pacified earle Almerike hat was elder brother to the fame Simon. Det about the beginning of the nert August, the king was so in Simon carte cented against earle Simon, that both he and his or Leicotter wife were glad to get them ouer into France, till the france, kings weath were more pacified.

Apon the firteenth day of June, the kings clock The birth of fonne named Coward, and after furnamed Long, king Coward thanke by the Scots in mockage, bicause he was a the art. tall and flender man, was borne at Westminster, the after his fathers becease, succeeded him in the kingdome. IBefore the birth of this Coward, there ameared earlie in the morning certeine dates togis ther before the funne was by, a ffar of a large compatte, the with with fwift course was carted through flar. a long circuit of the aire, fometimes thewing as it had borne fire with it, and fontetimes leaving as it were smoke behind it, so that it was after sudged, that the great deeds which were to be atchined by the same Coward, were by this wonderfull constellation on forethe wed and fignified.

About the same time, by reason of an accusation made by a pailoner against Kanulfe 152iton (sometime the kings chancellour, but now leading a privat life, being a canon of the catheozall church of faint Matth, Paris, Waule in London)the fame Kanulfe (by commande ment from the king fent to the maioz of the citte Ranulfe "321" Milliam Joiner) was taken out of his house, had to this bouse, the tower, and there imprisoned, wherepon the beane and ted to the of Paules, maiffer G. Lucie, in absence of the bishop tower, accurated all those that had presumptuouslie attemps ted to laie hands on the faid Kanulfe, and further, he put his owne church of faint Paule vinder in terdiation.

To conclude, through threatning of ercommunity cation to be pronounced against the king, and other for this fact by the legat and the bilhops of the realine as namelie, Canturburie and London, the king was compelled to release and set at libertie the fore. fato Kanulfe. Finallie, the puloner that had accused the faid Kanulfe and other, being one of the kings purseuants, when for his wicked dwings he came to fuffer death, openlie confessed, how he had accused those persons, one lie in hope to deferre his owne cre1239

Polydor. A Arange

Da hisend

My.

Great raine.

The legat beginneth to loke to bis

owne como=

Sir Robert

The Jewes

the purffe.

M fonob bol:

ben at Lon:

bon.

De Ewina.

cution, being comulated as accessarie to the treason of the clearlie that luffered at Couentrie the last peare. De had accused not onelie the said Batton, but divers of the nobilitie allo to be privile and giltie of the farme conspiracie. This yeare for the space of foure monoths togither, fell creeding great raine, yet at length it began to held by about Caffer.

In this while, the loods of the realme practiced fundriedrifts likewife, as men that would faine have beine rid of the legats companie: but the king did 10 ithat he could on the otherside (by sending to the pope for licence) to have him remaine still here, who bes gan now indeed to loke to his owne profit, as by way of procuracies and other meanes, to that he got togt ther great summes of monie, although in the begins ning he fæined to forbeare, and not to fæke for anie fuch gaine. Alfo, he toke boon him to bestow benefices without confent of the patrones that were temposall men, therebpon complaint was made to the pope, namelie, by one fir Kobert de Twing, who clafe 20 inco as patrone the presentation of the readrie of Luthun in Poskelhire, and could not be permitted to iniop it, by reason of the popes prohibition, but opon the hearing of his title in the popes confifozie he obteined letters from the pope to be rellozed, and also an inhibition, that from thence forth no person should be promoted to anie spiritual benefice or church, with out confent of the patrone. The king and the peeres of the realme understanding themselves to be touched in this wrong offered to this knight, had written in 30 his favour to the pope, so that his suit had the better

Pozeouer, the Jewes in this yeare, for a murther thich they had fecretlie committed, were greenoullie punished, namelie by the purife to buy their peace, & they were glad to give the king the third part of all their gods. The legat also assembled a synod of the clergic at London boon the last of Julie, in the which he demanded procuracies, but the bishops open delfberation had in the matter, answered, that the im 40 portunatnes of the Romane church had footten conce funce the gods of the English church, that they could ce no longer luffer it, and therefore fait they; Let them gine you procuracies which braduifedlie have called you into the realme, if they will, for of us you thall ce be fure to come by none at all, howbeit he got his des mand of the abbats and other religious men.

About the feast of the assumption of our ladie. The mas earle of flanders, bucle to the queene, arrived at Douer, and was received of the king with great 50 ion and gladuelle, the rode thitherward to meet him, and so brought him to London, where the citizens came forthallo, and meeting him in the waie, brought him into the citie with all honour that might be deutfed. He did homage to the king (as authors write) and at his departure had in reward five hundred marks, and a pention affured him of as much pearelie out of the elcheker of the kings free gift. Wis earle Thomas was forme to the earle of Sauoy, and a little before his comming into England, he had married 60 Jone counteffe of Flanders, which had first beene compled in marriage with Ferdinando, as in the life of king John may further appeare.

In the 24 years of his reigne, king Henrie held his Chistmalle at Winchester, where he made Baldwine de Rivers knight, and invested him with the right of the earledome of the 3le of celight, in the vielence of the earle of Cornewall, who procured him this honour, because he had the wardship of him, and marrico him to his daughter in lawthe ladie Amis cia, that was daughter to his wife the counteffe of Cloccifer by hir former husband. The earle of Leice fer also, meaning to go into the holie land, returned out of France, where he had remained a certeine time as an erile, but was now received honorablie of the king and other pieres of the realine, and after that he had feene the king and done his dutie as appertemed, he went to his pollellions to make monie for his furniture necessarie to be had in that journie. for the With he told at mat time his wood work the about kno ceffer, but o the knights of the Polpitall, and to the about known dertain. for the witch he fold at that time his woods about Lei. canons of Leicester, receining of them for the same about the fumme of a thousand pounds.

About the fame time, to wit, the 14 of Aprill, vied Leolin ping Leolin prince of Wales, and then followed contens of wakes be tion betwirt his ions Griffin and Dauld for the prin-cipalitie, which at length Dauld obteined through life. king Henrics support (though he were the ponger brother) bicause he was begot in lawfull bed on the litter of king Henric. The whole countrie of Wales was maruellousie in trouble about their quarels. At length, a daie of meeting was appointed betwirt them, to grow by waic of talke buto some quiet end; and Oriffin meaning no deceit, came in peaceable wife with Richard bilhop of Bangoz and others to the place alligned, where they thould have met. But Daulo by a traine toke Oritin, and committed him to pulou, where voor afterwards, the yeare infuing, by continuall plaint and earnest sute of the bishop of Bangor, king Henrie entred Wales with an armie, and confreined Danio to lubmit himfelfe, and to deliuer the faid Briffin into his hands, and further allo to put in fuerties to appeare at London, there to o receive such order in the kings courts, as to him by law thould be ogderlie awarded. Griffin ap Dad Griffing docke and diverse other great loads of Wales formed Maddock with the king in this fournie against Dauld, as in the next yeare ve thall further heare.

About the fame time, there was great Arife and contention fill remaining betwirt the emperour Frederike and pope Innocent the fourth that lucces ded Telestine the fourth, in somuch that soze and more tall warre followed. But king Henrie by the p20 King hom curement of the legat Dtho, after the pope with mos after these nie, though he was somewhat loth to do it, bicause with mona the faid emperour had married his lifter. Indeed, the gault the emperour wrote to the king to fair his hand, but the diligence of that legat was such in furthering his mafters bufineffe, that the monie was gone ouer per the emperours letters came . At this time also, Co mund the archbishop of Canturburie greatlie dis alowed the often cractions and subsidies which the les gat caused dailie to be leuied of the English clergie. Howbeit, in hope to have his purpole the rather a gainst the monks of Canturburie, with whom he was at variance, he first granted to the legats requell made on the popes behalfe in a sproot holden at Reading, for the having of the fift part of spirituall mens revenues, and to by his example others were inforced to do the like. Furthermore he gave eight hundred marks to the pope, but whether of his owne free will, or by confreint, I cannot faic; but now otterlie milithing all things done by the legat contrarie to his mind, after he has done and faid what he could for redreffe, and when he faw no hope at hand for anie reformation on either in the king or legat, who esteemed not his words, as a man not longer able to læ his countrie to spoiled, he went over into France, and got him bnto Bontney, there to remaine in voluntarie erile, after the crample of his predecessour Ahomas Becket, whose dwings he did follow in verie manie things. Aerclie the collections of monie, which the pope in these dates by his legats gathered here in this realme, were great and fundite, to that (as it appeareth by hillogiographers of this time) the cleargis and other found themselves lose gricued, and repined not a little against such couetons dealings and bre measurable

Anno Reg. 24. 1240 Matth Paris. Matth.West. Baldwin de Kiners carle of the Bic of wight.

niade for the mealurable eractions, in to much that they spake to Complaint to the king of it, and faid; Right famous prince, whie neking of the fuffer pou England to be made a prepand desolati on to all the pallers by , as a vinepard without an hedge, common to the waifaring man , and to be des ce freied of the boses of the field, fith you have a sufficie ent privilege that no luch eractions thould be made in this kingdome. And fuerlie he is not worthie of a " printlege which abuleth the fame being granted. The ce king answered those that went thus about to perfnade him, that he neither would not durit gainfaie the pope in any thing: and fo the people were brought into milerable despaire.

The antwer of the king. Polydor. The caules that moued archbishop Edmund to depart the

Matth West.

There be that write how that there were other oc callons of the archbilhops departure out of the relme of the which this thould be one; when he faw religion not to be regarded, and that prefis were had in no bonoz, neither that it late in his power to reforme the matter. lith the king gave no eare to his admonia tions, he determined to ablent himselfe till the king (warned by some mithap) thould repent him of his errours, and amend his mildoings. Other toine an other cause herebuto, which was this; whereas the king by the infample of other kings (begun by William Kufus)bled to keepe bilhops lees, and other fuch spirituall possessions in his hands, during the bacati on till a convenient person were to the same preferred, the archbilhop Comund, for that he faw long delaies made oftentimes per any could be admitted to the rome of those that were deceasted, oz by any other means deprined, he was in hand with the king, that 30 the archbishop of Canturburie might have power onlie to proutoe for fuccestors in fuch romes as chancoto be bacant, about the tearme of fir moneths, which thing the king for a certeine fumme of monie granted: but afterward perceining that hinderance he full eined thereby, he revoked that grant, so much to the displeasure of the archbishop, that he thought god no longer to continue in the realme.

At his comming to Pontney, he so sæmed to des fpile all worldlie pompe and honor, giving himfelfe tholie to dinine contemplation, to fatting and pate er, that the former opinion, which men bad conceived of his vertues, was maruelloudie confirmed. At length being loze bered with licknesse, supposing that he might recouer helfh by changing of aire and place, he caused himselfe to be conveied into an other house of religion, named Soilie, two dates tournie from Pontney, where finallie he died the lirt enth of Pouember, and his bodie was brought againe to Pont ney, and there buried, where also through sundrie miracles thewed (as they fay) at his grave, he was reputed a faint, and at length canonized by pope Inno cent the fourth. He was borne at Abingdon, beside Drenford, and thereby some named him faint &d mund of Abington, and some S. Comund of Pontney, after the place where he was inflyined. The fee of Canturburic was void more than three yeares af ter his decease, till at length by the kings comman. dement, the monks of Canturburic elected one 180nisace of Sauvie bucle to quæne Cliano, being the 60 45 archbishop which ruled that church.

A Charters

The death of archbilhop of

Aftere was this yeare a certeine person of honest book monke conversation, and sober, representing in habit one experienced, of the Carthulian monks, taken at Cambridge, being accused for that he refused to come to the church to heare divine scruice, and opon his eramination, dicante he answered otherwise than was thought convenient, he was committed to fecret prison, and shortlie after sent up to the legat to be of him examined. This man openlie protested, that Gregorie was not the true pope, not head of the church, but that there was another head of the church, and that the thurth was defiled, so that no service ought to be said therein, creept the same were netalie dedicated, and the velicls and veliments agains hallowed and confecrated; The divell (faid he) is losed, a the pope is an heretike, for Gregorie, which nameth himfelfe pope, hath polluted the church.

Hereopon (in the presence and audience of the abbat of Euesham, maister Pic. de Fernham, and diverse other worthipfull personages) the legat said but o him being thus out of the waie; Is not power granted to our fourreigne lood the pope from about, both to lofe and bind foules, fith he crecuteth the rome of S. Peter opon earth? Pow then all men > loked to heare what answer he would make, belee, uing his ludgement to depend byon the fame, he faid by way of interrogation, and not by way of affertie? on; How can I belieue, that buto a person spotted >> with simonie and vourie, and haplie weapt in more, græuous lins, such power thould be granted as was granted buto holie peter, who immediatlie follow, " ed the lord, as some as he was made his apostle, and followed him not onelie in bobilie fottleps , but in clerenesse of vertues. At which word the legat bluthed, * fato to fome of the Amders by; A man ought >> not to chide with a fole, noz gape over an oven.

In this featon the king fent his inflices itine- Justices titrants in circuit about the land, the which binder pres nerants. tert of tultice punished manie persons, and so levied william de great fummes of monie to the kings vie. Sir Wil, Yozke, Robert liam of Poske prouof of Beuerley was alligned to flices, visit the south parts, and sir Robert de Lexinton the north parts. Also Kichard earle of Cornewall the kings brother, with a naute of thips failed into Syria, where in the warres against the Saracens, he greatlie aduanced the part of the christians . There Cornewal gos went over with him the earle of Salisburie Willi eth into the am Longespæ, and Milliam Ballet, John Beau holy land. champe, Beffrey de Lucie, John Peuill, Beffrey Beauchampe, Peter de Bzeule, and William Furniuall. The crie of Montford also went over the same time : but where the earle of Cornewall toke the fea The earle of at Parfiles , the earle of Leiceffer palled through Leiceiler gos Italie, and twhe the water at Brandise, and with eihthick him went these persons of name, Thomas de Fur- also. niuall, with his brother Gerard of Furniuall, Lough Wake, Almerike de S. Aumond, Wilchard Les det, Punchard de Dewin, and William de Delvin that were brethren, Gerard Pelmes, Kouke de Baugie, and Peter de Chauntenaie. Shoutlie affer The earle of allo, John earle of Albemarle, William Fortis, and Albemaric. Peter de Pallow a Poidouin, men for their vali. ancie greatlie renowmed, went thither, leading with them a great number of chiffian fouldiois. In this yeare and boon the day of S. Acmigius, was the durch of S. Paule in the citie of London dedicated by Roger biftop of that citte, the king and The dedicate a great number of bithops and other Roble men bes on of the ing present, which were feasted the same day by the church of 5. ing prefent, which were teated the faine day by the paule in fairbillion Roger and the canons. Porcouer, there London. died the same yeare the countesse Isabell, wife to Richard earle of Corneivall, and two earles, Willis am earle Warren, and John earle of Lincolne, also The death of the lozd John Fitz Kobert, one of the chefe barons Rabeil the in all the north parts of the realine. Tallo in Februa, Countrie or aric there appeared a comet or blating farre verie The logo decadual to behold, for the space of thirtie daies togis John fitz ther. Porcover, on the coast of England there was a lichert. great battell amongst the fishes of the fea, so that a battell bethere were eleanen whales or thirlepwies cast on twirt fishes. land, belive other buge and mouliruous filhes, which Match. Paris appeared to be dead of some hurts; and one of those mightie fithes, comming into the Ahames aline, was purfued by the filhers, and could fearle palle through the arches of London bridge. At length with barts and other fuch weapons, they flue him before the kings manour at Wortlake, whither they follows ed him. There was also a great found heard this peare in fundric parts of England at one felfe time, as if it had bone the noise of some mightie mouns taine that had fallen into the fea. And byon the fes nenth of Paie there chanced a great boilferous A great wind. wind that fore troubled the fkie.

Lexinton iu=

An. Dom. 12

The king # manour at Lyoztlake.

An oth res ceilleo.

The fene-

taine.

thall of Aqui-

This yeare the king causeo the citizens of London, and the gardians of the cinque posts, and manie of ther to receive an oth to be true and faithfull to his 10 fonne prince Coward. The friers preachers and mi nois, and other men of the church that were dinines, absolute such as had taken on them the croffe, receive uing of them so much monie as would suffice to have borne their charges in that fournie, and this not without Cander redounding to the church. The same meanes to get monie was practifed also by the legat

Dtho, having authoritie therto of the pope. The same yeare the seneshall of Aquitaine came over to the king, and let him know, that if timelic provision 20 were not had, all those countries on the further side of the fea wold be loff. Po other incident chanced the fame yeare neither in warre abroad, nor in the fate of government of the common-wealth at home, Wereof any great accompt is to be made, but that the legat Dtho got great summes of monie dis uerle waies, of religious men to the popes behofe:

therebpon certaine abbats made complaints to the king, but in place of comfort they received discome fort, fafter knowledge thereof given to the legat, he 30 was more extreame with them than he was before.

Shortlic after one of the popes familiars and king

Peter Boffo.

preefts bene-

man named maffer Peter Bollo came from Rome, taking England in his wate to go into Scotland, and vice in both such viligence in the popes cause, that he got a fixeenth granted here, which he speedilie Peter de Su- gathered . About the fame time one Peter de Sw pino got a bin- pino was sent into Ireland, and there like wife he got a vinticime, bringing from thefethe fumme of 115 marks, and aboue. But the collection which Peter 40 Rollo got out of the Scotily confines doubled that fumme, as was thought. In his returne also from thence, visiting the houses of religion, and searching the consciences of religious persons, by new thists he craftilie got pet more monie to the popes vie, causing them to sweare to keepe this mysterie ses cret, as it were some privitie of confession for the space of one halfe yeare, whereby he turned the harts of manie men from the love of the church of Rome, wounding them with great grafe and remode of 50 conscience to see this pillage. Anno Reg. 25.

In the 25 years of his reigne, king Henrie kept 1 2 4 1 his Christmasse at Westminster, at which time the legat was sent for to returne buto Rome, and affer he had beene honocablic feaffed of the king, on the 4 daie of Chistmasse he departed from London towards the lea live, after he had remained here abone thew yeares. Peter of Sauote that was bucle to the quene came into England, and mas honocablie recefued and interteface of hing Bonrie, who had gto 60 Articles of agreement betweene Henrie the third of nen to him the earledome of Kichmont. His sonne Boniface was this yeare also elected archbiffiop of Canturburic, a tall gentleman and of a goodie pers fonage, but neither fo learned no: otherwise meet for that rome. But such was the kings pleasure, who in fauour of the quiene, to whom he was colen gers mane lought to advance him, and getting the popes fanour in that behalfe, procured the monks & bilhops to grant their confents, although much against their minds, if they might have had their owne wils. The earle of Cornewall returning out of the holie land in fafetie, after he had fettled things there, by concluding an abitinence of warre betwirt the Sanacens and chillians about the octaves of S. John

Baptiff, he arrived in Sicill, and hearing there in what place the emperour as then folourned, he repais red buto him, of whom and of his litter the emprelle he was most ioifullie received. Within a few dates Cheang affer, he went to the court of Kome, to trie if he Control might drive some agreement betweet we emperour appearing and the pope, but finding the pope to hard, and no had true have been all his about thing conformable, ercept he might have had all his the pope owne will (which was, that the emperour thould the impire have submitted himselfe to the popes pleasure, and stand buto what soever order the church should appoint) he returned backe to the emperour without concluding any thing with the pope, declaring buto him as he had found. After this he remained two moneths with the emperour, then taking his leave was honoured with great gifts at his departure, and was hononies with green grand, at length arrived at he ming the towns of Doner on the morrow after the featt of time En the Epithanie in the yeare following.

About the same time that the earle of Cornewall was in his returne forth of the holie land, new wars suddenlie arose in Wales, which happened well for king Penrie. There were diverse of the Welthmen that could not well like of the government of Danid, and therefore fore lamenting the captivitie of his brother Briffin, whom before (as ye have heard) he had by a traine taken and kept ftill as puloner, began to make warre boon the fato Dauld, and those that twke his part, the which on the other five fought to oppelle their adnerlaries, so that there insued warnshe much bloudhed and flaughter betweene the parties, twenthe The wife also of the said Griffin, and such other noble men as were become enimies onto David, fent and wit buto king Henrie, requiring his aid, that Griffin might be delivered out of his brothers hands, promiling him great helpe and furtherance, with large conditions of lubmillion, and afforance furthermore to be at his commandement, and to receive him for their true and sourreigne load.

Bing Penrie buderstanding all their doings and bing hom intents, thought that this contention betweene the goeth in two brethren for the title of Wales would fertie be wales with ric well for his purpole, and therefore he halted forth an armit. with a specie armie of men in that countrie, purpo fing to reduce the fame budge his obelfance. Here with Senena or Guenhera, the wife of Briffin (and other of the Welsh Pobilitie, that twice part with hir) concluded a league with king Henrie, opon certeine conditions as the fame are contenned in an infruntent of charter, the tenour whereof beginneth as followeth.

Conuenit inter dominum Henricum tertium regem Anglorum illustremex vnaparte, & Senenam vxorem Griffint, filij Leolini, quondamprincipis Northwallia, quem David frater eius tenet carceri muncipatum, cum Owino filio suo, nomine eius dem Griff. ex aliera, Esc.

that name, king of England of the one parties and Senenathe wife of Griffin, the fonne of Leolin, fometimes prince of Northwales, whom David his brother determent in prison, with Owen his forme, in the name of the faid Griffin of the other er der bereit der engel

> P primis, the late Senena buderlakelt. that the faid Grittin hir husband will give buto the king fir hundred markes, wood condition that the king our cause the lais

Oriffin and Diven his some to be delivered from the pailon therein they are kept, and will fland to the sudgement of the kings court, whether by law he Canturburie. Matth Paris.

Boniface de

Bauoie elec=

ought to be imprisoned or no.

Item the faid Griffin and his heires will Cand to the judgement of the kings court, for and concerning that portion of the inheritance of the fato Leolin his father, which of right ought to apperteine buto him.

Item the faid Senena bnoertaketh for the faid Griffin and his heires, that the faid Griffin and his heires thall yello and pate yearelie to the king for the famelands, the fumme of thee hundred markes. Whereof the first third part to be paid in monie, the 10 fecond in kine, and the third in hortes, by the effimation of indifferent men, and the fame to be paid year, lie at Wichaelmas and Gaffer by euen portions, by the hands of the thiriffe of the countie of Salop for the time being.

Item the faid Senena bidertaketh further for the faid Griffin and his heires, that they and everie of them thall observe the peace against the said Danid, and luffer him quietlie to intoy luch postion of his far thers inheritance as to him shall be found to be 20

Item the faid Senena doth further bindertake for the faid Briffin hir hulband and his heires, that incale anie Wellhman bereafter thall happen to rebell against the king, they at their owne costs and charges shall compell the faid offendoz to make fatillation to the king for his disobedience.

Item for the performance of the premilles, the faid Senena will deliver onto the load the king, Danio and Roderike hir formes for pleages, with pro- 30 nisothat if the said Briffin and Diven or either of them thall hamen to one before their deliverie out of the faid prison, it thall be lawfull for the faid Senena to have one of hir formes released, the other remains ing with the king for pledge.

Item the fato Senena hath swoone opon the holie Euangelist, that the said Griffin hir husband and his heires, and everie of them thall accomplish and performe all the premittes on their behalfe, and further bodertaketh that the faid Griffin hir husband, 40 boonhis delinerie out of prilon, thall take the fame

Item the faid Senena in the name of the faid Briffin hir hulband, submitteth hir felfe concerning the observation of the premilles but othe furifoidion of the revereno fathers the bilhops of Hereford and Lichfield, to that the faid bilhops or either of them at the kings request thall compell the faid Briffin and his heires to observe all and fingular the premises on their behalfe, by sentence of ercommunicatio 50 on bpon their persons, and interdiction boon their

Lafflie, the faid Senena doth undertake and promile (Bona fide) to le and procure the full perfor mance of all the premises, and that the fato Griffin hir hulband and his heires thall allow and performe the fame and thereof thall deliner his instrument in writing to the king informe aforefaid. To this that ter both parties put their feales, Briffin and Senena to that part which remained with the king, and the 13. 60 to that part which remained with Senena.

Finallie, for the performance of the articles in this infirument or writing conteined with faid ladie in name of hir husband, procured diverse Poble men to become suerties or pledges, that is to faie, Kalfe op Portimer, Walter de Clifford, Koger de Ponthualt fenethall of Cheffer, Pailgun ap Pail gun, Dercooc ap Robert, Triffinap Paddor of Bromefield, Houwell and Weredoc brethren, Briffin ap Menuwen: which persons undertwhe for the said lade, that the conenants on his part thould be performed, and ther upon they also bound themselves by their writings obligatorie buto the faid king, in forme following.

Omnibus hoc scriptum visuris Rogerus de monte alto senescallus Cestria salutem . Sciatis quòd egome constitui plegium,&c.

O all and fingular, to whome this writingshall come, Roger de monte alto the steward of Chester sendeth greeting. Know yee that I have constituted my selfe pledge for Senena the wife of Griffin the sonne of Leolin, sometimes prince of Northwales, and haue vndertaken for hir to our souereigne lord Henrie king of England, that the faid Senena shall accomplish and performeall and fingular those covenants and articles, agreed vpon betweene our faid fouereigne lord and the faid Senena, for and concerning the deliuerance of the faid Griffin hir husband and Owen his fonne out of the prison of Dauid his brother, and the portion of inheritance due vnto the said Griffin, which the faid Dauid keepeth from him by force. In witnesse whereof to this present writing I have put my feale. Dated at Salop, the mondaie before the feast of the Ascension of the blessed virgin Marie, in the 15 yeare of his reigne.

But now to our purpole. Then Dauld binderfrod of the kings approach with so pullant an armie, he was brought into great perplexitie, and the more in ded, not onelie bicause there chanced the same yeare for the space of soure moneths togither a great drouth, so that the marishes and bogges were dried Daulo driven bp and made passable for the kings people, but also to his wits for that manie of the Welth Pobilitie, as chefelie Griffin Paddoc and others, lought his destruction in favour of his brother Briffin (whose deliverance they earnesslie wished) and for that he stoo ercommunicate by the pope. All which things well confides red, caused him to doubt of a further mischese to hang over his head: wherevoon he fent to the king, fignifieng that he would deliver his brother Griffin frælie into his hands, but letting him withall to wit by manie good reasons, that if he did set him at liber tie he Could minifer manie new occasions of continuall warres.

Mozeover, this covenant David required at the kings hands, that the king thould referue him fo to his peace boder the bond of floclitie and hollages, that he Could not dicherit him: which when as the king courteouslie granted, Daulo lent buto him his brother Briffin, to dispose of him as he should thinke requilite. The king receiving him, lent him to London, bnder the conduct of fir John de Lerinton, togs ther with other mo (whome he had received as holfa) ges both of Dauto and others the Pobles of Wales) reth his bro appointing them to be kept in lafetie within the fow- ther to the B. er there. There was also a charter or deed made by the same Danio bito king Henrie, conteining the articles, couenants, and grants made betwirt the faid prince and the forefaid Danid as followetty.

The charter of the articles of Dauids fubmission to the king.

Omnibus Christi fidelibus, ad quos prafentes lice ra peruenerint, David filius Leolini salutem. Sciatis quòd concessi domino meo Henrico regi Angliaillustri, &c!

D all christian people, to whom these pres 1 fent letters thall come, Danid the fonne of Leolin fendeth græting. Know ye that I have granted and promifed to deliver buto the lood Penrie the noble king of Eng. land, Oriffin my brother with his sonne and heire thom I hape in pillon, and all other pilloners, who by occasion of the faid Oriffin lie in burance.

10

3 tem 3 thall trand to the subgement of the kings court, aswell in that case, whether the said Griffin ought to be octeined pissoner or no, as also for and concerning the part of the inheritance of the faid Leolin my father, claimed by the faid Griffin accoze bing to the customes of Wales: so that the peace be 10 mainteined betwene me and the faid Griffin.

Item Jano the faid Griffin, and either of be thall hold our portions of land, of our faid fourreigne the king in Capite, acknowleging him chiefe load therof.

Item I hall restoze onto Roger de monte alto feward of Cheffer, his land of Montalt or Mould. with the appurtenances.

Item I thall like wife reffore to all other barons. all such lands, loodships and castels, as were taken from them fince the beginning of the warres be, 20 twente the lord John king of England, and the faid Leolin prince of Wales my father, fauing the right of all covenants and grants by writing, to be referued buto the indgement and determination of the kings court.

Item I thall give and reffore buto our fouereigne loed the king all his charges in this peccent votage

Item I thall make fatilfaction for all damages e iniuries done by me, or anie of my lubicas buto the 3 king or his, according to the confideration of the kings court, and thall deliver fuch as thalbe maleface tours in that behalfe.

Item I thall reftoze buto the faid load the king all the homages, which the late king John his father had, e which the faid losd the king of right ought to have, especiallie of all the noble men of Wales: and if the king thall fet at libertie anie of his captines, the pol festions of that man thall remaine to the king.

Item the land of Elimer with the apurtenances 40 thall remains to the losd the king and his hetres for

Item I shall not recesue or suffer to be recesued within my countrie of Wales, any of the lubicas of England, outlained or banithed by the faid lord the king or his barons of Percia.

Item for confirmation and performance of all and fingular the premifics on my behalfe, I thall prouide by bonds and pledges, and by all other waies and means as the fato lood the king thall award, and will 50 accomplish the commandement of the faid king, and will obcie his lawes.

In witnesse whereof to this present writing I have put my feale : dated at Alnet by the riner of Clivey, in the feaff of the decollation of S. John Baptiff, in the five & twentith yeare of the reigne of the faid king. For the observation of these in articles, the said prince Dauid and Confuet Clachan were sworne. Allo the faid prince Danid fubmitted himfelfe to the furifoiction of the archbishop of Canturburie, and of 60 the bilhops of London, Dereford, and Couentrie, for the time being . That all, or one of them, whom the bing hall appoint, may ercommunicate him, and firteroic his land upon becach of anie the faid articles. And there byon he procured the bithops of S. Bango, and S. Afath to make their charters to the lost the king, whereby they granted to crecute and denounce all fentences, aswell of ercommunication as of interdiction fent from the forefaid archbishop, bishops, or anie of them.

The faid Dauid alfo fent privilic to the king, to des fire him that he would fuffer him being his nephue, and the lawfull heire of Leolin his father, to intop the principalitie of Clales rather than Griffin, which was but a baffard, and no kin buto the king. Sining him withall to binderstand, that in case he did fet Griffin at libertie, he thould be fure to have the war renewed. Wher boon the king knowing thefe things to be true, and binderstanding also that Briffin was a ballant fout man, and had manie freends and faugrours of his caule, inclined rather to affent buto Da ulos request than otherwise to be in danger of further troubles, therfore willinglie granted the fame.

Shortlie after Dauid old fend his brother Griffin buto the king, and other pledges for himfelfe, for performance of the fato articles, whom the king fent forthwith to the towe of London, there to be fafelie foothwish to the rowse of London, the date for his fin-kept, allowing to Orisin a noble a date for his fin-ding. And within few dats after Pichaelmas, prince Match. Park bings court win his homage. Page, 166. Dauth comming to the kings court oid his homage, and swoze fealtie, who for so doing, and in that he was the kings nephue, was fent home againe in peace. When Briffin faw how all things went, and that he was not like to be fet at libertie, he began to deule wates and meanes to escape out of pation.

Wherefore deceiving the watch one night, he made a long line of hangings, coverings, and theets, and Manh.Pin having gotten out at a window, let downe himfelfe pagr,870, by the same from the top of the towe: but by reason that he was a mightic personage and full of fiesh, the line brake with the weight of his bodie, and lo falling downe headlong of a great height, his necke and head was divien into his bodie with the fall: whole miscrable carcalle being found the mozow after, was a pitifull light to the beholders. The king being certified thereof, commanded Griffins sonne to be better laked buto, and punished the officers for their negli-

About the same time there chanced a controversie to rife betwirt the king and the bishop of Lincolne, for the bestolving of the benefice of Thame, the which John Panfell the kings chapleine had gotten in pole John As fellion by the kings fanour, through promition grant fell, ted of the pope, where the bithop alleging primleges to the confrarie, had granted it to an other. At length the king having his fathers trouble before his cies, and doubting the bishops words, threatning some es uill mithap to follow, if he thould fand long in the matter against the faid bishop, gave over his tenour: and therewithall provided John Panfell of a farre more rich benefice, that is to fate, of the perfonage of Paiotione, whereinto the billyop specific in ucfted him.

This yeare manie noble men ended their lines, as Death of m well fuch as were gone with the earles of Corne blemen. wall and Leicester into the holie land, and others remaining fill at home. Among thirth number were thefe: William Fort; carte of Albemarle, Walter Lacie, one of the thiefest nobles in all Ireland, Ste Laculity phan de Segraue, Gilbert de Baffet and his sonne iffac malt be and heire named also Gilbert. Pocedier, John Bis in him him find him for high inflice of the forrests, and Peter de Pallein, ters inhull Pugh Blake, Robert Parmion, Peter De Minis, his lands. Buifcharde Laidec, Cufface: Stoutuill, Cudo Pamen furnamed Percham, Balowinde Betun, John Fitz John Ceward in household to earle Richard, John de Beaulicu, Gerarade Furnivall. There die ed also the ladde Clianus the counteste of Britaine, wife into Beffrey, that was formetime earls of 1826 taine (which counteffe had beneiong kept prisoner at Wallow with diverte other. Recorded &

Moreover, there died this years Roger billiop of London, and Hugh bilhop of Cheffer. Atto Gilbert Parthall earle of Penbroke, in a torneis which he had attempted at Hereford against the kings to cence, was by air virulie horfe caft, and to burt, that immediatlie he died thereof. Peither was this yeare onelie mournefull to England for the loffe of fuch Inecliple.

3fabell.

1242

Gaguinus. Marth, West.

high estates, but all imalher places maniautatable personages ocparted out of this transitorie life. As two popes, Oregoris the ninthand his fucce four Ce lettine the fourth, betiden cardinals : amongt the ichichekobert Somercotenn English man was ane. Sourcocean a About the later end of this 25 years, the fire date englishmen.

of Daober, there ameaned a right for a little date. funne, verie Grange to the beholders . 9 In the 26 peare vied the emprette Habell, wife onto frederike the emperour.

In this yeare also began the wars againe betwirt hing Denrie, and Lewes the king of France, for the quarell of Hugh earle of March, who refused to do Anno Reg. 26. homage onto Alfonse the brother of king Leives. ithich Alfonse had married the onelie daughter and beire of Raimund earle of Tholouse, and therefore thould fucceothe same earle in his estate and inhewars renued ritance. Dis brother king Lewes had also given bnbings of Eng to him the earledome of Poictou, with all the lands of Aluergne: and bicause the earle of Warch would 20 notowhomage buto him, king Lewes made warre bon the earle of Parch, who ther byon lought to procure king Penrie (whole mother he had married) to come over with an armie buto his aid.

King Denrie being follicited with letters, not one lie from his father in law, but also from diverse other noble men of Poictou, who willinglie would have hundricopis beine binder his gouernement, alked aduile of his conneel what he ought to do in the matter . Some were of opinion, that fith there had beene a truce ta- 30 ken betwirt the kings, it were not reason in anie wife to breake the fame: but some other thought, that fith the Frenchmen in times past had taken from hing John his lawfull heritage in Pozmandie and Poiston, and wrongfullie deteined the same Will in their vollettion without relitution, it could not be at anietime bulawfull bon occasion given to recouer the same out of their hands. This opinion was allowed for good, and the best that might be both of latelie returned from his tournic which he had made into the holie land.

But now all the Caie rected in gathering of monie, thich being earnefflie demanded in a parlement begun at Wlestminster the tuesdate befoze Candlemalle, was as stifflie denied, alledging in ercuse their often paiments of fublidies and relectes, which had been gathered lith the comming of the king to his crowne, as the thirtenth, fiftenth, firteenth and fortieth parts of all their moueable goos, belives 50 charugage, hidage, and fundzie escuages, namelie the great escuage granted for the marriage of his filter the empresse: and also beside the thirtieth with in foure yeares last past, or thereabouts, granted to him, which they thought remained bulpent, bicaule it could not be understood about what necessarie assaires for the common-wealth it Chould be laid forth and imploice, whereas the same was lenied byon condition, that it should remaine in certeine cassels, and not to be expended but by the adule of foure peres of the realme, as the earle of Warren, and o thers. Pozeoucr, they alledged, that the escheats and amercements which has beene gathered of late were fuch as mult needs fill the kings coffers: 4 fo to conclude, they would not confent to grant any sublidie.

howbeit, the king to handled the matter with the richer fort, and namelie those of the spiritualtie, that partite by gift and partite by boarowing, he got togither a great matte of treature, and so prepared anarmie and thips to passe over into Gascoine with all connenient speed . In the meane time, bicause be would leave things in more fuertie at home, he fent the bishop of Durham into Scotland, by whose dille gence a marriage was concluded betwirt the logo

Attracter elects some to the king of Scots, and the land Pargaret daughter to king Denrie. Pozeoner The king of the muches of England aptoining to Scotland Scots war-iner committed to the diagral Scots as insuper of glith marthe farmeto have and refind whitely hing Henrie mes. threat abite in the parts beyond the leag. The arch to the archbeat the parts beings abience, was also appointed the governor of the realme.

The parts of the realme.

the midwit of Paie, the king take the sea, togither with the quane his wife, his brother Kichard earle of Cornewall, and featen other earles, and about the bundeed knights of men of armes. The Polacouins had written to him that he needed not bring oner with him any great armie of men, but rather vientie of monie to reteine such as he should find there Chirtic barreadie to ferue him at his comming . Therebpon he rels of Entwhe with him thirtie barrels of Arrling coine: and glish coine. at length (but not without contrarie winds) he arriv pallethoure ued on the coast of Galcoine, in the mouth of the ris into france. ner of Garon, and taking land, was folfullie receined of the people, and namelie of Reignold load of Pons.

The French king advertised that the king of England was come over into France, to the aid of the earle of Warch, and other his subjects against him, prepared a mightie armie, in the which were reco koned to be to the number of foure thousand men of armes, well provided and armed at all points, bestors twentie thousand esquires, gentlemen, year Che French men and croffebolives : and with the fame immedia king innabeth attie he entred the dominions of the earle of Darch, the earle of Marches and take from him diucrie townes and caffels, as land. Fountney, wherein he toke one of the earls formes: also Peruant with divers other. In the meane while the king of England was advanced forward and come nære unto Tailborge, lieng with his armie in the faire medow by the river lide of Charent fall by the castell of Thonay: 4 he had there with him in the king salfo of the earle of Cornewall, who was 40 campe firtiene hundred knights, or rather men of The number armes, and twentie thouland formen , with feauen of the English hundred that bare croffebows. He made there his armie, tivo halfe brethren, the fonnes of the earle of Parch knights, and game to the one of them fine hundred marks, and to the other fir hundred marks yearelic, to be paid out of his elcheker, till he had otherwise provided for them in lands and revenues equall to that vention.

Row the French king being advertised that king Benrie laie thus nere to Callborge, marched this ther wards with all his pullance latelie reenforced with new luplies, and approching to Callborge, had Callborge. the towne delivered buto him . This chanced about the latter end of Julie. Then after the French king had gotten pollection of Tailborge, he ment to palle the water, and if by mediation of a truce politikelie procured by the earle of Cornewall (and as it were at a narrow pinch) the king of England had not found means to remoue in the night feafon, he had bene in great danger to have bene taken, through want of fuch aid as he loked to have had at the hands of the Poictouins and other his confederats. But yet be got awaie (though with some staine of honour) and withozew to Lainces, whither also the French king Lainces. folowed, and comming nere to the towne, there was Inencounter a Charpe incounter begun betwirt the French and betwirt the the English, icherein the Englishmen were vidozs, and in which by the Frenchmens owne confession, if the English power has beene like to theirs in num. ber, they hav fullie atchined the honour of a fough, ten field, and for a light (kirmith a found andwer, fea biaozie.

The high proweffe and valiancie of the earles of Leicelter, Salisburie, Poplalke, with other Poble others.

English and French.

The ballance of the carle of Leicelter and men,

Charmanae a for cuerie plomiand.

Ем ыфорв of Durham

John Man=

Sir John 25arrig wil de Bep. Wilbert De Clare flaine.

Marth Paris.

., 5

The renot= ting of other French lozds $6 pag. 42, 43,44 . F pag. 52 of the historic of England.

the kings mapleine, and with set his putile some en old right worthilie, taking perforer with his divite hands one Weter Dige a gentleman in goo place. There was mozeover taken on the French partal 10 John de Barris a man of god accompt, by William de Sep, befide lundzic others. On the Englith part was flaine Gilbert de Clare, and Penrie Balling taken palloner, with other, to the number of twentie knights,or men of armes, if I may to call them.

After this incounter, by reason the Frencharmie increased by new bands Will resorting to their king, the earle of March secrettie sought meanes to be re-March is re- conciled birto him: and finallie by the helpe of the conciled to the duke of Britaine, his old acquaintance and freend at 20 French bing. neo, his peace was purchased, so that he had his lands againe to him reffored ercept certeine caffels. which for further affurance the French king reteined in his hands by the space of them yeares. The king of England, perceiuing himfelfe to to much deceiued in that he had put such confidence in the earle of Warch and others of that countrie, which thould have moed him at this present, and againe advertised, that the French king meant to beliege him within the citie of Fainces, departed with all speed from thence, 30 and came to Blate, a towne in Galcoigne, fituat nere to the river of Baron, & diffant feuen leagues from Burdeaux.

men, as John de Burgh, Marren de Pontit Ché mill o: Cheincte, Dubert Fitz Patthew, wie mant

Fits Scholas otd in this tick right well appeared and like wife other of the windfully nation bare them felues formantullie, that they defer we no finally only mendation. Among Brandla fir John Banden

Pow whilest he laie here at Blaie, there came bu-The counteste to him the counteste of Bierne (a woman mon-Armons big of bodie) bringing with hir to ferue the king, hir fonne, and thee score linights, in hope to get some of his sterling monie, whereof the knew him to have plentie: and so covenanting for hir interteinment, remained fill with him, and received everie 40 date i 3 pounds fferling, and pet the neuer pleasured him the worth of a great, but rather hindered him, in making him bare of monie, which the received, purffed by and toke awaie with hir when the devarteo from him. But if to hir making and fature the had bin indued with the courage of Moadicia, whom the creeded (as it thould forme) in proportion, or with the prowelle of Elicon, hir feruice had beine no lette beneficiall to the la. than anie failfull capteing marthing under his banner. So that we lee in this wo 50 man a delire rather to fatilife hir hydropicall humor of couetoulnelle, than ante true affection to let fozward the kings affaires; therefore it may well be faid of hir in respect of hir grædinesse to get from the king for hir owne commodities sake, that the was Vt mare, qued das deuerat, nunquam abundat. Nunquam rependit.

In the meane time the loods de Pons, Mirabeau and Portaigne luddenlie revolted, fubmitted them wars, and all other the loads and knights of Poicton, and the marches therabouts, that not long before had procured king Henrie to come ouer to their aid. The citie of Xainaes was likewife rendeed to him immediattie boon king Henrics departure from thence. At which featon the French king meant to have fol lowed him to Blaie, but by reason of a great death which chanced in his armie, he was constreined to alter his purpole. Suerlie, as authors haue recorded, what through pestilence and unwholesoinnesse of the Frencheamp, aire, agreat manic of frenchmen died at that time, and dailie more fell licke. The number of them that bicd (as Matth. Paris, & Matth. Westminster affirme) amounted to twentie thouland perfons, befide fourescore of the Poblitic Continue Dinners or penons lising in start hund official to beginn to wave difease Crucing amortends defined beneficional video de responsable de la constance de la cons porty table, thout they damed Beatrice after the queenes mother. Pow whilest king Henrie was thus lookingied in Policiou and Balcoins, William Marild, the forme of Detrie Marild (by comman william & dementione from the king was put to death at Long rich tring don, with Articine of his complices on the enen of S. James the apostle. This William Parisch falling in to the kings displeasure, got him to the fea, and placed theroner, keeping the Ne of Lundaie in the west countrie, till finallie he was taken and brought vit foner viits the towie, where he was charged with fundate articles of treafon, as that he thould here that counterfeit mad man which fought to have murther red the king at Modfoke, as before pe haue heard. Se pag. Howbeit when he chould die, he otterlie benied that ever he was privile to anie such thing . He was first had from Wellminster to the towie, & from thence drawne to the gibet, and there hanged till he was dead, and after being cut downe, had his bowels rip ped out and burned, and when his head was cut off, the bodie was divided into foure quarters, and fent but o foure of the principall cities of the realme. His complices were also drawne through the citie of London unto the same gibet, and there hanged.

In the time of this warre also betweet England and France, there was much hurt done on the fea be. The feasily twirt them of the cinque posts and the Frenchmen bled with of Pozmandie, and other: as the Caleis men and menoiwan the Britons, which did make themselves as irrong as they could against the Englishmen by sea. Where bpon diverse incounters chanced betwirt them, but more to the losse of the Englishmen, than of the Frenchmen: in somuch that they of the posts were constrained to require aid of the archb. of Pooke the lood governour of the realme. About which time, and after the king was withdrawen to Burdeaux, divers noble men, as the earles of Postfolke and Minches ffer, with others, got licence to returne into England. Some after whole arrivall, elevage was gather red through the realine towards the bearing of the kings charges. Pozeouer, in this yeare of the king thereo rings of the there vied fundzie noble men of naturall infirmities, anightele as the earle of Marwike, Bilbert de Baunt, Bald Matth. Well win Wake, Philip de Kime, and Roger Bertham Deathof of the north, with diverse other. Howbeit the king himselse returned not home, but late all the winter time at Burdeaux, meaning to attempt manie en terpiles, but he brought none to palle, fauing that in protracting the time, he spent much monie, and to life tle purpose. About the beginning of the scuent and twentish Anno. Regi felics to the Frenchking, with the vicount of Co. 60 peare of his reigne, his brother the earle of Cornewall, milliking the order of things which he faw date lie in the king his brothers proceedings, would needs returne backe into England, but chieflie when he percefued that his councell advice could not be heard. The king was loze offended herewith, but he could not well remedie the matter, not persuade him to tae The earle rie. And to the faid earle of Comewall, togither with Commalat the earles of Pendroke and Pereford, and diverte of other returns ther noble men toke the sea, and after manie dans home. gers escaped in their course, at length on S. Uncies date they arrived in Cornewall, though some of the beliefs that were in the companie were driven by force of the tempestuous weather boon other contrarie coalis. Albout this leason also, that is to fair,

Escuagegy thered 20.00

Death iu the

on the day of S. Comund the king, there happened a maruellous tempet of thunder and lightening, and ther with followed luch an exceeding raine (which continued many daies togither)that rivers role on maruclous heigth, and the Thames it felfe, which fildoine rifeth or is increased by land flouds, palling ouer the banks, drowned all the countrie for the space of fix milcs about Lambeth, fo that none might get into Wacuminster hall, ercept they were fet on bootes

About the same time the king fent ouer into Eng. land to the archbilhop of Poske losd governour of the realme, to cause proussion of graine and bakon, to Diomion of the be connected over unto him, which he appointed to be taken out of the possessions of the archbishopsike of Canturburie, and other bichopaikes that were vacant, and out of other fuch places as fæmed to him god to appoint. Herebpon were fent ouer to him ten thouland quarters of theat, five thouland quarters of otes, with as manie bakons. Also there was sent 20 unto him great providion of other things, as cloth for awarell and liveries, but much of it perished in the fea by one meane or other, that little thereof came to his ble, who remained fill at Burdeaux to his great coff and charges, and finall gaine, fauing that he recovered certeine townes and holds there in Gas coigne that were kept by certeine rebels. At which time, bicause he was inclined rather to follow the 1 3 4 ? counfell of the Galcoignes and other frangers than terteinment, not regarding the service of his owne naturall people: he was maruelloullie euill spoken of here in England, and the moze in ded, bicause his fournie had no better successe, and was yet so hargeable onto him and all his fubicas. The Roble men that remained with him, as the earles of Lei ceffer and Salisburie, with other, were constrained to borrow no small summes of monie to beare out their charges : and fo like wife the king himselfe ran greatlie in oebt, by taking op monie towards the 40 disharging of his importable ervenses.

At length by mediation of fuch as were commit. hi face years. Coners a truce was concluded betwirt him and the Frenchking for five yeares, and then he returned toward England, but he arrived not there till the ninth of Daober, although the truce was concluded in Parch opon S. Gregozies day: for befive other oca callons of his state, one chanced by such strife and debate as role amongli the Balcoignes, which caused then he was alreadie imbarked, and had hoised his faile immediatlie to fet forward. He left in Buien for his lieutenant one Picholas de Queles or Poles, to defend those townes, thich yet remained buder his obeisance, for he put no great confidence in the people of that countrie, the which of custome being bered with continuall warre, were confireined not by will, but by the change of times, one while to hold on the French fide, and an other while on the English. In oced the townes, namelie those that had 6: their lituation opon the lea coaltes, were to destroied and decaied in their walles and fortifications, that they could not long be any great aid to either part, and therefore being not of force to hold out, they were compelled to obete one or other, where by their willes they would have done other wife.

This was the cause that the Is. of England, oftentimes open truft of these townes, which for the most part were readic to receive him , was brought into fome hope to recover his lottes, and chafelie for that he was to manie times procured to attempt his for tune there, at the request of the fickle-minded Poics tonins, who whilest they did sæke still to purge their offenfes to the one king of to the other, they vailie by new treasons besamed their credit, and so by such means the king of England offentimes with small advantage of none at all, made warre against the French king, in trust of their aid, that could, 02 (bpon the least occasion conceived) quickelie would do lit. tle to his furtherance. And to thereby hing Henrie as well as his father king John, was offentimes deceived of his vaine conceived hope.

In this feaverrand twentith years of king hen, ries reigne, diuerle noble personages departed this Death of Polife, and first about the beginning of Januarie, Der ble men. ceasted the load Richard de Burgh, a man of great honour and estimation in Ireland, where he held manie faire postessions, by conquest of that noble gentleman his worthic father. Also that valiant war. riour Hugh Lacie, who had conquered in his time a Hugh Lacie. great part of Ireland. Also the same pere on the seauenth of Paie, Hugh os Albenie earle of Arundell departed this life, in the middelf of his vouthfull peares, and was buried in the priorie of Wimunds ham, which his ancellours had founded. After his becease, that noble heritage was divided by partiti on amongs foure lifters.

About the fante time, to wit, on the twelith day of Paic, Hubert de Burgh earle of Bent departed this life at his manoz of Banffude, and his bodie was conneied to London, and there buried in the thurth of the Friers pleathers, but othe which Fre ers he had beene verie beneficiall. Amongst other of his owne subjects, and gaue buto them larger en 30 things; he gaue buto them his godlie palace at Westminster accoining nære to the palace of the earle of Cornewall, with the archbishop of Porke afferwards purchased . The monks of the Ciffeaux Fabian, were this yeare somewhat vered by the king, bicause they had refused to aid him with monic towards his Maub. Paris. tournie made into Balcoigne. Also the plas of the crowne were kept and holden in the towie of London. And in the night of the fir and twentith day of Stars fallen Julie, starres were some fall from the skie after a after a strange maruellous fost, not affer the common manner, but manner. thirtie or fortie at once, fo fall one after another and glanling to and fro, that if there had fallen fo manie verie farres in ded, there would none have being left in the firmament.

In the eight and twentith years of king Henries Anno Reg. 28. reigne, the queenes mother the ladie Beatrice count The countelle telle of Pronance arrived at Douer on the foures et Pronance teenth day of Pouember, bringing with hir the ladie mother to the Sancia hir daughter, and in the octanes of S. Par meth ouer ins him to returne to land, that he might pacifie the same 50 tine they were received into London in moft for to England. lemne wife, the firets being hanged with richcla thes, as the maner is at the coronations of princes. On S. Clements day, Richard earle of Cornewall the kings brother married the faid ladie Sandia, The earle of thich marriage was folemnized in most rotall wife, Cornewall and fuith fuch furnitudes feaffs and hanketings married to the and with such sumptuous scales and banketings, maried to the as greater could not be deussed. Finallie, the queens mother the counteste of Provance, being a right no. table and worthic ladic, was honored in enerie des gree of hir sonne in law king Henrie in most cours teous and lumptuous manner, and at hir departure out of the realme, which was after Christmasse, the was with most rich and princelie gists honourablie remarded.

> About the same time also, thereas William de william Be-Ralegh was requested to remove from the see of leghbishop of Poswich buto Winchester, and consenting therebu, Roswich. to, without the kings licence, obteined his confirma, tion of the pope: the king was highlie displeased therewith, bicause he ment it to another. Wherebye on when the faid William Kalegh was returned Beis confes from Nome to be installed, the king sent commander winchester winchester ment to the maio, and citizens of Wincheller, that by the pope, they should not suffer him to enter the citie. There.

by Arangers. spoken of.

mthe bing.

I truce taken

Picholas de Ducke his bpon he being to kept out, accurated both the citie and cathediall thurth with all the monks and others that favoured the prior, which had intruded himfelfe onelie by the kings authoritie, and not by lawfull election and means, as was luppoled.

De ffeleth out

De giaeth to

marks.

At length the faid bithop bpon greefe conceined that the king thenlo be to hearte lood onto him, got into a thip at London, and Itale alvaic into France, of the realme. there he was well received of the French king, and greatlie therished. Also he found such means that the pope in fanour of his cause wrote letters both to the king and to the quene, naming hir his colon, but thich wate that kindered thould come about , as vet it was never knowen. The bilhop to thew himselfe thankefull for such fremothip, gave the pope above for thousand marks (as is faid) and the pope bicause he would not be accompted a distainefull person, turned not backe one pennic of that which was to gentlie offered him. At length partlic at contemplation of the popes letters, and partlie by reason the bishop 20 bumbled himselfe in answering the articles which the king had objected against him in cause of the controuerde betwirt them , he granted him his peace, and received him into the land, reflozing to him all that had bene taken and deteined from him.

Martine the popes collec:

Porcover, in this meane while the pope trulling more than inough opon the kings amplicitie and patience, who indeed durff not in any cafe feme to bifplease him, had sent an other collector of monic into England named Wartine, not aborned with power 30 legantine, but furnished with such authorities and faculties as had not been heard of . He was lodged in the temple, where he thewed what commission he had to gather by the popes revenues, and to cract monie by fundic maner of meanes, and fo fell in hand therewith, bling no imall diligence therein, in to the great greefe and burt of conscience of manie: he had power to state the bestowing of benefices, till he was fatisfied to the full contentation of his mind. Benefices of Imali value he regarded not greatlie, 40 but such as were good livings in deed felt his heavie and ravenous hands extended towards them. De had power also to excommunicate, to suspend, and to punish all such as should resist his will, although ne uer fo wilfultie bent, in fo much that it was faid, he had fundate blankes bover the popes bulled feale, bf cause that opon the suoven he brought forth such as fæmed belt to ferue for his purpole. De vled this his brimeafurable authoritie to the ottermost, and there in did not forget his owne profit, but toke palfries 50 and other presents of religious men.

Tust to declare all the practices of this the popes agent, as it would be twlong and tedious a processe, so it is nothing Krange that these his landloping legats and Nuncios have their manifold collutions to coulen chillian kingdoms of their reuennes. For if they were not furnished with forlike fraud and woluith ranine, they were no fit factors for him; fith it is required that like maiffer haue like man. And man, his head and face ercepted, wherein he refens bleth a wolfe; before that, he is fet forth with a crofiers fraffe in his hand, at the hoke whereof hangeth his Judas purffe, therein are powched up his pilfe red Peter pence, and I wot not what ertorted pate ments and pretended duties . As for his deceits and crafts, he hath more varietie of them, than the cat of the mountaine bath spots in his skin, or the pecocke hatheies in his taile. Therebpon it is trulie faid of a late poet,

Antichefis de Christi & pape facinorb. sub ausydera nemo potest quot sunt numerare polorum, Quot neg vere nous gramina campus habet, Sic quog nemo potest vafri ludibria papa Eins & innumeros commemorare dolos:

Huse scopus immensum seducete fraudibus orbem, Huic (copus humanum budificare genus.

23ut to proceed, when men law such unreasonable The make conetonines and polling, by the popes procurement; complaint fome of the nobilitie of the realme, not able longer to the hings. beare it, cause to the king, and erhibited to him their complaint hereof, namelie for that the popes procucato: bestoined divers rith prebends and other roms in thurthes boon firangres knowne to be infamed for bluric, fimonie, and other heinous bices, which had notespect to preaching, nor to keeping of any hole pitalitie, for maintenance thereof their anceffors had given footh their lands to the inriching of the thurth, not meaning to have the same bestoined on fuch maner of persons. The strag vivoes new upar every it was shirth was told him, and therefore writ to the former, the page of his father in the page. fuch maner of persons. The king boder stood that truth The king pope in humble wife, beleeching him of his fatherlic care to take order for some redresse therein.

About this time the king began to renew his ima Polydon gination for the following of the warres against the Thebias French king, and therefore alked the admile of his ketherali councell hold be might best attempt the recourrie of him his way those lands in France which were wrongfullie detet agand in ned from him. The most part of all his ancient coun. from his cellors were of this opinion, that to make warre a gaine in trust of others aid , as had beene attempted to offen before without any profit, thould be no wife Dome, and therefore he ought either to forbearc, or cls to to promide himfelfe of potper fufficient, without trufting to the support of frangers, as he might be able with his owne putsance and force to atthine his enterprise, for otherwise his tranell should promue but vaine and to verie finall effect. The king perfuaded with these sound reasons, thought not goo to at tempt anything more touching the faid warre buadulcedie: and to the end it thould not be faid how he trusted in baine upon the aid of strangers, he can fed all such possessions as the Mormans beld in Eng. Eberth land to be confiscated, to the intent that as well the one of the Pozmans as Britons and Poictouins might well Comars binderstand, that he minded not from thenceforth to conficunt credit the falle promiles of rebels, as he that would now vie onelie the scruice of his owne people the Englishmen, which in respect of others painted promiles he had before contemned.

The occation that moved the king to to ditherif March. Pain the Pormans, old chefelie rife of the French kings The could be aling, who about the fame time calling to him all mans but those that had lands in England, required them ei bifhinia ther to flicke buto him inseparablie, either else to the king of England, lift no man might feructivo mai flers. Whereboon some forsaking their lands in England, lined on those which they had in France, and other forloke those livings which they had in France, and came over into England to line on those pollellons which they had here. But in the French kings dwings was no inforcing of men, either to for fake the one or the other: wherfore the proceedings of the king of England fæmed somewhat more intherefore he is aptile described in the likenesse of a 60 jurious, and partite sounded to the breach of the truce. Howbeit all was palled over without apparant trouble.

> Whilest all things were thus in quiet, and the Polycon king himselse not troubled with any outward wars, Manh. S., the Welshmen (who though they were subduced, yet Dand F. could not reft in quiet) received agains the formance of water David to their prince, the which for a policie deter, nethto mined himfelfe to make offer to the pope to holo his mithing land of him, yelding therefore yearelie unto him the fumme of five hundred marks (as is faid) to the end that under the wings of the popes protection he might thadow himfelfe, and be defended against all men. At length by large gifts of no finall fummes of monie be purchased letters of the pope in his fauour, to the prefudice of the crowne of England, as touch ing the right which the king of England had to the pominion of Whales, as by the tenour thereof it may appeare beginning as here infueth, Illustri viro domino Henrico Dei gratia regi Anglia, Oc.

Matth, Paris r19 880.

The wellh-

men discom=

Dauid fled in:

to Scotland.

he pronoketh

the king of

Scott to againft En-

The king of

teth Englad.

Matth.Paris.

Ring Denrie

gland.

fited. ,.

Thus Dauld bring incouraged herewith and luch o. ther of the Welthmen as twhe his part, at time ap pointed did let byon the kings capteins as they ftragled abroad, ithom at the first brunt they put to flight, and the mante of them here and there as they take i them at aducuture. The Englithmen ichen night was come, and that the Williamen withdrew to rest, essembled themselnes againe togither, and in the morning with new recovered force both of mind and bodie, cante upon the Welshmen, and began with them a new battell, which continued the space of thee houres togither, till at length the Wellymen, which rafflic had entred the fight, began to theinke backe. and fled to their wonted places of refuge, the woods and marches. Their chiefe capteine Daulo fled into 20 Scotland, having lost in that battell the most part of allhis fouldiers which he had there with him . At his comming into Scotland, and whileft he there remais ned, he incensed king Alexander against king Denric to his ottermost power, putting into his head how reprodutilie the Englishmen bid speake of the Scots, reprouing them of cowarones a lacke of fo math; also that they lived according to the prescript of the English nation, as subjects to the same: and manie other things he forged, which had beene able to 30 have moved a most patient man buto indignation and dilpleature.

finallie, either by the prouoking of this Daulo, or by fome other occasion, king Alexander meant to make warres bpon king Henrie indeed, and in rais ling an armie made a rode into England, and did fome hart by incurtions, and further fignified to king Penric, as some write, that he neither ought nor would hold anie part or portion of Scotland of the with purpoted in time to be revenged, and thostlie af ter called a parlement at Wellminster, in the which he carnefilie moved the loads and other faces to aid othis fabicas him with monie towards the furnishing of his coffers, being emptied (as they knew) by his creeding charges in his last fournie into Gascoigne. De would not open his meaning which he had to make warre to the Scots, bicause he would have his enterpisse secretlic kept, till he should be readie to set forward.

But although the king had got the pope to write 5 in his favour buto the loads both spirituall and tempotall, to aid him in that his demand of monie, there was much ado, and plaine deniall made at the first, togrant at that time to anie such paiment as was demanded: and efflones they fell in hand with denifing new orders, and namelie to renew againe their drailed by the luit for the confirmation of the ancient liberties of the realme, to as the fame might be observed, according ding to the grant thereof before made by the kings letters patents, without all fraud or contradiction. 60 They also amounted, that there thould be foure loods thosen of the most puissant and discreetest of all other within the realine, which thould be swoone of the hings councell, to order his butinesse justile and true lie, and to see that everie man had right without respecing of persons. And these source thiefe councels loss thould be ever attending about the king, or at the least their or two of them: also that by the view, knowledge and witnesse of them, the kingstreasure fould be spent and laid footh, and that if one of them thanced to fall awaie, an other flould be placed in his rome by the appointment of the relique.

They would also that the load chiefe instice and the lord hancellour thould be chosen by the generall vol-ces of the flates affembled, and bicaufe it was need full that they (hould be oftentimes with the king, it was thought they might be chosen out of the number of those foure above rehearled conscruators of intice. And if the king at anie time chanced to take the feale from the logo chancellour, what focuse writing were fealed in the means time should be of none effect. They admised also, that there thould be two in ffices of the benches, two barons of the ercheker, and one inffice for the Jewes; and thefe for that present to be appointed by publike voices of the flates, that as they had to order all mens matters and bulinelle, fo in their election the affents of all men might be had and given : and that afterwards, when been anic occallon there Chould be anie elected into the rome of anie of these inflices, the same should be amointed by one of the afore mentioned foure councellors.

But as the Pobles were bulle in the weekes space about the deutling of these oppinances and or ther, to have beene decreed as tratutes, the enimic of peace and lower of discord, the divell, hindred all these The pope sens things by the conetousnesse of the pope, who had sent derif ion some his chapleine matter Partin, with authoritie to les and of monie ute also an aid of monte for his need to mainteine to mainteine wars against his wars withall against the emperour; and the em the emperour. perour on the other part fent ambalfacours to the king, to frate him and his people from granting ante fuch ato but o the pope: so that there was no lesse hard hold and difficultie spewed in refusing to contribute bnto this demand of the popes Nuncio, than onto the kings. At length pet in another fitting, which was beaun thic weekes affer Candlemaffe, they agreed to Efcuage gras give the king escuage to run towards the marriage ted the king. of his eldelt daughter, of cuerie knights fee holden of the king twentie thillings to be paid at two fermes, the one halfe at Caster, and the other at Wichelmasse.

After this, the king mindula to inuade the Scots. caused the whole force of all such as ought to serve him in the wars to assemble, and so with a mightie king of England. King Penrie fore offended here- 40 hoft he went to new castell boon Tine, meaning from thence to inuade the fame, in revenge of fuch in an armic gofuries as the Scots had done tinto him and his fully eth towards iects, and namelie, for that Walter Cumin a mightie Bootland. baron of Scotland and other noble men had built two callels neere to the English confines, the one in Balowaie, and the other in Louthian, and further had received and succoured certeine rebels to the king of England, as Weffrey de Parish of Parcis an J. riff man, and others. The king of Scots was advertifed of king Denries apport, and therefore in defense of himselfe and his countrie, had raised an huge armie. Perebpon certeine noble men bpon eis ther five, foxie to understand that fuch bloudshed should chance as was like to follow (and that byon no great awarant cause) if the two kings soined battell, twhe paine in the matter to agree them, which in the end they brought to passe, so that they were made The king of freends and thelie reconciled. There was a publike England and Scotiand instrumentalso made thereof by the king of Scots made france. bnto king Denvie, figned with his feale, and like wife with the seales of other noble men, testifieng his alle giance which he ologht to the king of England, as fix periour loed, in forme following.

Che B. With

The charter of Alexander king of Scotland made to Henrie the third.

Lexander Dei gratia rex Scotia, omnibus Christi sidelibus hoc scriptum vifuris vel audituris, salutem. Ad vefram volumus venire notitiam, nos pro nobis & haredibus nostris concessise, & fideliter Aai.

Lem orders

Unreasonable requeds.

promisisse charissimo & ligio domino nostro Henrico tertio Dei gratia regi Anglia illustri domino Hibernia, duci Normania & Aquitania, & comiti Andegauia, & eius haredibus, quòd in perpetuum bonam fidem ei seruabimus , pariter & a-morem. Et quod nunquam aliquod fædus iniemus per nos vel per aliquos alios ex parte nostra, cum inimicis domini regis Anglia vel haredum suorum, ad bellum procurandum vel faciendum, unde 10 damnumeis velregnis suis Anglia & Hibernia, aut cateris terris suis cueniat, vel possit aliquatenus cuenire: nisinos iniuste grauet: stantibus in suo robore conventionibus inter nos & dictum dominum regem Anglia initis vltimo apud Eboracum in prasentia domini Othonis tituli S. Nicholai in carcere Tulliano, diaconi cardinalis, tunc apostolicæ sedis legati in Anglia. Et saluis conuentionibus super matrimonio contrahendo inter filium nostru & filiam dıcti dominiregis Anglia.

Et vt hac nostra concessio & promissio pro nobis & haredibus nostris perpetua firmitatis robur obtineant, fecimus iurare in animam nostram Alanum Ostiarium, Henricu de Baliol, Dauid de Lindescy, Wilhelmum Gifford, quod omnia pradicta bona fide firmiter & fideliter observabimus. Et similiter iurare fecimus venerabiles patres, Dauid, Wilhelmum, Ğalfridum , & Clementem fancti Andrea Glasconiensem, Dunkeldensem, Dubline- 30 sem episcopus: & præterea Malcolmum comitem de Fife, fideles nostros, Patricium comitem de Dunbar, Malisium comitem de Strathern, Walterum Cumin comitem de Menteth, Wilhelmum comitem de Mar, Alexandrum comitem de Buchquhan, Dauid de Hastings comitem de Athol, Robertum de Bruis, Alanum Ostiarium, Henricum de Baliol, Rogerum de Mowbray, Laurentium de Abirnethia, Richardum Cumin, Dauid de Lindesey, Richardum Siward, Wilhelmum de Linde-40 sey, Walterum de Morauia, Wilhelmum Gifford, Nicholaum de Sully ,Wilhelmum de veteri Ponte, Wilhelmum de Brewer , Anselmum de Mesue, Dauid de Graham, & Stephanum de Suning am.

Quòd si nos vel haredes nostri, contra concessionem & promissionem pradictam (quod absit) venerimus, ipsi & haredes corum nobis & haredibus nostris nullum contra concessionem & promissionem predictam auxilium vel consilium impen- 50 dent, aut ab alys pro posse suo impendi permittent. Imò bona fide laborabunt erga nos & haredes nostros, ipsi & haredes eorum, quòd omnia pradicta à nobis & haredibus nostris nec non ab ipsis & eorumharedibus firmiter & fideliter observentur in perpetuum. In cuius rei testimonium tam nos quam pradicti pralati, comites & barones nostri presens scriptum sigillorum suorum appositione roboraumus. Testibus pralatis, comitibus & baro- 60 nibus superius nominatis, Anno regni nostri, &c.

The same in English.

Lexander by the grace of God, king of Scotland, to all faithfull christian people that shall see or heare this writing, fendeth greeting. We will that it be knowne to you, that we for vs and our heires haue granted and faithfullie promised to our most deare and liege lord Henrie the third, by the grace of God, the noble king of England, lord of Ireland, duke of Normandie and Guien, and earle of Aniou, and to his heires, that we will beare and keepe vnto him good faith and loue for euer, and that we shall not enter into any league with our felues, or by others in our behalfe with the enimies of our faid souereigne lord the king of England, or of his heires, to procure or make warre, whereby any damage may happen to come to them or to their kingdoms of England and Ireland, or to their other lands, except vniustlie they doo molest and oppresse vs. The couenants alwaies standing in force, which were concluded betwixt vs at our last being togither at Yorke, in the presence of Otho decon cardinall of faint Nicholas In carcere Tulliano, then legat of the fee apostolike in England, and fauing the couenants made upon the contract of the mariage betwixt our sonne & the daughter of the faid king of England.

And that this promile and grant for vs and The time our heires may have the force and confirmation of an everlasting assuredness, we have caufed these to sweare on our behalfe: Alan Porter, Henrie de Balioll, Dauid de Lindesey, Wil. Gifford, that we shall in good faith obserue all the premisses faithfullie and substantiallie, and we have likewise caused to sweare the renerend fathers, Dauid, William, Geffrey, & Clement, Bishops of S. Andrewes, Glascew, Dunkeld, and Dublane : and furthermore our faithfull fubiects Patrike earle of Dunbar, Malcolme earle of Fife, Malifius earle of Stratherne, Walter Cumin earle of Menteth, William earle of Mar, Alexander earle of Buchquhan, Dauid de Hastings earle of Athol, Robert de Bruis, Alan Porter, Henrie de Balioll, Roger de Mowbraie, Laurence de Abirnethi, Richard Cumin, Dauid de Lindesey, Richard Siward, William de Lindesey, Walter de Murraie, William de Gifford, Nicholas de Sully, William de Veipont, William de Brewer, Anselme de Mesue, Dauid de Graham, and Stephan de Suningham.

And if that either we or our heires, against the foresaid grant and promise, shall doo anie thing to the breach therof (which God forbid) they and their heires shall not imploie either aid or counsell against the said grant and promise, nor shall suffer other to imploie any such aid or counsell, so far as they may hinder them therein: yearather they and their heires shall in good faith and plaine meaning endeuour against vs and our heires, that all the premisses may firmelie and faithfullie be observed and kept of vs and our heires, and likewise of them and their heires for euer. In witnesse whereof aswell we our selues, as the said prelats, our earles and barons have confirmed this writing by putting their seales vnto the same, the prelats earles and barons before rehearfed beeing true witnesses therevnto, In the yeare of our reigne,&c.

The leales of king Alexander himselfe, of Willi am de Brewer, William de Aetpont, William de Lindeley, Stephan de Suningham, and the leales of the rest were let to afterwards, and the writing lent ouer to the king of England at Chailfmalle nert inluing, by the prior of Tinmouth, who had travelled die ligentlie and faithfullie in this negotiation to the honour of both parts. This writing also was fent to the pope, that he might confirme the same in mannec as followeth.

A request made to the pope that he would wouch safe to confirme the forefaid charter.

Anctisimo in Christo patri I. Dei gratia summo pontifici, Alexander eadem gratia rex Scotia, comes Patricius, co-Imes de Strathern, comes Leuenox, comes de Anegui, comes de Marra, comes de Atho- 10 lia, comes de Ros, comes de Catnes, comes de Buth, Rogerus de Mowbray, Rogerus de Abirnethia, Petrus de Mauuere, Richardus Cumin, Wilhelmus de veteri Ponte, Robertus de Bruis, Rogerus Auenel, Richardus de Sully, Wilhelm.de Murray de Dunfel, Wilhelmus de Muref de Petin, Iohannes Biset iuuenis, Wilhelmus de Lindesey, Iohannes de Vallibus, Dauid de Lindesey,Wilhelmus Gifford, Duncanus de Ergatilia, I.de Matreuers, 20 Hemerus filius eius, Rogerus comes Wintoniensis, H.comes Oxoniensis, W. de Vescy, Richardus Siward, Wilhelmus de Ros, Rogerus de Clere, Henricus filius comitis de Brettere, Eustacius de Stoutville, Malcolmus de Fif comes de Mentethshire, Walterus filius Alani, Walterus Olifar, Barnardus Fraser, Henricus de Bailliol, Dauid Cumin, Dauid Mareschallus, Dauid filius Ranulfi, Wilhelmus de Fortere, Ioannes de Bailliol, & Robertus de Ros, salutem & debitam cum omni ho- 30 nore reuerentiam.

Sanctitati vestra significamus, nos sacramentum corporaliter præstitisse coram venerabili patre Othone, tituli S. Nicolai in carcere Tulliano diacono cardinalium, in Anglia, Scotia, & Hibernia, nunc Apostolica sedis legato, ac chartam nostram confecisse, que ita incipit : Sciant prasentes & futuri, quò dita conuenit in presentia domini Othonis Sancti Nicolai, &c. Que charta penes dominum 40 regem Anglia, & nos remanet chyrographata. Item aliam que sic incipit: Ad omnium vestrum notitiam volumus peruenire. Cum vt ex forma pracedentium nostrarum pateat obligationum Subiecimus nos iurisdictioni vestra, vt nos & haredes nostros, per censuram ecclesiasticam possitis coercere, si aliquo tempore contra memoratam pacemvenerimus.

Etsi nonnunquam continget, quòd quidam no- 50 strum omnes vel unus contrauenire temer è prasumpserint vel prasumere nituntur vel nitentur; ex hoc tam animabus nostris quam haredum nostrorum graue possit generari periculum, & corporibus nostris & rebus non minimum immineret detrimentum: sancta paternitati vestra supplicamus,quatenus alicui suffraganeorum archiepiscopi Cantuariensis detis in mandatis, ot nos, & hæredes nostros ad prafata pacis obseruationem compellat, prout in instrumentis inde confectis plenius 60 ting set our seales. continetur. Alias super eadem pace quod canonicum fuerit anctoritate vestra statuat contradictores, &c. Et ad istius petitionis nostra consummationem prasenti scripto sigilla nostra appositimus.

In English thus.

Che letter of the loson to Pope Inno=

O our holie father in Christ I. by the grace of God, the highest bishop, Alexander by the same grace and of Leuenox, the earle of Stratherne, the earle of Leuenox, the earle of Angus, the earle of Mar, the earle of Athole, the earle of Ros, the earle of Catnesse, the earle of Buch,Roger de Mowbray, Laurence de Abirnethie, Peter de Mauuere, Richard Cumin, William de Veipont, Robert de Bruis, Roger Auenel, Nicholas de Sulley, William de Murray de Dunfel, William de Murray de Petin, Iohn Biset the yoonger, William de Lindesey, Iohn de Valeis, Dauid de Lindesey, William Gifford, Duncan de Ergile, Iohn de Matreuers, Eimere his sonne, Roger earle of Winchester, Hugh earle of Oxford, William de Vescy, RichardSiward, William de Ros, Roger de Clere, Henrie Fitz conte de Brettere, Eustace de Stouteuille, earle Malcolme of Fife, the erle of Mentethshire, Walter Fitz Alaine, Walter Olifard, Barnard Fraser, Henrie de Baillioll, Dauid Cumin, Dauid Mareschall, Dauid Fitz Randulfe, William de Fortere, Iohn de Bailioll, and RobertRos, send greeting and due reuerence with all honour.

We doo fignifie vnto your holinesse, that we haue received a corporall oth before the reuerend father Otho, deacon cardinall of S.Ni-cholas In carcere Tulliano, legat to the see apostolike, in England, Scotland and Ireland, and haue made our charter or deed, which beginneth thus; Sciant prasentes, &c. Which charter or deed indented and sealed, remaineth with the king of England, and with vs. Also another deed or writing that beginneth thus; Ad omnium vestrum notitiam volumus peruenire. Whereas therefore by the forme of our precedent deeds obligatorie, we have submitted our felues to your jurisdiction, that you may bridle and restraine vs, and our heires by the ecclesiafficall censures, if at any time we go against the faid peace.

And if it happen at any time, that any of vs all, or one of vs, shall fortune to presume rashlie and vnaduisedlie to go against it, or be about, or herafter shall be about so to presume, and therby may procure great perill as well to the foules of our owne selues, as of our heires, & no small danger may also be readie through the same our default to light vpon our bodies & goods, we beseech your holie fatherhood, that you will give in commandement vnto fome of the suffragans of the archbishop of Canturburie, that he doo compell vs and our heires vnto the obseruing of the same peace, accordinglie as in the instruments thereof more fullie is conteined, or else to order by your authoritie vpon the same peace, that which shall be agreeable to the canons, &c. And to the performance of this our petition, we have to this prefent wria

When all things were throughlie concluded, and order taken in what fort the affirmances of this accord thould patte, the king of Scots returned into the inner parts of his realme, and the king of England likewife returned to London. At the same time also, The welling the Welthmen were verie busse; so hearing that men three coles. the kings of England and Scotland were agreed, they doubted least all the burthen of the warre would be turned against them. Wherefore (as it were to prenent the matter) they began to wall the English confines. The king advertised thereof, sent Hubert Fitz Patthew with their hundreth knights or men of armes to defend the English marshes against the Welshinen, that mave vailie war against those that owelled on the marthes, and namelie againft the erle of Derford, which chaffie occasioned this warre, by octeining the land which americance onto the wife of prince Dauld, as in the right of hir purpartie.

Mauh.Paris.

Wherebyon when the Welfhmen bnockfood that the king had broken by his armie and was returned to London, they invaded their enimics, namelie the faid earle of Berfords men and the Portimers, flear ing and cutting in pieces two valiant and noble i knights, and maining the third, they flue and over threw of the forbands about an hundred, so that all the English armie was disordered, and the Wielsh men with victoric returned to their places of refuge. Which when the forelaid Unbert Fitz Hatthew buderstoo, the morrow after he made forth with his thic hundled waged men of armes, in hope to hem in and take the Welfhmen at advantage: but he was prevented and by them diffrested, in so much that he was confireined with lotte of men and horfes to 20 returne to his holds, and scarse could be suffered to remaine there in lafetie. This yeare Bafe Beuill bithop of Ciceffer and chancellour of England departeo this life.

In the 29 years of his reigne, king Henrie having fpent much treasure with the great preparation of wars which he had taken in hand against the Scots, and also bicause he was constrained to be at further charges for the Taelth wars, he called a parlement being generallic benied of all men, he eraded it in received a banished man, one Walter Bukerell into their citie, contrarie to the law and oder: but this they denied, affirming that his brother had got his pardon, as by the kings owne letters patents they was bnder age then thefe letters were purchafed, and therefore were of none effect. About the faine uarre, got the vidozie in battell. ¶ About the mioff

On S. Hughs daie died Pargaret counteffe of 5

Penbroke the widow of Gilbert Parfhall late earle of Penbake, tafter to the king of Scots, and Mort lie affer the bishop of Erceffer William de Brewer likewife deceased, as pet being in his florifying age,

a man in manners, parentage, and knowledge right honogable, and highlie commended. In the daise of S. Parcellus was the quæne belinered of a man child, which at the font was named Comund.

could prome, but they were answered, that the king 40

The Deceaffe of the billiop of Cicefter.

Anno, Reg. 29.

to begin on the third daie of Pouember, in the which 30 the richer fort. he demanded a great reliefe of monie, but the fame

Matth.Paris. particular of the richer fort of his fubieds, amonal The citizens other he caused the citizens of London to give buto him 15 hundred marks for a fine, bicause they had

The fenehall of Gal- time, fir Picholas de Polis or Pules senethall of coine banquis Gascoigne, having warres against the king of Bathed the king as Matt. West. with a maruellous butenmerat leason for the space faith, 4 Matth. of 15 daies togither, as a figne of some milfo, tune to

1245

In Lent following nere to the castell of Younts gomerie in Wales, the hundred Welthmen were 60 flaine by them that lay in garrifon there by a policie of the capteine, which faining a counterfeited flight, diew the Welthmen within danger of an ambuly, which he had lato to furpille them unwares as it came even to palle according to his denife. David that toke himfelfe for king of Males, coueting to be renenged of this displeasure, scalled not date nor night to make incursions and to exploit enterpises to the damage of the marchers, the which valiantlie relifted the enimies, and drove them offentimes into the mounteines, wods, bogs, and other places of refuge, and offentimes the enimies having the advantage of place, did much displeature to the Euglishmen. Upon a time as they (being got to the heigth of an bill, to cast downe stones and theolo darts bronthe Englishmen that affailed them beneath) chanced as mongs other to flea with a mightie stone (which they thick downe by the fide of the hill) fir Pubert Fitz Sur him Patthewa right vallant knight, and a man of great Fitz 91: accompt for his knowledge and fertice in warres, thew flam Thus the wars continued betweene the parties, and offentimes the Welfinen by the ludden inualions got the better : their prince Daulo comming to the castell of Wonthault besieged it, and within a short time wan it, flaieng or taking all those whome he Checant found within it . The owner thereof the lood Roger Monthaut de Aonthault by chance was not at home, which hap taken by the pened well for him, where other wife he had beene in withman great danger : but neere to the castell of Pountgo merie, the Wellhmen yet were efflons overthrowne and 200 of them flaine by an ambuth that bake forth boon their backs. About the middelf of Lent the vielats of England were summoned to come to a generall councell, the which pope Innocent had appointed to be holden at the featt of S. John Baptill A general nert following.

At chanced that about this time, a post comming The popular from the pope with letters to his Nuncio maiffer titters fan Partin, conteining instructions how he should procoofor the gathering of monie, was fraice at Douer, by the practice of such noble men as were greeued to fee anie such summes of monte to be conucied out of the realme in lost as was bled . He was had into the castell and his letters taken from him, where in such secrets were contesned for the getting of mos nie, as ought not to have beene reuealed. Paiffer Partin hearing that the post was thus staicd and imprisoned, made a granous complaint buto the king, so that the post was set at libertie, had his letters to him reflozed, & fo came buto maffer Partin, and delivered them buto him that he might buderstand the popes pleasure, which others to his griefe understood now as well as himselfe.

The king this yeare caused inquisition to be made The balants through euerie countie within the realine, to under, of beneficis stand the true valuation of all such benefices and lot received rituall promotions as were in the hands of ante in frangers. cumbents that were frangers borne, and such as had beene preferred by the court of Kome, and the inhole summe of all their revenues was found to be firtie thousand marks. On Whitsundaie the king made the earle of Glocester, Gilbert de Clare Chis 6th knight, and 40 other young gentlemen that attended bert wasn't byon him. And perceiving by the late inquisition Hersday that great recognized the homogeneous that great revenues the beneficed frangers had iogoof Cim and possessed within the realme, and againc consider ring the erceding great fammes of monte which the court of Kome had reconered of his subjects, he began to detelf fuch covetous dealing. And herebyon a letter was deviced by the whole bodie of the realme, therein were conteined, the fundate extoations and manifold eractions of the popes legats, and other of his chapleines, which biver colour of his authoritic they had bled. There were amointed also togo with Amballed thefe letters buto the generall councell, certaine hos fent to the so nozable and discreet personages, as Roger Bigod neral come cell. c las, with other, the which prefenting the fame letters but othe fair allemblie, thould beclare the greefe of the whole realme; and require some reducife and ease. ment therein.

Moreoner, it chanced that there was a great number of loods, knights, and gentlemen allembled a infis and togisher at Dunstable and Luiton, to have kept a tognicappar martiall justs, and triumpant tognic, but they had tick, and brite a countercommand and the first the history and the history a countercommandement from the bing, not to go manbement forward with the same : inhereupon, when they were disappoints.

disapointed

Dauto king or prince of wales.

foulse fitz mandeth the the realme.

The kings

Matth Paris.

out of the

anlwer bn

dilappointed of their purpole heerin. Apon occasion of their being altogither, on the morrow after the feat of Peter & Paule , they fent from them Fouke Fit; Warren, to beclare buto mailler Partine the popes Nuncio, as then lodging at the temple in London, in name as it were of all the whole bodie of the realme, that he thould immediatlie depart out of the land. foute dwing the mellage fomethat after a rough manner , maifter Martine afked him what he loas that game forth the fair commandement, or whether he spake it of himselfe or from some other. This commandment (faith Houke) is fent to the, from all those hnights and men of armes which latelie were at sembled togither at Dunftable and Luifon.

Pailer Partine hearing this, got him to the court, and declaring to the king what medlage he had receiued, required to binderifand whether he was privile to the matter, or that his people twhe it boon them fo rashlic without his authoritie or no . To whome the king answered, that he had not given them any aw thozitie so to command him out of the realine : but inded (faith he) my barons ow fcarfelie forbeare to rife against me, bicaule I have mainteined and fuffered thy pilling and infurious polling within this my realme, and I have had much ado to faie them from running boon the to pull the in peces . Paiffer Martine hearing thefe words, with a fearefull voice belought the king that he might for the love of God, and renerence of the pope, have free pallage out of the realine: to whome the king in great displeasure anfwered, The divell that brought the in carrie the out, 30 even to the vit of hell for me. Howbeit at length, when those that were about the king had pacified him , he amounted one of the marthals of his house, called Robert Porth or Pores, to conduct him to the lea lide, and lo he did, but not without great feare, lithens he was afraid of everie buth, least men should have rifen boon him and murthered him. Wherebpi on, when he came to the pope, he made a græuous complaint, both against the king and others.

D.Peterg church at wellminfter.

come to the

threaten the hould not have any tri= England.

The durch of faint Peter at Wellminster was 40 inlarged, and newlie repared by the king, speciallie all the east part of it, the old wals being pulled down, mo builded by in moze comelie forme. The generall councell, according to the fummons given, was hol-The English denthis yeare at Lions, there it began about midfummer, in which the English ambassadors being ar rived, presented to the pope their leters, directed from the whole bodie of the realms of England, requiring a redrelle in luch things, where with (as by the lame letters it ameared) the realme found it felfe fore and noied. The pope promised to take adule therein, but fith the matter was weightie, it required respit. Fis nallie, when they were earnest in requiring a beterminate answer, it was given them to understand, that they Gould not obtaine their defires, wherebyon the English in great displeasure they came awaie, threatening and himping their increasing the other. and binding their words with oths, that from thence, forth they would never paic, nor luffer to be paid, as nie tribute to the court of Kome, not permit the reuenues of those churches, whereof they were par 60 trones, to be pulled awaie, by any prouttion of the faine court.

The pope hearing of these things, passed them over patientlie, but he procured the English bishops to set their seales unto that charter, which king John had made concerning the tribute, against the mind of the archbishop of Canturburic Stephan Langton, tho at that time, then king John Chould seale it, spake soze against it. When king Henrie was informed hereof, he was granualie offended; and fware in a great chafe, that although the bishops had done otherwise than they ought, yet would be stand in defense of the liberties of his realme, and would not fo long as he had a day to line, paie any outie to the court of Rome, under the name of a tribute. In this meane while, the hing with a pullant armic invusion the Welth rebels, to reduce them to some Manh. Paris. quiet, whereas with their continual including and other exploits, they hardine harried heire, tind was feet the Lines of the kings fillifeits. Deredjon the king being entred the countrie, in. The king in-naded the lane, but the entires of Smowdon, and nades wates there he began to build a fleging eastell at a place call acastell at led Gannohe, remaining there about the Prace of Gannohe. ten weeks, during the which, the armie luffered great milerie through want of vittels and other proutlions namelie apparell, and other helps to befond themfelues from colo, which fore afflicted the fouldiers and men of warre, bicause they late in the field, and winter as then began to approch . Poreover, they were driven to keepe watch and ward verie fronglie, for doubt to be surprised by sudden attaults of the enimies, the which wat ched byon occasion ever to do forme mildbæfe.

ne mugere. The morrow after the Purification of our ladie, The percent Isabell de Boulbec countelle of Drenford departed of the countelle this life, and like wife the morrow after faint Vialent telle of Dr. tines day died Baldwine de Rivers earle of Des tozd, and of uonshire and of the Wlight. Pozeoner, Bettrey de the earle of Parch, a man sometime of great honour and postel Geffrey de fons in Freland, after he had remained long in er: March De= ile, and fuffered great milerie, ended the fame by na cealeth. turall death. Also Kaimond earle of Provance, father to the quienes of England and France deceased earle of Provance deceased this yeare, for thome was kept in England a most gance. folemne oblequie . Also in the weke after Palme: The deceate fundate, bied a right noble baron, and warden of of the load the north parts of England, the lood Gilbert Hum. Dumfreute. frentle, leaving behind him a pong fonne, the cultodie of whome the king forthwith committed to the earle of Leicester, not without the indignation of the earle of Comewall, who befired the fame.

Finallie, after that the king had lien at Gannoke Anno Reg. 30. about the fortifieng of the callell there, the space of ten wekes, and falo the worke now fullie finished. he appointed forth such as thould lie there in garifon, anotherewith, on the morrow after the feast of Sie mon and Jude, he railed his field, and returned towards England , leaving the Welfhmen in great Che king' re= milerie, and like to farue for want of necestarie fod. turneth forth For the Ile of Anglesey, which is as a nurse to the of water. Welchmen, those Irithmen that came to the kings froied Inaid, had otterlie walted and destroied. Againe, the gleley. king of purpole had confumed all the proution of come and vittels which remained in the marthes, to that in Chelhire, and other the parts adjoining, there was such dearth, that the people scarle could get fuf, & dearth. ficient vittels to fulfeine themselves withall.

The king allo gave forth commandement, that no provision of corne or vittels Bould be conucied buto the Welfhinen, out of any parts, either of England Beinepits! or Ireland, on paine of forfeiting life , lands & gods. deffroied in Mozeover, he caused the brine pits in Wales to be wales. stopped up and destroied. The king having thus orde: The 1020 red his bulinelle, returned into England, and thoat lie after , taking displeasure with the load Paurice, of Ircland. thefe inffice of Ireland, bicause he had not made fuch speed as had beene convenient in bringing the Irishmen to his aid, he discharged him of the office of cheefe tuffice , and placed in his rome John Fitz John Fitz Beffrey . In this thirtith peare of king henries Geffrey load reigne, Walter earle Parthall and of Penbroke infice of J-Departed this life: and thoulie after, to wit, the reland. Dates before Chiffmalle, his brother Antelme that Match.Paris. Che becerfe fucceeded him in the inheritance, deceased also with of water rise out iffue: and fo all the fine formes of the great earle Sparthall, William Parchall, being departed this world with out heires of their bodies begotten, the whole heri tage descended to the listers, and so was divided as mongs them as coparteners.

The king this yeare held his Christmas at London, and had there with him a great number of the nobilitie of his realme, which has beene with him in TClales, that they might be partakers of passime, mirth and pleasure, as they had beine participants with him in luffering the dileales of heat, cold, and other paines abroad in the fields and high mount 10 teines of Wales, confidering with himselfe as the truth is) that

Mal. Pal.in Гио сар.

French king

to make war

pope therein.

of Daouance

lic with the in law.

vita est qu'am proxima letho, Qu'am merito spernenda animam si mulla volupeas Mulceat at g leuent solatia mulla laborem.

But that no plefure thuld patte without fome fraine of greefe, there was a rumor fried abroad, that the pope conceived fresh rankoz in his Comach against the king and realine of England, for the complaints which had been exhibited in the councell at Lion by 20 the English orator, for the opposition done to the church of England that therebyon, minding now to The pope res be revenged, as was faid, he earnefflie moved the French king to make warre against the English men and to subdue them bover his dominion : which against Eng= enterprise the French king otterlie refused, both for that he and the king of England were colens, and againe, bicause the king of France had no suff title

The French king refuletb 02 right to make claime to England. to gratific the Further, there was as then a truce betwirt Eng. 3 land and France, and before that England could be fubdued, much giltleffe bloud thould be fuilt. Allo, the christians in the holie land were fore oppelled, and loked dailie for the arrivall of the king of France, and therefore he would be loth to attempt any new enterpaire to hinder his ioanie thither. Hut about the feall of the Spiphanie, other newscame out of Piouance, that troubled the king of England toosle than The countelle the other before, as thus, That the counteste Beatrice his wines mother had delivered by the countie of 40 beateth ontult Provance into the French kings hands, togither king of Eng- with listeene callels, which in right of the quæne land hir fonne ought to have remained onto the king of England. For the late keeping wherof to his ble, the laid count telle Beatrice had received pærelie for the terme of five peares last past, the summe of foure thousand marks of the king of England, and pet now in the delivering of them, with the relique of the countrie buto the French king, the never made any mention of his right.

Shortlie after allo, Charles the French kings brother maried the ladie Beatrice, youngest daughter of carle Raimond, and had with hir the fame countie of Charles the Frenchkings made earle of 1910mance.

The archb. of Canturburic prirchafeth grant of the pope to lenie monte,

Wouance, and fo was intituled earle thereof, as in the French billogie appeareth. Pozeouer, the archbis hop of Canturburie procured a grant from the pope to reconer for one years the first fruits of all cures that chanced to be boid within the citie, diocelle, and provance of Canturburie, by and during the tearme of leaven yeares then next following, till the fumme 60 of ten thouland marks were levied, towards the difcharge of the faid archbillious debts. The collection of the which ten thousand marks was assigned by the popes bulles unto the billyop of Pereford, who Mould also leavie two thousand marks of the renenues belonging to the church of Canturburie, to be conuerted to the same ble. The king at the first was soze offended here with, but thortlie after, he in is vacified and to the arthbilhop had his will.

Danid mince of wates de= partetly this

After this about the beginning of the nert fpzing, Dauid prince of Wales departed this life , after great pentifenelle of mind, for the destruction and miscrie into the which his countrie had beene brought through the present warres with the Englishmen. After his decease, the Wielthmon elected to lucceed in his place, the fonne of Griffin, thom king Henrie 3p Griffin bad reteined in fernice, and bonourablie bled, euen choicin paint of a chilo: but now that he heard that the Talelihmen of wake, bad elected him to their prince, he stale away, and fled into Wales. In the day of the purification of our ladie, a robberie was committed byon certeine Jewes at Drenford, for the which fact, five and fortie Irms robin of the offendors were put in prison, but at the suit of in Drenty, Robert bishop of Lincolne, they were delinered by the kings commandement, bicause no man impeathed them of anie breach of peace, or other crime. The citizens of London also about the beginning of the Interpretation, were compelled to paies talage, where with talage. they found themselves spreaggræved.

About the miodelt of Lent, there was a parle 3 parlement, ment holden at London, überein diverle fatutes and ordinances were douised, as penalties for those that offended in other mens parks and warrens: but the cheefest occasion of assembling this parle Assume ment, was to take adule in matters touching the gainthum græfes therewith the church of England læmed to be oppelled by the pope and the court of Rome. The pope indeed to quiet the English ambassadors, and to put the king and realme in some god hope of releefe and deliverance out of fuch oppetitions, as were opened but o him in the face of the thole conncell, dia not onelie promife largelie, but allo caufed diverfe printleges to be made and delivered buto the laid amballadors berie fanorablie, in the behalfe of their request. But yet the same not with standing, lith the breaking op of the fato generall councell, and return to the amballadors, manie things were done, to the increaling and continuation of the former grafes, lo that they flood in doubt of further oppellions to follow rather than in hope of the promiled redrette. Herebpon they concluded efflones to write buto the pope, and to the cardinals, both in name of the king, of the bilhops and prelats, of the earles, barons, and other estates of the tempozaltie, and of the abbats and priors. In the meane time, the pope for a while comewhat relented in the point of bestowing benefices here in England, for when any of his freends 02 kinfmen was to be preferred to any benefice within this realme, he would fue to the king for his grant and god will, that fuch a one might be admitted, and not fænæ of himfelfe to grant it without the kings

The earle of Sanop in the prefence of the archbis The earle of 50 Mop of Canturburie, and the bithop of Pereford and Sauvy both others, oto homage to the king of England, acknow, homage to the ledging to hold of him certeine fæs, as thole of Sule, k. of England Auillian, S. Paurice de Chablais, and the castell of Bard, which he might well do, not preindicing the right of the empire, lith he held nothing of the same empire, except Aigues and the pallages . This peare, Roger Bigd the office of the earle Parthall was given to Roger intitled with Bigod earle of Posthfolke, in right of his wife the countesse, that was eldest daughter buto the great earle William Darshall . Pozeoner, in this yeare Manh Paris the king holding his Caffer at London, honozed Has Harolakus rold king of Man with the order of knighthad . A of Man. bout the same time, diverse noble men of Wales coincidents submitted themselnes, and were received but the bings peace, kings peace. In faint Parkes day was a great boon their frost and snow, which niped the leaves of trees and submillion. hearbes in fuch extreame toile, that for the more part they withered and faded awaie.

Furthermoze, bicause the pope bnderstoo, that die uerle rich beneficed men were of late dead in Eng. land intestate, as Kobert Hailes the archdeacon of Lincolne, Almerike the archdeacon of Bedford, and John Hotospe archdeacon of Posthhampton, Idecra d he ordeined a decree, that all such spiritual pers the popt.

Cons

ions as died intestate, their gods should remaine to the pope. The erecution of which occree he command bed to the friers preachers and minors : but the king would not lufter it to take place, bicaufe he fain that it (hould redound to the prejudice of him and his hingtome. Wherein the popes of zellion and widing offered to the dead (by whose becease their surviviling frænds thould be benefited) and his cruell courtoul nes extending to the verie fenfeles copple doth maof comparison, Carniuorax tumidu vt gaudet by ana fepülehru, Sic instat putidu ille cadaueribus.

Alfo, where the pope required a talage of the clerite, the king flatlie forbad it by his letters inhibitorie. In this meane while, William Powis chapleine. and fir Henrie de Lamere knight, which were fent with the fecond letters, deutled in the late partement (as you have heard) to be preferred onto the pope and carbinals, returned againe without obteining ante 20 towardic answer, but rather (as they declared) they ce found the pope tharp and rough in fpech, lateng, The king of England which now kickely against the durch, beginnesh to place Frederiks part, hath his ce counfell, & fo likelvile haue I, which I intend to follow. Other answer they cold not obteine. Againe, the Englishmen that were lutors in the court of Rome, were strangelie bled, and could not get anie dispatch in their businesse, but were rather put backe as schilking called a parlement at Windhoffer, to have the abuile of his loads in this matter, where how wever they agreed, proclamation was immediatlie fet forth, and published in everie thire & countie through the realme, that no man fould confent to the popes contribution, noz fend ante monte out of the realme to his aid. When the pope heard of this, he wrote be rie tharplie to the bithops, commanding them on paine of ercommunication and fulpention, to fatiffie his Nuncio remaining at the new temple in Lone 40 don, before the feath of the Allumption of our labie. And whereas the king minded to have thoo in the matter through threats of his brother the earle of Cornewall, and of certeine prelats, namelie, the bi thop of Worceffer (who had authoritie as was faid to interdict the land) he pieloed and suffered the pope

On S. Margarets daie, there fortuned a maruel lous fore tempest of haile, raine, thunder and light- 50 ning, which being univerfall through the realme, did mud hurt, a continued the space of 16 houres togt ther without ceating. This piere, fundite noble perfor sings mother nages departed this world, as Isabell the kings mo parish this ther, wife to the earle of Parch in Potaou. Also, the countesse of Albemarle, the daughter of Alaine of Valloway, and lifter to the countelle of Winchester: therebpon, a great part of Gallowaic that belonged to hir (for that the vied without iffue) remained to Ro-Amucheller, ger de Quincie earle of Minchester, that married 60 the clock litter. Poscouer, John losd Penill died this yeare, with has beine thiefe forretter of England: but he was not onelie put out of that office for certemetransgressions, but also out of the kings fanoz before he vied, where (at first) none was more estes med in the court than he. The bilhop of Salifburie, named maffer Robert de Bingham, died also this peare, and fir Richard de Argenton knight, a right noble personage, which in the holie land had shewed god profe of his high valiancie, manhod, a proweffe: likewife fir Henrie Bailfoll of the north, and diverte to have his will, to the great griefe and discomfort of

In the beginning of the one and thirtish years of king Henries reigne, the pope fent into England to have the third part of one peares profit of eneric beneficed man that was relivent, and of everip one not resident the one halfe. The bishop of London thousa have lene this ato and collection leuted burit would not be granted. And in a parlement called this pears 1247 on the morrow after the Paristication of our ladie, it Matth. Paris. was orderned, that new letters lealed with the come mon seale of the citie of London thould be sent by fufficient mellengers, from all the effaces of the nifellie apeare, lo chat it is berified of him, by wate 10 realme, buto the pope and caroinals, requiring a mo deration to be had in luch cracions as were intolle cracions. rable for the realme to beare. Whilest this parlement pet laffed, there came ouer the logo Deter of Sauoy Peter de Sa earle of Richmond, bringing with him certein young up earle of ladies and damiels, to be bestowed in marriage on Richmond. fuch young loods and gentlemen as were wards to

On S. Calentines even a great eaufiquate hap In carthpened bere in England, and namelie about London, quake. on the Thames lide, with the which manie buildings were overthowen. These earthquakes, the seloo nier they chance in England, the more decadfull the same are anothought to signific some great alteration. A little before this earthquake, the Tea had ccalled from ebbing and flowing for the space of three mo a frange neths togither, by a long trad nære to the Englith wonder. More, to the great maruell of many, for either it flowed not at all, or else so little that it might not be perceined. And affer the earthquake, there followed fuch Continuall matikes, and with rebukes reculed. Hereupon the 30 a leason of foule meather, that the spring semed to be raine, changed into winter, for fearle was there anic paie without raine, till the feath of the translation of S.

There were at this time diverse ordinances de Aas made to creed and enacted by wate of prohibition, to reffreine refraine prethe authoritie of spirituall persons, as that no eccle- sumptuous fasticall judge thould betermine in causes of anis authentic of temporall man except fourthing causes of matrices, the spirituals tempozall man, except touching causes of matrinto tie. nie and testaments. They were also prohibited to fue anic actions touching tithes, before ante spiritu all fudge, and the writ whereby they were prohibited, was called an Indicanie. Sundzie other fuch ozdinane ces were deviled, which for bræfenelle ive omit. What fræd og answer so ener the messengers had that were Cent to Rome with the letters denised in the late par. lement, truth it is, that the pope fent over into Eng land fuch of his agents as gathered no small fums of monie amongst the cleargie, as one Parinus, and an other named Johannes Anglicus a frier minoz, the which were not intituled by the name of legats, A thift by fore to faue the privileges which the king had, that no le bearing the name of legat, gat might come into the realine without his licence. The comming over of these men, bicause it was to gather monie, contented not manie mens minds, as well appeared in a parlement called at Drford a bout reformation thereof, but yet notwithstanding it was there agreed, that the pope thould have eleven thousand marks to be levied amongst them of the Chiritualtic, erempt persons and places referued.

About the same time, Baldwine naming himselfe The emperor emperour of Constantinople, came againe into of Constantis England, to procure some new aid of the king, to nople comwards the reconcrie of his empire, out of the which meth into England. he was was expelled by the Grækes. ¶ Alfo, there arrived in England a cardinall that was bithop of a cardinall Sabine, having first received anoth, that he came cometh into not for anie hurt to the king or his realme, tor ouners ceining an oth wife being a legat he might not be suffered to enter not to prefus not for anie burt to the king or his realme, for other. England, rethe land : he came this wate to patte ouer into Poy dice & realme. waie, whither he went to crowne and annoint Hacon king of that realine. There arrived here with The kings him the thee halfe beetheen to the bing, Bup de Lu haife beetheen cignan, William de Halence, & Athelmarca preff, king. with their lister Alice. All these were begotten by

1411.653 Intollerable

3783 2430

The popest collectors.

Dugh

A fore tempelt

manie.

3 proclama:

tion inhibis

Mabell the

Roger de Quincie carle

Acuili depar= with diverg other. Anno Reg. 31.

Dugh Bulnearle of Parch, of quane Isabell the kings mother, and were therefore totfullie received of the king, with faithfull promile, that he would be to them a beneficiall god brother, which his falengs with effectuall deds he after fullie performed. The caromall having faluted the king, toke leave of him and came to Lin, where he fraice at the point of thee Che caroinall moneths, making luch purchale amongst religious men, that what by procuracies and other thiffs, he got as was thought, a foure thouland marks towards 10 his charges, and to departed. Comund Lacic earle of Lincolne, and Richard de Burgh, as then water to the king, were married buto two of those young ladies of Pronance, which Peter de Sauop earle of Afthmono brought ouer with him, whereat manie of the English nobilitie gringed.

Allo, about the thirteenth of August, the lavie Jone brother. The same lavie was heire to hir fathers 20 daughter to the lord Guarine de Ponchencie, was married buto William de Clalence the kings halfe lands, by the death of hir brother the some of the said lozo Quarine. Sir William De Bucies knight a

Rozman bozne, was made fenethall of Balcoigne about this fealon, and was loze vered with wars by

Caffon the sonne of the counteste of Bierne and o thers, which Galton the wed himfelfe berie buthankes full for the king had given both to him and to his mother (a woman of a monitrous fature) berte large interteinement to ferue him in his wars at his laft be ding to the grant which he had purchased of the pope) that he hould have the first fruits for one years, of e-ueric benefice that chanced to be vacant within the fante plonince. The earles of Cornewall and Pen-broke got much monie by waie of a collection, to wards the reliefe of the warres in the holie land, has ning purchased of the pope certains buls of indulmothers five vico at London, during the time of the holic bloud of Chaiff (as it was then supposed) the wed in most reuerent wife in a solemne procession, for the king comming to the church of S. Paule in London, received there the fame bloud conteined in a that falline glasse, the which he bare buter a canopie the abbeie thurch of Westminster. His armes were also supported by two loods as aids to him all the waie as he went. The matters of the Templers and Hospitallers had sent this relike to the king. To de fcribe the whole course and order of the procession and feast kept that daie, would require a speciall treatife.

But this is not to be forgotten, that the same date the bilhop of Poswich preached before the king in commendation of that relike, pronouncing fir years and one hundred and firtiene bates of parbon, granv 60 supported with foure flaves, through the firets, buto 50

On the thirteenth of October was a postion of the ing in that countrie (as before ye have heard,) The 30

william de Clalence mal ricth lozd baughter.

maketh fhift

for monm.

Galton de 281 erne maketh war against the kings heutenant.

Dixilis of the archbishop of Canturburic suspended the pices of Canturburie his province, bicause they would not consent (accor-Lufpended.

'n

Sir fouke be Newcastell liant knight, and colen germane to the king on the the kings co: fen by his mother beparteththis-

parlement.

Pardon gran ted by the bilhops there present, to all that came to ted by bilhops

Enights mede.

reuerence it. Also the same daie and in the same church, the king made his halfe brother William de Malence, and die nerse other young bachelers, knights. Unto the said Milliam de Clalence, for his further aquancement and maintenance, he gave the castell of Hertford, and the honor therto belonging, with great treasure: e to the elder brother Guy de Lucignan, which about the fame time returned into France, he game berie great and honocable giffs, lading his fumpters with plate and treasure of sterling monie, which in those daies in all countries was verie much estemed. The Anno Reg. 32. carle of Minchester remaining in Gallowaie, where he had faire possessions in right of his wife, was be. Chetake fregred of his otonic tenants, within a callest inherein windeding the longer, and being in danger either to die theory school famine, or else at the ofference of the trimites, be discovery burth forth, and making way with his function escaped, names. and comming to the king of Scots, complained of the intuite done to him by his people, where pon the king toke such order, that the rebels were philithed, and the earle let in quiet possession of his lands a Coward the latter end of Pouember, William william william will earle Forrers t of Derbie departed this life, a man fring be of great years and long troubled with the gout, a parish the title man and a year eable. The lame month the round telle his wife bled allo, a woman of yeares bertue and fame like to hir hilliand: Thomas Briset the archbillyop of Canturbuite did minuser the pricis office at their marriage. Their eldeft forme William fucceded his father in the earledoine, a god man and a offcræt, but vered with the gout verie pitifullic, ha ming that dileale allo as it were, by inheritance from his father. There vied likewife other of the nobilitie, as Kichard de Burgh, and William Fitz Ham. Be atrice the countesse of Pronunce mother to the 1248 quiene, and Thomas de Sauoy late earle of Flare The countes bers, came into England to billt the king and quene of Populant and were honocablie received, and at their departure commechina backe towards home, richlie rewarded. This yeare England. in the octanes of the Purification, a parlement was 3 parliment holden at London, where all the nobilitie of the realme in manner was prefent, There were nine bithops, as the archithop of Poske, with the bithops of Whinchester, Lincolne, Postoich, Worcester, Chie cheffer, Elie, Rocheffer and Carlell, with the earls of Cornemall, Leicetter, Mincheller, Hereford, Porth folke, Drford, Lincolne, Ferrers, and Warwike, with Defet de Sauop earle of Richmond, besides loods and barons. The archbilhop of Canturburie was at the court of Rome, & the bilhop of Dureline was lefted by fickenette.

gence for the fame. Sir Fouke de Petwcaffell a ba- 40 In this parlement king Penrie carnellie requir A Continue red a lubilitie, in reliefe of the great charges which he manded. had diverle waies lusteined, therebpon he was Polydon preightwaies by the pieces of the realme noted both of couetoulnette, buthankfulnette, and breach of promile, bicante he neuer ceaffed gathering of monie, without regard had to his people: and where he had promised manie things, as that he would not be burdenous buto them, and such like; he had performed verie little of those his gate promises. Manie miloco meanors, and wrongfull boings, to the greenance of his people were opened and laid before birn, as ther The king rithing and inriching of Arangers, to bing his piero charges in gatines to largelie, to the great decate a hinderance hisim of the common-wealth. The king abather herewith, and supposing that the confession of his fault should make amends, a alwage the displesure which his pos bles and other had conceived at his milgovernance, to content them all with one answer, he promised that he would reforme all that was amisse, and so quieting the minds of his barons, the parlement Thepsilon was propoged till the quindene of the nativitic of S. propoged. John Baptiff. Wherein his prudence and wiscoome was to be commended, but his patience deferueth er ceding great praise, whereby he thewed himselfe princelike-minded, in that he could tollerate the epprobration and calling of his faults in his face, even by such as thould rather have concealed than disclofed them: wheras it had food with his rotaltie to have given them the counterchecke, and in angrie mod to have tamed their malapertnelle: but that be prout dentlie considered that

Turpia verba furor, verbu en surpibm enis

Rixa,ex hacoritur vulnus,de vulnere lethum : –patientia virtus,

Qua quicing, caret, careat probitate necesse est. Qui nil ferre potest, hominum commercia vitet.

Inquiric

made for was there & clip:

Matth. Paris.

About the same time, by reason that the sterling In optinance monie was generallie fo cliped, that the infcription was cut off for the most part even to the inner circle. a proclamation was let forth, that no peces thereof Mould palle from one to an other, not be received as current and lawfull monie, except the fame were of 10 full weight and fathion. Derewith also inquirie was made for those that had so defaced it, and sundrie Jewes bankers, and cloth-merchants of Flanders were found giltie. Allo, the French king caused ferch to be made within his realme for the fame offendors, persofmonie. and luch as were found giltie, were hanged, so that he was more feuere in punishing those fallifiers of the king of Englands coine, than the king of England was himfelfe.

The parlement began againe at the day appoint 20 ted, but nothing to accompt of was then concluded, but rather a displeasure kindled betwirt the king and his barons, for that they loked for a reformation in Cheparlemet his dwings, and he for monie out of their coffers, thich would not be granted, and so that parlement The king but brake by . The king herebpon for want of monie, uento fell his was differ to so hard a thiff, that he was confireined to fell his plate and tewels (which the Londoners bought) so much to his hinderance, that divers peces (the workemanthip whereof was more worth than 30 the value of the Auste (were fold not with Aanding after the rate as they weied.

D: Edwards

This yeare, the king caused a faire to be kept at faire at well Welfminffer at faint Cowards tide, to indure for fifteene daies, and to the end that the fame thould be the moze haunted with all manner of people, he commanded by proclamation, that all other faires, as Clie, and such like holden in that season, should not be kept, noz that any wares thould be the wed within that fuch as would fell, thould come for that time bri to Wellminster: which was done, not without great trouble and paines to the citizens, which had not rome there, but in boths and tents, to their great disquieting and disease, for want of necessarie provision, being turmosled to pitifullie in mire and dirt, through occasion of raine that fell in that buseau fonable time of the yeare. The bishop of Elie complained fore of the wrong done to him by fuspending his faire at Elie afozelaid.

Air Bichard ead dand. Meth.

Death of bilhops.

Incchipfe. Dewcastell rnt by ca-

Sir Kichard Sward vied this yeare, after he had laten a long time bered with the palite, which fir Kithard had in his daics beene a right worthie and famous knight. There died also the bishops of Bath and faint Daulds. In the first day of June, the mone immediatlie opon the letting of the funne, was almost wholie eclipled, so that little of hir might appeare. The fowne of Pewcastell vpon Tine was almost wholic consumed with fire, togither with the The archb. of bridge there. The archbithop of Canturburie remai-East currect, ning fill with the pope by his procurator the deane of Beauueis, denounced all them accurated which went about to impeach him of receiving the first fruits of benefices that voiced, which he had by the popes grant, the king and quene, with their children, and the kings brother the earle of Cornewall onclie ercepted out of that curife.

There chanced another earthquake foure daies Inerthquake before Chaiffmaffe, namelie in the west countrie as bout Bath and Melles, which thoke and overtheto some buildings, speciallic the tops and summets of freples, turrets and chimnics were thaken ther with, and not the bales or lower parts. In Challmalle following, the earle of Leicester returned out of Balcoigne, where he had beine as generall against Batton de Bierne, thome he had so affliced and put to the worse, that the same Gaston was glad to suc for an abilinence of warre, where before he had done much hurt to the kings subjects. The fair earle hav allo with the aid of the kings subjects appehended an other rebell, one William Bertheam De Egremont who had done much hurt in the parts of Gascoigne, and in the confines there, whome he had left in pillon within the calfell of the Rioll.

This yeare a little before Camblemas, the bishop The bishop of of Durham being a man of great yeares, by licence figneth his obteined of the pope, religned his miter, referring to bishoppike. himselfe onelie thee manoes, Houeden with the appurtenances, Stodon and Guerington. The bing having the last years received of his subjects a denie Manth Paris, all of a generall subsidie to be granted him, practiced The king this peare to get some relecte at their hands, in calegemonie. ling each of them apart : but first he got two thou fand marks of the citie of London, and after fell in hand with the abbats and priors, of whome he got fomethat, though fore against their willes. By occafion of two merchant frangers of Bebant, which chanced to be robbed about the parts of Winchester, whilest the king was there, boon their importunate fult and complaint, there was a great neft of thenes I neft of broken, amongst the which were manie wealthie ver, thenes broke, fons and freholders, fuch as bled to paffe on life and death of their owne companions, to whom they were fauourable inough you may be sure : also, there were some of the kings feruants among it them . A bout thirtie of those offendors were appehended, and put to erecution, belides those that escaped, some into fanduarie, and fome into voluntarie erile, running out of and otterlie for saking the countrie. About Caster, the archbishop of Kone came over The archbish into England, and dwing homage for fuch reuenues of Rone. as belonged to his thurth here within this realine. had the fame restozed buto him . In June there fell Mauh. Paris. the citie of London, either in thop or without, but 40 luch abundance of raine, speciallic about Abington, that the willow trees, milles, and other houses stand. ing neere to the water five, were borne nowne and ouerfurned, with one chapell also: and the come in the field was to beaten to the ground, that bread made thereof after it was ripe, læmed as it had bæne made of bean.

About the same time, William de Longespe carle The carle of of Salisburie, and Robert de Mér, with other Eng. Salisburie & 50 uing taken on them the croffe, went into the holie land, the said earle being their chefe capteine, and had so prosperous speed in their somie, that they ares ued fafe and found in the chiffian armie, there (the French king being chefe thereof) they were received infullie . But pet (as Matthew Paris miteth) the Matth Paris. pride and distaine of the Frenchmen was so great, that boon spite and envie conceived at the English mens glorie, which bare themselves right worthilte, towards the the Frenchmen vico the Englithmen nothing Englithmen, frændlie; namelie the earle of Arras Aicked not to speake manie reproductil words against the said William de Longespee and his people, whereat they could not but take great indignation.

Also the same season, the earle of Leicester, who had likewise received the crosse, deferred his tournic for a time, and failing into Galcoigne, mightitie there subdued the kings enimics, as Gaston de Bierne, also one Rusteine, and William de Solares. This peare died Peter de Beneure, a Pouancois boine, Peter de Bes thome the king had preferred in marriage buto the ladie Waud, daughter and heire of Walter Lacie a man of faire possessions in Freland. Of which marris age there came iffue a fonne and a daughter. Alfo a bout Thissuntide died a noble baron of the north

Durham res

Great raine.

The Spite of parts.

The decease garts, named the lood Roger Fitt John, whose sonne of Roger Fitz and heire being yong, was given in wardhip to John.

The death of hugh le 252un.

holic hand.

Anno Reg. 24. The archb. of clus was intheonized at Canturburie, and kept a for Canturburie lemne feast, at the which the king and quæne, with the 10 inthiomisco.

I tornie hol= cen at Bracks den at Bracklep, therethe earle of Gloceffer (conlep,01 (as fome travie to his accustomed maner) favoured the part of copies haue) at Barklep.

1250 Comond fon to Richard Svail bozne.

An amballage fent tothe pope.

Cheking taketh on hun

the croffe.

and monie in baine. On the 6 of Parch being fundate, the king take bpon him the croffe, with his brother de Tlalence, and a great number of other Poble men, and among & other the abbat of Burie, to the pecindice (as was 40 thought)of his oader. Roger de Monthauit, abaron ger de Apont: of great honour, meaning verelie to go in that four hault. nie, to reconcr monie towards his necessarie furnt ture, let and fold the most part of his livings . His woods and pollellions, which he had about Couentrie,

William de Clalence the kings halfe brother. Also this yeare Hugh earle of March, father to the fame

William de Walence died in Cipies, whilest the French armie wintered there, as then going into the

In the feath of All faints, the archbishop Bonifas more part of all the prelats of the land were present.

About this featon was a great tornic and fulls hole the Crangers, whereby they prevailed. In formuch that William de Clalence hantled one sir William de Doingestelles verieroughlie, the fame fir William being a right worthie knight. About the same time, the counteste of Cornewall at Berkehamsted was about the beginning of the spring, the kings brother the earle of Cornewall with other Poble men of the realme, as the earle of Gloceffer, Denrie Hallings baron, a Roger Murkebie, went ouer into France in princelie arraie and furniture to bilit the pope, who held his court ftill at the citie of Lions. The biftop of Lincolne also and the bilhop of Wlozceffer went this ther. For what cause the other went, it was not openlie knowne. But the bilhop of Lincolne went this the Templers, Hospitalers, and such other which had appealed from him to the court of Kome, where he could not bying his purpole to palle, for his adverlaries with monie had purchased the sudges fauour.

And to the billiop returned, having spent his teauell ther about such businesse as he had in hand against 30 deliucred of a fonne named Comund. This yeare 20 he fold and let to fee farme buto the couent there. The like thieuance was made by fundrie noble men, which prepared themselves to go in that fournie. Cipon the 27 day of Appill those that had taken on them the croffe, affembled at Wermondley belides

London, to treat of their fetting forward, betermiring that the same should be at Wichumnier next: but by the popes letters which the king procured, they were commanded to state till the king himselfe went. Thus their fournie for that time was difap pointed. There was of them and their retinues that meant thus to have gone, fine hundreth knights, befides promen or demilances and other common fouldiers in great numbers. Saffon de Bierne was fo driven to his thists by the high prowesse of the earle 60 nateth himself of Leicester, that in the end he was constreined to come over into England, and lubmit himselfe to the king, wom he found at Clarendon, where he gat fuch mercie at the kings hands, that he was pardoned and reflozed to his lands. But the earle of Leb The earle of cester put the king in possession of the castels of Letcelter his Fronfacke, Egremount, and others, and banished Kullein, and William de Solares, with diverse o ther flubbonic and diffoiall rebels, depaining them to the king.

The billhop of Lincolne.

Gaston de

Cervice in Galcoigne.

Bierne fuh=

of their lands and inheritance in that countrie. The bishop of Lincolne did ercommunicat a per li within his diocesse, that was accused of incontinencie. And bicause the same press continued for tie daies without feeking to be reconciled, the bishop

fent to the Chiriffe of Kutland, within whose bailb wike the fame prest divelled, to apprehend him as a disobedient and rebellious person : but the Chiriffe winked at the matter, and would not execute the bis thops commandement, wherebpon the bithop did alto cresmmunicat the thiriffe: thereof the king being informed, twhe displeasure, and sending to the pope, procured an inhibition, that no archbiffop no: In inhibition bithop thould compell anie officer belonging to the thekingof king to follow anic fuit afore them, for those things the pope, that apperteined to the kings jurisdiction, or give sen tence against them for the same.

The mondaic before the Regation weeke, Richard the kings brother earle of Cornetvall, returned from Checate of the court of Kome, where he had been about certaine turneth from turneth from businesse viknowie to most men: but whatsoeuer the pope, the same was, the pope gave him most courteous and honozable interteinement for his welcome, and made him great cheare during his abode at Lions, where the popes court as then laie. • About this fealon, the la. to rio himfelfe out of debt, wherein he was indangered to certeine merchants, lessened the charges of his houshold, and kept but a meane post, diminishing even the accustomed almeste of the Theking by pare, and also the great number of tapers and lights tech to bring in his chamen, to that he was noted with the blame bindelicous of twinuch niggardie sparing and pinching: but in that he discharged his debt to the merchants, he was thought to do wiselis and charitablie, for that he would not fee them hindered to whom he was so indebted; belides the opinion that he had concerning himfelfe, namelie that Profectum faciunt rarum ques debita stringunt.

About the same time also, he caused the Zewes to The Tend give butohim a great postion of their goos, to that confirmed to they were greatlie impouerished. There was one of helpe the king them named Aaron bozne in Dozke, the which fince the kings laft returne out of Gascoigne, had paied to the king the fumme of thirtie thousand markes, Marth. Paris over and besides two hundred marks which he had given to the quene, as the fame Aaron protested to Marthew Paris, opon his faith and truth which he bare to his law. In the Whitsunweke was a generall Hapter holden of the friers preachers at London in thepter of Holbogue, where out of sundzie parts of the world friero plate were affembled about fourt hundred of them, and thers. they had meat and drinke found them of almelle, bis cause they polletled nothing of their owne. On the first daie the king came into their chapter, that he might be partaker of their praiers, and found them meat and drinke that day, and dined there with them, to do them the moze honour. Another day the queene likewise fed them, and afterwards the bishop of London, the abbats of Meliminiter, S. Albon, and Wal tham, with others. About the fance feafon the citizens of London March, Patis found themselves greeved verie soze, soz such liber twict the fies as the king granted to the abbat of Walfmin doners and ster, to the great hinderance and decaie of the fran- the abbat of thises of their citie. The maioz and communaltie re wellmindit lifted all that they might against those liberties, and finallie by the good helpe and favour of the loads, as the earles of Cornewall and Leicester, they obtained their purpole. This yeare maiffer William de litte william M kennie, a fober, faithfull and learned man, was made killicinue heeper of the great feale. The same years boon in quilition made by Geffrey de Langley, one of the kings councell of transgressors in forrests and chafes, manic that had offended were presented, and most grænoulie punished by impulonment, fines, and erceeding great amercements, and namelie in the north countrie.

On the ninetænth of Paie died Robert de Ler. Lernitorio inton clearke, the which having continued a long partit the biocnteg på time life.

The lord Hen ric Maltings biother mabe billiop of win= The earle of Balifburie flaine by the daracens.

rime in the office of a judge, purchaled to himfelfe great fame, and also most large postestions. But cer, teine pæres before his death, bicaule he was diseased with the palite, he gave over that office, and drew himselfe into a quiet trade of life, so ending his dates in praires and dwing of almeldeds. About the feat of S. Pargaret died Penrie Pallings a noble ba-Bobert Dal: ron, and one Robert de Pulchampe aman of great renowine in the north parts. Also Walter bishop of Ithelmarte Minchester departed this life, about the feast of S. 10 Batthew, in whose place (through the kings earnest fuit)his halfe brother Athelmare was promoted to fucced. Pozeouer, in the east parts, that valiant erle of Salifburie William de Longespee, with Robert de Mer, and others, was flaine in that bufoztunate battell in the which the Saracens vanquished the chillian armie, and toke Lewes the French king palloner. On the first day of Daober, the mone boon hir to thew tokens of the great tempest of wind that followed, which was so huge and mightie, both by land flea, that the like had not bene lightlie knowne, and fildome or rather never heard of by men then as live. The fea forced contrarie to hir naturall course.

flowed twice without ebbing, yelding fuch a rozing noise, that the same was heard (not without great wonder) a farre distance from the shore. Dozeover.

the same sea appeared in the darke of the night to burne, as it had been on fire, and the waves to ffrive and fight togither after a maruellous fort, so that the mariners could not denife how to fave their thins where they late at anchoz, by no cunning noz thist which they could denife. At Hertburne thee tall thins perithed without recoverie, belides other fmaller bel fels. At Minchelley, befores other burt that was done in bridges, milles, breakes and banks, there were thee hundred houles, and some churches drow ned with the high riling of the water course. The land in Flanders, suffeined inestimable damage, and in manie other places; by reason that rivers beaten backe and repelled (by the riling of the fea) swelled so high that they overflowed their chanels, and much

3 mightie wind.

Mutth Paris.

The lea lec:

Ships loft. Hertburne. winchelley.

hurt was done in medowes, bridges, milles, and boules. Anno Reg. 35. Che practile About the beginning of the five and thirtith yeare of king Henries reigne, the bilhops of England, bnderstanding that the archbishop of Canturburie was about to purchase of the pope a grant to gather 50 monie through his whole province of the cleargie and dis purpole people for fynods and procuracies, they thought to preventhim, and therefore made a collection everic one through his owne diocette, of two pence in cucrie marke which any beneficed man might bilpend, which monie to collected, they ment to imploie about tharges in the popes court, for the state of the archbi thops luit, that the grant thoulo not palle.

About the same time, to wit, bpon saint Lucies

Inerthquake n D.Fibons,

to disappoint

day, there was a great earthquake at S. Albons, and 60 in the parts thereabouts with a noise bnoce the ground, as though it had thundred. This was frange and maruellous, bicause the ground there is chalkie and found, not hollow not loke, as those places be there earthquakes for the most part happen. Doues, rwhes, and other birds that fat byon houses, and in boughes of trees fearing this Arange wonder, flicks red by, and fine to and fro, thewing a token of feare as if a golhauke had beene over their heads. The this licence pope required by folenme messengers sent to the king of England, that he might come to the citie of Burdeaur in Salcoigne, there for a time remaine. The king will not well what answer to make, for loth he was to denie anie thing that the pope hould require, and agains he was not willing for fundite respects, that the pope thoulo come to nece buto him. Indeed, manie were in doubt, least if he came to Burdeaur, he would also come into England, and The popes rather impairs the frate thereof than amend it by prefere more his presence. With hy first hypers and licentians is like to impaire his presence, sith by such voucers and licentious li than amend ners as belonged to him, the realme had alreadie things. bæne fore corrupted. Howfoeuer the matter went, there was delate and fuch means deutled and made, that the pope came not there at that time.

Dn Chilimalle day in the night, great thunder and lightning chanced in Posthfolke and Suffolke past measure, in token as was thought of some cuill hightening. to follow. The king kept his Christmasse at Wintheffer, but without any great port or liberalitie, for hospitalitie with him was greatlie laid aside. About this time, Buy de Lulignan the kings halfe brother came over into England, affet his returne out of the Guy be Lung holie land, and was of the king toifullie received. To nan brother to hange, amearing creeding red and fwelled, began 20 wards the relæfe of his expenses made in that tour, the bing. nie, the king gave him five hundred pounds which he got of the Jewes. Pozeoner, he gave to his brother. Deffrey the custodie of the baron Hastings lands, and to by such liberall and bounteous gifts as he beflowed on them and other firangers, he greatlie incurred the hatred of his naturall people the Engliffmen.

On the day of the Cpiphanie, the earle of Leices The carle of fer came to the king in great half out of Balcoigne Leicelter regluing him to binderstand, that the Bascoignes were revolted in luch number, that if spécoie succour were not provided, the whole countrie would fall from the English subjection . Herebyon the king furnished him with monie, and the earle himselfe got all that De had of the he could make of his owne revenues, and likelyise marks. of the Amfreuilles lands, the heire thereof he had in custodie. De made no long abode, but with all speed returned, and reteined two hundred Rutters out of Rutters, the duke of Brabants countries, and with them cercountrie of Holland beyond the fea, and the marify 40 feine crosbowes. These were eger souldiers, and bloudie, but yet the Balcoignes prepared themselues to relift them all that they might: howbeit the earle put them fill to the worfe. Before his last returne from thence, he had raced the cattell of Frontacke flat with the ground, and likewife left desolate the castellof Egremount. About this lealon, one of the kings fuffices named Ainflice acca Henrie de Bath fell in the kings displeature, bicause teo for taking he was accused that he had not exercised his office bribes. bpzightlie, but to his owne privat gaine, and perver, ted instice through bribes, opon occasion of a suit moned betwirt him and one Euerard de Trum pington: he was appealed of fallhood and treason by Sir Philip Darcic linight. His wife was of kin to the Ballets and Samfords, the with procured him great frændship at the hands of the earle of Comes wall, and of John Pansell, and other of the bings councell. But for all that they could ow, he was in great danger to have lost his life at the parlement holden that yeare, and begun on the firteenth day of Februarie. For the king was to fore moured against him, that he caused proclamation to be made, that if any man had any thing to late against the fato Henrie de Wath, they Mould come forth, and their infor mation thould be heard. Herebyon diverse came and presented their complaints, and amongs other, one of his owne fellowes, that was a fuffice also, occlared that he had luffered an offendor convict, to escape bupunished, for a bube, which he received to the preludice of the king, and the danger of his affociats the other inflices, whereas it is required of one put in trust with the administration of lawes, to be bucoze rupt and found in indgement, according to this true polition_

1 3 5 7 whunter and

Indicio

Penrie De Wath put

tohis fine.

Italien est rectime munere nec prece flech.

The king herewith role op in a great fume, and ce faid openlie: If any man will flea Henrie of Bath, ce he thall not be impeached for his beath: for 3 Don here plainelie declare him acquit and guiltleffe for " the fame . Percloth directe would have run boon him to have immocreo him, but that John Manfell Claico their outrage, thewing them that the king might well berafter repent the woods which he spake thus in his furie, and those that should do any vio r lence onto the man, were not like to escape punish ment: for both the billiop of London would fuerlie accurse them, and other of his frends would not faile to fiche reuenge by temporall force; and thus was Denrie of Bath in the kings high displeasure for the time. Dowbeit at length, through intercellion of the earle of Comewall, and the billiop of London, be mas put to his fine, and pardoned.

About the same time, Athelmare the kings halfe 3thelingre o: brother was confirmed bishop of Wainchester by the 20 Domare bi pope, although he was thought scarselic sufficient to thap of win: chefter con= have the place, for lacke of learning and ripe yeares. firmed. About this time also, the bishops assembling at Dun-3 connocatió of the bishops. If able, twhe adulfe togither, how to prevent the archbishov of Canturburie, that he should not visit: and in the end they concluded to fend their procurator onto the court of Rome, to trie that purchase might be made there for monie to faie the licence, and not to Riche for the diffurting of foure thousand marks. if ned required. Their procurator did so much in the matter, that he found the pope fauourable butohis cause, though no determinate answer was given of a long time, till at length, to gratifie the archbilhop and his kin, as the buke of Dauop and other, the pope granted him licence to bilit, but not generallic : for he might not visit anie parish church, except the perfon required him thereto. And whereas he had liber: tic to vilit concentuall churches, pet might he not re-

Six thouland ceive for procuracies about foure marks. For this merks ginen moderation to be had, the procurator for the biftiops 40 to the pepe.

gave onto the pope fir thouland marks.

Che billion of teth abbeics.

water fubicat to the English lawes. Mlain logd Joneth.

pope,

Marers cal:

The same years the bishop of Lincolne visited the Lincoine bilis religious houses within his diocesse, to binderstand what rule was kept amongst them, bling the matter formethat firstile (as they thought:) for he entred into the chambers of the monks & fearched their beds. And comming to the boules of the nuns, he went fo nere as to cause their breaks to be tried, that he The history of might understand of their chast livings. In Lent Lincolne fuf- following he was suspended by the pope, bicause he 50 pended by the would not lufter an Italian that had no skill of the English tong to intoy a prebend in his durch, which the pope had given to the fame Italian. In this fear fon. Wlales was brought to be subica buto the English lawes, and that part which wineth to Cheshire, was committed to the cultodie of Alain lood Zouch, the which game, for having of the profits thereof to farme, i hundjed marke, and fuplanted logd John Craic which thould have had it for fine hundred. Cer ieme viurers and ftrangers borne called Caorlini, 60 had bought faire houles at London, and to remained there as inhabitants, occupieng their trade without controlment, for the prelats durft not speake against them, bicause they alleged themselves to be the mers chants of the popes highnelle: and the citizens durit not trouble them bicause they were defended by certeine noble men , whole monie (as was faid) they oc enpied, to gaine after the manner of the court of Rome. Dowbeit at length they were called before the civil magifirate by the kings procurement, and grienoullie accused for their bulatufull occupiona of blurie, and lome of them committed to pulon, the refidue hid themselves out of the way, till at length for a fumnie of monie they were licenced to be at rest.

and to continued for a lentoir. We Jelves reinifed hereat to have fellowes with them in their mileric.

In this leason also there depended a controvertic Contract betwirt the sichbillop of Canturburic with the be betwire thop of London and his canons of Paules; so that lais. the faid billion of London , the deane of Panics, and other of the camons were errommunicated. But the billyop percentage which wish the twoold went reconciled himfelfe: as for the deane, he flood long in the matter, attempth went himselfe to the pope to biter his greefe. This controverte banged long betimirt them, and was handled in such wife, that taie-men laughed at their doings, for now and then whom the pope commanded to be ablotned, their advertaries by colour of the popes authoritie would command to be excommunicated. The first day of Julie the earle The cark a be ercommunicated. The new day of Amic de College of the Leuchary. (perch m kings entinies, and toke from them a fortreffe called Galcoler. Chattellon.

Dn S. Dunsfans day there was a maruellous A fore time lose tempest of weather, the aire being barkened on pest of than everie five from the foure comers thereof, and with. ber alignated fuch a thunder as few the like had being heard of. First it began as it had beine a great way off, but after it burft out with such terrible crackes as was wonderfull. But one amongst the rest creas ded, and withall such lightening stathed forth, as put men in great feare and terroy. The chimnic of the chamber, wherein the quiene and hir chilogen then were, was beaten downe to dust, and the whole building fore thaken. This was at Windloze, where in windloge the parke, okes were rent in funder, and turned up by the roots, and much hurt done; as milles with the millers in them, theepfolos with their thephearos, and plowmen, and such as were going by the way were destroice and beaten bolune. About the same time the fea on the coalis of England arose with higher tides than the naturall course gave, by the space of fir fet.

About Michaelmalle quene Dowager of Scot land, that was daughter to Monsteur de Cousse a Frenchman, came through England to returne in to France where the was borne, and was of the king honorablie received and inelcomed. This peare the nunrie of Warran not far from Lin was founded of Wana by the ladie Isabell countesse of Arundell. A Also founds. this yeare the lood William de Cantlow departed this life, in whose heritage his son also named Willie am fucceded. Topozeouer, John Cobham & Geffrey Spenfer (that was a man of great fame, and one of the kings councell) departed this life, Cobham before Caffer, and Spenfer thoulie affer the fame featt. Also in the octaves of Pentecost, Paule Petuer o: Paule Peure departed this life, he was one of the hings Peusch these councellors, and lord freward of his house. This man at the first was not borne to anie great policilions, but by purchale atteined to great reue nucs. The ladie Zone his wife compounded with the king for the marriage of hir fon named Paule, affer his father, but the lozd John Graic paied the monie, being fine hundred marks, and to offcharging hir of that debt, maried hir forme to one of his daugh ters at his mano: of Citon, and afterwards at London married the mother of his some in law, there The lad with the king was fore displeased, for he had given the well. Gra marriage of bir bnto a ftranger, one Stephan de marnet di Salines, fo that the lord Grate was glad to give to peren the king the lumme of fiftie marks, by way of a fine to have his good will.

In the fir and thirtish pare of king Denries reigne, Anno Real the church of Hales was dedicated of the foundation of Hickory of Hickory of Conneivall. At which dedication of their dealers of Conneivall. he kept a folemine feath on the cuen of faint Leonard dieues. being Sunday. There was prefent the king and the

Digh trocs,

The charges of the builting of the paics.

hanoled in is bled in our 1252

The house

ot Coucic.

ouene, and almost all the Pobilitie of England, both spirituall and tempozall. The building of that durch, all charges accounted, food the earle in ten thouland marks, as he himfelfe confessed buto Matthem Paris. About the same time the earle of Leb ceffer and Guie de Lulignan the kings halfe bio ther came into England out of France, and landed at Douce, whome the king received with great iop and glaoneffe. De gaue to his brother at his returne great rewards, as he was ever accustomed. In the feast of the Conception of our ladie at a fusics hole den at Rochester, the strangers were put to the worfe, and well beaten by the English batchlers and men of armes, so that the dishonour which they did to the Englishmen at Brakley was now recompensed with interest . For the strangers fleing to the citie for fuccour, were met by the way by the English knights fervants and yeomen, which fell boon them. heat them fore with clubs and fraues, and handled them berie euill. Hereof fprang a great hatred be, 20 twirt the Englishmen and Arangers , which dailie grew and increased moze and moze, the rather bicause the king had them in lo good estimation, and reteined 6 mante of them within the realme.

The king did celebrate the featt of Christmaste at Poste, whither came Alexander the young king of Scots, and was there made knight by the king of England, and on faint Stephans day he married the ladie Bargaret, daughter to the king of England, according to the affurance before time concluded. There was a great affemblie of noble personages at that feall. The quene Dowager of Scotland mother to king Alexander, a French woman of the house of Coucie, had paffed the fea, & was prefent there with a faire companie of loads and gentlemen. The number of knights that were come thither on the king of Englands part were reckoned to be at the point of one thousand. The king of Scots had with him that Scots dia ho. Cope knights, and a great fort of other gentlemen magetothe k. comparable to knights. The king of Scots did hor 40 mage to the king of England at that time for the realme of Scotland, and all things were done with great love and favour, although at the beginning some strife was kindled about taking op of lodge ings.

> This attemblie of the princes colt the archbilhop verie derelie, in feating and banketting them and their traines. At one dinner it was reported be frent at the first course theesecore fat oven . At request of the 12. of Scots, the 18. of England received Philip 50 Luncil againe into fauour, or rather Louell (as I take it) one of his councell, against whome he had conceined difpleafure in the yeare last past, for fuch biberie as he was thought to be giltie of for thewing favour to the Jewes. The king of Scots when he hould depart, twhe his leave in most courteous maner, and led with him his new married wife, on whome attended fir Robert Posics linight marthall of the kings boule, and fir Stephan Baufan, and also the ladie Pains, the wisowe of the losd William 60 Cantlow with others. On the octaves of the Opinha. nic chanced an erceding great wind, which did much hurt in diverse places of the realme. The biffop of Kochester returning fro the court of Kome, brought with him a bull, authoriting him to receive to his own ble the fift part of the reuenues of all the beneficed men within his diocelle.

In this meane while the earle of Leicetter remain coignes make thing in England, the Galcoignes made loze warre birreagaint against such as he had lest behind him, and withall gave information to the king that the earle of Leices ffer was a traitor, and one that had spoiled the kings subjects: and furthermore by his unfust dealings had given to the Galcoianes cause of rebellion. The king to boulf out the truth of this matter, fent first his chapleine Henric Mingham, and afferwards fir Picholas de Poles de Halence, as commissos ners to inquire of the earles owing, who went and returned without finding any manifest crime in the earles demeanor. The earle was much offended that his innocencie should be thus suspected; but at length being appointed to returne into Balcoigne, he obeied and having a great fumme of monie, he reteined a power of men of warre, as well Frenchmen as o thers, and meaning to be revenged of those that had given the information against him, he strengthened himselfe with the aid of the king of Pauarre, and of the earle of Bigogre and other, to that he oppelled his abuerfaries on ech hand, and so atte their paide, Cheeric of that if convenientlie they might, they would have danteth his pælded themselues to some other prince, and otterlie counics. bave renounced the 1k. of England for ever. Where by it thould feeme that he was throughlie revenged of them even to their no small smart, not in word and threatning, but with fword and bloud-fhedding, defending his innocencie, and manfullie thewing his warlike mind. But yet he had purchased to himselfe a greater postion of praise, if he had not with weapon but with wiledome made a conquest of the enimie: according to this found counsell of a lage writer;

Ingenio studeus magè quam superare furore, Ingenio vires cedunt, prudentia victrix Cuntta domat.

Mal. Pal.in Гио сар.

On the thirteenth day of Ward, the new mone was A frange fiene, thereas the prime change by naturall course wonder of the thould not have beene till the firteenth day following; and for the space of fifteene daies that then next insued the funne, the mone, and flarres appeared of a red colour. And herewith the whole face of the earth fee med as it had beene thadowed with a thicke mist or fmoke, the wind not with francing remaining north and northeact. Then began a fore drought, continue a great ing a long time, the which togither with morning brought. frofts, and northerlie winds, deffroied the fruits and other growing things, which were blasted in such wife, that although at the first it was a verie forward peace, and great plentie towards of come and fruit, pet by the means aforefato, the fame was greatlie hindered and speciallie in the summer season, when the funnes heat increased, and the drought still continued.

The relidue of fuch fruits as then remained, wie thered awaie, to that learle a tenth part was left, and pet there was indifferent floze. Foz if the abundance which the bloffomes promifed had come forward, the tres had not bene able to have borne the fame . The graffe was to burned by in pastures and medowes, that if a man toke by force of it in his hands, and rubbed the fame never to little, it Breight fell to poul ber and so cattell were readie to flarue for lacke of meat. And bicause of the erceding hot nights, there was Inchabundance of fleas, flies, and gnats, that people were bered and brought in case to be wearie of their lives. And herewith dianced manie disales, Manie visco as sweats, agues, and other. In the harvest time fell fes reigned. there a great death and murren among it cattell, and A murren speciallie in Porthfolke, in the fens and other parts of cattell. of the fouth. This infection was luch, that dogs and ravens feeding on the dead carrens, fwelled freightwates and died fo that the people durif eat no befe, least the flesh hamflie might be infected.

Alfo this was noted not without great womber, that young hetters and bullockes followed the milchkine, tas it had beene calues sucked the same kine. Also awletres and pearetres, now after the time of pælding their ripe fruit, began againe to blossome, The cause of as if it had beene in Aprill. The cause of the death of the death of cattell was thought to come hereof. After lo great a cattell.

Dir Robert fir Stephan Increceding.

Rocheft, bull.

The Gal-

13 b.i.

D:ought brought (which had continued by all the space of the moneths of Aprill, Maie, June, and Julie) when there fololived good plentie of raine, the earth began to yell incincrease most plentiouslie of all growing things, though not to indelesome not of such kindle substance, as in due time and season she is accustomed to bring forth, and so the cattell which before were hungerstance, see now so gradule of this new graffe friwing by in vidue leafon, that they were fudmors, as bred infections among it them, whereof they

The billiop of Lincolne.

The Ba's

coigns meane

to complaine

of the earle of

The earle dif=

The billiop of in churches impropriate.

proneth the Leicefter.

The bishop of Lincolne would have inforced all the beneficed men within his diocelle to be preeffs, but they purchased a licence from Kome, to remaine at the Univerlities for certaine yeares, without taking the order of preefthod boon them. The king meaning to go (as he pretended) into the holie land, had grant of the pope to leuic a tenth of his subjects both spiritual and temporall. The Gascoignes sore 20 repining at the earle of Leiceffer his fireid gouer, nance (td)o handled them more roughlie than thep had beine accustomed) sent the archbishop of Bur Deaux over into England to exhibit a complaint a gainsthim in all their names. The earle of Leices fier advertised thereof, followed him, and comming to the court, found the archbillyop readie to advouch the information which he had made against the said earle, chefelie in that he had fought the destruction of ruler there, had granted life and peace, and whom fir Henrie Trublemile, and Maleran the Dutchman, late fewards of Galcoigne, bnder the king, had the rithed and mainteined. With manie other things the archbishop charged him, the which the earle wittiallegations of lie refelled and disproued, so as he was allowed in his acculers. his institucation by those that stood by, as the earle of Cornewall and others.

The bithop of Lincolne got authoritie of the pope Lincolns aus to institute vicarages in churches impropriat to res 40 fitute bicars lígious men, where no vicars were; and where such were as fæmed to Aenderlie provided of fufficient allowance, to augment the same as he thought expedient: which his authoritie he vied more largelie than food with the pleasure of religious persons, bicause he shewed great favour to the vicars. The copie of the letters which the bishop has procured of the pope, authoriting him herein, followeth as we find the fame in the chronicles of Matthew Paris.

The tenor of the popes grant.

Nnocentius episcopus,&c. Cum sicut accepimus in tua ciuitate & diocasi, nonnulli religiosi & aly collegiati ecclesias perochiales in proprios vsus obtineant, in quibus nimis exilès aut nulla taxat a funt vicaria; fraternitati tua per authoritatem summam mandamus, quòd in issdem ecclesis de ipsa- 60 rum prouentibus vicarias instituas, & institutas extles adauge as vice nostra: prout iuxta consuetudinempatrix secundu Deum videtur expedire, non obstantibus si pradicti exempti sint, aut alias muniti apostolicis prinilegijs sine indulgentijs, per que id impediri vel differri possit; & de quibus speciale oporteat in prasentibus fieri mentionem: contradictores per censuras ecclesiasticas apostolica potestate compescendo. Datum Lugduni 7 Octob.pontificatus nostri, An.8.

The earls of

The earle of Leicelfer was efflones lent into Bal-Exteller fent The earle of Leicetter was entonessent into Gal-extinctes into coigne by the king, who had not cared if he had fallen Salvoigne.

into his enimies hands, as thould appeare. But the earle hired fouldiers in France, and comming into Balcoigne, prevailed against his enimics, though in one condict he was in danger of losing both life and the honour of the field. But yet through his good hap, Gods favour, and the valiancie of himselfe and some of his retinue, he got the opper hand, and put his entmics to flight, taking Ruffeine, one of the cheefe ring Buffeine leaders, whom he caused to be presented to the king. taken denlie puffed up with fleth, and such unnaturall hur 10 At the fame time had the king invested his fon Ed. At the same time had the king inventory with the such confidence of Aquitaine to the offense of the king the earle of Cornewall, to thom by charter he had been booked the earle of Cornewall, to thom by charter he had been booked. fore given and confirmed the fame. In a tufts holden buse of 3qui at Malden, fir Arnold de Ponteinic a right baliant taine. at Walben, fir Arnold de Ponteinie a i 1991 vandant bir Ima knight was flaine by fir Roger de Lembozne, for Honda de Bonda which mischance all the Pobles there affembled flaine, made great lamentation, and namelie the faid fir Roger: but pet he was suspected to be in blame, bis cause the locket of his staffe was polithed, a not abated. Hereby it Chould appeare, that in qualitie of weat pon, and not in maner of their running togither, thefe lufts and tornies in those dates practifed differ red from the verie order of warre.

The 17 of September the cathedrall church of The church Clie was dedicated, which the bishop of that see nas of Ciedral med Hugh had builded of his owne proper coffs and cated. charges, togither with the palace there. The king and a great number of the pieres a nobles of the realme both spiritual and tempozall were present at this for those to whom the earle of Comewall when he was 30 lemne feath, which was kept in most plentifull manner. The i 3 day of Daober, the king held a great Aparlement, feast at London, and had called the states of the realme, then and there to affemble in parlement, therein he opened to them the popes grant, which he had obtained of the tenths due to the church, to be res Theking h ceiued by him for three yeares, towards his charges manochite in his fournie which he meant to make into the holie frintadic. land. The bishops, and namelie Lincolne, otterlie refused to be contributarie to his grant.

They alledged fundite reasons for their excuse, Thebilions as the powertie of the English thurth being alreadic refuse to past made bare, with continuall eractions and oppethe to the popts ons; but chæfic they excused themselves by the ab. grant. fence of the archibithops of Canturburie and Porke, of whom the one was beyond the lea, and the other at home in the north parts. All th'other English bishops were there, except Hereford & Cheffer, which Cheffer was ficke, and therefore without the confent of thole that were absent, and namelie their primat the arch-50 bilhop of Canturburie, they could not conclude byon any generall point touching the kings demand. And although the king fretted and fromted against them, pet could be not being them to his purpose, so that the parlement for that time was diffolued. Pet before their departure from London, he communed with the bilhops apart, to lie if he might persuade them to give him some portion of monie towards his charges: but they had tuned their Arings all after one note, discording all from his tenor, so that not a penie could be got of them : wherefore he toke high oil. The king pleasure against them, reuiting them in most re highicolors prochiul maner and among frother he believed the details of the details and among frother he believed the details and a detail the detai prochfull maner, and amongst other he oppratoco his bishops. halfe brother (the clear of Minchester) of great bnthankefulnelle, tho also among it the relidue frod a gainst him.

The king having this repulse at the bishops hands, The king began to fall in talke with the loods of the temporal fairth togit tie touching the troubles in Galcoigne, there things more of the were in broile by the hard diffusion of the cords of the cords of the cords were in broile by the hard doings of the earle of Lev popul ceffer, against whom the Galcoignes ceased not to make warre ffill, and of late having belieged him in the castell of Mountalbon, drove him to such thist, that to escape the present danger he was glad to set at libertie certeine rebels, tibich be had before taken captives. Therefore to reduce that countrie buto quietnesse, the king determined to go thither himfelfe, and to remove the earle of Leicester out, of his office : but when he came to the pith of the matter, which was to defire their aid both of men and monie, the loads would not agræ to grant him anie. And where he fought to burthen the erle of Leicester with milgouerning things against his honour, they excused the same earle, and so the loads also departed in displeasure of the king as well as the bishops. 10 Powbeit the king got of the Londoners by way of princelie praier twentie thouland marks of gold at that time . And to their further greefe for better meane to be reuenged against the bishop of Blie, he caufed the faid Londoners to keepe faint Cowards faire for lifteene daies togither at Taleftminffer, and in the meane time to keepe their thops thut through all the citie. Which thing (by reason of the foule wear ther chancing at that time) was berie grænous buto them, albeit there was such repaire of people thither, 20 that London had not beene fuller to the suggement of old ancient men neuer at anie time in their daies to their remembrance.

Ehe death of Gr Micholas Bamioto.

Tijc Londo:

ners helpe at a pinch.

Departeth this

Marth. Paris. The decealle of the countelle de Lille te wight.

Anno Reg. 37. The pope of= fereth the kingdome of Dicili bnto the earle of Comemail.

This yeare died fir Picholas Samford knight, a man of great reputation and valiancie. Also on the twentith day of Daober, the counteste of Winches ffer daughter to the earle of Hereford departed this The countede life at Grobie, a manour place belonging to bir bul band the earle of Winchester, a little besides Leice; ster, and was buried at 152aklie. The said earle short: 30 lie after married an other wife in hope of illue. Foz neither by this his last wife, neither by his first that was daughter to the load Alane de Galowaie had he any children. Also the same yeare, that noble ladie Margaret counteste of Liste surnamed Kivers, som time wife to Fouks de Brent, departed out of this world, about the fecond day of Daober . In the fear uen and thirtith peare of king Penries refane . one of the popes notaries called Albert came into Engi land to offer buto Richard earle of Cornewall the 40 kings brother, the kingdoms of Paples and Sicill. But the earle supposing it not to stand with his hos nour, to deprine his nethue Penrie, sonne to the emperox frederike the fecond by his wife the emprette Isabell that was lister to the saiderle, refused to take that honour byon him.

> About the same time, that is to say, on the octaves of faint Martin. Boniface the archbishop of Cantur buric arrived in England, comming from the court same time there chanced a great occasion of strife betwirt the faid archbilhop, and the bilhop of White cheffer. Foz ichere maiffer Gufface de Lin, officiall to the faid archbilhop had first ercommunicated, and after for his contumacie caused to be attached a pixelf which by authoritie of the elect of Winchester as diocesane there was entred into possession of an hospitall in Southwarke, as governour thereof, by the name of piloz, without consent of the officiall: the pretended title as patrone in his maisfers 60 name. The faid elect of Minchester caused a riotous fort of persons after the maner of warre to sæke renenge hereof, the which after manie outrages done. came to Lambeth, and there by violence toke the laid Gulface out of his owne house, and led him to Farnham, where he was kept as pilloner.

The archbilliop thus ferued at his first comming ouer, and taking the fame but for a homlie welcome, was maruelloudie offended, and comming to Lone don accompanied with the bilhops of Chichester and Pereford, in the church of faint Warie bome, being rewelled in pontifications, pronounced all those accurfled, which were authours or favourers of fuch a rall and prefumptuous deed, and further commanded all the bilhops within his province, by vertue of their obedience, to denounce the fame in their churches euerie fundate and holie day. The bithop of Winches ffer on the other part, sent commandement to the deane of Southwarke, to relift the archbishov to his face, and to denounce his curlle to be void, vaine, and of no force, but deviled of a craftic purpole and wicked meaning. The archbishop continuing in his conceived displeasure, went to Drenford, and there on the morrow after faint Nicholas day, renewed the same curse in solemne wife before all the learned men, Audents, and Scholers of the Univertitie.

Dowbeit, at length the matter was taken by betwirt them, for the king in his brothers cause, and the queene for hir bucle the archbilhop, toke some paine The archb. of to agree them: and so in the octaves of the Epiphanie Canturburie they were made frænds, and those absolued that were and the bishop ercommunicated, in which number Alilliam de Tla, of winchester lence, and John de Warren were thought to be conswilliam be teined, as those that should be present in bling the Atalence, and force against the officiall (as before ye have heard.) John de By inquirie taken about this time by the diligence warren. of the bishop of Lincolne, it was found that the year lie profits and revenues of spirituall promotions The value of and livings resting in strangers hands preferred by spiritual its the popes provisions, amounted to the summe of mings instran theéscore and ten thousand marks, which was more gers hands. by two third parts, than the kings revenues belongs ing to his crowne.

The earle of Blocester and the logo William de Walence went over into France in most triums thant manner, to conclude a marriage betwirt the fonne of the faid earle of Bloceffer, and the daughter of the losd Buic of Engolesme. Which marriage the king had motioned for the affection which he bare towards the advancement of his linage, by the mothers lide. Whereat bicaule they were Arangers, the English nobilitie somewhat repined. And whereas like luftie yong gentlemen they attempted a justs and tomie to thew some profe of their valiant sto. machs, they were well beaten by the Frenchmen, that distained to see young men so presumptuous, to pronoke old accustomed warriours to the triali of fuch martiall enterprises. About the beginning of The new Lent, the new mone was some foure daies before moneappear the ought to have appeared by hir due and common her before hir time, courfe.

The king by a thiff got of the Londoners 1000 marks. For as it happened about the fame time the of Kome, where he had beene long reliant. At the 50 pouthfull citizens (for an evercife and triall of their actuitie) had fet footh a game to run at the quine Running at tine, and icholoever did best, thould have a peacocke the quintine. which they had prepared for a prife. Terteine of the kings fervants, bicaufe the court laie then at Taleff. minster, came (as it were in spite of the citizens) to the game, and giving reprochfull names to the Londoners (which for the dignitie of the citie and ancient privileges which they ought to have intoice were called barons)the faid Londoners not able to beare The London fo to be misused, fell boon the kings servants, and bet Barons, them threwdie. Co that boon complaint, the king caufeo the citizens to fine for their rath doings. Wherein the Londoners followed the counsell of him that in a cale of ffrife, laid

Tune cedemalis sed contra audentior ito, Audaces fortuna inuat.

Mozeover, about the same time, the king bpon displeasure conceived against the earle of Leicester, The carle of had caused him to resigne his office of the warden Leicester rethip of Gascoigne: and bicause the earle had it by signeth his go patent, the king not able to find any full cause of for ternment of feiture agreed to paie bnto bim fo, the resignation Galcoigne. no finall postion of monte. And thereas the Galcoignes hav charged the earle with tw much Arcia

Che Rioll, S.Willon, townesin Galcoigne.

Linights to bemabe.

berg.

Che canfe v moned the Walcoiane # to rebellion.

A varlement.

ted of the fus ritualtie. Œ scuaac granteb.

handling of them, whereby they were eccasioned to ratte tumults, the matter was now nothing at all amended. Ho: after the earle had refigned, they continucd fill in rebellion, to that the Bioli with S. Willie ons and other places were taken by the aductaries out of the kings hands, and great flaughter of people made in those parts: therefore the king minding to go thither caused musters to be taken, and men put in a redincte according to the cultome, that he might understand what number of able men furnished for the warre were to be had. De also toke order that e uerie man that might offpend yeerlie fiftene pounds in lands thould be made knight.

Moreover, for the better preservation of peace and quietnesse amongst his people, he appointed watch to be kept by night in cities and borough townes. And further by the adults of the Saudilines, which An ordinance were about him he ordeined that if any man chanced to be robbed, or by any meanes damnified by any thefe or robber, he to whom the keeping of that count 20 trie chafelie apperteined where the robberie was done, Could competentlie reflore the loffe: and this was after the blage of Sauop, but was thought more hard to be observed here, than in those parts, where are not so manie bypaths and farting corners to thist out of the waie. The Salcoignes continu ed in their feditions dwings, and namelie Gascon de Bierne, who renouncing his dutie and obedience to the king of England ionico himselfe to the king of Spaine, through his beloe to be the fronger a more able to annois the English subjects. The evill intreas 30 ting vied towards the Galcoignes which brought hither wines, in that the same were offentimes taken from them by the kings officers, and other, with out readie monie allowed for the fale, gave occasion to them to grudge and repine against the king.

In the quindene of Caffer a parlement began at London, in which all the flates being affembled, the matter was moved for aiding the king with some relate of monie towards the journie which he ment 40 to make into the holie land: and so at length it was Atenth gran, agreed that a tenth part of all the revenues belongs ing to the church was granted to him for thee yeares space, and that escuage thouse be levice for that peare, after their markes of enerie hnights fie, and the king on the other part promised faithfullie to ob Magna charta. ferue and mainteine the grant of the great charter, and all the articles conteined within the fame. For further affurance thereof, on the third day of Paie, in the great hall at Wickminster, in the presence and by the affent of the king and the earles of Poy folke, Hereford, Orford, Warwike, and other poble men, by the archbishop of Canturburie as pais mate, and by the bilhops of London, Elie, Lincolne, Worceffer, Porwich, Herrford, Salifburie, Dur ham, Erceffer, Carliell, Bath, Rocheffer, and S. Danies, reneffed and apparelled in pontificalibus, with tapers, according to the maner, the fentence of excommunication was pronounced against all transgressors of the liberties of the church, and of the ancient liberties and customes of the realme of Eng. 60 land, and namelie those which are conteined in the great charter, and in the charter of forcest.

Whilest the sentence was in reading, the king held his hand byon his breaff with glad and therefull countenance, and when in the end they thiely awaie co their ertina and fmoking tapers, fateng, So let them be extinguished and finke into the pit of hell which ce run into the dangers of this fentence; the king faid, cc So helpe me God, as I thall obserue and heepe all these things, even as Jam a chaillian man, as Jam a knight, and as Jama king crowned and annoine ted. But afferward when he through other counfell feuno doube. brake his promise therein, he was admised by some to give a postion of that monie which he got at this time, to the Pope, that he might of him be absoluce.

Immediatlie affer the breaking op of the parles ment, that is to fair, about the first of June, the king being carnefflie called bpon by mellengers fent from the Galcoignes to provide in time for the defense and safegard of that countrie, un one rune no the bing passed in danger to lose it, with all speed he resolved to positive go go thither; and therebpon caused summons to be gir hunfelte ma uen to all thefe that held of him by knights feruice, Balcoigne, to prepare to be at Portesmouth, with horte and are mour in the octaves of the Trinitie. Perewith he made great provision of thips, the which being affembled, and the armie likelitie come togither, through lacke of convenient wind he was inforced to flap a long time, to his great greefe and no leffe charges.

Finallie, on the 6 of August he toke the sea, leas he takahin ning his brother the earle of Cornelvall, and the lea queene in charge with governance of the realme, and of his sonne the load Coward. There departed with him from Portelmouth the hundred lailes of great thips, belides a number of other smaller bellels. And thus accompanied, he toke his courfe to Galcoigne, cabout our ladie day named hir Affumption, he arrived at Burdeaur, where he was of the citizens ho, hearringha nozablie received. Immediatlie after his arrivall Burdeau, there, he caused the towne of the Rioll to be compass fed about with a firong fiege, within the which a great number of rebels were inclosed, which valiants lie defended the place in hope of rescue, which Gaston de Bierne that was fled to the king of Spaine had promifed to procure for them. But the king of Eng. land to prevent them in that point, fent the biffiop of Bath, and his truffie chapleine fir John Panfell but Amballadors to the faid king of Spaine, to conclude frændship fent into and aliance with him, to that the losd Coward his Spame. eldest sonne might marrie the king of Spaine his daughter. After long treatie, by the diligence of the faid any a marriage balladors, a full conclusion followed of their motion. conclusion twint the B. And thereas the king of England had given and af of England figned the dominion of Galcoigne to his faid forme former thek. the load Coward, the king of Spaine in the infirm of Spains ment that contained the companies of the manufacture daughter ment that conteined the covenants of the marriage, religned and quite claimed all the right and title within Galcoigne which he had or might have by the gift of king Henrie the lecond, and by confirmation of the kings, Richard and John. In this meane while, the townes and castels which the revels held, were won and delivered into the kings hands, and heres with followed a great ocarch in the kings armie, , lo Abearth m that a hen was fold for fir pence Cerling, a pound the kings weight in bread was at two pence or three pences a campe. gallon of wine at two thillings, a come of foure buthels of wheat at twentic Chillings, fo that a knight with his equire, and coiffrell with his two horfies, might scarte be competentlie found for two thillings in filner. Therefore the king to relieve his people there with him on that fide the feat, fent the prior of Pelubourgh with other into England, to cause prouisson of vittels and other necessaries to be conneced and brought unto him into Galcoigne, and to there was a great quantitie of grains and poinded field taken up and fentawaie with all convenient food. en The earle of Leicoffer came to the king, himging with him out of France where he had remained for a time, a faire companie of fouldiers and men of warre to the kings ato, and was verie courteoutlie received. The Galcoignes then perceived the bings power to increase, and saw how not onelie the enticls inherein they truffed to have refuge were wong and gotten out of their hands by the king of England, but also that their vines (therein theelie confifted their hope of fullentation) were burned by and no ardico,

Codie coun=

coigns begin enemiciues.

Aroied, they began to humble themselnes, and so by little and little returned to their due obedience, after that the authors of their feditious tumults were cither appehended, or chaled out of the countrie.

The bishop of Chichefter

This peare died Richard Wit; the bilhop of Chi. cheffer, aman of great bertue and fingular know Richard with ledge. Alfo that famous clearke Robert Groffed bis and Grotted thop of Lincolne departed this life on the day of S. b. of Lincolne b.of Bintonie Denise in the night, at his manoz of Bugoon, whose tepartthistic Denise in the night, at his manoz of Bugoon, whose learning coupled with vertue and byzightnelle of 1 The peak of life wan to him perpetuali commendation. He was a manifest blamer of pope and king, a reproduer of prelats, a corrector of monks, a director of preeds, an instructor of clearkes, a susteinor of scholers, a preas ther to the people, a perfecutor of incontinent livers, a viligent fearther of the scriptures, a contemnoz and a verie mallet of such Arangers as sought preferment in this realme by the popes prouisions : in housekeeping liberall, in corporall refection plentifull and in ministring spiritual fod, deuout and god- 20 lie affected : in his bishoplike office diligent, reuce rend, and never wearied: a fingular example of a bis thop, speciallie in those dates, and at whose life our reformed bithops may fetch light to abandon their darkenesse, and to amend that which is amille in them. lith validiora funt exempla quam pracepta,

The L. wil. teth this life.

Leopapa.

Great wet.

ter borne,

Winter

1254

The queenes

inthe aire.

Redborne.

I beath of Harpe,

Et plenius docemur vita quam verbo.

Dozeover there died in Galcoigne, William de Telcie depar- Telcie a baron of great fame in the north parts. Also 30 in the spring and summer of this yeare was a great drought, and in the haruest season fell such wet, that great floos by the riling of the rivers, and overflows ing their banks, did much hurt in fundzie places of the realme. Againe in the later end of haruest about Wichaelmasse, there was efflones such a drought, that men could get no grinding at the milles, but were constreined to go in some places a dates tour= nie off, to have their come grond. In the eight and Anno Reg. 38, thirtith yeare of king Henries reigne, the quiene 40 The ladie has belivered of a daughter which was called Hatherin, bicause the same was borne on saint Bathe. rins date.

On S. Lucies date, there fell a great mowe, and withall a winters thunder, for a token of some enill to follow. The king to settle the state of the countrie of Galcoigne in better order, tarried there all the winter, and repared certeine decated townes and caffels. The quiene kept hir Christmasse at London, where the laie in child-bed, and was purified on the 50 euen of the Epithanie, making a rotall feaft, at the which manie great losos were present, as the archbi thop of Canturburie, the bithop of Elie, the earls of Cornewall and Bloceffer, and manie other. She fent oner at the same time to hir husband for a new years wards the k. gift the fumme of five hundred marks of hir owne reuenues, towards the maintenance of his warres. Thanglight On the even of the Circumcilion of our Loed, in the night featon, whilest the aire was most cleare and bright with thining flarres, the mone being eight 60 dates old, there ameared in the element the perfect forme and likenedie of a mightie great thip, which was first feene of certeine monks of faint Albons, tho remaining at faint Amphibalus, were got by to behold by the flarres, if it were time for them to go to mattens; but perceiuing that Arange light, they called op such of their acquaintance as lodged niere at hand, to biew the same. At length it seemed as the bourds and toints thereof had gone in funder, and so it vanished awaie. There followed a maruellous fore later end of a winter, through cold and over tharpe weather, which continued till the feast of S. Gregoric in Parch next infuing. Also there chanced the same yeare a great murren and death of thepe and dere, so that of whole flocks and heards scarle the one halfe escaped.

Whilest the king remained still in Gascoigne, he fent for his wife quæne Clenoz, with his eldeit fonne Coward, but bicause he could not make an end of all his businesse that winter, he continued there the fummer alfo. And for somuch as he flow in need of monie, to have some reasonable pretente to bemand a subsidie, in the beginning of Ward, he sent to his brother Richard the earle of Concivall (which was come over before chefelie for that purpose) certeine instructions, to declare how there was like to follow great warre, by means of Alfonse the tenth of that name king of Callile, who manaced berie thoutlie to inuade the confines of Galcoigne perteining to the English dominion, and therefore he required of his The king ter faithfull lubiects some atd of monie, whereby he might mandeth a sublete resist his adversarie the first his a constant the first his a constant the first his account to t be able to reliff his adversarie the said it. of Callile. Carle Richard did what he could to persuade the people to this paiment, but he cast his net in vaine before the face of the feathered foule, as the old prouerbe faith.

Apparens rete fugêre volucria quaq.

Forthough he let forth the matter to the vitermost in the presence of the Pobles and other estates, pet would they not heare of anie paiment to be made, as those that simcled out the feined fetch and forged tale of the kings need. For they had intelligence that there was an agreement concluded betweet him and the king of Spaine. And for the same cause the quæne and the loed Coward were gone over, that the king of Spaine might have a light of him, as he had required, when the covenants of the marriage were accorded.

The states of the realme were twife assembled at London about the grant of this patment, but all in vaine: so that they were constrained to passe it over with silence, and to surceasse in the matter to their great greefe, and namelie the earle of Comewall, tho had taken great paines therein . Det for that he would not returne with emptie hand, he levied by rigozous means a great fumme of the Jewes (of thom a maine multitude inhabited at that feafon in London) and therewith returning to his brother king Henrie, the wed him how he had sped. The king was not a little offended with them that thus had denied fended with to helpe him with monie, infomuch that opon everic them that res light occasion, he was readie to revenge his displear fused to heipe fure towards them, in taking awaie such grants of him with printleges and liberties as before he had made. But monic. now to audio suspicion of his feined pretense of war betwirt him and king Alfonse, he sent his sonne Co. ward into Callile unto the fame Alfonse, under a cos hings sonne log to compound with him for peace, wheras the verie is fent to the occasion of his going thisher, was to purchase him Mos Catile. the lavie Clenoz to wife, that was lifter to the faid king Alfonse.

At his comming to the court of Spaine, he was veric honozablie received of the king, and in the end. bpon conference had of his message, obteined his fuit, so that king Alfonse was content to bestow by on him his daughter in marriage, with the countie of Ponticu in France, which the held in right of hir hemarricth mother queene Jone, the sccond wife of Ferdinando the latte Elethe king of Callile, father buto this king Alfonse, to k. Pisonse, which Jone was the onelie daughter and heire of Sie mon earle of Ponticu, and had iffue by hir hulband the faid Ferdinando two fonnes, Ferdinando and Lewes, with one daughter; to wit, the forefaid Clenoz, the which by reason hir brethren died poing, was heire to hir mother. The lood Coward having dis patched his bulinelle according to his delire, returned with a folfull hart to his father, and declared to him Ran. Higd. what he had done. His father most glad thereof, fet Polydor.

The king of:

Bb.iu.

E award the einge fonnt ernatch painte of waics, and resis of Chie úπ. Mattl..Patis @menne the Bings younger Conne creased bute of Lon ships of a urange molb.

force of wind and weather into certeine havens on the north coasts of England towards Barwike, which thips were of a verte trange forme and fathion, but mightie and frong. The men that were a bout the fame thips were of fome farre countrie, for their language was unknowne, and not understand able to any man that could be brought to talke with them. The fraught and balast of the thips was armour and incapon, as habergeons, helmets, speares, bomes, acromes, crofbomes and darts, with great 20 Store of vittels. There late also without the havens on the coast vinerse other thips of like forme, mold and fallion. Those that were driven into the bauens were flaich for a time by the bailiffes of the ports. But finalite, when it could not be knowne what thep were, not from whence they came, they were licenced to depart without loffe of harme in bodic of gods.

Wafton de 215i. erne artemp= toth to take the cuie of Waiun.

the English

A mightie flozme of hade.

Che counteffe

After that king Henrie had continued there for 1 2 5 5 his pleasure certeme daies, he returned to England, an augmentation of honour, created him prince of Whales and earle of Chefter, and appointed him to be his deputic and generall lieutenant both in Guien and in Ireland, and gave to him the townes of 1521 ficio Stamford and Grantham. Hereof came it, that ener after the bings eldeft forme was made imme viatite upon his birth prince of Wales and carle of Cheffer. De created also his other sonne named Co mund earle of Lancaster.

About Candlemalle, Gallon de Bierne, allembling togither a multitude of the kings enimics, tho rough the intelligence of some of the citizens of 30 Baton that favoured not the king, wrought fo, that certeme of his number entred that citie, meaning to have bereff the king of the Dominion thereof. 15 at other of the citizins namelie thole of the meaner fort which favoured the king) made fuch reliffance, that the enimies which were entred, were appehended, and diverse of them suffered punishment, as they had A mutinie in well deferued. After this, there chanced a mutinie in the English armie bicause the kings brethren and the bilhop of Herefood twke boon them to punish 40 otherwise extout by the rapine of the inflices stine: Children was certeine Welchmen, for that without commission they had beene abrod to spoile within the French confines. Therfore in almuch as the punishment feemed to creed the begree and qualitie of the offenfe; and as gaine, for that the earle of Hereford being constable of the hold by inheritance ought to have had the order of all corrections in cales of fuch offenles, the Englithmen were in mind to have flaine all the Poidouins in despite of the kings brethren, if the king had not in humble wife lought to have appealed their 50 furie.

The wind continuing this peace for the space of their moneths and od dates northerlie, did greatlie binder the growth and increase of floures and fruits: and about the first of Julie there sell such a frozme of haile and raine, as the like had not beene forne nor heard of in those dates, breaking downe the tiles and other coverings of houses, with boughes of trees, by the violent aboundance and force of the water and hailestones, which continued about the space of an 60 houte policing and beating downe incellantlie. Af ter this, when the king had remained a whole peare in The king re- Sulen, he returned homewards through France, turneth home and comming unto Charters, was honorablic there wards those received of Lewes the French king, as then latelie returned out of the holie land, and from thence he was rotallic by the same king Lewes brought onto of Cornewall. Paris. The counteffe of Cornewall went ouer with a noble traine of loods, gentlemen, and others, to be present at the meeting of hir two litters, the quanes of England and France, to that the rotaltic of the al femblie on ech part was great.

landing at Doner in Chrismasse worke. This tournic into Galcoigne was verie cofflie, and to fmall purpole (as waiters have recorded) for the kings that ges amounted to the lumine of 27 hundred thouland pounds and about, except lands and rents, which he gave imaduifedire to those which little descrued, but rather fought the hinderance both of him and his realme, belides the gift of 20 thouland marks, which he bestowed topon his halfe beetheen by the mothers About this scason were certaine thips beinen by 10 side, not reckoning the lands not rents, neither ret the wards not the horties, not tewels which he gave to them belides, being of pace inclimable. Thus in tivo cournies which he made, the one into Pocava. which countrie he loft; and the other into Galcoigne. which he hardie preserved; he spent more treasure than a wife chapman would have given for them both if they had beene fet on fale (as Marthew Paris writeth) so that it might be verified in him that is meant by the old prouerbe, Qui procul excurrit, sed nil mercatur ibidem, Si via long a fuit, rediens tristatur hic idem.

Doccouer to increase the kings baine charges lo it fell out, that pope Innocent bearing grudge to wards Courade king of Sicill, offered that kinghome (as before is partie touched) to Richard buke of Cornewall, the refused the offer, aswell for other causes, as chieflie for that the pope would not agree to such conditions as earle Richard thought necessarie for his allurance. Wherebpon the pope granted Ebeppe that king dome buto king Henrie, with manie god frent in lie promiles of air to his furtherance for attenting dome a se the pollellion thereof. King Henrie totfullie received cill bowth that grant, and called his sonne Comund openlie by hand. the name of B. of Sicill, and to furnish the pope with monic for the maintenance of his war against Conrade, he got frouther all fuch fums as he could make, affiveli out of his owne coffers, and out of the creheher, as by borrowing of his brother earle Richard, The kins and like wife what he could ferape from the Jewes, or both great rants: all which he fent to the pope, who not con- to femons tent her with (when he began efficiens to want) invote popt. againe to the king for more.

The king through the inflinat of the diuck, to and the femonts fwer the popes anarice, fent him letters patents obs the pope 20% ligatoric, ligned with his rotall feale, by which he remite take might take by way of ione fuch fummes of monic, as by monic mould largelie ferue his turne of the merchants 3ta: lians, willing him not to sticke at the disbursing of treasure, not at the great quantitie of the interest rifing upon the viuric, for he would bilcharge all : and herebuto he bound himfelfe imper paine to forfeit his kingdome and other his heritages. The pope Matth Park consenting bereinto, accepted this large offer. The bid well herein (faith Matthew Paris) the Lozothe indge of all indges indge it, to whom apperteineth the care of all things. To conclude, much monie was Thepopis spent, so: the pope spared not the king of Englands liberallot purfle, though little god was done therewith. At purfle, length Conrade died, not without suspicion of pois fon. The pope being advertised of his death, refoled greatlie, as he well between in plaine woods, fairing; Let us all that be the children of the Romin church " reivile, for now two of our greatest enimies are dife >> patched out of the waie; the one a spiritual man, that ,, is to faic, Robert bishop of Lincolne; and the other a sparsnow laic-man, that is Conrade king of Sicill. But pet claimed king the pope milled of his purpole, for Danfred the bas of Dicial. stard sonne of the emperour Frederike the second, was thortic after proclaimed king of Sicill, and so the second errour was greater than the first.

About the quindene of Caffer, there was a parles 3 parlently ment holden at London, at the which were affembled all the states of the realme in greater number than had bæne commonlie fæne. This parlement was mefelie called, to let them understand the kings ne cellitic of monie for discharging of his debts, and to The flateste require them of their aid towards the same. But idereas he requested moze than was thought food with reason, they would not agree therebuto, but defired that he would confirme, and without all cavillation (weare to observe the liberties which by the charter he had promifed to hold. Porcouer they required. that by the common councell of the realme they 10 might choic to them the chefe inflice, the chancellour and treasuroz, but they were answered plainelie by forme of the privile councell, that this request would at no hand be granted.

Furthermoze, the prelats complained, that thep were orinen to pate the tenths which they promifed conditionallie, as it were now by confireint and of butic to the pecialice of the liberties of the church. The Pobles also found themselves graved for the cractions which they faw at hand, but finallie, after 20 manie things had beene debated touching thele mat-The parlement ters, the parlement was adjourned till Dichaelmas nert, and enerie man departed to his home, with no great trust of the kings god will towards them, noz anic hartie thanks received of him for their paines. as may be thought by that which writers have recorocd. Two Poble men, to whom the cuffodie and gulbing of the king and quene of Scots was committed, that is to fay, Robert de Ros, and John de Baili oll, were accused, for misuling themselves in the trust and charge which they had taken byon them. Ling Denrie was the same time at Potingham. The information came forth by a phylician, who was fent from the quæne of England, buto hir daughter the quene of Scots, to be about hir forgard of hir health, but bicause the same physician (whose name was Reignclo of Bath) perceived the quene of Scots to be impaired in health through anguith of mind by reason of the misdemeanor of such as had the government of hir and hir husband, he flicked 4 not to blame and reprove them in their doings, for the which he was portoned, as fome thinke: for the truth was, he thoutlie after fickened and died, fignifieng bpon his death-bed buto the quene of England what he misliked and thought amille in those that had the dwings about hir daughter and hir busband the Scotilh king.

The mone suffered a maruellous eclipse on the night following the day of S. Margaret in Julie. It began afore mionight, and continued foure houres.

then laie in the callell, into the which thementred, and altred the order of the houthold, so as food with the contentation of the king and quene, which were in luffered to lie togither, not fearle come to talke

In celipfe.

Reia nold de

Bath a phy:

The king in the behalfe of his daughter the quene of Scots railed a power, and drew northwards, fending before him the earle of Gloceffer, and John Panfell that was his chapleine and one of his councell. These two so vied the matter, that they came to Coenburgh, where the king and quæne of Scots

The carte of Glocefter & John Man: fell fent into Scotland.

Robert de Ros fammo:

tegither. Robert de Ros was fummoned to appeare before the king of England, to answer to such things as advances, might be laid to his charge. At the first he withore w himselfe, but afterwards he came in , and submitted himselse to the kings pleasure. Diverse of the nobles of Scotland toke it not well, that the earle of Glocether and John Panicil Mould thus come into the caffell of Edenburgh, and order things in the kings house in such fort at their pleasure: wherevoon they assembled a power, and besieged the eastell, but at length perceiving their owne erroz, they raised their siege and departed. John de Bailfoll being accused of the like crime that was laid to the charge of his fellow Robert de Ros, for a pace of monie bought his peace and was pardoned, but the lands of Robert de Ros were feised into the kings hands. Finallie, the king and quæne of England came to an enterniew with the king of Scots and the quene their daughter, and fetting all things with them in fuch 03. ber as was thought convenient, they returned to:

wards the fouth parts. In the meane leason, the bishop of Hereford de: A shift to get used a this to helpe the B. with monie, towards the monie of the billyops deuts valuents of his debts, by obtaining certaine auten fed by the bilb, tike feales of the prelats of this land, where with he of thereford. figned certeine infruments and writings, wherein was expected, that he had received diverte fummes of monie for dispatch of businesse perteining to them and to their churches, of this and that merchant of Flozence or Siena, whereby they flood bound for repaiment thereof by the same instruments and wife tings so made by him their agent in their names. This thill was deviced by the faid billyop of Here. ford, with licence obteined thereinto of the king, and also of the pope, but o bhome for the same intent the faid bishop was sent, with sir Robert Walerane knight. The pope was the loner persuaded to grant licence for the contriving of such manner of thist, bicause the monte should go to the discharging of the kings debts, into the which he was run, by bearing the charges of the warres against the king of Sh

About the feaft of faint Coward, the parlement a parlement. began againe at London, in which the states treas ted of a subsidie to be granted to the king, but they Bichard carte could not conclude thereof, neither would Richard of Cornewall earle of Comewall difburfe anie monie at that feat frandethas fon to his brother the king, bicause he allowed not the gainst his brother for maner of lateng it out for the warres against spans the grant of fred, being taken in hand without his confent. The a sublidie. fame yeare, the king by the procurement of his bros ther Richard earle of Cornewall, had fetzed the li- The liberties of London fetze berties of the citie of London into his olune hands, 3cd into the binder colour that the maior had not doine his dutie hings hands. in the full punishing of bakers for breaking of the affifes of their bread. Herebpon, there the maior and communaltie of the citie had by the kings grant the citie to farme, with diverle cultomes and offices, at a certeine rate and frinted fumme of monie; noin the king let officers therein at his pleasure, which were accomptable to him for all the revenues and profits that grew within the citie. But thereas the malice which the earle of Toznes: wall bare to the citie, was, for that they would not erchange with him curteine grounds that belonged to their communaltie, they were glad to agree with thich agreement concluded about the nintenth date to be a count of Annember, they incre mostlie after reffaced to of Pouember, they were Hostlie after restosed to their liberties. This chanced before the kings comming over, who at his comming to London, looged such wife view before that time, that they were not 60 in the tower, and upon new displeasure conceined as gainst the citie for the escape of a prisoner (being a clearke convia) out of Pelugate, which had killed a prior, that was of aliance to the bing, as couline to the queene, the king fent for the mator and the Chirifs to come before him to answer the matter. The may to lato the fault from him to the thiriffes, for to much as to them belonged the keeping of all the prisoners within the citie: and so the maioz returned home as gaine, but the thiriffes remained there as pilloners The thiriffes by the space of a whole moneth or more, and yet they of London creused themselnes, in that the fault chaselie reused impulousd. in the bishops officers: for there as the prisoner was binder his cultodic, they at his request had granted him licence to imprison the offendor within their

.

inard

ward of pelogate, but so as his officers were than ged to fee him fafe kept. The king notivith Canding demanded of the citic thee thousand marks for

Dozeover, thereas he food in great need of mos

The king de= mandeth monie of the Tewes.

The kings

marks.

bcbt 3000000

The earle of

lendeth the king monie

nie, he required by way of a tallage eight thousand marks of the Jewes, charging them on paine of hanging, not to deferre that paiment. The Jewes fore impoucrified with greenous and often paiments er cused themselves by the popes vivrers, and reproved a plainelie the kings excelline taking of monie, as well of bis chaillian lubicas as of them. The king on the other five, to let it be knowne that he tared not his people without infloccation, and opon necessitie that drove him thereto, confessed openlie, that he was indebted by his bonds obligatorie, in three hundred thousand marks: and againe, the pearelie revenues alligned to his sonne prince Edward, arose to the inmune of fifteene thouland marks and abone, where the revenues that belonged but othe crowne were 2 greatlie diminished, in such wise, that without the aid of his subjects, he should never be able to come out of debt. To be thost, then he had fleeced the Jeives to the quicke, he fet them to farme buto his brother earle Kichard, that he might pull off thin and all; but pet confidering their powertie, he spared them, and ne uertheleffe, to relieue his brothers neceffitie, opon'a pawne he lent him an huge malle of monie. Thefe thists did the king ble from time to time, not caring with what cractions and impolitions he burthened 30 the inhabitants of his land, whereby he procured onto himselfe the name of an oppelfor and couctous

Hor.lib.1. ferm.

In elephant

Inewer of pearle, per= aduenture an agat.

trange. Digh tibes. 2 comet.

The decease of walter archbilhop of yorke.

Elianoz the Spife of prince meth to the citic.

of the citie re= fored to the Londonerg.

A legat from the pope nas med Bufcano a Galccigne.

fcraper. But what wonder is it in a king, fith Maxima pars hominum morbo iactatur eodem.

About the fame time, Lewes the French king fent bnto king Benrie for a prefent an elemant, a beaff most strange and wonderfull to the English people, fith most seldome or never any of that kind had biene liene in England before that time. The French auæne also sent for a present onto the king of Eng. 4 land an ewer of pearle like to a peacocke in forme and fathion, garnithco most richlie with golo, filner, and fathires to furnish him footh in all points of fine and cunning workemanthip, to the verie refemblance of a living peacocke. Annie wonders than ced about this time. The fearofe with most high tides, rivers were fo filled with abundance of water, by reason of the great continuall raine, that maruellous flouds followed thereupon . A comet also appeared, tempelis. The reath of Walter archbishop of Poske followed these prodigious wonders, who had governed that fee the space of fortie yeares. After him succaded one Senall the 34 archbilhop of that citie.

About the feast of S. Ethelozed, the lavie Elianoz wife of prince Coward the kings fon, came to Low don, where the was honorablic received of the citie zens, e connected through the citie to S. Jones with out Smithfield, and there lodged for a fealon, and per long the remoued to the Sauvy. It was not long 60 after, that the king feized the liberties of the citie of London into his hands, for certeine monie which the quene claimed as due to hir of a certeine right to be paid by the citizens, so that about the feast of S. Wartine in November, they gave unto the king foure hundred marks, and then had their liberties to them againe reffored, and the kings under-treasuroz dis tharged, which for the time was made cuffos or keeper of the citie.

About the same time came another legat from the pope, namelie, one Ruscand a Gascoigne borne, to thom, with the archb. of Canturburic, and the ble thop of Pereford, the pope had granted authoritie to collect and gather the tenths of the spiritualtie within England, Scotland, and Ireland, to the vie of the therebigh pope and the king, notwithstanding all priniledges, pope, for what cause or buder what forme of words to cuer the fame had palled. This Ruscand also absolued the king of his bow made to go into the holie land, to the end he might go against Manfred king of Sicill, He also preached the crosse against the same Wan: Checross fred, promiting all those remition of their fins which preached to thould go to war against Manfred, as well as if they gains Mar Mould go into the holie land, to warre against Gods enimies there, whereat faithfull men much maruelled, that he should promise as great meed for the shede ding of chillian bloud, as the bloud of infidels.

The craftie and flie fetches which were view in this feason by this Kuscand the bilhop of Hereford, and o ther their complices, to get monie of the prelats and gouernors of monafteries within this realme, were wonderfull, wherie græuous to those that felt theme felues omzeffed there with; and namelie, for the ocht which the said bishop of Hereford had charged them with, they being not privile to the receipt, nor having any benefit thereby. Ruscand called a councell at 3 councell London, e propounded great causes the the prelats called at London, ought to alo the pope, and to therebyon demanded bonbyth is great fummes of monie. Amongst other fummes, he demanded fir hundled marks of the house of S.

To conclude, his demands were estimed onreas Manth. Paris fonable, so that the bilhops and abbats were in a mar . The church nellous perpleritie, perceining into what miscrable men being fate by reason of immoderate exactions the church of pinched England was brought. The bithop of London fice free and fund hed not to fair, that he would rather lose his head, against the than consent that the church should be brought to such popes process foruitude as the legat went about to inforce. And the bings in bishop of Worcester openice protested, that he would soner suffer himselfe to be hanged, than to see the thurch subject to such omzession by their examples. De ther also taking a volonesse but othem, aftermed, that The billion they would follow the steps of Thomas sometime would rake archbishop of Canturburie, which for the liberties of tyrs, thanks the church luffered himselse to have his braines cut their mont. out of his head. Det were those prelats euill troubled, for the king was against them on the one side, and the popegaping after monte was become their bis ter enime on the other: neither were the Roble men much moved with pitie towards the church their mo ther (as the terme then went) now thus in milerie.

Finallie, the prelats appealed from Ruscand, buto and manie high buildings were friken by force of 50 the popes prefence, and would not obeie the wilfull and violent oppettions of the fame Rufcand, to that much adouthere was, and a great complaint made to the king by Kulcand, of the flubboane disobedience Rulcand of the prelate, and namelie of the bishop of London. The king mag in a great affect of the bish of London. The king was in a great chafe with him, and threat- the from the ned that he would cause the pope to punish him ac nesseasth cording to hat he well deserved: but the bishop an prelats. fwered thereto; Let the pope and king (faith he) which London his are fronger than I am, take from me my bithop fairings. rike, which by law yet they cannot do: let them take ,, awaie my miter, pet an helmet Chali remaine.

This yeare after S. Lukes daie, the king affem: Anno Reg 4 bled a great number of the nobilitie at London, and thither came the bithop of Bologna la graffe from Comund the pope, bringing with him a ring, with the which be kings four innected Common the kings fourse hims for mucholing inuested Comund the kings sonne king of Sicill of Sicilland and Paples. About the same time, the burgesse of Paples. Darbie obteined of the king for a summe of monie to have the inflices itinerants to hold their affiles at Darbie for the countie of Darbie, and likewise the Chiristes to keepe their tournies there, and not at Pothingham, as before they had beene accustomed for both the thires. But now to returne to the bi Mops.

The councell plozoged.

The B. lieth in wait toz mens gods.

Manh. Paris.

beth the court.

In the meane time, the bilhop of Hereford and Ruscand lought to let bariance and discord amonast the English prelats, whereby being divided in parts, and not confenting togither, they thould be lette able to give true information to the pope, how the verie truth reffed . But finallie, bicause the archbishop of Canturburie was in the parts beyond the fea, and for that also the fee of Porke was vacant, and otherse bishops were absent, the councell was proroged till the fealt of S. Pilarie, and so they departed everie 10 mained long in pulon. man to his home in a maruellous doubt what waie were best for them to take, sith they faw themselues in great diffreste, if Kulcand did suspend og ercome municate any of them either fustlie or otherwise. For fure they were, that the king as a lion lieng in wait whome he might devoure (to get monie) after fortie daies were palt, if they submitted not them= felnes, would spoile them of all their gods as forfets ted. So that the pope and the king feemed as though the thepheard and twolfe had beene confederate to. 20 gither to the octivation of the pose flocke of thepe, threatning everie mans bnowing, to their owne inriching: and not ceating, till with fulnette they were forced to fall from the fleth, much like bloudlucking bolleches, of whole nature it is notablie noted, that

Non missura prius carnem, quam plena cruoru, Quando haret tenera mollis hirudo cuti: Sic ignara dolu emungitur ære caterua, Imbelles populi quid nisi præda manent?

Thus by reason of couetous grædinesse to get mo, 30 nie for the farnishing of the popes warres against Manfred king of Sicill, both the pope and the king of England ran in Cander and hatred of the Eng. lish nation, namelie, of the spiritualtie, so that such as recorded the acts and doings of that time, spared not to make manifest to the world by their writings, how inimioullie they were handled, blaming the practiles of the court of Kome in plaine terms, and affirming that the pope had power in those things which worke to edification, and not to destruction. 40 About this fealon, John load Grey, being one of the thefe councelloss to the king, a right honourable knight, and for his god demeanor and high balians ciegreatlie commended of all, withozew himselfe from the court, either by reason of age that desireth rest, or rather (as was thought) for that he doubted to beare blame for such errors as were dailie committed by them that bare rule about the king, which could not but being the authors into great infamic at length, and therefore was he loth to be partaker with 50 them of fuch flander as might have redounded to bim also, if he had still continued and tarted amongs frives accumodugh.

Alfo byon the two and twentith of Pourmber. hos curented were brought onto Westminster a hundred and two to cruciling Jews from Lipcolne, that were accused for the crucifiengsfachild in the last fummer , in despight of Chilles religion. They were byon their examination sent to the towne. The child which they had so crucified was named Hugh, about an eight praces of age. They kept him ton daies after they got him in to their hands, fending in the means time but of uerfe other places of the realine, for other of their nat tion to be prefent at the crucifieng of him. The musther came out, by the diligent fearth made by the mother of the chilo, who found his bodie in a well, on the backe five of the Leius house, where he was crucified: for the had learned, that hir fonne was lattlie fæne plaicing with certeine Jews children of like agera ham, before the vore of the fame Jew. The Jew that was owner of the house, was apprehended, and being brought before fix John de Lexintan, byon promile of pardon, confessed the whole matter. For they bled yearelie (if they could come by their preje) to crucifie one chaffian child or other. The king byon knowledge had hereof, would not pardon this Jelo that had so confessed the matter, but caused him to be erecuted at Lincolne, who comming to the place where he should die, opened moze matter concerning fuch as were of counsell and present at the crucitis eng of the poze innocent. Thereupon at length also Eightene eightæne of them that were so brought to Loudon, Jews hanged were convinced, adjudged and hanged, the other re-

When the feath of faint Pilarie was come, the cleargie met againe at London, and fell to infreat of their former bulinelle, at what time one mailler Leonard alias Reignold that was chosen prolocutor The prolocus for all the prelats, amongst other answers made to tous answer the least Russan when the form to the popes the legat kulcand, when the same kulcand alledged legat. that all churches were the popes; Truth it is faid Leonard, to defend, and not to ble and appropriate " them to ferue his owne turnezas we faie, that all is >> the princes, meaning that all is his to defend, and not ,, to spoile: and such was the intent of the founders. Kulcand fore offended herewith, faid, he would that euerie man thould fpeake afterwards for hunfelfe, that as well the pope as the king might understand what everie man fato in their bulinelle and matters. The prelats were friken in a dumpe herewith, for they perceived how the matter went: they appealed The pictate yet against the demands that were made by Kus, appeale. cand, who would not change a word of that he had written, in which was conteined, that the prelats had acknowledged themsclues to have borrowed of the merchant frangers, no finall fummes of monie, and the fame to be converted to the vie of their churches, which was most untrue as all men well understwo; therebpon the prelats affirmed, and not without reas Warke the fonable caufe, that there was a greater occasion in cause of marthis cause of martyzdome, than in that of Thomas tyzdome. sometime archbishop of Canturburie.

Rulcand at length, perceiving their manner, became somewhat more mild, and promised that he would talke with the pope of this matter. But first The deane of there was fent to Kome the deane of Pauls in Lous faint Paules for to Kome on, and certeine others, as attornies or agents for on the behalfe the whole cleargie of England. These spedso in their of the paciats. fuit, that the pope twke order that if the prelats paid the monie by force of the contrined writings, where by they flood bound for them, their houses, and thur thes; then, to cale their burthen, they might reteine us their hands such parcell of tenths as they ought to paie to the king , for furnithing of his wars against the Saracens, amounting to the fumme which they Chould be confircined to paie for the bonds made to the merchants, by the buthop of Hereford (as bufore is recited.

In this featon the denotion, which manie had con: Adens deud= ceined of the pope and the church of Kome, began to tion towards was cold, reputing the vertue which he the wed at his the pope wasse entring into the papalie, to be rather a colourable hppocrifie, than otherwife, fith his proceedings answer red not to his good beginnings: for as it was manifell where lutors brought their complaints into the court of Rome, such spee best as gave most bribes, and the two priors of Minchester, the one expelled, and the other got in by intrusion, could well witnesse the same: and all the world knoweth that the vive. rous generation of Romaniffs, reckoning from the ringleader to the simplest chaueling, have made gaine the scope of their holineste, and as it is true,

Qualibet arripiunt, lucri bonus est odor ex re Qualibet, imponunt, hos scelus omne inuat : A ccipiunt quoduis fi non sonat are crumena, sine siligo adsit; sordida sine pecus, co c.

This yeare died William of Poske bilhop of Sa. liburic cepars

1256

Ansish.de pręck Chrisinge.

The b.of Bar lisburie, tribthistife.

weit in nach firft recented for a law.

lisburie, which had borne brought up in the court. e-Suit of court uen frem his vouth. This bilhop firft caufed that cw frome to be received for a law, whereby the tenants of enerie locathin are bound to owe their fuit to the lo:05 court, of whom they hold their tenements.

March, Paris. Megnus bing of Man.

In the feast of Caster this yeare, the king adors ned Pagnus king of Dan, with the order of knight. hoo, and bestolved byon him great gifts and honors. • The counteffe of Warren Aucha or Atcha (as some bokes have lister to the king by his mother, 10 departed this life in hir flourishing youth, buto the great griefe of bir brother, but speciallie of bir hus band John earle of Waren that loued hir intierlie. About the midd of Daic, the Jewes that were in the towne and in other pulous for the murther of the thild at Lincolne, and had beene indited by an inquest open the an inform of him that had suffered at Lincolne, iver ... Mmilled and let at libertie, to the number of toute were write of them. ¶ In White funtide was holden a that als at Blie, where the 20 lood Coward the his, which have first began to thew profe of his chivalete Apore were diverte o uerthjowen and hurt, and an ingit other William de Longipæwas lo biuled, that goe. Ineuer affer recover his former Arenath.

3 proclama: tion for Enighthod.

3 fore teme pest of wind end ræne.

The king cauled a proclamation in be let forth, that all such as might differed Frene pounds in lands, thould receive the wife of anighthmo; and those that would not or come and abould paie their Ciricus, a maruellous fore tempet of wind, raine, haile, and thunder chanced, that did erceding much hurt. Will-wheles by the violen. F of waters were carried alway, and the wind-milles were no leffe to2: mented with the rage of wind. Arches of bridges, flackes of haie, houses that flood by water sides, and children in cradels were borne awaie, that both word derfull and no leffe pitifull it was to fee. At 15edford the river of Onle bare downe fir houles togither, and did unspeakeable hurt thereabouts. Alexander the third king of Scots with his wife

The king of Scots com England.

John Man= kil feelted the two kings.

quene Pargaret, came about the beginning of App gulf into England, and found the king at his mano: of Caodioke, where he folaced him a feafon, and had the lands of the earle of Huntington restored buto him, which his grandfather king William in his time lost and forfeited. Here he did homage to king Henrie. Apon the day of the decollation of S. John, the two kings with their quenes came to London. there they were honorablic received, and so conver 50 to buto Wellminfter. On the day of S. Augustine the bilhop, being the eight and twentith of August. John Pansell the kings chapleine besought the time kings, and other frates, to dine with him on the mos row following, which they granted, and so he made a maruellous great dinner. There were seuen bundied melles ferued by, but the multitude of ghelfs was such, that scarse the same sufficed; his house was not able to receive them all, and therefore he caused tents and boths to be let up for their. The like diffier 60 had not bone made by any chapleine before that time. All those that came were worthilie receined, feathed and interteined, in fuch lost, as euerie man mas latilifed.

Diders deni= Led for the appearance of thriffes.

The thiriffes Eneb.

About foure dates before the feaff of S. Comard. B. Henrie came into the ercheker himfelfe, there be mied order for the appearance of thiriffes, and brings ing in of their accompts. At the same time also, there was five marks let on everie thiriffes head for a fine, bicaule they had not diffreined eneric person that might dispend 15 pounds land, to receive the order of knighthod, as was to the same thiriffes communded. The king of Scots, after he had remained a while with the king of England, returned backe into Scotland, and left his wife behind with Scots ire hir mother till the thould be brought to bed, for the neth intelly was as then great with child.

In the 41 years of the reigns of king Henris, his Anno Rec. bother Richard earle of Cornewall was elected em Aicharden perour, by one part of the Comoliers: and diverse of Coming loads of Almaine comming over into this land (byon cleacom) the date of the innocents in Chaifmaste) presented tour. but o him letters from the archbilhop of Colen, and o ther great loods of Almaine, tellifieng their confents in the choling of him to be emperour, and withall. that it might stand with his pleasure to accept that honoz. Finallie, opon god deliberation had in the matter, he consented therebuto: wherepon the locas that came with the medage, being right glad of their answer returned with all speed to fignifie the same onto thole from whom they had being lent. The treating of all the gra fure of this earle Richard now elected king of Ale treasure of maine, was effermed to amount onto luch a lumme, Buchard in that he might dispend euerie day a hundred marks, of Almanu for the terme of ten peares togither, not reckoning

at all the revenues which dailie accrewed to him of his rents in Almaine and England.

In this meane time the buquiet Talelibmen after the death of their prince David, choic in his feed one The wells Leolin, that was fon to the fame Oriffin that brake men choir his necke as he would have escaped out of the towie themage of London; and here with they began a new rebelli rebellaged on, either daining out luch Englishmen as laie there the hing fines. This yeare, there dailed affer the fealt of So. 30 in garllons within the castels and fortrestes, or elle entring into the same by some traitozous practile, they live those which they found within them, to the great displeasure of their sourceigne lood Coward the kings elock sonne, who covering to be revenged of their rebellious enterprises, could not bring his purpole to palle, by reason of the buleasonable weather and continuall raine which fell that winter, to railing the waters t letting the marithes on flouds, that he could not palle with his armie.

Pozeouce, his father the king wanted insufe and The king freafure to furnify him withall, howbeit prince &d. wannin ward borrowed of his wick erle Richard foure thou mount fandmarks towards the maintenance of that war. The rebellion of the Weilhmen spectallie rose by the hard dealing of fir Geffrey de Langlie unight, the Sir Giffre kings collector amongs them, who handled them to hard being Areightlie, that in defense of their countrie, lained, canfeotis and liberties (as they pretended) they put on armour. withmis They take and defiroted the lands and possessions rebellion. which were great and large, of Briffin Burnet, being fled for fafegard of his life buto the king of England. There were of those Wielsh rebels at the point of twentie thouland men, and of them ten thouland Cheman were bottlemen, the which perceiving the lealan to of the with make for their purpole, befended themselues to man- comus. fullie, that they drove backe prince Coward and his armie, t lo continuing the wars, old much lier to the English marishes. Their power to increased, that at length they binided the fame in two equal parts, The will the better to recouse vittels, and in either acrise men bunds there were effærned thirtie Gouland vernes wich, into wo affer the maner of their countries of the which there parts. were fine hundred men of armes in eitherholt, with barded horfles all concret in from . Thus being of luch puillance, they did much milcheste to the Engs hilymen that inhabited on the marthes, neither were the loops marchers able to relift them although the earle of Glocelter albed the faine loops all that be might.

Bing Henrie being herret muertifeby Centlath Nic Treat all fperd Stephan Baman, sman falltul in feite of Stephan warte, with a great number of folbiers into Water! against the revels, the comming into that epitatric and entring into the lands of a waelft for remark with the more part of his armie. This overthrowe Englifhmen

Cuthwales and South:

Spales toined

togither in into wales.

thanced by the treason of Griffin de Brunet, who at that prefent revolting from the English fide to his countrimen, instructed them in all things, how they might banquilh their enimies. At that time, Posth wales and Southwales foined in league and frend. lie amitie togither, which commonlie was not fiene in those dates, they being for the more part at vari- 1 ance, the one rather fæking ftill how to indamage the other: but now in defense of their liberties (as

as his enimies lato for him, and thereby was flaine

The king foze moued herewith, determined to go himselse into Wales, that he might take worthie they pretended) they agreed in one.

punishment of those his adversaries, that could nes ner be lufficientlie chastiled. Wherebyon railing a great power, he halled footh, and comming into felle in person Males, put the revels in such scare, that they with prein to their accustomed places of refuge, I meane 20 the woods and marethes. The king would faine have had them forth, that he might have punished them according to their deferts, and therefore to bring his purpole the better to patte, he fent for an armie of foldiers into Ireland, and tarried for their comming at the castell of Brecknoke, but the yeare was farre front per his people could be gathered, so that by the adulte of his loads he strengthened certeine castels, and fo returned for that yeare into England, leaving the lood Roger Postimer his lieutenant in Wales, 3 Monumerthe to reliat the revels. Wut now let us speake of other bings lieutedwings which chanced in the meane while that the main waks warres thus continued and lasted betwirt England and Males.

3 lenat from Matth. Paris.

De thall binder Cand, that in the Lent scason, the archbilhop of Pellina came as legat from the pope hither into England, with letters of procuration, to demand and receive, and also with power, to punish fuch as thould denie and feeme to refilt, and to being here arrived with a great traine of fernants and how 40 fes. be fent footh bis commandements in writing to euerie prelat, to proutee him monie by way of prorie so that of the house of S. Albons, and of the celles that belonged therebuto, he had one and twentie marks, and when the monks of S. Albons came to vilithim in his house, they could not be permitted to depart, but were kept as prisoners, till they had sa tillied his couctous demand : for thereas they alled ged that they had not brought any monie with them, he alked them whic they were fuch beggers, and fur 50 ther faid, Send vie then to some merchant, that will lend you monie, and so it was done: for other totle they might not have libertie to depart. Wis archbis thop was of the order of the Friers preachers, in ithome (faith Matthew Paris) we had hoped to have found more abundant bumilitie. About the fame time, there appeared at London a new ofoct of Frie ers, not knowen till those voice, having yet the popes autentike bulles, which they open is the wed, to that there feemed a confusion of manie orders, as 60 the same Matthew Paris recordeth, and bicause they ivere apparelled in fackecloth, they were talked face hed friers.

3 perlement.

Auem order of friera.

About the middest of Lent, there was a great parlement holden, to the which the mailters of the Universitie of Drford were summoned, that peace might be concluded between them smothe bithop of Lincolne, which hav them in fact about their liber. ties. There came to the fanic parlement, the earle of Bloceller, and fir John Manfell, latelie returned out of Almaine, where they had beerleson amballage from Richard the elect king of Almaine. Thither came also the same elect king of Almaine, and almost all the Pobilitic of the realine, to that scarle might the citie of London receive the number that repair red to that parlement. The king of Almaine meant Matth. Paris to take his leave at that time of the lozos and peeres of the realme, purpoling thoulite after, to take his fournie towards Almaine, and to ordeine the billiop of London governoz of all his lands and pollections within England. In this parlement, the load Comund the kings The load Copunger sonne was the wed as king of Paples and mund the Sicill, for the obteining of the pollettion of which kings fonne. dominions and kingdoms, his father king Henrie bemanded no small subsidie and aid of monie, both of Benanded, the temporaltie and also of the spiritualtie, but name lie, he required to have the tenths of spirituali mens linings for the terme of fine yeares, according to the new tarations without any deductions to be allowed ercept necessarie expenses : also, the fruits for one yeare of benefices that chancer to fail boid within the faid terms of fine years. Dozenver, fundate other duties he required to have of the spiritual men, fore to their greuance, and speciallie, because they knew that such typannic first take beginning from the pope. In the end (though led) they there to confent)

yet conditionallie that the king would confirme the liberties confeined in the great charter, and observe the same throughlie, note litter it had beine so manie times brought out and revamed, they offered to give The offer of him towards his infine necessitie two and fifte & spritualite. thouland marks, is the Arecoverable danger of impowerithing the charas And pet, as it is laid, the bing refused the giff, as that which he thought not to be fufficient.

Truelie it Coold feme, that there was a great untowardlie disposition in the subjects of that time, for the helping of their king with necessarie aid of monte, towards such great charges as he had beene divers wates occasioned to be at, since his first comming to the crowne. But bicaule it was perceived that he bestowed no small quantitie of his treasure o to the advancing of his kinffolke and aliance, names lie Arangers, and againe defraied great fummes in vaine hope to obtaine the kingdoms of both the St cils which the pope offered to him frælie inough in words, as before per haus heard, the English subiens conceived a great milliking of the whole governes ment, and namelie, for that he feemed to be led and ruled by the adule and counfell of those Grangers, tho being not throughlie acquainted with the nature of the English people, not fullie instructed in the laives and enflomes of the realme, caused him to do manie things, that procured both to him and them much ill will, as well of the hie flates as of the commons, which as occasion ferued, they were readie inough to discover, and therefore they were perie inquilitiue, both to learne what he received, and also in what fort he bestowed that which he did receive and

It was therefore knowne, that fince he first began to walle his trealure, his darges amounted buto the lumine of 950000 marks , as the bokes of accompts remaining in the hands of the clearles of his closet plainelie witnessed, and pet of all those vaine. erventes no great advantage was growne thereby to the king or realme, but rather disabuantage, as the most part of men then toke tout no maruell: for there was such hart-burning amongst the nobilitie, one envieng an others advancement, a repining ac each others dwings, that it was not possible to being any god diff for ward amongst dien to far at obs to. gither, But we will let this patte as a thing manifest inough to them that thall well confiner the course of that time, and will returne to the parlement about mentioned.

Before the end of this folemne affemblie of flates, of Cullen and ladous of Al=

The archbish. the archbishop of Tullen with a buke, an other bis thop came over out of Almaine, buto their elea king Lichard, to thome they did featife and homage, as to their fourreigne liege lost and governoz, which thing once done , he gave to the fair grebbilhop fine bunored marks to beare his charges, with a rich miter fet with flones, a furnished with plates of beaten gold; which miter when the archbithop had fet it vpon his cc head; We hath (faith he) given a rich gift to me and to my thurth, and verelie, euen as I haue put this mis I ter on my head, so will I fet on his head the crowne cof the kingdome of Almaine; he hath mitered me, and I will crowne him. The other loads of Almaine, which at the same time oto homage buto earle Ri thard, were also presented with great and rich giffs.

Here is further to be noted, that there were prefent at this parlement for archbishops, Canturburie,

Porke, Dubline, Pellina, Tarento and Cullen. The archbishop of Pellina was come to the king to set ing, the archbithop of Tullen returned into his coun-trie, and the third day after Cafter, the eled king of Almaine toke his leaue, and departed toward Bar-mouth, where he purposed to take the sea, to faile ouer into Almaine, but by reason of contrarie winds he was often to remaine there a long time, to his great grefe and inestimable charges before he could palle ouer; pet finallie, about the latter end of Appill, bles to increase in the fruitfull garden of pleasure, and to choke up the trees that brought forth fruit in great plentie. Dozeover in this yeare, king Denrie caused the walles of the citie of London, which were fore decated and destitute of turrets, to be repared in more fæmelie wife than before they had bæne, at the

There was an ordinance made at Kome by the first of Paie nert insuing.

common charges of the citie.

him on botage for the businesse about the conquest of 20 Paples and Sicill. At the featt of Offer nert follow,

Six archbith. prefent at London in time of the parlement.

Theeled B. of Mimaine taketh his leatte of the king his biother.

De lanbeth at Dozozeigh. 3 frnoo.

About the fame time, the archbilhop of Canturbu rie called a fynod of the bishops and abbats inhabi ting within his province, that invocating the grace of the Holic-gholf, they might forelæ some redresse for relecte of the English durch, now in these late peares fore disquieted by new oppressions, more greet uous than had beene accustomed: for the king by counsell, or rather by the whispering of some flatter rers and enimies to the realme, was fo induced, that 4 be permitted certeine euill cultoms, as thornie brems

Marth Paris.

A decreé made by the pope.

Matth. Paris The monks of Durbam that were ercomunicated are now ab= folued.

Matth. Paris.

pope and his cardinals (which verie diligentlie fores co faw to advance their temporall commodities, not much palling for other mens advantages) that ever rie one which should be chosen an exempt abbat. Could come to the court of Kome to be there confirmed, and receive the popes bledling, by which heinous ordinance, religion was laid open to great banger. and the church deprined of temporall prosperitie (as faith Matthew Paris) for by this means (faith he) it was nædfull for religious men, to those to their gouernoura man not religious, but rather halfe 60 temporall, and such a one as to whome rather Justinians lawes than Chiffes which converteth foules should be familiar. The monks of Durham, the one lie with the canons of Gilboine relified the wicked proceedings of the popes eractors, and frod therefore. interdicted a long time, at length, after manie altercations, were absolued. Dh (faith Matth. Paris) if in that their tribulation they might have had fellows. and in their confrant doings aldors, how hawille had the church of England triumphed our bir tozmens toes and oppessoes!

Don have heard how Kichard earle of Cornemall being eleded king of Almaine, failed thither, there on the Accention day last, he was crowned king by the archbifhop of Cullen, of ichom, and diverte other great princes of Germanie he was holden for their lawfull king and governour (as in the Dutch hillo ries poumay find more largelie expressed though o ther of them had chosen Alfonse king of Callile, the which Alfonse wrote to the king of England, as his confederate and alie, requiring alo of him against the faid Richard that was his owne brother, to the which bureasonable request the king would in no inife confent.

Moreover, in this fortie one yeare of king Henrics Fabian reigne, by reason of a roll closed in greene war and In inform found in the kings Wardzobe at Windloz, contein, on againing ing as it were an information against the major and loto main thiriffes of London, for oppression and wrongs done to the communaltie of the citie, the bing toke great displeasure, and caused Greit inquisition to be made. as well by Fouke Pots, as Ward Pots, e diverte other means. At length, the maioz and thiriffes, with The lopbus other means, at tength, the mains and sprinters, but of and he the chamberlaine of the citie, were disparged by riftes of a John Danfell, one of the kings inflices, afore whom bon biffin and other the kings councell, the inquisition was ta, ged, ken, and then was the cultodie of the citie alligned buto the constable of the tomer, and in place of the thirittes were appointed Pichaell Conie, and John Audzian. At length, the maioz, thiriffes and Alder. men that were accused, perceiving the kings displeafure towards them, submitted themselves wholie to his mercie, fauing to them and to all other the citic he got fouth to the fea, and landed at Dordreigh the 30 zens their liberties & franchiles, and fo in the ercheker chamber at Wellminster afore the king, there fitting in indgement byon the matter, they were condemned to pate their fines for their offenles committed, and further, everie of them discharged of his Thelond ward and office. Shortlie after was William Fitz maio; and Kichard by the kings commandement made maioz, Chindisind and Thomas Fitz Thomas, and William Gravil gate Chiriffes.

The archithop of Poske was accurated by the popes commandement through all England, with Marth Pais boke, bell and candle, that by fush terroz his confran. Cheartha cie might he weakened . Wut the archbilhop (faith of your Matthew Paris) informed by the grample of Thomas Becket, and by the example and bodrine of faint Co mund fometime his instructor, and also taught by the faithfulnesse of blessed Robert, late bishop of Line Checombi colne, defeatred not of comfort from beauer, in bear creation ring patientlic the popes tyrannie neither would be billiopd bestow the mealthie revenues of his church byon Yorks. Italians, being buwozibie persons and Arangers; neither mould be obeie and incline to the popes will like a faint-harted person, by leaning and setting apart the rigozof the lain, leaft therby he might feme to refult from his passocitie office, and animate the wolfe of Rome to breake into the theepfold of the church, whose purpose was to sucke the verie blow quite and cleane out of everie beine, pen to bite out bowels and all. Which qualitie to reft in him, wofull experience hath taught, and the tellimonic of write ten verities hath the wed, among which this one for the truth thereof is worthie to be reported even to the praise of the deciser for his partitle devise therein

compalled, and here let downe as fit for the purpole: Non pontifex sed posifex, Non porifex fed panifex, Non panifex sed: carnifex,

About the beginning of the 1 ton and for tith years of king Penviewreigne, the los James Aubelie that had been over south the king of Atmaine, and inco latelie returned home in companie of the load leens rie, forme in thusaid hing (abatame boche from his father about the feath of faint spirhaell last past) breder Canding how the Washington in his absence had

The load weithmen.

Amballadojø

fent into france.

burnt, wasted, and destroied his lands, postessions, and castels, which belonged buto him in the confines of Wales, he meant to be revenged of those inturies. and inuading them, he flue a great number of them. forcuenging the death of those his frænds, fernants reth boon the and tenants, whome they before had murthered. The Wilhmen were not so discouraged herewith, but that they brake byon him out of their farting-holes and places of refuge through the marithes, and flateng their enimies hoofes, put them backe to their 10 power, a ceassed not to do what unscheese they could, by spoiling, killing, and burning houses and castels where they might come onto them, and to the realme of England was dailie put to lottes thinderances. for out of Wales, England was accustomed to be furnished with horses, cattell, and other things, to the great profit of both the countries. About the fame time there was an amballage fent from the king of England to the French king by the bithop of Was ceffer, the elect of Minchester, the abbat of Mett. 20 miniter, the earle of Leicester, & Hugh Bigod earle Parthall, with Peter de Sanoy, and Robert Wal cron. The effect of their medage was to require refitution of those countries, lands, cities, and townes which had bene enicted out of the hands of king John and others, apperteining by right of inheritance to the king of England. These loads did their mellage. but as was thought, they had no towardie answer, but rather were put off with trifling woods & fcome full fawnts, so that they returned thoutlie againe all of them, the abbat of Wellminster onelie ercepted. tho remained there behind for a fuller answer, not melie to those requests erbibited on the part of the king of England, but also on the behalfe of the king unpoucriffed,

3 great Matth Paris.

1258

of Almaine. The marthes towards Wales in this fealon were brought almost defert, by reason of the The markes continuall wars with the Wellhmen, for what with fire a fword, neither building nor living creature, nor any other thing was spared, that fire & swood might bring to ruine. In this yeare was an erceeding great dearth, in so much that a quarter of theat was sold at London for foure and twentie thillings, thereas within two or their years before, a quarter was fold at two this lings. It had beene more derer, if great flore had not come out of Almaine, for in France and in Por mandie it likewise failed. But there came fiftie great thips fraught with wheat and barlie, with meale and bread out of Dutchland, by the procurement of Richard king of Almaine, which greatlie res 50 læued the poze; for proclamation was made, and or der taken by the king, that none of the citizens of London thould buy any of that graine to laie it op in floze, whereby it might be fold at an higher price but othe nædie. But though this provision did much ease, yet the want was great over all the realme. For it was certeinelie affirmed, that in the thires within the realme, there was not found so much graine of that yeares growth, as came over in those fiftie ships. The proclamation was set footh, to res 60 being of the freine the Londoners from ingroffing by that Londoners to free mealthie cities the hurr of the graine, and not without cause: for the wealthie citi tomon-welth. sens were evill spoken of in that season, bicause in time of scarsitie they would either state such thips as fraught with vittels were comming towards the citie, and fend them some other way forth; or else buy the whole, that they might fell it by retaile at their plefure to the nædie. By means of this great dearth and fcarlitie, the common people were confireined to live upon hearbs a rots, and a great number of the pase people died through famine, which is the most miserable calamitie that can betide mostall men, and was well marked even of the heathen, but notablic by Ouid, tho making a description of famine, setteth hir forth in most ouglie and irhesome sort, intending therby the dreadfulnes of that heavie plague, fateng:

Quasitámque famem lapidoso vidit in antro, Vnguibus or raris vellentem dentibus herbas, Hirtus crat crinis, caua lumina, pallor in ore, Labra incana fitu, scabrirubigine dentes, Dura cutu, per quam spectari viscera possent, Osa sub incuruis extabant arida lumbis, Ventris erat pro ventre locus,pendêre putares Pectus & à spina tantummodo crate teneri, Auxerat articulos macies, genuumque tumelat Orbis, immodico prodibant tubere tali, oc.

This yeare after Caffer a parlement was hol Aparlement, ben at London, in the which manie weightie mats March. Paris. ters were intreated of touching the kings causes, namelie, about the conquest of the realme of Paples, the pope having fent a mellenger named Bur, Burtred, a tred for the dillharge of monie, which the pope had rethe pope, ceived of merchants, as it were to the kings ble, and entred bonds for the paiment-thereof. Also, whereas the king was fore disquieted for the warre which the Wellhmen made against him, he asked admise of the states, how he might proceed to seeke his just reuenge of them, who by reason of their good hap were become verie front and loffie, and had of late by the expiring of a truce which had been accorded betwirt The wellsthem, spoiled and wasted the most part of Penbrokes men spoile hire, of which inturie the earle of Penbroke, names Penbrokes lie Milliam de Malence, soze complained.

But whereas the king knowing him to berich, willed him to lay out some great postion of monie, towards the maintenance of his wars, the erle toke great displeasure therewith, as though the king had made that request by the suggestion and setting on of some of the English loads, in somuch that woods Alariance bepalled in displeasant fort betwirt him and the earles twirt the carle of Glocester and Leicester, so far footh, that the earle and others, of Penbzoke called the earle of Leicester traitoz, who therewith made towards him, to have revenged 40 the inturie, and so would have done indeed, if the king had not beene moderator betwirt them. His nallie at this parlement the loads told the king that they might not ald him with any great fummes of monie ercept it Could redound to their great impouerichment: they tolo him also, that he had not done wiselie to enter into covenants, for the purchase of the kingdome of Paples for his sonne, without their

They also declared to him, what articles it Mould be good for him to propone unto the pope, if he would have him to continue in bearing the charges of the wars against Danfred. But when those articles were afterwards presented to the pope, he allowed them not, & fo the matter remained without any certeine affurance of the promises, which had beene and still were from time to time made to fet the king on dotage. The archbishop of Poske had his crosse taken The archbis from him by the popes commandement, but the arche thop of yozhe bilhop would not yet bow his knie onto Baall, to bes deprined of flow the benefices of his church opon aliens, and his croffe. such as were unworthic persons, as it had beene to call pearles onto fwine. There came from the Manfuctus pope as his Nuncio, onto king Henrie, a frier mino: the popes named Panluetus, furnished with great power and Nuncio. authoritie, in somuch that he toke byon him to abfolue men for changing their volves, and to instifie those that were ercomunicated persons, falle persured, and luch like. Therebpon, manie of cuill disposition prefumed to offend: for eafmelle to purchase pardon bred bolonesse in manie, howbeit the wise say med to laugh at luch doings.

The parlement still continued, till the sundaie as ter the Ascension day, with hard hold betwirt the king and the loads, who laid it fore to his charge, that Ouid. lib. 8 Mesa.fab.11.

thire.

protodeg.

he had not performed the promifes which he made touching the observing of the liberties conteined in the great charter. They also complained greatlie of his imfgeuernance, in that he fo much advanced the Policeums and other Arangers, to the imponerith ment of himselfe and the whole realme, and further, mainteined them to far fouth, that they were readie to offer wrong buto other, beon prelumption of his favour and bearing with them, he having by commandement refereinco that no processe thous passe 10 out of the chanceric against certeine of them that were his cofins, as the earle of Denbroke and others. Finallie, when the loods were in doubt which way to The parlemet worke for their owne fafeties, they caused the parle. ment to be prozoged, till the feat of faint Barnabe, then to begin againe at Arford. In the meane time the loods of the realme, as the earles of Bloccher, Leicetter, Percford and Porthfolke, with other, did confederate themselves togither , bicause they food in fears to be intrapped by the kings fubtill fleights, 20 and by the craftic wiles of those Arangers whom he reteined against them.

In the fame yeare by the wind, which continuallie certaine months together kept northerlie, the flours, with other growing things, were so hindered, that Plate growth fearfelie they appeared to anie purpole, till the most part of June was past, wherebpon the hope of receive uing the fruits of the earth was quite taken away. F fo boon the great dearth that happened, a fore death and mortalitie followed, for want of necessarie fod 30 to fusfeine the pining bodies of the page people. They died to thicke, that there were great pits made in churchyards to late the dead bodies in one bpon an other.

Senallarchb. teth this life.

Abcarth ac= companied

with a death.

Matth. Paris.

About the feast of the Ascention, Seuall the archbiof yorke depar thoy of Porke departed this life, who constantlie had relifted the typannie of the court of Rome in defense of his church, luffering in this world manie greenous tribulations, but now was removed from thense buto the kingdome of heaven, to be crowned with 4 the elect for his good deferuings, as was then certenlie belæned. About this time, a great number of Poly couins were come into England, by reason of their aliance and colinage to the king, the which by the kings fauour being highlie aduanced, began to war proud thereof, and to require to be restored but such lands and livings as before time they had possessed: namelie the kings halfe brethren, Athelmare or De The kings halle beetheen. domate, that was a preif, with William, Beffrey and Buie, these were the sonnes of Hugh le Brun 5 earle of Parth, by his wife quæne Isabell, the mo ther of king Benrie, and being come into England, they the wed them selves verie lottie thigh-minded, partlic, bicause of their colinage to the king, a part lie by reason of his courteous interteining of them, infomuch that forgetting themselves, they began to despite (byon a presumptuous pride)the English no. bilitie, loking fill for preferment of honor aboue all other. And sucrlie Doomare obteined at the first a great peece of his purpole, being made by the kings 60 gift bishop of Winchester, and by that means bare a fout port, and greatlie holpe and mainteined his o ther brethren.

The English barons not well able to suffer such presumption in strangers, who seemed to have them in derition, complained to the king, in to much that at length, as well for a reformation hereof, as in o ther things, a parlement was called (as before pou have heard) first at London, and after resomed to Drenford, there to be affembled about the feast of faint Barnabe in the moneth of June. This (of some writers) is named Infanum parliamentum, that is to fay, The mad parlement; for at this parlement (to the which the loods came with great retinues of armed men, for the better falegard of their persons) manie things in the same yeare enaded contrarie to the kings pleature, and his rotall prerogative. For the The dimm lords at the first determined to demand the confirs of the lords. mation of the ancient charter of liberties, which his father king John had granted, and he himfelfe had fo often promised to observe and mainteine, significing plainelie, that they meant to purfue their purpose and intent herein, not sparing either for lotte of life, lands or gods, according to that they had mutuallie given their faiths by foining of hands, as the manner in fuch cales is accustomed. Belides the grant of the great charter, they required other things necessarie for the state of the common-wealth, to be established and enaced.

It was therefore first enaced, that all the Police Didinance uins Chould anote the land, togither with other fran made, gers, and that neither the king not his sonne prince Coward Could in anie fecret manner aid them as gainst the people. Pozeover, that the king & his sonne should receive an oth, to stand unto the decrees and Anotherate ordinances of that parlement, and withall freed to ted of the burg restore the ancient laives and institutions of the realme, which they both dio, rather confireined there: bnto by feare, than of anie god will. Thus not onelie the king himfelfe, but also his sonne prince Coward received an oth, to observe the optimances of that parlement. But John earle Warren, and the kings halfe brethren, namelie the earle of Penbroke refu fed that oth; and like wife the load Henrie, forme to the king of Almaine ercused himselfe by his fathers absence, without whose consent he would not receive it, bnto whome this answer was made, that if his father would not consent to the agreement of the baro. mage, he should not possesse one surrowe of land within this realme.

Alb, whereas the earle of Leicester resigned the castels of Killing worth and Dotham into the kings hands, which he had latelie received by his gift, and netvlie repaired, the earle of Penbroke and his other brethren sware oxpelie, that they would for no mans pleafare give over fuch castels, rents, and warothips of theirs, as they had of the kings gift. But the earle The entid of Leicester told the earle of Penbroke flatlie and Leicester plainlie, that he thould either render them bp, oz elfe threatuch he thould be ture to lote his head. This fateng was Benbiok. confirmed by the generall voices of all other the bas rons, bicause it was a speciall article concluded as mongstother in that parlement. The kings halfe The kings brethren, perceiving which waie the world went, food halfe buthing in doubt of themselves, and secretic therebpon de thist awar. parting from Drenford, first withdrew buto Win, theffer, there Domare, one of the same brethren was bilhop, through whole support, and by reason of the Arength of such castels as he held, they trusted to be in more fafetie: but finallie, perceiving them felues not to be so out of danger, with the barons minded to pursue them, about the eighteenth daie of In They deput lie they departed the realme with a great number of the Maline. other of their countriemen; and amongest those, Milliam de faint Herman the kings caruer was

Henrie Pontfort, sonne to the earle of Lesceller, Denrie Bir understanding of their departure out of the realme, fortpursue followed; and hearing that they were arrived at Bul the hings to logne, he landed in those parts, & by such frændship beethem. as he found there among it those that bare god will buto his father, he got togither a power, and after a manner belieged the Poidouins within Bullogne, lateng watch for them in such fort, both by sea and land, that there was no waie left for them to escape. When they faw themselues in that danger, they sent a mellenger with all post hast to the French bing, Thepleth requiring his fafe conduct, to pade freile through the franch his realme, as they trusted he would be content to grant unto fuch, as for refuge and falegard of life should repaire buto him for comfort. The French king courteoullie granted their request, and so they were in fafetic permitted to palle quietlie through the countrie. In the meane while one Richard Brap. chatellaine of Douer castell, a right baliant man and a faithfull, suffered no man to palle that waie bu fearthed, according to that which he had in commanpement: therebpon he toke & leized into his hands 10 agreat postion of treasure, which was brought this ther to be transported ouer to the Poictouins that were fled out of the realme. Also, there was found a great quantitie of treasure in the new temple at London, which they had gathered & horded by there. with allo was feized to the kings ble.

Infamum par . liamentum.

Bichard Grap cap: teine of Douer caltell, and load warten of the posts.

Mart VVcft.

foure and twentie qouernours.

But now to returne buto the doings in the parlementholden at Orfoed. It was oedemed (as some write) that the king thould chose twelve versons of the realme, and the communaltie of the land thould 20 those other twelve, the which having regall authoris tie in their hands, might take in charge the governance of the realme boon them, & Moulo from veare to peare provide for the due election of fulfices, chancelloss, treasuross, and other officers, and see for the lafe keeping of the castels which belonged to the crowne. These foure and twentie governours amointed as providers for the god governement of the realme, began to order all things at their pleasure, in the meane time not forgetting to ble things cheffie 20 to their owne advantages, as well in providing el thets and wards for their formes and kinsfolks, as allo in bestowing patronages of churches (belonging to the kings gift) at their pleasures, so that these promoers fæmed to prouide all for themselves, in so much that neither king noz Christ could receive ought amongst them: and as for instice they regarded nothing leffe, their minds were so rautified with defire of pauat wealth; which who so hunteth after, being in place of magistracie, he must néeds neglea the law 40 and course of equitie, and therefore this counsell is godibich a god writer giveth in this behalfe, faieng;

Siinstus vult esse aliquis non vtile quarat, Iusticia est multis landata, domestica paucis

M.Pal. in Virg. Fabian.

The abules

There be that write, how there were but twelve of these governours chosen; whose names were as followeth. First, the archbishop of Canturburie, the bis thop of Wlossester, Roger Bigod earle of Posth folke and marshall of England, Simon de Pount. fort earle of Leicester, Kichard de Clare earle of 50 Glocester, Humfrey Bohun earle of Hereford, the carles of Warwike and Arundell, Ar John Manfell thefeinstice of England, sir Roger load Postimer, fir Hugh Bigod, fir Peter de Sanop, fir James Au deley, and fir Peter de Mountfort. To these was aw thoritie onelie given to punish and correct all such as offended in breaking of any the ordinances at this

